A lady of great energy of character lost her cook, and had to take her place for four days; the kitchen was warm, and there was a draft of air through it. When the work was done, warm and weary, she went to her chamber, and laid down on the bed to rest herself. This operation was repeated several times a day. On the fifth day she had an attack of lung fever; at the end of six months she was barely able to leave her chamber, only to find herself suffering with all the more prominent symptoms of confirmed consumption; such as quick pulse, night and morning cough, night-sweats, debility, short breath, and falling away.

A young lady rose from her bed on a November night, and leaned her arm on the cold window-sill to listen to a serenade. Next morning she had pneumonia, and suffered the horrors of asthma for the remainder of a long life.

Multitudes of women lose health and life every year in one of two ways; by busying themselves in a warm kitchen until weary, and then throwing themselves on a bed or sofa, without covering, and perhaps in a room without fire; or by removing the outer clothing, and perhaps changing the dress for a more common one, as soon as they enter the house after a walk or a shopping. The rule should be invariable to go at once to a warm room and keep on all the clothing, at least for five or ten minutes, until the forehead is perfectly dry. In all weathers, if you have to walk and ride on any occasion, do the riding first. Billiousness and constipation also cause catarrhs.—Hall's Journal of Health.

ADVANTAGES OF CRYING.

A French physician is out in a long dissertation on the advantages of groaning and crying in general, and especially during surgical operations. He contends that groaning and crying are the two grand operations by which nature allays anguish; that those patients who give way to their natural feelings, more speedily recover from accidents and operations than those who suppose it unworthy a man to betray such symptoms of cowardice as either to groan or to cry. He tells of a man who reduced his pulse from one hundred and twenty-six to sixty in the course of two hours, by giving full vent to his emotions. If people are at all unhappy about anything, let them go into their rooms and comfort themselves with a loud bohoo, and they will feel a hundred per cent. better afterwards.

In accordance with the above, the crying of children should not be too greatly discouraged. If it is systematically repressed, the result may be St. Vitus's dance, epileptic fits, or some other disease of the nervous system. What is natural is nearly always useful, and nothing can be more natural than the crying of children when anything occurs to give them either physical or mental pain.

Probably most persons have felt the effect of tears in relieving great sorrow. It is even curious how the feelings are allayed by their free indulgence in groans and sighs. Then let parents and friends show more indulgence to noisy bursts of grief, on the part of children as well as of older persons, and regard the eyes and the mouth as the safety-valves through which nature discharges her surplus steam.—Ex.

THE TIME FOR SLEEP AND STUDY.

By all means, sleep enough, and give all in your care sleep enough, by requiring them to go to bed at some regular hour, and to get up at the moment of spontaneous waking in the morning. Never waken up any one, especially children, from a sound sleep, unless there is urgent necessity; it is cruel to do so. To prove this, we have only to notice how fretful and unhappy a child is when waked up before the nap is out. If the brain is nourishing during sleep, it must have most vigor in the morning; hence the morning is the best time for study—for then the brain has most strength, most activity, and must work more clearly. It is "the midnight lamp" which floods the world with sickly sentimentalities, with false morals, with rickety theology, and with all those harum-scarum dreams of human elevation which abnegate Bible teachings.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.00
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These, terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be signed by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
30 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
40 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
50 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
100 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less in one package) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications for this paper should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

NEBO.—DEUT. 34.

Moses obeyed the Lord's command,
To view from Pisgah's top the land
That lay beyond the Jordan's flood;
Attended by no earthly one,
He stood where beams of glory shone,
Alone with God the meek man stood!

Can Death impart the magic power,
That disembodied souls may soar
And view the scenes of earth and heaven?
Why, then, is Moses called to gaze,
Before he dies, upon the place
To all the tribes of Israel given?

Moses must look before he dies,
For knowledge, wisdom or device
Are not perceived in death's domain:
The dead repose in sea and earth,
Till the last day shall bring them forth
To stand in consciousness again.

There Moses learned the chief design
Of Israel's rest in Palestine;
It typified the world to come,—
The earth to paradise restored,
On which the ransomed of the Lord
Shall find an everlasting home.

Let faithful watchmen now unite,
And shout as from the mountain's height—
"O weary Zion, joy to thee!
Thy Joshua comes, to lead thee o'er
Far, far beyond dread Jordan's shore,
To rest in immortality."

Newark, N. J. JOHN LYLE.

For the World's Crisis.

DEATH AND RESURRECTION.—NO. 3.

(This was written for the Harbinger and refused.)

Says our affirmant, shall not the judge of all the earth do right? If it is right to judge men twice, and kill them twice, it is hard to see it. We remark it would be hard indeed to see the justice of executing the same law on the same person or persons, for the same offence, twice; but if the offence be committed by the same individual twice, he having first been found guilty of crime, as an accomplice with others, who having (some one of them), as the testimony fully showed, committed murder, the whole gang being accessory, now, I ask, is it not justice to execute upon the accomplice as really as the one who actually performs the murder, although he be but an accessory to the crime; and if so, when he is dead and the law fully executed, if some one who had the power condescends in kindness to raise him to life again, would not the act be a worthy one, a gracious and kind one? And now suppose this grace of life, bestowed by such a friend, in such a case, were forfeited by this person going, not in a gang with others, not as an accomplice; but with his own individual hands, and putting to death his fellow. Is it hard to see that he is worthy of death the second time, inflicted according to the same law? No, but quite the reverse, as it appears to me.

But it may be objected, that man is not in his resurrection life, and hence the illustration is not a parallel; but man being informed by surrounding facts, and also resurrection, of his having lost his present life, as an accomplice with Adam's sin, and also being informed that God in his grace has "abolished death," over the race, sees the relation he sustains to divine government, and a future life. He also sees that his sins, personally committed against God in this life cannot be a forfeiture of this life; for that was forfeited by his being an accessory to the sin of Adam. Hence he sees, if any life is by his own sins forfeited, it must be the resurrection life. Perhaps "some man will say," yes, the resurrection life is the life forfeited by the personal sins of Adam's race; and so the "wicked and ungodly" never receive it. Well, if a man can lose that life which he never had, and that God never designed he should have, it is hard to see it. But if it be admitted that the resurrection life is the one forfeited and lost by the unpardoned sins of Adam's sons and daughters, then the magnanimous grace and wisdom of God will be seen in his righteous administration, both in abolishing the death entailed on the race, and also in executing the "second death," on all the unholy and rebellious.

I will now give some positive proof from Revelations for the re-living of all men, good and bad. Rom. 5: 18,—"Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation. Even so (in the same universal manner) by the righteousness of One the free gift came upon all men unto JUSTIFICATION OF LIFE." Very well, says the objector, they may all be justified to life from the death entailed by Adam, and yet never obtain the life justified. In that case, will God be more slack in executing the law pertaining to his grace, than that pertaining to his wrath? As he does now visit death on the holy, and also on the unoffending infant. Will he not be equally prompt in the manifestation of his grace in the world to come, by the execution of the law of justification?

Hear Paul again, nineteenth verse,—"For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, (how could they be made sinners, and their death as a consequence not be penal for that first offence?), so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." How many? Just as many as were made sinners by that first man's offence. What then, says the objector, hinders universal salvation? Nothing hinders the universal salvation of Adam's race from the death penalty that he entailed. Hence we say universal righteousness, universal salvation; that is, if there had been no sin committed by Adam's race after his transgression, Christ's redemption would be not only universal, but also eternal. But as it is, he is the Savior of all men (from the condemnation by Adam), and especially of them that believe," for the believer having sinned he stands exposed to the "second death;" but he believes, repents, and is baptized into Christ for the remission of sins, and so being pardoned, the death to which he was exposed by his own individual sin is not executed, and hence, his is justly called an especial salvation.

The Syriac version of Rom. 5: 18 reads. —"Therefore as on account of one, condemnation was to all men, so on account of the righteousness of one, will the victory unto life be to all men." Not only are they justified to life, but Paul says they will get the victory of life. If so, nothing but the "second death" can remove them from life again.

Paul further says on this subject, 1 Cor. 15: 22,—"For as in Adam all die, EVEN so in Christ shall all be made alive." McKnight renders this passage,—"Therefore as by Adam all die, so also by Christ shall all be made alive." Ye who ask for one positive text for the re-living of all men, is not that positive and to the point? But listen again to the Syriac version, twenty-second verse,—"For as it was by Adam that all men die, so also by the Messiah they all live." Paul then is not against himself, but what he says in writing to the Romans he corroborates in writing to the Corinthians. Prof. Whiting gives in the margin the word by instead of "in."

So we regard the re-living of all men a truth to be proclaimed, not as a doubtful, uncertain thing. But a tithe of the testimony on the point has not yet been considered, and cannot be without extending these numbers to a considerable length. C. F. SWEET.

For the World's Crisis.

HELL.

"MEDITATIONS FOR SATURDAY."

From a Catholic Prayer Book.

"Consider that hell has no end. There all kinds of sufferings are found, and for all eternity. Hundreds of years, yea, thousands of years will pass away in these torments, and yet hell will be always as just beginning. Hundreds of thousands, hundreds of millions of years and of centuries will pass, and hell will still be at its commencement.

If at this hour an angel should carry the tidings to one of the damned that God had consented to free him from hell,—when? Hear! when so many millions of centuries had passed away as there are drops of water in the ocean, leaves on the trees, sands in the sea and in the earth. You shudder at this, but still 'tis true. Such tidings would give greater joy to that soul, than you would feel if you were told that that you had become the king of a mighty kingdom. Yes, certainly! for that poor damned sinner would say, It is true that many centuries must first pass away, but at length a day will come in which my sufferings will end.

Alas! all these centuries will pass away, but hell will ever be beginning anew. All these centuries may be multiplied by the sands, and raindrops, and leaves, but hell is still beginning anew.

My christian friend, think well of this, and consider that hell is waiting for you if you sin. Even now its horrid flames are burning beneath your feet, and oh! while you are reading these words, how many souls are falling into it."

My God! what wonder is it that infidelity is running rampant the world over? What wonder is it that the name of the Almighty is blasphemed by nine-tenths of Christendom! What wonder is it that the Bible is considered by the majority as an inexplicable mystery, and by many as "no better than a last year's almanac?" What wonder is it that religion is so hated by the masses of civilized nations? What wonder is it that Tom Paine wrote his famous works against the divine origin of the word of God, or that Voltaire scouted the idea of (such) a God? Verily, will not these two men rise up in judgment against those who endorse and promulgate such a hellish doctrine as the above? Paine and Voltaire were, in one sense of the word, right. There never was such a Bible, nor such a God!

The above doctrine is the "doctrine of devils" in the broadest sense of the word. Its origin is devilish, and its results are devilish. His satanic majesty never got up a deeper plot or a baser deception, from the time he made his first trial upon Eve down to the present moment, than when he made nineteen-twentieths of the human family, civilized and uncivilized, enlightened and barbarous, believe that they had an "immortal soul," and that God Almighty was such a tyrant as to forever broil in the flames of hell those of his unfortunate creatures who failed to get into paradise!

He failed to prove to our first parents that they should not die as he had told them, consequently he set about devising a plan whereby he could make them think that he was right after all. Therefore he told them that only their bodies should die, but the "immortal soul" that God breathed into them, that should never die.

He further told them or their descendants, that God was such an unfeeling monster, if they did not do all he commanded them, he would cast them into liquid fire, to be tormented as long as he had an existence, which would be to all eternity! And what was the result? Why, that man's heart was filled with hatred towards such a being as the Almighty was represented. He departed from the true and living God, and worshiped any thing and every thing in preference to such a being, and finally even denied that there was a God. Fearful judgments fell upon man to undeceive him, but without effect.

That old serpent "the devil" so thoroughly "deceived the nations," that it finally repented the Lord God that he had made man, and he resolved to destroy him from off the face of the earth. There were but eight souls who had not been deceived by him, and who escaped the waters of that terrible flood! But as the earth was once more peopled, Satan saw how well his plan had worked upon those before the deluge, and he determined to try it again on those after the deluge. He has done so, and the results have been almost precisely the same.

He has the proud satisfaction of knowing that the world at large believe that he told the truth in the garden, and that God told a lie; and to make assurance doubly sure, he tells men that they can now hold converse with the spirits of the dead, with good or bad. O, how he shakes his sides with devilish glee as he hears the name of God blasphemed, his word a mock and derision, and his few children despised and persecuted. He gloats over the brilliant idea and unparalleled success of his plan in bringing the professed churches of God to that point where they can go hand in hand with his avowed servants to those gambling assemblies which he cunningly denominates "CHRISTIAN Sanitary Fairs," "Church Festivals," etc. He relishes with keenest zest the readiness with which all classes conclude that he is "not half as black as he is painted;" while his satellites clap their hands for very joy as they see a professed minister of the gospel ascend the rostrum to bring into disrepute before a gaping, laughing multitude a divine ordinance of God.

Yes, having deceived the churches, the arch fiend is now making the most strenuous efforts to "deceive if it were possible the very elect!" Almost all Christendom is actively engaged in spreading his original proclamation, "Thou shalt NOT surely die!" and he thinks by a little strategy he will be able to convince the remainder. And will he succeed? Just as sure as he exists he will do it, unless we do as we are commanded. And what is that? Why, "put on the whole armor of God . . . having (our) loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and (our) feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, and above all, taking the shield of faith, whereby we shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked (one), and take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the WORD OF GOD. Praying always, with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit."

By this means, and this means only, will we be able to stand. Let us watch and pray lest at any time we fall. N. L. WILLARD.

Rochester, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.—No. 4.

"Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss."—JAMES 4: 3.

The Savior said at one time, "This people draweth nigh unto me with their lips, but their heart is far from me."

The language of the Savior and of the apostle is applicable to the great mass of religionists. Many there be who ask and receive not. Let us consider for a moment the examples which come under our own observation.

Think of the prayers offered in our weekly meetings. How many blessings are asked of God which, if bestowed, would overwhelm the petitioner with amazement. Why? Because they have been asking the Lord to do for them what they have not the slightest expectation of receiving. They asked to be baptized with the Holy Ghost. What if their prayer was heard, and in answer thereto the glorious outpouring of the Spirit was experienced, with its accompanying results? Would they not be surprised? They ask for an entire purification of the heart, to be made holy, sanctified throughout, soul, body and spirit. Supposing the cleansing blood was applied, and they made entirely free from the carnal mind, completely saved; would not the appearance of such a change astonish them? They had asked, it is true, for perfect purity, but they were not expecting an answer now, nor indeed at any specific time in the future. There was indeed no real earnest longing of the soul for this purity; they prayed only as a matter of form; certain set forms of speech have become stereotyped, and every one adopts them, the mass without being impressed with them at all; they are not the fervent utterances of their own soul, and, although they have expressed them hundreds of times, they wonder not that they are unanswered; they have never asked with a fervent expectation of receiving the things for which they pray. If they had been in earnest, if they really felt the need of what they ask God to bestow, if they were resolved on obtaining the specific blessing prayed for, and of being now heard and answered, they would have been long since rejoicing in the actual possession, and witnessed thereof to others.

God has pledged himself to bestow whatever the suppliant desires when he prays, if he will but exercise appropriating faith, for this is the kind implied in the language—"Believe that ye receive," and ye "shall have." Supposing those who pray in the social meetings were united in thus believing when they prayed; what think you would be the result? Would they go away as cold and barren as they came? I tell you nay! The result would be such as that referred to previously; "And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Such prayers bring present blessings.

Do we realize as we ought what the word of God says in regard to unbelieving prayers? "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Think of that,—"impossible"! No matter how well arranged the sentences, how eloquent the pleadings, or how much in harmony with the divine will are the things asked; if faith does not bear the petition up to the throne, it will never be heard in heaven. Better not pray at all than draw nigh with the lips while the heart is far from being in the petition. We may pray morning, noon and night with the most undeviating faithfulness, but if we believe not when we pray, we are just as destitute of the grace of God as one who has no form of prayer; "for he that cometh to God must believe," and "without faith it is impossible to please" him.

One who habituates himself to daily prayer, will probably be more of a moralist than one who lives in its neglect; but we fear such are in greater danger, from the fact that they feel more safe; they flatter themselves with the delusive hope of being saved because of the regard they have for the outward forms of religious service, while as yet they know not the joys which flow from a present acceptance and salvation. The suppliant who in the exercise of a present faith approaches God, really enjoys communion with him; he is conscious of access within the veil. The language of the beloved disciple is that of his own heart,—"This is the confidence we have in him, that if we ask anything according to his will he heareth us; and if he hear us, we know that we have the petitions desired of him." They are as conscious of receiving answers from heaven as they are of their own existence. But, alas! how many can recall scarcely a time when they received a direct response to a specific request, while others can only remember here and there a special manifestation to their souls.

While we have been reflecting on the "exceeding great and precious promises" given us in the Word,—promises adapted to our every condition and necessity,—and contemplate the illustrations so often presented of the power of prayer, we feel deeply our own lack of faith; it seems as though we had hardly begun to know the blessedness of prayer, the privilege of prayer, the efficacy of prayer; and it is to stir up our own heart to a more lively faith and deeper experience, as well as to direct other minds in the same channel, that we have written upon this subject.

M. D. W.

For the World's Crisis.

BEARING THE CROSS.

Much is said about bearing the cross. Some seem to think speaking in meeting is the cross they must bear; and when this is done think little more about the cross. Speaking in meeting we apprehend is a very small item in bearing the cross. Men are all naturally in love with this present world. To this world we must be crucified. Crucifixion is a hard death; but few are willing to die such a death. There is no other way of entering the kingdom of God. We must be "crucified unto the world, and the world unto us. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2: 14.

A believing view of the Lord Jesus Christ will aid us greatly to become crucified to this world; who became poor, was despised of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, endured reproach, resisted temptation, though he suffered being tempted; when he was reviled, resisted not again, murmured not, though wounded, bruised, put to grief, and his soul made an offering for sin; scourged, spit upon, his hands and feet pierced with nails, his soul in agony,—all this he bore, and no lisp of impatience escaped him. Would you be crucified unto the world? then go and learn of him. Contemplate his poverty, life, sufferings, resignation, patience, his loving and forgiving spirit, till the whole mind is humbled within you. Then we can realize this portion of holy writ,—"If so be we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Rom. 8: 17.

If we would bear our cross, and be crucified unto the world, REMEMBER every trial of our life, spiritual, personal, direct or indirect, is by the appointment and permission of God, who willeth not the death of the sinner, but who is seeking by all these trials to crucify us unto the world, and to fit us for the everlasting kingdom of his dear Son. It is one grand feature of bearing the cross, to bear all the trials of life without a complaint.

All things work together for good to them that love God. Happy the soul who is constantly looking to God for grace to bear every cross. "My grace is sufficient for thee," saith the Redeemer. We should praise God for every trial and cross we bear. "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations," James 1: 2. Most persons count it all sorrow when they fall into divers temptation. We need pruning to become fruitful. Be patient in all things. That is bearing the cross. Then when Christ appears the cross-bearer shall wear the CROWN.

J. E. CLARK.

Selected for the Crisis.

THE MEN FOR THE TIMES.

Give us the men of steel,
And the arm of fearless might,
And the strength of will that is ready still
To battle for the right.

Give us the eye to weep
That honest tear of feeling,
That shuts not down, for the world's dread frown,
The genuine heart revealing.

Give us the mind to feel
The sufferings of another,
And fearless power, in the dying hour,
To help a suffering brother.

Give us the clear, cool brain,
That is never asleep or dozing,
But, sparkling ever with bold endeavor,
Wakes the world from its prosing.

Ah! give us the nerve of steel,
And the hand of fearless might,
And the heart that can love and feel,
And the head that is always right.

For the foeman is now abroad,
And the earth is filled with crimes,
Let it be our prayer to God—
Oh! give us the men for the times.

For the World's Crisis.

THE POPULAR CLERGY OF OUR DAY.

NUMBER ONE.

They say the Lord has sent them to preach his gospel, while they are filled to the brim and covered up with the world. They say he has called them to preach peace and good will to man. Instead of that, war, war, is the alpha and omega of their discourses. They profess to take the Bible for their guide, and while that declares that Christ sent his disciples forth without scrip or purse, these must have both. While the Bible declares that he that preaches the gospel shall live of the gospel, they dare not trust in all the gospel they possess for one week's living. Instead of going forth and preaching the gospel, and trusting in that gospel to open the hearts of the people to supply their wants, they must agree on a price beforehand, and after preaching per agreement, have not gospel enough to make the people honest, but are often cheated out of their pay. Some sue the church, and thus obtain their wages. Do they live of the gospel, or of the law?

The Bible says pure and undefiled religion is to visit the fatherless and the widow, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. The ministers of our day, and the people who follow them, do neither of these. The world, the flesh, and the devil are in their very church, hanging in tassels from their pulpits, while the poor and suffering are scattered around them on every hand. And they have divided the world into parts; each one gaining all he can for his party, and stirring up prejudice and envy against others.

The Bible plainly declares that "the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom," while the priests say the fear of the devil is the beginning of wisdom. The Bible says again, the love of God leadeth men to repentance, while the clergy say the fear of torment and fire and brimstone should frighten them to repentance. In short, nearly all their doings prove them to be a company of blind guides, sponging their living out of laboring people by blinding their minds and keeping them from the light of truth. Their preaching is popular, a sort of lullaby, in which their flock delight. They see no danger. All is peace. The notes of warning as sounded by God's true watchmen are quickly denounced by their shepherd, and the slight ripple soon subsides, and they glide on in fancied security till too late! too late! J. L. HERSEY.

For the World's Crisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

It will be remembered that some time in December last, I made a statement in the Crisis, of my illness caused by an injury of the spine four years ago, and that I felt it duty to ask the prayers of the Lord's children that he might heal me. I wish now to acknowledge, with much gratitude, the receipt of many letters from different brethren, sympathising with me, and advising such treatment as they thought important; each of which I had before tried, excepting the one from Bro. D. T. Taylor, which I intended to try as soon as practicable if the Lord did not answer prayer any other way.

Second. I wish to acknowledge that on the evening of Dec. 22d, I was paralyzed while in our prayer-meeting, so that I could not get up for about two hours, after which I was led home by Bro. York. The numbness wore off in three days, leaving me with natural feelings, such as I had not enjoyed for four years. I immediately responded to a call abroad to preach, and have since traveled ten weeks, over eight hundred miles, preaching and working constantly, have not had a paralytic shock, nor any numbness in my system, or soreness in my spine, yet the shocks had occurred once a week for several months, and the numbness in my limbs continued.

I am not yet strong, am easily fatigued, and when I labor hard am weary in the back. I have often spoken of this matter with much trembling, lest I be taken down again. Perhaps I am too unbelieving; yet I do believe the Lord has answered the prayers of those who have been praying for me, and laid his helping hand upon me. I praise and adore him for it. I feel something more than grateful. I glory in his holy name. I am satisfied he has done a mighty work in my mortal system. It must be him. Glory to the God of Abraham, Elijah and Daniel.

If I fall under this difficulty again, or if I do not recover my full strength, I must believe the Lord has done what has been done for me. I could only ask recovery to work in his vineyard. I had no other ambition that I know of. I mean that all my strength shall go to spread his truth and glory. May he aid me by his grace so to do, and finally give me an abundant entrance into his coming kingdom. I. C. WELLCOME.

March 17th, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

COMMUNION WITH GOD.

From the Adamic age to the present time, God has held communion with his devoted people. During the patriarchal and prophetic ages, that communion was mainly oral, and either mediately or immediately personal and audible. But "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spoke in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." Now to hold communion with God under the christian dispensation, implies a mutual intercourse with him through faith in Jesus, the Mediator of the new covenant; the Holy Spirit, by prayer, being the medium and manner of communication. "The Spirit helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit maketh intercession for us, ... according to the will of God." Rom. 8: 26, 17. Hence, if we would commune with God we must approach him in that faith which is the fruit of the Spirit; enabling us to "believe that he is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Heb. 11: 6. Like the branch in the vine, with this exalted assurance, we are prepared for both the condition and the promise, that, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15: 7. Thus the word of a changeless God is the reliance of faith, for all the sacred promises that are yea and amen in Christ.

But it is the will of God that we should ask in order to receive—seek, that we may find; knock, that it may be opened unto us; so, through all the way, the ultimate good of the creature is made subject to a condition; no Scripture promise, extending to immortality, is made absolute. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine"—the true principle, by which we hold communion with God. It is thus the true disciple may ask what he will, and it shall be done unto him; for he abides in God and God's words abide in him—there is no restriction—he may ask what he will. Again, negatively, "if a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and men gather them and cast them into the fire."

Now there are a vast number of nominal christians in the world; but of them all, how few abide in Christ! How few are living victorious over the world, in constant communion with God! How few attain to the standard of the apostles! They point to the altar, but who presents his body a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God? "How is the gold became dim! how is the most fine gold changed!" Is not the virtual negation of these living principles, the rock on which the church has split? May we not here find a solution to the question, Why have not the prayers of God's professed church received a more ready and plenary response?

My brethren, let us who wait the return of a soon coming Lord, feel the evidence that we abide in his love, and when we pray, "Thy kingdom come," that we hold communion with God in Spirit and in truth.

E. Stoneham, Me. W. A. MANNING.

For the World's Crisis.

FLESH AND BLOOD.

1 Cor. 15: 50;—"Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." Gal. 5: 18;—"But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law. Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like; of the which I tell you before, as I have told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

This text is usually perverted in quoting, and made to mean that flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom of God; that these bodies are raised immaterial, in order to be undying and undecaying, as flesh and blood are; and hence this other quotation in unison with the above. 1 Cor. 15: 44;—"It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body"; and hence the body is made like the spirit. Unspeakable, unexplained, and miraculous this!

Now I understand that the earth will be restored, and that those persons who follow the dictation of the Spirit of God, in doing all that he has commanded, exercising faith in his Son, the medium of restoration, will be heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. Rom. 8: 17. There is no salvation by the law, nor by the acts of the flesh; but "by grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."—Eph. 2: 8. Hence there is no claim by blood relation, but by believing in Jesus Christ; and that in this age is the whole duty of man.

Hindsburg, Vt. H. L. SALSBURY.

For the World's Crisis.

A SHORT SERMON.

"HEAR the word of the Lord, ye that tremble at his word."—Isa. 66: 5.

"Ye shall be holy, for I the Lord your God am holy."—Lev. 19: 2. "Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy."—Lev. 20: 7. "Remember and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God."—Num. 15: 40. "God has not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness."—1 Thess. 4: 7. (Now don't forget!) "As he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation."—1 Pet. 1: 15. "Follow . . . holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."—Heb. 12: 14. "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness."—2 Pet. 3: 11. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who . . . hath chosen us in him, . . . that we should be holy and without blame before him in love."—Eph. 1: 3, 4. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy (not stimulated with tobacco, nor unnatural food or drink; if so, will they be holy?), acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."—Rom. 12: 1.

"BE YE DOERS of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."—James 1: 22.

AMEN. SILAS P. WHITNEY.

☞ Be not affronted at a jest. If one throw salt at thee, thou wilt receive no harm unless thou hast sore places.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

Beauty of person, like genius, is a dangerous, though brilliant gift. It may adorn or deform. It may contribute fresh charms to womanhood, or it may disfigure the lovely page with the mar-plots of vanity and pride.

That hand is handsomest that does the gracious deeds of charity and christian duty. Those lips are sweetest which utter the words of truth, hope, and affection. That face is loveliest which smiles on virtue.

Who cares whether Florence Nightingale has personal charms or not? She is one of the most lovely of earth's daughters—for she is beautiful in her acts of benevolence and love. "Handsome is that handsome does," expresses in simple phrase a beautiful thought.

The choicest charms that nature lavishes on her masterpiece,

"Are but the transient pageants of an hour;
And earthly pride is like the passing flower,
That springs to fall, and blossom but to die."

But the flowers of pure thought and feeling have an immortal freshness. These bloom only in the beautiful gardens of refined minds and christianized hearts.

We know and admire some of these beautiful women. They do not all have graceful forms or handsome faces, but they are surpassingly lovely nevertheless. The homes that cherish them are blessed. Society is enriched by them. They ennoble womanhood. They are ministering angels by the bedside of pain. They are Charity's almoners to the suffering ones of earth.

Dear ladies, be beautiful in your works. We shall be happy to record your charms for the admiration and love of the good and true. And God's angel amanuensis will enroll your names for immortal honor in that book, the pages of which are eternal.—Ex.

LOUIS HARMS.

Louis Harms is a plain Lutheran clergyman. In 1848 he was installed in the parish of Hermansburg, on the Luneburger Heath in the kingdom of Hanover. He is a man, according to the reports, of simple, direct nature, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. His parish, in which his father had been pastor before him, is made up of simple country people, and among them, as in most other parts of Germany, a dead orthodoxy had for the most part held sway. Under the new pastor and his earnest and faithful labors, the parish soon began to assume a new aspect. The christian life began to quicken, and in a short time the reformation became thorough, to a degree unknown, perhaps, in any other similar population in the world. In Hermansburg there are now no beggars, no rough street loungers, no drunkards, no ragged straggling children, and no paupers. In every house in the village there is family prayer, morning and evening; no one is absent from church except in case of sickness; the services in the week are as well attended as those of the Sabbath; the workmen have prayers in the fields, and throughout the parish the songs heard are not the common country ditties, but sweet sacred melodies, which joyfully express its christian life. During the year there are eleven thousand communicants, which must embrace nearly the whole of the adult population. The people live in great harmony, and are good farmers and good laborers. All this has come of the blessing of God inspiring and giving fruit to the labors of a single man.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

HOOPING COUGH AND SMALL POX.

Four things, or at most five, will make hooping cough not only safe, but short. First, keep the extremities constantly warm. Fail not, night nor day. Secondly, see that the patient breathes pure fresh air night and day. Bad air will overpower good lungs; how much more, lungs oppressed with the poisonous virus which is the exciting cause of hooping-cough. Thirdly, reduce whatever fever in the chest or trunk, by frequent manipulation, or exposure to the air if necessary, (of course, of that chest or trunk.) Resort to water can scarcely ever be needed. Fourthly, make a thorough business of magnetising the whole region of the lungs, (including chest and upper portion of back and sides,) either by hands laid on, or by passes, or by both. This magnetism will strengthen and heal the lungs, and soothe and stop the cough. Not only can you prevent hooping, but even coughing. You who do not believe it, try it and see. And do not fear to let your babes have the disease. I had rather a babe should have it, than any older person; for your healing, curing hands will cover a babe almost over, so that you can do anything you have a mind to with it. With your hands you can keep its extremities warm, reduce any fever, as well magnetise it by simply clasping it; in addition to which, you can cover it sufficiently for protection, and then carry it to the door or window to take the air.

And fifthly, in the case of a grown person, the cure may be greatly aided by friction of the whole surface, to excite the skin to vigorous action, thus relieving the lungs of exertion, and likewise of inflammation or fever.

Small pox is nothing but a fever tending to produce an eruption; treat it like a fever, and never mind the eruption; take care of the fever, and you will take care of the eruption: quench the fever, and there will be no eruption. First, last, and all the time, cool the patient off and keep him cool, and that is all you have to do. Air him all the time, and bathe him as often as the fever rises, if it is every half hour. For he may be so hot, and get hot so often, that you will need to stand him in a tub, and perfectly drench him with cold water, a dozen times a day. Pour and drench him as often as he gets hot. But do not chill him; stop when he is cool, and put him back to bed. But while you never chill him, still let his covering be little or nothing—even let him be perfectly nude. Cool, but never cold, must be your rule. And if you begin soon enough with him in this way, he will never be pitted, nor show a single trace of the disease. Small pox taken in season, and treated appropriately, is absolutely harmless as pancakes. It only needs more and severer treatment than other fevers, in proportion as it is higher and hotter.—JOS. TREAT.—Ex.

CHECKING PERSPIRATION.

If while perspiring, or while something warmer than usual, from exercise or a heated room, there is a sudden exposure in stillness to a still, cold air, or to a raw, damp atmosphere, or to a draft, whether at an open window or door, or street-corner, an inevitable result is a violent and instantaneous closing of the pores of the skin, by which waste and impure matters, which were making their way out of the system, are compelled to seek an exit through some other channel, and break out through some weaker part, not the natural one, and harm to that part is the result. The idea is presented by saying that the cold has settled in that part. To illustrate:

A lady was about getting into a small boat to cross the Delaware; but wishing first to get an orange at the fruit-stand, she ran up the bank of the river, and on her return to the boat found herself much heated, for it was summer, but there was a little wind on the water, and the clothing soon felt cold to her; the next morning she had a severe cold, which settled on her lungs, and within the year she died of consumption.

A stout, strong man was working in a garden in May; feeling a little tired about noon, he sat down, in the shade of the house and fell asleep; he waked up chilly; inflammation of the lungs followed, ending, after two years of great suffering, in consumption. On opening his chest, there was such an extensive decay, that the yellow matter was scooped out by the cupful.

A Boston ship-owner, while on the deck of one of his vessels, thought he would "lend a hand" in some emergency; and, pulling off his coat, worked with a will, until he perspired freely, when he sat down to rest a while, enjoying the delicious breeze from the sea. On attempting to rise, he found himself unable, and was so stiff in his joints that he had to be carried home and put to bed, which he did not leave until the end of two years, when he was barely able to hobble down to the wharf on crutches.

A lady, after being unusually busy all day, found herself heated and tired toward sundown of a summer's day. She concluded she would rest herself by taking a drive to town in an open vehicle. The ride made her uncomfortably cool, but she warmed herself up by an hour's shopping, when she turned homeward; it being late in the evening, she found herself more decidedly chilly than before. At midnight she had pneumonia (inflammation of the lungs,) and in three months had the ordinary symptoms of confirmed consumption.

A lady of great energy of character lost her cook, and had to take her place for four days; the kitchen was warm, and there was a draft of air through it. When the work was done, warm and weary, she went to her chamber, and laid down on the bed to rest herself. This operation was repeated several times a day. On the fifth day she had an attack of lung fever; at the end of six months she was barely able to leave her chamber, only to find herself suffering with all the more prominent symptoms of confirmed consumption; such as quick pulse, night and morning cough, night-sweats, debility, short breath, and falling away.

A young lady rose from her bed on a November night, and leaned her arm on the cold window-sill to listen to a serenade. Next morning she had pneumonia, and suffered the horrors of asthma for the remainder of a long life.

Multitudes of women lose health and life every year in one of two ways; by busying themselves in a warm kitchen until weary, and then throwing themselves on a bed or sofa, without covering, and perhaps in a room without fire; or by removing the outer clothing, and perhaps changing the dress for a more common one, as soon as they enter the house after a walk or a shopping. The rule should be invariable to go at once to a warm room and keep on all the clothing, at least for five or ten minutes, until the forehead is perfectly dry. In all weathers, if you have to walk and ride on any occasion, do the riding first. Billiousness and constipation also cause catarrhs.—Hall's Journal of Health.

ADVANTAGES OF CRYING.

A French physician is out in a long dissertation on the advantages of groaning and crying in general, and especially during surgical operations. He contends that groaning and crying are the two grand operations by which nature allays anguish; that those patients who give way to their natural feelings, more speedily recover from accidents and operations than those who suppose it unworthy a man to betray such symptoms of cowardice as either to groan or to cry. He tells of a man who reduced his pulse from one hundred and twenty-six to sixty in the course of two hours, by giving full vent to his emotions. If people are at all unhappy about anything, let them go into their rooms and comfort themselves with a loud boohoo, and they will feel a hundred per cent. better afterwards.

In accordance with the above, the crying of children should not be too greatly discouraged. If it is systematically repressed, the result may be St. Vitus's dance, epileptic fits, or some other disease of the nervous system. What is natural is nearly always useful, and nothing can be more natural than the crying of children when anything occurs to give them either physical or mental pain.

Probably most persons have felt the effect of tears in relieving great sorrow. It is even curious how the feelings are allayed by their free indulgence in groans and sighs. Then let parents and friends show more indulgence to noisy bursts of grief, on the part of children as well as of older persons, and regard the eyes and the mouth as the safety-valves through which nature discharges her surplus steam.—Ex.

THE TIME FOR SLEEP AND STUDY.

By all means, sleep enough, and give all in your care sleep enough, by requiring them to go to bed at some regular hour, and to get up at the moment of spontaneous waking in the morning. Never waken up any one, especially children, from a sound sleep, unless there is urgent necessity; it is cruel to do so. To prove this, we have only to notice how fretful and unhappy a child is when waked up before the nap is out. If the brain is nourished during sleep, it must have most vigor in the morning; hence the morning is the best time for study—for then the brain has most strength, most activity, and must work more clearly. It is "the midnight lamp" which floods the world with sickly sentimentalities, with false morals, with rickety theology, and with all those harum-scarum dreams of human elevation which abnegate Bible teachings.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write BUSINESS.

Over all business matters, write PRIVATE.

All articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it be not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appropriations on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.50
30 copies, when sent to one address	4.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	5.20
50 copies, when sent to one address	6.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	13.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(If sent by mail) for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies, or less (to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Custom Box, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

NEBO.—DEUT. 34.

Moses obeyed the Lord's command,
To view from Pisgah's top the land
That lay beyond the Jordan's flood;
Attended by no earthly one,
He stood where beams of glory shone,
Alone with God the meek man stood!

Can Death impart the magic power,
That disembodied souls may soar
And view the scenes of earth and heaven?
Why, then, is Moses called to gaze,
Before he dies, upon the place
To all the tribes of Israel given?

Moses must look before he dies,
For knowledge, wisdom or device
Are not perceived in death's domain:
The dead repose in sea and earth,
Till the last day shall bring them forth
To stand in consciousness again.

There Moses learned the chief design
Of Israel's rest in Palestine;
It typified the world to come,—
The earth to paradise restored,
On which the ransomed of the Lord
Shall find an everlasting home.

Let faithful watchmen now unite,
And shout as from the mountain's height—
"O weary Zion, joy to thee!
Thy Joshua comes, to lead thee o'er
Far, far beyond dread Jordan's shore,
To rest in immortality."

Newark, N. J. JOHN LYLE.

For the World's Crisis.

DEATH AND RESURRECTION.—NO. 3.

(This was written for the Harbinger and refused.)

Says our affirmant, shall not the judge of all the earth do right? If it is right to judge men twice, and kill them twice, it is hard to see it. We remark it would be hard indeed to see the justice of executing the same law on the same person or persons, for the same offence, twice; but if the offence be committed by the same individual twice, he having first been found guilty of crime, as an accomplice with others, who having (some one of them), as the testimony fully showed, committed murder, the whole gang being accessory, now, I ask, is it not justice to execute upon the accomplice as really as the one who actually performs the murder, although he be but an accessory to the crime; and if so, when he is dead and the law fully executed, if some one who had the power condescends in kindness to raise him to life again, would not the act be a worthy one, a gracious and kind one? And now suppose this grace of life, bestowed by such a friend, in such a case, were forfeited by this person going, not in a gang with others, not as an accomplice; but with his own individual hands, and putting to death his fellow. Is it hard to see that he is worthy of death the second time, inflicted according to the same law? No, but quite the reverse, as it appears to me.

But it may be objected, that man is not in his resurrection life, and hence the illustration is not a parallel; but man being informed by surrounding facts, and also resurrection, of his having lost his present life, as an accomplice with Adam's sin, and also being informed that God in his grace has "abolished death," over the race, sees the relation he sustains to divine government, and a future life. He also sees that his sins, personally committed against God in this life cannot be a forfeiture of this life; for that was forfeited by his being an accessory to the sin of Adam. Hence he sees, if any life is by his own sins forfeited, it must be the resurrection life. Perhaps "some man will say," yes, the resurrection life is the life forfeited by the personal sins of Adam's race; and so the "wicked and ungodly" never receive it. Well, if a man can lose that life which he never had, and that God never designed he should have, it is hard to see it. But if it be admitted that the resurrection life is the one forfeited and lost by the unpardoned sins of Adam's sons and daughters, then the magnanimous grace and wisdom of God will be seen in his righteous administration, both in abolishing the death entailed on the race, and also in executing the "second death," on all the unholy and rebellions.

I will now give some positive proof from Revelations for the re-living of all men, good and bad. Rom. 5: 18,—"Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation. Even so (in the same universal manner) by the righteousness of One the free gift came upon all men unto JUSTIFICATION OF LIFE." Very well, says the objector, they may all be justified to life from the death entailed by Adam, and yet never obtain the life justified. In that case, will God be more slack in executing the law pertaining to his grace, than that pertaining to his wrath? As he does now visit death on the holy, and also on the unoffending infant. Will he not be equally prompt in the manifestation of his grace in the world to come, by the execution of the law of justification?

Hear Paul again, nineteenth verse,—"For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, (how could they be made sinners, and their death as a consequence not be penal for that first offence?), so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." How many? Just as many as were made sinners by that first man's offence. What then, says the objector, hinders universal salvation? Nothing hinders the universal salvation of Adam's race from the death penalty that he entailed. Hence we say universal righteousness, universal salvation; that is, if there had been no sin committed by Adam's race after his transgression, Christ's redemption would be not only universal, but also eternal. But as it is, he is the Savior of all men (from the condemnation by Adam), and especially of them that believe," for the believer having sinned he stands exposed to the "second death;" but he believes, repents, and is baptized into Christ for the remission of sins, and so being pardoned, the death to which he was exposed by his own individual sin is not executed, and hence, his is justly called an especial salvation.

The Syriac version of Rom. 5: 18 reads. "Therefore as on account of one, condemnation was to all men, so on account of the righteousness of one, will the victory unto life be to all men." Not only are they justified to life, but Paul says they will get the victory of life. If so, nothing but the "second death" can remove them from life again. Paul further says on this subject, 1 Cor. 15: 22,—"For as in Adam all die, EVEN so in Christ shall all be made alive." McKnight renders this passage,—"Therefore as by Adam all die, so also by Christ shall all be made alive." Ye who ask for one positive text for the re-living of all men, is not that positive and to the point? But listen again to the Syriac version, twenty-second verse,—"For as it was by Adam that all men die, so also by the Messiah they all live." Paul then is not against himself, but what he says in writing to the Romans he corroborates in writing to the Corinthians. Prof. Whiting gives in the margin the word by instead of "in."

So we regard the re-living of all men a truth to be proclaimed, not as a doubtful, uncertain thing. But a tithe of the testimony on the point has not yet been considered, and cannot be without extending these numbers to a considerable length. C. F. SWEET.

For the World's Crisis.

HELL.

"MEDITATIONS FOR SATURDAY."

From a Catholic Prayer Book.

"Consider that hell has no end. There all kinds of sufferings are found, and for all eternity. Hundreds of years, yea, thousands of years will pass away in these torments, and yet hell will be always as just beginning. Hundreds of thousands, hundreds of millions of years and of centuries will pass, and hell will still be at its commencement.

If at this hour an angel should carry the tidings to one of the damned that God had consented to free him from hell,—when? Hear! when so many millions of centuries had passed away as there are drops of water in the ocean, leaves on the trees, sands in the sea and in the earth. You shudder at this, but still 'tis true. Such tidings would give greater joy to that soul, than you would feel if you were told that that you had become the king of a mighty kingdom. Yes, certainly! for that poor damned sinner would say, It is true that many centuries must first pass away, but at length a day will come in which my sufferings will end.

Alas! all these centuries will pass away, but hell will ever be beginning anew. All these centuries may be multiplied by the sands, and raindrops, and leaves, but hell is still beginning anew.

My christian friend, think well of this, and consider that hell is waiting for you if you sin. Even now its horrid flames are burning beneath your feet, and oh! while you are reading these words, how many souls are falling into it."

My God! what wonder is it that infidelity is running rampant the world over? What wonder is it that the name of the Almighty is blasphemed by nine-tenths of Christendom! What wonder is it that the Bible is considered by the majority as an inexplicable mystery, and by many as "no better than a last year's almanac?" What wonder is it that religion is so hated by the masses of civilized nations? What wonder is it that Tom Paine wrote his famous works against the divine origin of the word of God, or that Voltaire scouted the idea of (such) a God? Verily, will not these two men rise up in judgment against those who endorse and promulgate such a hellish doctrine as the above? Paine and Voltaire were, in one sense of the word, right. There never was such a Bible, nor such a God!

The above doctrine is the "doctrine of devils" in the broadest sense of the word. Its origin is devilish, and its results are devilish. His satanic majesty never got up a deeper plot or a baser deception, from the time he made his first trial upon Eve down to the present moment, than when he made nineteen-twentieths of the human family, civilized and uncivilized, enlightened and barbarous, believe that they had an "immortal soul," and that God Almighty was such a tyrant as to forever broil in the flames of hell those of his unfortunate creatures who failed to get into paradise!

He failed to prove to our first parents that they should not die as he had told them, consequently he set about devising a plan whereby he could make them think that he was right after all. Therefore he told them that only their bodies should die, but the "immortal soul" that God breathed into them, that should never die.

He further told them or their descendants, that God was such an unfeeling monster, if they did not do all he commanded them, he would cast them into liquid fire, to be tormented as long as he had an existence, which would be to all eternity! And what was the result? Why, that man's heart was filled with hatred towards such a being as the Almighty was represented. He departed from the true and living God, and worshiped any thing and every thing in preference to such a being, and finally even denied that there was a God. Fearful judgments fell upon man to undeceive him, but without effect.

That old serpent "the devil" so thoroughly "deceived the nations," that it finally repented the Lord God that he had made man, and he resolved to destroy him from off the face of the earth. There were but eight souls who had not been deceived by him, and who escaped the waters of that terrible flood! But as the earth was once more peopled, Satan saw how well his plan had worked upon those before the deluge, and he determined to try it again on those after the deluge. He has done so, and the results have been almost precisely the same.

He has the proud satisfaction of knowing that the world at large believe that he told the truth in the garden, and that God told a lie; and to make assurance doubly sure, he tells men that they can now hold converse with the spirits of the dead, with good or bad. O, how he shakes his sides with devilish glee as he hears the name of God blasphemed, his word a mock and derision, and his few children despised and persecuted. He gloats over the brilliant idea and unparalleled success of his plan in bringing the professed churches of God to that point where they can go hand in hand with his avowed servants to those gambling assemblies which he cunningly denominates "CHRISTIAN Sanitary Fairs," "Church Festivals," etc. He relishes with keenest zest the readiness with which all classes conclude that he is "not half as black as he is painted;" while his satellites clap their hands for very joy as they see a professed minister of the gospel ascend the rostrum to bring into disrepute before a gaping, laughing multitude a divine ordinance of God.

Yes, having deceived the churches, the arch fiend is now making the most strenuous efforts to "deceive if it were possible the very elect!" Almost all Christendom is actively engaged in spreading his original proclamation, "Thou shalt NOT surely die!" and he thinks by a little strategy he will be able to convince the remainder. And will he succeed? Just as sure as he exists he will do it, unless we do as we are commanded. And what is that? Why, "put on the whole armor of God . . . having (our) loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and (our) feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, and above all, taking the shield of faith, whereby we shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked (one), and take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the WORD OF GOD. Praying always, with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit."

By this means, and this means only, will we be able to stand. Let us watch and pray, lest at any time we fall. N. L. WILLARD.

Rochester, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.—No. 4.

"Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss."—James 4: 3.

The Savior said at one time, "This people draweth nigh unto me with their lips, but their heart is far from me."

The language of the Savior and of the apostle is applicable to the great mass of religionists. Many there be who ask and receive not. Let us consider for a moment the examples which come under our own observation.

Think of the prayers offered in our weekly meetings. How many blessings are asked of God which, if bestowed, would overwhelm the petitioner with amazement. Why? Because they have been asking the Lord to do for them what they have not the slightest expectation of receiving. They asked to be baptized with the Holy Ghost. What if their prayer was heard, and in answer thereto the glorious outpouring of the Spirit was experienced, with its accompanying results? Would they not be surprised? They ask for an entire purification of the heart, to be made holy, sanctified throughout, soul, body and spirit. Supposing the cleansing blood was applied, and they made entirely free from the carnal mind, completely saved; would not the appearance of such a change astonish them? They had asked, it is true, for perfect purity, but they were not expecting an answer now, nor indeed at any specific time in the future. There was indeed no real earnest longing of the soul for this purity; they prayed only as a matter of form; certain set forms of speech have become stereotyped, and every one adopts them, the mass without being impressed with them at all; they are not the fervent utterances of their own soul, and, although they have expressed them hundreds of times, they wonder not that they are unanswered; they have never asked with a fervent expectation of receiving the things for which they pray. If they had been in earnest, if they really felt the need of what they ask God to bestow, if they were resolved on obtaining the specific blessing prayed for, and of being now heard and answered, they would have been long since rejoicing in the actual possession, and witnessed thereof to others.

God has pledged himself to bestow whatever the suppliant desires when he prays, if he will but exercise appropriating faith, for this is the kind implied in the language—"Believe that ye receive," and ye "shall have." Supposing those who pray in the social meetings were united in thus believing when they prayed; what think you would be the result? Would they go away as cold and barren as they came? I tell you nay! The result would be such as that referred to previously; "And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Such prayers bring present blessings.

Do we realize as we ought what the word of God says in regard to unbelieving prayers? "Without faith it is impossible to please God." Think of that,—"impossible"! No matter how well arranged the sentences, how eloquent the pleadings, or how much in harmony with the divine will are the things asked; if faith does not bear the petition up to the throne, it will never be heard in heaven. Better not pray at all than draw nigh with the lips while the heart is far from being in the petition. We may pray morning, noon and night with the most undeviating faithfulness, but if we believe not when we pray, we are just as destitute of the grace of God as one who has no form of prayer; "for he that cometh to God must believe," and "without faith it is impossible to please" him.

One who habituates himself to daily prayer, will probably be more of a moralist than one who lives in its neglect; but we fear such are in greater danger, from the fact that they feel more safe; they flatter themselves with the delusive hope of being saved because of the regard they have for the outward forms of religious service, while as yet they know not the joys which flow from a present acceptance and salvation. The suppliant who in the exercise of a present faith approaches God, really enjoys communion with him; he is conscious of access within the veil. The language of the beloved disciple is that of his own heart,—"This is the confidence we have in him, that if we ask anything according to his will he heareth us; and if he hear us, we know that we have the petitions desired of him." They are as conscious of receiving answers from heaven as they are of their own existence. But, alas! how many can recall scarcely a time when they received a direct response to a specific request, while others can only remember here and there a special manifestation to their souls.

While we have been reflecting on the "exceeding great and precious promises" given us in the Word,—promises adapted to our every condition and necessity,—and contemplate the illustrations so often presented of the power of prayer, we feel deeply our own lack of faith; it seems as though we had hardly begun to know the blessedness of prayer, the privilege of prayer, the efficacy of prayer; and it is to stir up our own heart to a more lively faith and deeper experience, as well as to direct other minds in the same channel, that we have written upon this subject.

M. D. W.

For the World's Crisis.

BEARING THE CROSS.

Much is said about bearing the cross. Some seem to think speaking in meeting is the cross they must bear; and when this is done think little more about the cross. Speaking in meeting we apprehend is a very small item in bearing the cross. Men are all naturally in love with this present world. To this world we must be crucified. Crucifixion is a hard death; but few are willing to die such a death. There is no other way of entering the kingdom of God. We must be "crucified unto the world, and the world unto us. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2: 14.

A believing view of the Lord Jesus Christ will aid us greatly to become crucified to this world; who became poor, was despised of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, endured reproach, resisted temptation, though he suffered being tempted; when he was reviled, resisted not again, murmured not, though wounded, bruised, put to grief, and his soul made an offering for sin; scourged, spit upon, his hands and feet pierced with nails, his soul in agony,—all this he bore, and no lisp of impatience escaped him. Would you be crucified unto the world? then go and learn of him. Contemplate his poverty, life, sufferings, resignation, patience, his loving and forgiving spirit, till the whole mind is humbled within you. Then we can realize this portion of holy writ,—"If so be we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Rom. 8: 17.

If we would bear our cross, and be crucified unto the world, REMEMBER every trial of our life, spiritual, personal, direct or indirect, is by the appointment and permission of God, who willeth not the death of the sinner, but who is seeking by all these trials to crucify us unto the world, and to fit us for the everlasting kingdom of his dear Son. It is one grand feature of bearing the cross, to bear all the trials of life without a complaint.

All things work together for good to them that love God. Happy the soul who is constantly looking to God for grace to bear every cross. "My grace is sufficient for thee," saith the Redeemer. We should praise God for every trial and cross we bear. "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations;" James 1: 2. Most persons count it all sorrow when they fall into divers temptation. We need pruning to become fruitful. Be patient in all things. That is bearing the cross. Then when Christ appears the cross-bearer shall wear the CROWN.

J. E. CLARK.

Selected for the Crisis.

THE MEN FOR THE TIMES.

Give us the men of steel,
And the arm of fearless might,
And the strength of will that is ready still
To battle for the right.

Give us the eye to weep
That honest tear of feeling,
That shuts not down, for the world's dread frown,
The genuine heart revealing.

Give us the mind to feel
The sufferings of another,
And fearless power, in the dying hour,
To help a suffering brother.

Give us the clear, cool brain,
That is never asleep or dozing,
But, sparkling ever with bold endeavor,
Wakes the world from its prosing.

Ah! give us the nerve of steel,
And the hand of fearless might,
And the heart that can love and feel,
And the head that is always right.

For the foeman is now abroad,
And the earth is filled with crimes,
Let it be our prayer to God—
Oh! give us the men for the times.

For the World's Crisis.

THE POPULAR CLERGY OF OUR DAY.

NUMBER ONE.

They say the Lord has sent them to preach his gospel, while they are filled to the brim and covered up with the world. They say he has called them to preach peace and good will to man. Instead of that, war, war, is the alpha and omega of their discourses. They profess to take the Bible for their guide, and while that declares that Christ sent his disciples forth without scrip or purse, these must have both. While the Bible declares that he that preaches the gospel shall live of the gospel, they dare not trust in all the gospel they possess for one week's living. Instead of going forth and preaching the gospel, and trusting in that gospel to open the hearts of the people to supply their wants, they must agree on a price beforehand, and after preaching per agreement, have not gospel enough to make the people honest, but are often cheated out of their pay. Some sue the church, and thus obtain their wages. Do they live of the gospel, or of the law?

The Bible says pure and undefiled religion is to visit the fatherless and the widow, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. The ministers of our day, and the people who follow them, do neither of these. The world, the flesh, and the devil are in their very church, hanging in tassels from their pulpits, while the poor and suffering are scattered around them on every hand. And they have divided the world into parts; each one gaining all he can for his party, and stirring up prejudice and envy against others.

The Bible plainly declares that "the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom," while the priests say the fear of the devil is the beginning of wisdom. The Bible says again, the love of God leadeth men to repentance, while the clergy say the fear of torment and fire and brimstone should frighten them to repentance. In short, nearly all their doings prove them to be a company of blind guides, sponging their living out of laboring people by blinding their minds and keeping them from the light of truth. Their preaching is popular, a sort of lullaby, in which their flock delight. They see no danger. All is peace. The notes of warning as sounded by God's true watchmen are quickly denounced by their shepherd, and the slight ripple soon subsides, and they glide on in fancied security till too late! too late! J. L. HERSEY.

For the World's Crisis.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

It will be remembered that some time in December last, I made a statement in the Crisis, of my illness caused by an injury of the spine four years ago, and that I felt it duty to ask the prayers of the Lord's children that he might heal me. I wish now to acknowledge, with much gratitude, the receipt of many letters from different brethren, sympathising with me, and advising such treatment as they thought important; each of which I had before tried, excepting the one from Bro. D. T. Taylor, which I intended to try as soon as practicable if the Lord did not answer prayer any other way.

Second. I wish to acknowledge that on the evening of Dec. 22d, I was paralyzed while in our prayer-meeting, so that I could not get up for about two hours, after which I was led home by Bro. York. The numbness wore off in three days, leaving me with natural feelings, such as I had not enjoyed for four years. I immediately responded to a call abroad to preach, and have since traveled ten weeks, over eight hundred miles, preaching and working constantly, have not had a paralytic shock, nor any numbness in my system, or soreness in my spine, yet the shocks had occurred once a week for several months, and the numbness in my limbs continued.

I am not yet strong, am easily fatigued, and when I labor hard am weary in the back. I have often spoken of this matter with much trembling, lest I be taken down again. Perhaps I am too unbelieving; yet I do believe the Lord has answered the prayers of those who have been praying for me, and laid his helping hand upon me. I praise and adore him for it. I feel something more than grateful. I glory in his holy name. I am satisfied he has done a mighty work in my mortal system. It must be him. Glory to the God of Abraham, Elijah, and Daniel.

If I fall under this difficulty again, or if I do not recover my full strength, I must believe the Lord has done what has been done for me. I could only ask recovery to work in his vineyard. I had no other ambition that I know of. I mean that all my strength shall go to spread his truth and glory. May he aid me by his grace so to do, and finally give me an abundant entrance into his coming kingdom. I. C. WELLCOME.

March 17th, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

COMMUNION WITH GOD.

From the Adamic age to the present time, God has held communion with his devoted people. During the patriarchal and prophetic ages, that communion was mainly oral, and either mediately or immediately personal and audible. But "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spoke in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." Now to hold communion with God under the christian dispensation, implies a mutual intercourse with him through faith in Jesus, the Mediator of the new covenant; the Holy Spirit, by prayer, being the medium and manner of communication. "The Spirit helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit maketh intercession for us, ... according to the will of God." Rom. 8: 26, 17. Hence, if we would commune with God we must approach him in that faith which is the fruit of the Spirit; enabling us to "believe that he is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Heb. 11: 6. Like the branch in the vine, with this exalted assurance, we are prepared for both the condition and the promise, that, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15: 7. Thus the word of a changeless God is the reliance of faith, for all the sacred promises that are yea and amen in Christ.

But it is the will of God that we should ask in order to receive—seek, that we may find; knock, that it may be opened unto us; so, through all the way, the ultimate good of the creature is made subject to a condition; no Scripture promise, extending to immortality, is made absolute. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine"—the true principle, by which we hold communion with God. It is thus the true disciple may ask what he will, and it shall be done unto him; for he abides in God and God's words abide in him—there is no restriction—he may ask what he will. Again, negatively, "if a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and men gather them and cast them into the fire."

Now there are a vast number of nominal christians in the world; but of them all, how few abide in Christ! How few are living victorious over the world, in constant communion with God! How few attain to the standard of the apostles! They point to the altar, but who presents his body a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God? "How is the gold become dim! how is the most fine gold changed!" Is not the virtual negation of these living principles, the rock on which the church has split? May we not here find a solution to the question, Why have not the prayers of God's professed church received a more ready and plenary response?

My brethren, let us who wait the return of a soon coming Lord, feel the evidence that we abide in his love, and when we pray, "Thy kingdom come," that we hold communion with God in Spirit and in truth.

E. Stoneham, Me. W. A. MANNING.

For the World's Crisis.

FLESH AND BLOOD.

1 Cor. 15: 50;—"Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." Gal. 5: 18;—"But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law. Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like; of the which I tell you before, as I have told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

This text is usually perverted in quoting, and made to mean that flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom of God; that these bodies are raised immaterial, in order to be undying and undecaying, as flesh and blood are; and hence this other quotation in unison with the above. 1 Cor. 15: 44;—"It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body"; and hence the body is made like the spirit. Unspeakable, unexplained, and miraculous this!

Now I understand that the earth will be restored, and that those persons who follow the dictation of the Spirit of God, in doing all that he has commanded, exercising faith in his Son, the medium of restoration, will be heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. Rom. 8: 17. There is no salvation by the law, nor by the acts of the flesh; but "by grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."—Eph. 2: 8. Hence there is no claim by blood relation, but by believing in Jesus Christ; and that in this age is the whole duty of man.

Hindsburg, Vt. H. L. SALSBURY.

For the World's Crisis.

A SHORT SERMON.

"HEAR the word of the Lord, ye that tremble at his word."—Isa. 66: 5.

"Ye shall be holy, for I the Lord your God am holy."—Lev. 19: 2. "Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy."—Lev. 20: 7. "Remember and do all my commandments, and be holy unto your God."—Num. 15: 40. "God has not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness."—1 Thess. 4: 7. (Now don't forget!) "As he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation."—1 Pet. 1: 15. "Follow . . . holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."—Heb. 12: 14. "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness."—2 Pet. 3: 11. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who . . . hath chosen us in him, . . . that we should be holy and without blame before him in love."—Eph. 1: 3, 4. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy (not stimulated with tobacco, nor unnatural food or drink; if so, will they be holy?), acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."—Rom. 12: 1.

"BE YE DOERS of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."—James 1: 22.

AMEN. SILAS P. WHITNEY.

☞ Be not affronted at a jest. If one throw salt at thee, thou wilt receive no harm unless thou hast sore places.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

Beauty of person, like genius, is a dangerous, though brilliant gift. It may adorn or deform. It may contribute fresh charms to womanhood, or it may disfigure the lovely page with the mar-plots of vanity and pride.

That hand is handsomest that does the gracious deeds of charity and christian duty. Those lips are sweetest which utter the words of truth, hope, and affection. That face is loveliest which smiles on virtue.

Who cares whether Florence Nightingale has personal charms or not? She is one of the most lovely of earth's daughters—for she is beautiful in her acts of benevolence and love. "Handsome is that handsome does," expresses in simple phrase a beautiful thought.

The choicest charms that nature lavishes on her masterpiece,

"Are but the transient pageants of an hour;
And earthly pride is like the passing flower,
That springs to fall, and blossom but to die."

But the flowers of pure thought and feeling have an immortal freshness. These bloom only in the beautiful gardens of refined minds and christianized hearts.

We know and admire some of these beautiful women. They do not all have graceful forms or handsome faces, but they are surpassingly lovely nevertheless. The homes that cherish them are blessed. Society is enriched by them. They ennoble womanhood. They are ministering angels by the bedside of pain. They are Charity's almoners to the suffering ones of earth.

Dear ladies, be beautiful in your works. We shall be happy to record your charms for the admiration and love of the good and true. And God's angel amanuensis will enroll your names for immortal honor in that book, the pages of which are eternal.—Ex.

LOUIS HARMS.

Louis Harms is a plain Lutheran clergyman. In 1848 he was installed in the parish of Hermansburg, on the Luneburger Heath in the kingdom of Hanover. He is a man, according to the reports, of simple, direct nature, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. His parish, in which his father had been pastor before him, is made up of simple country people, and among them, as in most other parts of Germany, a dead orthodoxy had for the most part held sway. Under the new pastor and his earnest and faithful labors, the parish soon began to assume a new aspect. The christian life began to quicken, and in a short time the reformation became thorough, to a degree unknown, perhaps, in any other similar population in the world. In Hermansburg there are now no beggars, no rough street loungers, no drunkards, no ragged straggling children, and no paupers. In every house in the village there is family prayer, morning and evening; no one is absent from church except in case of sickness; the services in the week are as well attended as those of the Sabbath; the workmen have prayers in the fields, and throughout the parish the songs heard are not the common country ditties, but sweet sacred melodies, which joyfully express its christian life. During the year there are eleven thousand communicants, which must embrace nearly the whole of the adult population. The people live in great harmony, and are good farmers and good laborers. All this has come of the blessing of God inspiring and giving fruit to the labors of a single man.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

HOOPING COUGH AND SMALL POX.

Four things, or at most five, will make hooping cough not only safe, but short. First, keep the extremities constantly warm. Fail not, night nor day. Secondly, see that the patient breathes pure fresh air night and day. Bad air will overpower good lungs; how much more, lungs oppressed with the poisonous virus which is the exciting cause of hooping-cough. Thirdly, reduce whatever fever in the chest or trunk, by frequent manipulation, or exposure to the air if necessary, (of course, of that chest or trunk.) Resort to water can scarcely ever be needed. Fourthly, make a thorough business of magnetising the whole region of the lungs, (including chest and upper portion of back and sides,) either by hands laid on, or by passes, or by both. This magnetism will strengthen and heal the lungs, and soothe and stop the cough. Not only can you prevent hooping, but even coughing. You who do not believe it, try it and see. And do not fear to let your babes have the disease. I had rather a babe should have it, than any older person; for your healing, curing hands will cover a babe almost over, so that you can do anything you have a mind to with it. With your hands you can keep its extremities warm, reduce any fever, as well magnetise it by simply clasping it; in addition to which, you can cover it sufficiently for protection, and then carry it to the door or window to take the air.

And fifthly, in the case of a grown person, the cure may be greatly aided by friction of the whole surface, to excite the skin to vigorous action, thus relieving the lungs of exertion, and likewise of inflammation or fever.

Small pox is nothing but a fever tending to produce an eruption; treat it like a fever, and never mind the eruption; take care of the fever, and you will take care of the eruption: quench the fever, and there will be no eruption. First, last, and all the time, cool the patient off and keep him cool, and that is all you have to do. Air him all the time, and bathe him as often as the fever rises, if it is every half hour. For he may be so hot, and get hot so often, that you will need to stand him in a tub, and perfectly drench him with cold water, a dozen times a day. Pour and drench him as often as he gets hot. But do not chill him; stop when he is cool, and put him back to bed. But while you never chill him, still let his covering be little or nothing—even let him be perfectly nude. Cool, but never cold, must be your rule. And if you begin soon enough with him in this way, he will never be pitted, nor show a single trace of the disease. Small pox taken in season, and treated appropriately, is absolutely harmless as pancakes. It only needs more and severer treatment than other fevers, in proportion as it is higher and hotter.—JOS. TREAT.—Ex.

CHECKING PERSPIRATION.

If while perspiring, or while something warmer than usual, from exercise or a heated room, there is a sudden exposure in stillness to a still, cold air, or to a raw, damp atmosphere, or to a draft, whether at an open window or door, or street-corner, an inevitable result is a violent and instantaneous closing of the pores of the skin, by which waste and impure matters, which were making their way out of the system, are compelled to seek an exit through some other channel, and break out through some weaker part, not the natural one, and harm to that part is the result. The idea is presented by saying that the cold has settled in that part. To illustrate:

A lady was about getting into a small boat to cross the Delaware; but wishing first to get an orange at the fruit-stand, she ran up the bank of the river, and on her return to the boat found herself much heated, for it was summer, but there was a little wind on the water, and the clothing soon felt cold to her; the next morning she had a severe cold, which settled on her lungs, and within the year she died of consumption.

A stout, strong man was working in a garden in May; feeling a little tired about noon, he sat down in the shade of the house and fell asleep; he waked up chilly; inflammation of the lungs followed, ending, after two years of great suffering, in consumption. On opening his chest, there was such an extensive decay, that the yellow matter was scooped out by the cupful.

A Boston ship-owner, while on the deck of one of his vessels, thought he would "lend a hand" in some emergency; and, pulling off his coat, worked with a will, until he perspired freely, when he sat down to rest awhile, enjoying the delicious breeze from the sea. On attempting to rise, he found himself unable, and was so stiff in his joints that he had to be carried home and put to bed, which he did not leave until the end of two years, when he was barely able to hobble down to the wharf on crutches.

A lady, after being unusually busy all day, found herself heated and tired toward sundown of a summer's day. She concluded she would rest herself by taking a drive to town in an open vehicle. The ride made her uncomfortably cool, but she warmed herself up by an hour's shopping, when she turned homeward; it being late in the evening, she found herself more decidedly chilly than before. At midnight she had pneumonia (inflammation of the lungs,) and in three months had the ordinary symptoms of confirmed consumption.

A lady of great energy of character lost her cook, and had to take her place for four days; the kitchen was warm, and there was a draft of air through it. When the work was done, warm and weary, she went to her chamber, and laid down on the bed to rest herself. This operation was repeated several times a day. On the fifth day she had an attack of lung fever; at the end of six months she was barely able to leave her chamber, only to find herself suffering with all the more prominent symptoms of confirmed consumption; such as quick pulse, night and morning cough, night-sweats, debility, short breath, and falling away.

A young lady rose from her bed on a November night, and leaned her arm on the cold window-sill to listen to a serenade. Next morning she had pneumonia, and suffered the horrors of asthma for the remainder of a long life.

Multitudes of women lose health and life every year in one of two ways; by busying themselves in a warm kitchen until weary, and then throwing themselves on a bed or sofa, without covering, and perhaps in a room without fire; or by removing the outer clothing, and perhaps changing the dress for a more common one, as soon as they enter the house after a walk or a shopping. The rule should be invariable to go at once to a warm room and keep on all the clothing, at least for five or ten minutes, until the forehead is perfectly dry. In all weathers, if you have to walk and ride on any occasion, do the riding first. Billiousness and constipation also cause catarrhs.—Hall's Journal of Health.

ADVANTAGES OF CRYING.

A French physician is out in a long dissertation on the advantages of groaning and crying in general, and especially during surgical operations. He contends that groaning and crying are the two grand operations by which nature allays anguish; that those patients who give way to their natural feelings, more speedily recover from accidents and operations than those who suppose it unworthy a man to betray such symptoms of cowardice as either to groan or to cry. He tells of a man who reduced his pulse from one hundred and twenty-six to sixty in the course of two hours, by giving full vent to his emotions. If people are at all unhappy about anything, let them go into their rooms and comfort themselves with a loud bohoo, and they will feel a hundred per cent. better afterwards.

In accordance with the above, the crying of children should not be too greatly discouraged. If it is systematically repressed, the result may be St. Vitus's dance, epileptic fits, or some other disease of the nervous system. What is natural is nearly always useful, and nothing can be more natural than the crying of children when anything occurs to give them either physical or mental pain.

Probably most persons have felt the effect of tears in relieving great sorrow. It is even curious how the feelings are allayed by their free indulgence in groans and sighs. Then let parents and friends show more indulgence to noisy bursts of grief, on the part of children as well as of older persons, and regard the eyes and the mouth as the safety-valves through which nature discharges her surplus steam.—Ex.

THE TIME FOR SLEEP AND STUDY.

By all means, sleep enough, and give all in your care sleep enough, by requiring them to go to bed at some regular hour, and to get up at the moment of spontaneous waking in the morning. Never waken up any one, especially children, from a sound sleep, unless there is urgent necessity; it is cruel to do so. To prove this, we have only to notice how fretful and unhappy a child is when waked up before the nap is out. If the brain is nourished during sleep, it must have most vigor in the morning; hence the morning is the best time for study—for then the brain has most strength, most activity, and must work more clearly. It is "the midnight lamp" which floods the world with sickly sentimentalities, with false morals, with rickety theology, and with all those harum-scarum dreams of human elevation which abnegate Bible teachings.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.30
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE—12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 446. BOSTON, TUESDAY, APRIL 19, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 5.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR, H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN, SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE BIBLE.

Lamp of our feet, whereby we trace
Our path when wont to stray;
Stream from the fount of heavenly grace!
Brook by the traveler's way!

Pillar of fire, through watches dark,
Or radiant cloud by day;
When waves would whelm our tossing bark,
Our anchor and our stay.

Pole star on life's tempestuous deep,
Beacon, when doubts surround;
Compass, by which our course we keep,
Our deep-sea lead to sound.

Riches in poverty—our aid
In every needful hour;
Unshaken rock, the pilgrim's shade,
The soldier's fortress tower.

Our shield and buckler in the fight,
Victory's triumphant palm;
Comfort in grief, in weakness might;
In sickness Gilead's balm.

Childhood's preceptor, manhood's trust,
Infirmity's ally;
Our hope—when we go down to dust—
Of immortality.

Word of the ever living God!
Will of his glorious Son!
Without thee how could earth be trod,
Or Heaven itself be won?

Pittsfield, N. H. RIS.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION

Held at Stanbridge, C. E., Feb. 10th to Feb. 13th, 1863, between ELDER MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, and REV. DENNIS CHAPIN, Universalist Missionary of the District of Bedford, C. E.

WRITTEN BY C. P. DOW.

(Continued.)

Friday afternoon. Prayer by Elder C. P. Dow.

ELDER GRANT'S FIRST SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—It was said by my friend on the negative, that Christ could not "come now or in the future, for the very good reason that" he has "proved that" he "did come in the first century." Yes, he came the first time at the commencement of that century. But did he come the second time, after being absent, in that century? Did he come so as to fulfill all the prophecies concerning his second advent in that century? Nay. My friend claims he did, or that he has proved it. Where is the proof? We have neither seen nor heard it. Nor do we expect to. It cannot be produced. My friend would have presented such proof if it had been possible. We will not blame him too severely; he has done the best he could. He refers to a remark of his and says, "We did not say that prophecy was confined to the place where the prophet lived, not to the house, but to the country." It is sufficient for us to ask, Was Daniel's prophecy fulfilled on the banks of Ulai, in Babylon? Did Michael stand up there? And were all the great events foretold in Daniel's prophecy fulfilled there?

But reference is made to Zech. 14: 1, 2. We are not able to see why this quotation was made in this place, and see no argument in it to which to reply. I therefore pass it by. Again he says, "Who believes the fixed stars will fall to the earth? It is impossible. It is absurd!" So we think. And more, we have not advocated such a theory. Why then imply that we have? Is it fair and manly, not to say christian-like, to do so? He says, "We know that stones have fallen. Did they not gather the stones at the shower of stars?" Then my friend admits that there has been a "shower of stars." Why not admit that this phenomenon fulfilled the Savior's words, "And the stars shall fall from heaven"? Why not? We do not think it "idle to talk about the stars falling." Jesus said they would fall "after the tribulation," after the darkening of the sun and moon, and just before "the coming of the Son of man," and thus the sign has been fulfilled.

We think we have demonstrated our position. Yet my friend claims "that all of the 24th of Matthew was fulfilled during the first century." How was it fulfilled there? Can my friend show that one of the signs mentioned in that chapter was fulfilled in that century? He has not done it, and we do not expect he will. We think he would if he could, however. Again he inquires, "How could the Jews be led captive into all nations, unless all nations were there?" meaning, we suppose, around Jerusalem. But we ask, Was it necessary that "all nations should be around or at Jerusalem, in order that the Jews be led captive into all nations"? We see no point in this remark. We answer, No.

Again, he claims that "the scene laid in the book of Revelation" was confined to the locality of the seven churches. We answer, No. We do not admit it. Such a position cannot be sustained. When he attempts to sustain it, we will reply. He thinks that I "misapply" prophecy also, but let him prove that I do. Will he try? Again, he says I have "ifs" in my argument. Well, it would be modest for him to have some in his. A bare assumption without an "if" or an argument to support it, would be improved by either. In the expression, "Let the word of God be true, if it proves every man a liar," we most heartily concur. We agree with him in this.

We will now resume our positive argument, and call attention to the "word of God," which we deem true in its utterances in relation to the signs of "the great and terrible day of the Lord." See Joel 2: 28;—"And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come." Has the latter day wonder of blood, fire, and pillars of smoke appeared in the heavens? This is a proper question for us to answer. We think this sign has been fulfilled in the modern heavenly phenomena vulgarly called "northern lights."

The earliest account we have of these lights is 1716. According to Noah Webster, they were first witnessed in America in the year 1719. They are of very recent origin. We will give an account of their remarkable appearance in London, Sept. 3d, 1839, as published in the Christian Advocate and Journal of Sept. 13th, 1839:—

NORTHERN LIGHT.—"The first indication of this singular phenomena was about ten minutes before ten, when a light crimson, apparently vapor, rose from the northern portion of the hemisphere, and gradually extended to the centre of the heavens; and by ten o'clock, or a quarter past, the whole, from east to west, was one vast sheet of light. It had a MOST ALARMING APPEARANCE, and was exactly like that occasioned by a TERRIFIC FIRE. The light varied considerably; at one time it seemed to fall, and directly rose with intense brightness. There were to be seen mingled with it volumes of smoke, which rolled over and over, and every beholder seemed convinced that it was 'a tremendous conflagration.' The consternation in the metropolis was very great; thousands of persons were running in the direction of the supposed awful catastrophe. The engines belonging to the fire brigade stations in Baker street, Farrington street, Watling street, Waterloo road, and likewise those belonging to the west of England station—in fact every fire engine in London—were horsed, and galloped after the supposed scene of destruction, with more than ordinary energy, followed by carriages, horsemen, and vast mobs. Some of the engines proceeded as far as Highgate and Holloway before the error was discovered."

In the above we have some of the WONDERS in the heavens—fire and pillars of smoke. In the "Modern Phenomena of the Heavens" we have another testimony corroborative of the fulfillment of the last day wonders in the heavens:—"Jan. 25, 1837. The very heavens for a short time seemed to be on fire, when the snow upon the ground much resembled blood and fire; which was so alarming in appearance as to cause the solemn inquiry, with some who were out at the time, if the day of judgment had come, and also to cause the animals to tremble with fear. In one place, near a mountain, the people informed me that on the snow there was the appearance of 'waves of fire rolling down the mountain.'"

We will quote another prophecy. Nahum 2: 3, 4;—"The shield of his mighty is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet: the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." Railroad cars fulfill most literally this prediction of the prophet. Nothing in the past answers so well. Let one read this prophecy, and then travel by rail as I have done, night and day, and he will be impressed with the exact fulfillment. Railways are of recent origin. A few years ago and they were unknown. Now like a vast net-work of iron they cover many countries. And truly they "run like the lightnings." What other chariots have done so? In England they have run one hundred and eight miles in two minutes less than an hour. And as they "justle one against another in the broad ways," as they do when in motion playing with their couplings, how exact a fulfillment! In the night "they . . . seem like torches." This prophecy was to have its fulfillment "in the day of his preparation." We believe we are in that day. The foretold signs proclaim the fact, and it is our duty to know that He is near.

Another sign of the end is foretold in Joel 3: 9;—"Proclaim this among the Gentiles: Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up: beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruning hooks (margin—scythes) into spears: let the weak say, I am strong. Assemble yourselves, and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together round about: thither cause the mighty ones to come down, O Lord. Let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat; for there will I sit to judge all the heathen round about. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; come, get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision."

This prophecy declares the warlike condition of the world when "the day of the Lord is near." In Isa. 2: 3, 4, and Micah 4: 2, 3, is found a prophecy concerning the last days that seems at first sight to contradict what Joel declares concerning the implements of husbandry being made into weapons of war. But Isaiah and Micah only predict that the "people shall go and say" so, and thus they have said until recently. But what do we see? Why, the world one vast camp, and the terrible munitions of war calling into requisition the energies of the whole civilized world. Preparations are being made everywhere. In Massachusetts they are actually doing the very thing foretold by the prophet; "beating up ploughshares into swords," old Swedish iron ploughshares. In Springfield, Mass., they manufacture one gun a minute. (Time expired.)

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Chapin's First Speech.

Mr. Moderator, Ladies and Gentlemen:—My friend has been pleased to notice what I said about the prophets living in the country to which his prophecy referred. Was not David at Jerusalem once? I think he was at Jerusalem. Was not Daniel at Jerusalem once at least? Was not Daniel's prophecy fulfilled there? Daniel's prophecy was fulfilled in the first century. So we conclude. We will call attention to the Scriptures. Luke 21: 20–28;—"And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto. For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days! For there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth: and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."

Did they not see the Son of man coming then? Will my brother presume to contradict Christ? We read, "Then shall they see the Son of man coming with power and great glory." Doubtless he came thus in the first century. In Mark 13: 24, we read, "But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. And then shall he send his angels and gather his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of earth to the uttermost part of heaven."

Who were Christ's elect? Were not the apostles? His elect were gathered "in those days, after that tribulation." What does the conjunction "and" mean in the forty-third verse? Let it be noticed through this connection. Does it not connect the gathering of the elect and the coming of the Son of man with those days? We think this is plain. Hence we find a strange misapplication of the Scriptures. We have presented the connection between the Old and New Testament, and have shown how the prophecy was fulfilled in the first century, but still my friend asks for proof. He has been pleased to refer to Joel's prophecy, Joel 2: 28–31;—"And it shall come to pass afterwards, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions; and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids, in those days, will I pour out my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned to darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come."

What did Peter say about this prophecy? Let us see how he applies it? Acts 2: 16–22;—"But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel: and it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy: and I will show wonders in the heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapor of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come: and it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know."

Then Joel's prophecy was fulfilled in the first century, and not in the nineteenth century. When did Peter live? in the nineteenth century, or in the first century? Peter says of the day of Pentecost, when referring to Joel's prophecy, "THIS is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel"; but my friend contradicts him, and says it is now. Who will you believe? Which knew best, God's prophet, or my friend? He has told us of strange sights being seen. Seeing strange sights is quite common with some people. I have seen sights. I have seen the snow red, and the clouds red: They are often red. Others have seen these things. Some say they have seen angels in the form of men. Many have seen sights besides my friend, but did not think them signs of the end. The facts my friend has produced I admit. But he misapplies them. If my friend is correct, Peter is wrong. If we come to this conclusion, we may as well throw away the whole Bible. Those who spoke were correct. They testified what they had seen. There were swords and tongues of fire seen on the day of Pentecost. What if there should be a dark day? What if there should be an eclipse of the sun? We are not to understand them to be the fulfillment of prophecy. If we apply prophecy thus, there may something transpire to upset all our calculations.

My friend has referred to mystical Babylon. I showed that this Babylon was connected with the blood of the apostles. Let us read. Rev. 18: 24;—"In her was found the blood of the prophets, and of saints, and all that were slain upon the earth." Babylon was affected by the blood of the apostles. They must have been there then. It is said, "God hath avenged you on her." This must have been in the first century. This Babylon was pagan, not christian. The apostles' blood was spilled by the pagans. Paul expresses it in Acts 17: 22;—"Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' Hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions. They were a worshiping people then." The prophecy did not refer to the city, the buildings, but to the people. This was done by the pagan church; it was in Ecclesia. My friend seems to think a church cannot be a pagan church. He is mistaken. He thinks the Jewish church was in the wilderness. Christ said, "The time is at hand." How could he come to the seven churches in Asia after they ceased to exist? There can be nothing beyond the end of the age. The "last days" meant the first century, not the nineteenth century. He cannot put it beyond the end. The Jewish age ended in the first century. No history puts it beyond the end of the Jewish age. Jesus said to the Jews, "Ye shall not see me until ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Read the questions in the first part of Matthew 24th, and see what they mean. I have not read the opinions of men. I have not given you history. We conclude that we have proved our position by the Scriptures. (Time expired.)

For the World's Crisis.

THE SEVENTH DAY SABBATH—THE LAW.

THE OLD "DEAD SCHOOLMASTER"! THE LIVING JESUS.

NUMBER FOUR.—(Continued.)

If any one is disposed to examine this particular question still further, he can look at Ex. 27: 20, 21; 30: 8, 10; 40: 15; Lev. 10: 8, 9.

The Lord Jesus Christ not permitted to enter the holy places made with hands. Although Christ was a high priest fitted to pass into "heaven itself," yet he was not permitted to enter the holy places in the temple; for he was not "after the order of Aaron," but was of the "tribe of Judah; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning the priesthood." But although Christ could not enter "within the veil" of the temple, to view the "mercy-seat" there; yet when he expired upon the cross, by the power of God the Father "the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom"; and thus was demolished the whole system under the first covenant; and a "new and living way" was then opened up, whereby all might "know the Lord from the least to the greatest"; as the following passages will prove, taken from the three important witnesses, Jesus, Paul, and John:—

FIRST. "All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."—Matt. 11: 27–30; 28: 18–20.

SECOND. "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." "Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus. By a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; and having an high priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." "For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest, and the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard, entreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more: but ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels. To the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."—Rom. 8: 9, 14, 15, 16; Heb. 4: 14–16; 10: 19–22; 12: 18, 19, 22–24.

I hope not to be tedious to my readers by my lengthy quotations. But fearing the real point under consideration may be overlooked, I will again say, remember that I am proving that all can know the Lord for themselves now, under the new covenant; and not simply through an earthly priest, as it was under the first covenant; and the only way to get rid of sins, to have them carried into the wilderness on the head of a live goat. No! Praise the Lord, now, under the new covenant, all can know for themselves whether they are the children of God or not. Hear, then, the third witness, JOHN:—

"And hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him. For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things. Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God. And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight. And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment. And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us." "Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit."—1 John 3: 19–24; 4: 13.

But my objector continues and says, "There is another point which has not been taken up yet, which is mentioned in the new covenant, and I don't believe it can be reconciled with your view of the subject. It is this:—And their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more; and this cannot take place in this world surely." We will let the word of the Lord settle this objection also:—"But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year." This shows us that under the first covenant it was impossible for the blood of bulls and goats to take away sins; therefore, there was a remembrance made of them again every year. (Heb. 10: 3, 4.) But, praise God, it is not so now under the new covenant, as the following Scripture will prove: "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." "And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin."—Heb. 10: 14, 17, 18.

But my closing argument in favor of the "new covenant" now being in force, is this:—Christ is now mediator of the new covenant, as is clearly demonstrated by the following Scripture:—"But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises." "And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance." "And to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."—Heb. 8: 6; 9: 15; 12: 24.

The words of truth just quoted, prove beyond all cavil that we are now living under the new covenant. The Greek word here rendered mediator is mesitees, and its meaning, according to Donnegan's Greek Lexicon, is "one who is in the middle; one who intervenes, mediates, or arranges affairs between parties." Now by turning to the book of Exodus, we shall find that there was a difference between God and the children of Israel, growing out of the affairs of the golden calf, while Moses was in charge of the first covenant; and the Lord said unto Moses, "Let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them." But Moses as a mediator stepped in between God and the people, and made this memorable plea in their behalf:—

"And Moses besought the Lord his God, and said, Lord, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand? Wherefore should the Egyptians speak, and say, For mischief did he bring them out, to slay them in the mountains, and to consume them from the face of the earth? Turn from thy fierce wrath, and repent of this evil against thy people. Remember Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, thy servants, to whom thou swarest by thine own self, and saidst unto them, I will multiply your seed as the stars of heaven, and all this land that I have spoken of will I give unto your seed, and they shall inherit it for ever." See Ex. 32.

The Lord heard this petition of Moses, so far as not to destroy all of the people; but still he was displeased with them; "and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men." And again Moses intercedes:—"And it came to pass on the morrow, that Moses said unto the people, Ye have sinned a great sin: and now I will go up unto the Lord; peradventure I shall make an atonement for your sin. And Moses returned unto the Lord, and said, Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written. And the Lord said unto Moses, Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book."

Hence we see that where this covenant is "written in tables of stone," and then shut away from the people, Moses, as mediator, goes to the Lord on their behalf. But under the new covenant, which is "written in fleshly tables of the heart," "all" can approach unto God, through the LIVING JESUS, as their mediator.

Now let my objector speak, and say whether I have proved that we are now living under the "new covenant" or not. If I have, let him own up. But if he still believes I have not, then let him meet me fairly, and show a better argument if he can.

But to bring this argument to a close, which relates to a change of covenant,—of priesthood,—yea, of all things, at the time of Christ's first advent, including the time of his ministry, his death, and his resurrection; I will present a few texts to show that Christ was lawgiver, prophet, chief corner-stone, etc. It was therefore his right to make this change, with the aid of his Father. But first I will present one text to prove that all things are become new; and also, it will fix the point of time when this change took place:—"And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again. Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more. Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."—2 Cor. 5: 15–17. Mark this,—Jesus died and rose again, wherefore, from henceforth know we no man after the flesh; therefore from this point "old things are passed away," "behold all things are become new."

A few texts now to prove that our LIVING JESUS was and is a being of great authority and power; and also a prophet, the greatest of all prophets, and chief corner-stone, etc. On this point I will introduce three witnesses, Jesus, Peter and Paul. First witness, Jesus, at the commencement of his ministry:—"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." "And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand." "And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes."—Matt. 7: 24, 26, 29. Jesus after his resurrection:—"And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth."—Matt. 28: 18.

Second witness, Peter:—"For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." "Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel, if we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole; be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand before you whole. This was the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."—Acts 3: 22, 23; 4: 8, 12.

Third witness, Paul:—"For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us; having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby; and came and preached peace to you which were afar off and to them that were nigh. For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone." "God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high; being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they." "By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament. And they truly were many priests because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death: but this man, because he continueth ever hath an unchangeable priesthood. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens; who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself. For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for evermore."—Eph. 2: 14–20; Heb. 1: 1–4; 7: 22–28.

Who can doubt for one moment, after thoroughly studying the truths contained in the foregoing portions of Scripture from the New Testament, that there was an entire change in the system of divine worship at the first advent of our Savior, or, as has been shown above, that "old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new"; even a new Sabbath, or Lord's day.

(Concluded next week.)

For the World's Crisis.

THE TWO THRONES.

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."—Rev. 3: 21.

We wish to notice the position our Lord Jesus Christ sustains during the present age. The above text shows our Lord and Savior occupies the throne of his Father, and that before taking possession of this throne he overcame, which imports that it was after his suffering and death that he was exalted to this heavenly place at the right hand of God. For Jesus says after his resurrection, as he was about to go away into heaven, "All power is given unto me, in heaven and in earth." And the Great Head of the church commissioned at that time all his true ministers, saying, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

The present exalted position of our Lord was a matter of promise, as we find in Ps. 110: 1,—"The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool." The apostle Peter took the same view of the present exalted position of Jesus on the day of Pentecost, when the holy Spirit had been so copiously shed on the disciples. He adds:

"This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses. Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear. For David is not ascended into the heavens; but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy foes thy footstool. Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ."

In this language of Peter, you observe that the Spirit of God marks plainly the two thrones—"God has made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ." Christ signifies anointed, and refers to his kingship on David's throne; as all the kings of Israel were anointed to that office. So was David, by Samuel, as God directed. Christ is now invested with power and authority to make his enemies his footstool,—the anointed at the right hand of his Father in the heavens. He is mediator between God and man, and high priest over the house of God.

The apostle Paul in Hebrews, speaking on this subject, says, "But this man (Christ), after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God, from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool." Seeing we have such "an high priest over the house of God, let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." God hath raised Christ "from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church." Eph. 1: 21, 21. So then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God.

Thus, from what testimony we have found from the inspired witnesses, we come to the conclusion that the place and position of our Lord during the present dispensation is at the right hand of God, clothed with all power and authority, both in heaven and in earth. All who come to the Father must come in his dear name; "for there is no other name given under heaven whereby we can be saved." Christ died. He is risen again. He is now at the right hand of God; who also maketh intercessions for us during the present dispensation, and when the great work of saving men is over, then he will leave his Father's throne to take his own, of which we will now speak.

"God shall give unto him (Christ) the throne of his Father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." That there is to be such a throne hereafter, occupied by Jesus Christ, we shall endeavor to produce divine testimony in proof. Isaiah speaks of a child being born, that the "government shall be upon his shoulders," his name shall be called "Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth, even forever." Isa. 9: 6, 7. This shows the Prince of Peace is to have the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to re-establish it and to support it. This settles the point, as to what throne is Christ's own. It is that which David occupied, and which was overturned, as recorded in Ezk. 21st chapter, and which the Lord God said should remain subverted till "He came whose right it is, and I will give it him."

Accordingly, prior to the child being born, Gabriel was sent to Mary with the following announcement (Luke 1: 32) concerning Jesus,—"He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of the Father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Jesus is the rightful heir to David's throne, which is his own throne from the moment he was born into the world. When this child Jesus was born according to Ps. 2d, the kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers took counsel together against the Lord, and against his Anointed"—his Christ, etc. This relates to the treatment the Anointed would meet with at his first advent and during the period that he would accupy his Father's throne,—i. e., during the present age. His enemies may rage and mock, and oppose the will of God, but the time will come when he will have them in derision; "Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure."

His throne will be from the holy hill of Zion. And the heathen will be broken with a rod of iron, and dashed to pieces like a potter's vessel. This takes place when Christ comes to take his own throne, the throne of his Father David. "Daniel saw into the night visions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the Ancient of Days; and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away; and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

Christ will deliver up the throne that he now occupies to the Father, when the time arrives for him to take possession of his own throne, on Zion's hill, in Jerusalem. His reign will be eternal. Of his kingdom there will be no end. His kingdom will be under the whole heaven, "from the river to the ends of the earth." O! the greatness and glory of his kingdom who can tell? But, dear reader, remember that if you overcome you have the promise of sharing it with Christ, and of sitting with him in his throne.

J. E. CLARK.

☞ The great secret is, to learn to bear with each other's failings; not to be blind to them—that is either an impossibility or a folly. We must see and feel them. If we do neither, they are not evils to us, and there is obviously no need of forbearance.

☞ One good reason, modestly propounded, hath in it naturally more power and efficacy to convince him that is in a mistake, or to confound him with shame that is guilty of a [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

"LORD'S TABLE."

Many have told us it is right to give every one an opportunity (by way of invitation) to come to the "Lord's table," because it is the Lord's table. And this is the very reason why we object to the members of every creed at that table. If our own table, then we would have a right to invite whomsoever we pleased. And much more so, certainly, our Lord has a right to invite and permit whomsoever he will to his own. And, if I mistake not, our Lord has given us terms to comply with, in connection with his invitation, that show a proper qualification for admittance to his table.

What was his commission to his ambassadors? "Go ye, therefore, and teach (margin—make disciples, or christians) all nations, baptizing them," "teaching them (the believing, baptized disciples) to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."—Matt. 28: 19, 20. The last clause is worthy of notice. The promise of his being with us is conditional—that we observe the "all things" he has commanded.

We next call attention to Peter's answer to those who believed in that day: "When they heard (believed), ... they were pricked in their heart, and said, . . . Men and brethren, what shall we do? Peter said unto them, Repent (as much as to say, turn right round from following the world unto God, letting the Spirit of God dwell in your hearts, bringing forth fruits unto righteousness), and be baptized (take notice) every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." But I could lay no stress on baptism whatever apart from this true repentance; while this "repentance" and "baptism" are qualifications for receiving "the gift of the Holy Ghost." "Which is the earnest of our redemption."—Eph. 1: 14; 4: 30. "Then they that gladly received the word were baptized; and the same day . . . were added unto them (the church) . . . And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine," etc.

The above teaches what it takes to make us christians. And when complied with, we are prepared and have a right to sit at the Lord's table, which is one of the "all things" he has commanded. In fact, what constitutes or makes it his table, is adhering to his own regulations and appointments for the same.

To christen a child is not obeying the "ordinance" of "baptism," although by very many it is thus termed.

In conclusion,—"For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness (whatsoever constitutes goodness must accord with God's word;) and righteousness (obedience to the "ordinance" of God is the fulfilling of righteousness, Matt. 3: 15.), and truth; proving what is acceptable unto the Lord. And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," etc.—Eph. 5: 9–11. Every thing that will not stand the test of God's Bible must be of darkness. There are only two sowers, —Truth and Error; Light and Darkness. Please read Matt. 13. M. H. MORRISON.

New Glasgow, C. E.

For the World's Crisis.

THE POPULAR CLERGY OF OUR DAY.

NUMBER TWO.

What is there that the church of this nation is not guilty of? Ministers profess to be sent of God to preach his gospel, while they go for money, and preach to please the people. The people go to meeting professing to worship and please their Maker, and there get others to preach, pray, and sing, to please their own ears, making it a day of amusement, that day they call holy Sabbath. They profess to be brothers and sisters, and say they are the followers of that meek and lowly Jesus, and yet sell their brethren at auction to him who can keep life in the body at the lowest sum, and huddle the aged, the sick and infirm into the same room with the wicked and profane. In short, every sin that disgraces the calendar of crime out of the church is committed in that body, deny who dare.

The clergy and church—by it I mean societies taken together—as they now exist, are a blighting curse to the nation; a pen, in which many honest ones are confined; and could their enclosures be removed, thousands of such could act, and their light would shine, who now are like lamps hid in heaps of rubbish. And the popular clergy like to keep such ones as much in obscurity as possible.

Man has degenerated from the truth. He is like a patient with a mortified wound; and the ministers generally are plastering up the dead flesh, and trying to bring it to life, instead of removing it, and probing the wound to the bottom. They work for hire, and the longer they are in performing the cure, the more pay they get. Should they perform a cure at once, or direct the patient to Christ, the great Physician, their trade would end and payment stop; hence they deceive the people all their lives, and pretend to be performing the cure, when at the same time they do not believe anything but death cures. They call Christ a Savior, at the same time they are plastering over the wounds of sin with their quackeries, and telling people to be patient till death relieves them.

Miserable quacks! Physicians of no value! When will the people awaken from their deep sleep, caused by the administration of opiates, and see their awful danger, and the only remedy and physician, who is ever ready to administer. J. L. HERSEY.

Tuftonboro, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

UNION.

"Mark them who cause divisions . . . and avoid them," etc.—Rom. 16: 17.

We wish it distinctly understood, that the Iowa Christian Conference has no other creed but the Bible, and no test of fellowship but christian character. Among us we have had ministers from the Herald Adventists, Disciples, Old Christian order, Seventh-Day Keepers, and Age-To-Come, and with all these we have had no trouble in consequence; although each have held more or less of their former views. We know faith will not unite, but love will cement. But while I fellowship these, I question our duty to fellowship those whose God, and only God that ever called them to preach, was combativeness, and who are in their element only when opposing or debating with some one. Such a disposition, even with a truth, will sow discord and confusion wherever it goes. May the Lord give us wisdom to do right.

Strawberry Point. PETER S. W. DEYO.

☞ A flush of hope renders toil and trial beautiful, as the sunbeam gives a sparkle to the winter's frost.

The World's Crisis AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, April 19, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

OUR PHOTOGRAPHS.

In compliance with many urgent requests, we are now prepared to furnish our friends with an excellent photograph likeness, suitable for Albums, taken by Mr. J. A. Whipple, 96 Washington St., Boston. Mr. Whipple stands at the head of the photograph business in this city. We will send the likeness, with our autograph, for twenty-five cents, postage three cents.

Direct to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

THE BOSTON CONFERENCE.

We have promised our readers some particulars concerning our late conference in Boston. We fulfill our pledge with much pleasure, as it ever affords satisfaction to speak of good things. Those who have been privileged to attend the different conferences in Boston, and elsewhere, think this last one was the best we have had.

It commenced Tuesday evening, Apr. 5th, when we listened to a solid, practical sermon from Bro. Edwin Burnham. It was timely and well calculated to lead men to work in the vineyard of the Lord. We trust it will result in producing good fruit. A large audience was present, and the prospect looked encouraging.

Wednesday, Apr. 6th. We met for prayer and conference at 10 A. M., and had a good meeting. It was encouraging to hear the testimonies of the faithful ones who are looking for the coming of the Son of man. There were more present from other towns than usual at the beginning of such meetings. Several requested prayers.

Among other interesting testimonies, was one from Bro. M. B. Czechowski, a native of Poland, who is about to go to Italy to spread the glad news that Jesus is soon coming. His heart appears to be in the work. He expects to have an opportunity to lay the subject before Victor Emanuel, and other distinguished persons. Pray for him, and aid him if you can. In the afternoon and evening, we had good practical preaching from Brn. H. F. Carpenter and A. Ross.

Thursday, 7th. This being a fast day in our State, our conference was very seasonable for many who could not well leave their business at other times. The audience in the afternoon was said to be the largest ever in our Chapel since it has been occupied by our people. Our morning conference meeting was excellent. The Spirit of the Lord was with us to comfort, reprove and arouse. All seemed to enjoy the meeting. It was evident that many were receiving benefit from it. Preaching in the afternoon by the writer, and in the evening by Bro. J. Couch, Warner, N. H. His was an interesting discourse on the state of the nations, showing that we are near the time when we shall enter the everlasting kingdom.

Friday, 8th. This was another good day in the Lord. The interest increased, and many hearts were made to rejoice in the blessed hope. Quite a number from other churches were very much interested in the meetings, and thought they were never in such good ones before. One, who had been a member of a church for some eight or nine years, remarked that what she had formerly heard preached made her feel as she would to go hungry to an empty cupboard; or like sitting down to a table loaded with beautiful dishes, but no food; but now, since she had heard of this hope, it was like sitting down to a table well spread with good food. Now she was having a feast, and could not express the joy she had received in connection with the reception of the light and truth. During the conference, many expressed themselves in a similar manner.

Preaching in the afternoon and evening, by Brn. L. Boutell and H. Munger. The Spirit of the Lord was present to move the hearts of the people, and to cheer both speaker and hearer.

Saturday, 9th. We had another good conference meeting. The principle of love was richly exemplified by those who took a part in the exercises, thus making it a very heavenly place in the Lord. Those who came in from other churches as spectators, soon felt like being participators in the same joyous hope. Sectarian prejudices soon vanished, and all felt a oneness in Christ. It was often remarked by our brethren and sisters, "This seems like old times." It brought vividly to mind some of the hallowed scenes we enjoyed twenty-two years ago.

Preaching in the afternoon by Bro. A. Simpson, Concord, N. H., and in the evening by Bro. I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me. We were not able to be present, and hence can give no report.

Lord's day, 10th. This was the great day of the feast. It was the general remark that it was the best day ever spent in conference. Our love feast, at 9 1-2 o'clock, was indeed a feast of love. We think we can truly say, we never enjoyed a better one. One brother, who had attended many in his pilgrim journey, said this was the best of all. There were over one hundred and seventy testimonies in fifty-five minutes; and they were soul-stirring ones too. Each one seemed as valuable as a good sermon. At its close several requested prayers, that they might enjoy the same sweet peace. Those who came in for the first time to our meetings, who were members of other churches, were astonished at the real, true, christian liberty, enjoyed by those who took a part in the meeting. They had never enjoyed any thing so free and rich before. We have not attended another meeting so good in Boston, during our sojourn here. All seemed to be of one heart and mind. During the entire conference all was harmonious and pleasant, so far as any jarring notes were concerned. All appeared disposed to do those things that make for peace.

Among the many interesting witnesses, was Bro. Sabine Knight, from Charlottstown, Prince Edward's Island. He is from London, Eng., where he saw the light on the speedy coming of our Savior, and embraced it in love, for which he met with bitter opposition from the church; but having found the truth, he was resolved to hold it fast at the risk of losing all things earthly. Thinking he might be more useful, he left England, and has been laboring on P. E's Island, where at first, he was well received, but is now treated with much bitterness, and threatened with imprisonment. He felt anxious to attend our conference, but had no expectation of finding what he did,—a large number ready to sympathize with him. It was a rich feast to his soul. He went on his way rejoicing, having received new strength to go forward in the path of duty.

It is very evident that the Lord is stirring up many to look into the evidences of his speedy coming. Bro. Knight remarked that he found some in all places where he had been who are expecting that Jesus will come soon, though but few had heard a word preached on the subject. The Spirit of the Lord appears to be moving the hearts of those who love the truth, and they feel a deep, abiding impression that the second advent of Christ is at hand. While this feeling is increasing in the hearts of the true followers of our Savior, the worldly professor, and his associates in the world, appear to be more blind than ever. Like the Antediluvians, they heed not the warning voice of any one, and are madly rushing to ruin. It needs true courage to face the storm in these last hours of peril. May the Lord give it to Brn. Knight and Czechowski, in their important fields of labor. Pray for them, brethren.

The preaching during the day was by the writer in the morning, Bro. Couch in the afternoon, and Bro. Hastings in the evening. We had an interesting Sabbath School at noon, and an excellent prayer and conference meeting at half past one o'clock; at the close of which a dozen or more came forward for prayers, and were blest. It was a scene of deep interest. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon us with power. Hard hearts melted, and the saints rejoiced.

At the close of the day, over two hundred assembled to commemorate the death and sufferings of our dear Savior.

The day will be remembered with much delight by the christians who were privileged to enjoy the blessings at the Lowell St. Chapel. Many will go a long time in the strength there received. May the Lord enable each to endure to the end, and be ready for the coming of the Son of man. We would urge those who attended the conference to let their light shine before their neighbors, and in their families. Now is the time to be in earnest.

OUR DISCUSSION WITH MOSES HULL.

Our discussion at Lynn, Mass., with Eld. Moses Hull commenced Mar. 22nd, and continued four evenings, when we adjourned to Apr. 12th, and continued four evenings more. This discussion was one of more than ordinary interest. The question read as follows:—

"Has man in his nature an immortal principle, which, after the death of the body, is capable of returning and communicating with the inhabitants of earth?"

Eld. Hull has been a noted defender of the seventh-day Sabbath, and also of the entire mortality of man, the destruction of the wicked, and the second personal coming of Christ as an event now very near at hand. After having some fifty discussions, in which he defended the above points, he has recently renounced them all, and united with the Spiritualists, and is as zealous to pull down his former views, as he was then to establish them. He is considered a great champion for the side of Spiritualism, and is probably doing more, at present, than any other one, by way of lecturing, to establish the doctrines of the system he is defending. He is a fluent speaker, and a very skillful man in debate. He who attacks him must expect no boy's play; but an earnest conflict with one who claims that the spirits stand by him to give assistance. His wit is not wanting, and he has a large vein of sarcasm, from which he knows how to draw to good advantage. He does not seem disposed to misrepresent the views of an opponent, but rather to treat them with contempt. His large combativeness and destructiveness cause him to take delight in efforts to crush the arguments of his opponent. He loves debate, and enters into the work fearless of consequences.

Our discussion passed off very pleasantly, so far as personal feelings were concerned. No unkind words were spoken. The only unpleasant part to us was in listening to attempts to overturn the harmony of the Scriptures, and the marriage laws. After introducing scripture to prove his points, he would then endeavor to show that the Bible is a very erroneous book. We remarked to him that he was much like a man who has an important case in court, and, after summoning his witnesses, and introducing his testimony, turns about and impeaches their evidence.

The following are some of his

ASSERTIONS.

Men are not naturally inclined to evil. We get spiritual bodies when we put these off. Ugliness is always outside of nature. We can see without a physical organism. Thought is not the result of an active brain. Man is never unconscious. A man may think with his head cut off. We can leave our bodies and come back again. Man cannot cease to exist and live again. The identity is not in the body, but mind. The whole man leaves at death. Man must have all the elements of God in him. Every man has a part of God in him. There is no supreme authority above Moses Hull. The last day will never be. An old man does not lose his mind. Equally as good evidence of the devilship of Jesus as of spirits. Christ passed out of the form. Persons can see thought, pain, love, etc. Can't put finger on a prophecy that has not failed. Persons some time in the other world and not know it. Every doctrine of the spirits is in harmony with the Bible. As pure morality is taught by the spirits as by the Bible. One of the Holy Ghosts spoke through him. There is more virtue in Spiritualism than any other system. Spiritualism is on a par with christianity. Adultery is sanctioned by every church in christendom. Spirits gather bodies from surrounding objects. Angels come without bodies. The Bible sanctions drunkenness. Spiritualism is christianity, and christianity is Spiritualism. The Bible says David never sinned. I will prove as clearly the Lord came in A. D. 1843, as any one can that he will ever come. The spirit is a part of God. All there is of good in christianity is in Spiritualism. There were none but false and drunken prophets. The idiot has as perfect a mind as the statesman, etc. etc.

The following are some of his

ADMISSIONS.

Thought cannot manifest itself only through an organism. Spirits have bodies just as tangible as mine. The same particles may be organized over again. I can thrust my hand through a spirit, as it is not perceptible to materiality. Moses, personally and [illegible] the mount. I can make a person see any object in my mind. Sight is organized as much as a spirit. They shake hands, but not with material hands. No man can talk without an organism. The mind cannot manifest itself through an imperfect organism.

As "the mind cannot manifest itself through an imperfect organism," as in the case of the idiot, and the man who has passed to a state of second childhood, we inquired how it could manifest itself when the entire organism was in ruins, and torn into a thousand fragments?

After admitting that one might thrust the hand through spirits, and not feel them, because they are immaterial; we asked him to explain his statement, that persons do shake hands with the spirits of their friends? In answer to this, he assumed that the spirits take on, or create bodies, from the surrounding objects, and thus make themselves tangible. We concluded if they had power to create and destroy their own bodies at pleasure, they might create and destroy all things as well, and thus take the creative and destructive power away from our heavenly Father, and create again what he might choose to destroy, and destroy what he might wish to preserve.

He most positively denied the resurrection of the dead as taught in the Bible, but admitted that "the same particles may be organized over again."

He admitted that a mesmerizer could make a person under his control see any object on which he might place his mind, and the one in the mesmerized state would describe it as a reality to him. This he claimed to have done repeatedly. We then showed him that the more advanced Spiritualists, as A. E. Newton and A. J. Davis, admit that spirits do the same thing.

In the Banner of Light for April 9th, 1864, we find some questions proposed to a spirit, and the answers returned. They are as follows:—

Q.—Is the flower as tangible to the disembodied in spirit-life as it is to us?

A.—Flowers in the spirit-land take the form of beautiful thoughts. Are they tangible? yea, and far more tangible, far more real than the fleeting flowers of earth-life.

Qr—Are there not real spirit-flowers, such as we are accustomed to seeing here?

A.—No, there are not. Pardon us, if we have ruthlessly swept away the pleasant allusion, but some one must do this, sooner or later. Your own senses, mayhap, will do this.

Q.—Why are they brought to us from the spirit-land, if they are not real flowers?

A.—Because while you, as a spirit, are existing in the sensuous world, you weigh and measure all life through your physical senses, and can weigh and measure them in no other way. It is on this account that your spirit-friends find it necessary to meet you with symbols that can be comprehended by your physical senses. . . . They do not present them to deceive you, but your spirit-friends know perfectly well that you are living in that nature. Now, you have not passed beyond it, therefore all things that are presented to you from the spirit-world, must take the form of something that you are familiar with in this sensuous world.

Q.—Will it not be with our spirit-friends as with flowers, when we get to the spirit-world—that we shall not know them?

A.—You will recognize them, not by form and feature, surely, but by love, by that internal, all-powerful and God-given attraction that binds souls together.

Qr.—I cannot see how we shall know them hereafter.

A.—Is love dependent upon form and feature?

Qr. It is, if we realize our spirit-friends are continually near us; for we can think of them only as they looked to us when here.

A.—True, you have not, nor has any one in the flesh, any clear idea of spirit-forms and scenes. It is vain for us to present Spiritual ideas to mortality, unless those ideas be clothed with forms that you can comprehend."

In the foregoing, we have an explanation of the means by which mediums are made to see "flowers," friends, and other objects, which exist only in the mind of the controlling spirit. This corresponds with Mr. Hull's position, and with the view we have taken of the subject. As in mesmerism, the operator causes his mental pictures to become real objects to the one under his control; so the spirit [demon] forms in his mind an image of a flower, bird, or person, when the medium under his control sees these as real, life-like objects; and proceeds to describe them. Those who do not understand the philosophy and deception, are made to believe that the spirit of the deceased friend is actually present before the medium, or else she could not give such an accurate description of the individual.

On this point says Mr. A. E. Newton, formerly Editor of the Spiritual Age, published in Boston:—

"1st. It is alleged to be possible and common for spirits of a certain class to assume the appearance and characteristics of other spirits, or of persons still in the body, so completely that the disguise cannot be detected by ordinary spirit-seers. This may be so, and hence the common evidences of the identity of spirits are little to be relied on.

2d. When two persons are closely in sympathetic or magnetic rapport with each other, the images that are in one mind may be perceived as objective realities by the other. This seems to be the case with the magnetizer and his subject. In the once common phenomenon of mesmerism, the operator forms an image, as of a person, a serpent, a fire, or any other object, in his own mind; when the subject, if well under control, instantly sees the same thing as an objective reality. So, positive minds in a circle, or positive spirits who are around, may present the image of any person with whom they are familiar, and it may appear as a reality to the impressible medium."

On the same point, Andrew Jackson Davis, Editor of the Herald of Progress, published in New York, says:—

"It is known that a wise and strong-minded person in the spirit-world has the power to make visible to the eyes of mortals the exact appearance or semblance of the body it wore before death. This representation is elaborated sometimes to the minutest particular, even to the reproduction of the appearance of the habiliments, etc., by which the person was characterized and identified while a resident of the earth"

"All intelligent spirits are great artists. They can psychologize a medium to see them, and to describe them, in the style which would produce the deepest impression on the receiver. The will-power, and the knowledge of the intimate connections between mind yet in the body and mind disembodied, are familiar to most spirits. They can easily represent themselves as being old or young, as in worldly dress or flowing robes, as is deemed best suited to accomplish the ends of the visitation."

These [illegible] that dili[illegible] sent to the medium's mind any person, or other object, by simply forming an image of them in their thoughts; hence the fact is consistent, as admitted by Eld. Hull, that he can put his hand through the spirit-form presented before him, as well as see other objects through it; for what he sees is only a mental picture, or shadow, formed in the mind of the demon, who is endeavoring to persuade his medium and others, that the real person is actually present; and, consequently, not dead, as the Bible affirms, and dependent on the resurrection of the dead for a future life.

[We purpose to give a further report next week.]

BOOK NOTICE.

HOME THRUSTS.—This is a new work of over four hundred pages of valuable reading. It is composed of the best articles of D. F. Newton's seventeen years' editorial labors, while editing the GOLDEN RULE, a valuable monthly, formerly published in New York. Price $1.50, postage 20 cents. For sale at the Crisis office. Bro. Newton is one of the living christians who stands up for Jesus and holiness of heart.

SEA AND THE WAVES ROARING.

All who are associated with the movements of the great deep, have noticed the fact that the heavings and tossings of the ocean waves are becoming more and more terrible in these last days. This is in harmony with what the Savior said, when giving the signs of his second coming.

The following is from the Newburyport Herald.—

"THE ATLANTIC IN COMMOTION.—The long continuance of the easterly winds has set old ocean in tremendous excitement. Furiously are the waves beating upon the rocks and sands of our coast, and multitudes are visiting the shore to view the sublime spectacle. On Monday many thousands of men, women, and children in this county were in cars and carriages heading toward Plum Island, Cape Ann, Swampscott, and Nahant, to see and hear the sea in its fury. At Plum Island the waves have tossed the sands in their rage, making fearful inroads upon the land. Some of the high bluffs have been cut in for rods.

A FAIR OFFER.

We clip the following from the Seneca Falls Courier of March 31st, 1864. We think the liberal offer is sufficient to warrant an examination of the subject, but if it is not, we will add as much more, making the premium $140.

PROPOSITION.

"Buy the truth."—Prov. 23: 23.

I propose to give a premium of Fifty Dollars to any person who will produce one passage of Scripture from the Holy Bible that says:

1st. That any man, or all men, possess in this life undying, or never-ending, or immortal, or indestructible, or deathless, or imperishable souls, or spirits.

2nd. That christians go up to heaven or into a spirit land, or spirit world, or spheres, or an upper and better kingdom at death.

3d. That christians obtain either a part or the whole of their promised "reward," or recompense, when they die.

4th. That christians obtain at death the "victory over death," or their "spiritual bodies," or the "kingdom of God," or new Jerusalem, or the "many mansions," or the city of the living God, or the "purchased possession," or the "incorruptible inheritance," or the new earth, or eternal life, or "eternal redemption," or salvation, or deliverance, or immortality, or incorruptibility, or the "crown of glory that fadeth not away," or appear with Christ in glory, or are equal with Christ or the angels.

Respectfully submitted to the candid.

Resolved, That the second coming of Christ to bestow the promised "reward," constitutes the christian's only hope.

A. N. SEYMOUR, of Reading, Mich.

NOTE.—I will add to the above premium twenty dollars more. Let the Scripture be produced if it can. If not, you may learn by searching, the true source of infidelity.

G. DILLABAUGH,
Seneca Falls, N. Y.

ERRATA.—In No. 4 of T. M. Preble's article on the Sabbath, some twelve lines from the commencement, for "divine argument," read divine arrangement. In No. 3, for "kuriokos" read kuriakos.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE RAVENS."

Bro. Walter Pratt, of New Bedford, Mass., worn out with "preaching the gospel in the regions beyond," is unable to labor, and desires to move away from the sea coast, where he can have country air, new milk, a very little work, and a good deal of rest, and a chance for himself and his wife to save what there is left of them from untimely graves. He has a grown up daughter and a little son. He isn't a beggar, because God is rich and always takes care of him; but if anybody knows a good quiet "brook Cherith," where the "ravens" fly low, or a place in "Zarephath" for a worn out preacher to mend his health, while God keeps his meal and oil from wasting, please write to Bro. Pratt about it at once. Direct to New Bedford, Mass.

April 18th, 1864. H. L. HASTINGS.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to March 29th, $862.34

Sydney Allen pd	1.00	Bro. Ferdinand pd	3.00
I. C. Humes pd	2.00	A friend pd	2.00
Church in Montreal pd	12.00	E. P. K. pd	1.00
H. A. Emerson pd.	.25	W. A. Smythe pd	5.00
P. Whitcomb pd.	.50	B. K. Clark pd	.50
L. S. Wood pd	.25	Sr. Knowlton pd	.50
E. Demerett pd.	.25	R. T. D. pd	1.00
J. Howe pd	.25	A. A. Gilbert pd	1.00
Levi Allen pd	1.00	S. Harding pd	1.00
W. Chase pd	.50	Mrs. L. T. Cunningham pd	1.00
A friend pd.	.75	S. A. pd	.25
E. C. Dwinnell pd	.50	S. J. Finley pd	.50
I. C. Humes pd	.25	Mrs. J. E. Marsh pd	1.00
Jesse Hall pd	.43	Bro. Dow and family pd	2.25
Mary Jones pd	.25	A Sister pd	1.00
H. N. Chaffee pd	.75	Eliza S. Gibson pd	.25
S. C. Sweeney pd	.25	E. Oakes pd	.25
R. R. Bullen pd	.50	B. P. Albee pd	.25
Wm. Baker pd	2.00	P. Price pd	.25
C. Vanderbeck pd	.50	S. Barton pd	.25
M. K. Prescott pd	3.00	A. Starks pd	.25
A friend pd	1.00	A. T. Barton pd	.35
R. T. Church pd	.50	A. Richardson pd	.25
C. Tucker pd	.25	T. D. Johnson pd	.50
E. Braley pd	.50	S. W. Bartlett pd	.25
C. S. Jones pd	.25	H. Deyo pd	.50
J. Pay and wife pd	2.00	Dr. J. B. Walker pd	10.00
L. Page pd	.25	A friend pd	1.00
O. S. Kunnels pd	2.00	M. S. Terry pd	.25
A. Waterman pd	.50	W. M. Corliss pd	1.00
Jas. Thorp pd	1.00	J. Crosby pd	.50
A. Perry pd	1.45	John Thorp pd	1.00
D. N. Kidder pd	3.00
W. Haskell pd	.50

Amount Paid.—N. W. Wait, $100.00.

FOR THE FUND.

BRO. MILES GRANT:—Please credit on the Tract Fund the following donations, received by me from February 1st to April 14th, 1864, ... which please find enclosed:—

I dislike the publication of names in the Crisis, as it seems to let the left hand know what the right hand is about almost too much, but yet I see no other way to acknowledge the monies.

I here take occasion to repeat that all monies for the Tract Fund, the Crisis, or the miscellaneous books sold in the office, should be directed to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass. He and his clerks are hired by the society to do all that business. I am not employed by the society at all, except to attend to the issue of the Child's paper, and I have no connection with the business of the Crisis, or its office. I have more work of my own than I can do, and do it in my own separate office, 167 Hanover Street, Boston. I only sell my own publications, books and tracts, English Bibles, and a few choice books for Bible students. Please do not burden me with the business of the Christian Publication Society, as I have nothing to do in the office of the society. I still issue, sell, and give away books, tracts, etc., Persons who wish to aid in this work can of course send to me if they choose, but the Tract Fund and society's business should go to Bro. Grant and his clerks, who will attend to it. H. L. HASTINGS.

Boston, April 14th, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAY FOR THE "CRISIS."

I am pressed in spirit to cry out this morning in the words of Azariah the son of Obed, when the spirit of God came upon him:—"Hear ye me Asa, and all Judah, and Benjamin, The Lord is with you while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you." 2 Chron. 15: 12.

But have I, who "am but dust and ashes," taken upon me to speak to my brethren of the Crisis! May they pardon "for the Lord's sake," and may he give the word, and find way for it as it shall please him. If I understand it, the Crisis is a common interest, like the noble mill that prepares the breadstuffs for the family. We, each one, send our little grist, and in due time it is brought back to our doors all nicely dressed for family use. Are we not often agreeably surprised to see how much better the flour looks in its neat little sack than the wheat did when it left us in its coarse mill sack? What a wonderful metamorphoser this is in Boston!

Do we pray enough for it? Is it a practical example of the religion of Jesus in its every member? Are the letters received in prayer? Are they read in prayer, distributed in prayer? Do the compositors pray? Does the proof-reader pray? Is he patient when he finds mistakes? Are they patient when he has the painful duty to point out inevitable mistakes? Is the paper struck off in prayer, mailed in prayer,—and I may ask here—read in prayer? "Let all your matters be done in love." Is this the case there? Away off here we look upon that as head quarters in every thing. We imagine we could go and spend a week there and familiarize ourselves with its every department of labor, and yet see nothing but a practical demonstration of the truths that go out from it weekly.

Do we expect too much? Will any thing short of this insure permanency to the enterprise in God's name? For this let us pray.

Hammonton, N. J. E. S. WILLARD.

For the World's Crisis.

GREAT SPIRITUAL DEARTH.

It is a lamentable fact, which no candid person can deny, that the churches, not only in this land but also in others, are suffering severely in consequence of the great dearth almost universally complained of. Surely this generation has never seen religion at so low an ebb as at the present; and yet the church seem to be unwilling to awake out of sleep and search into the cause of this affliction; for an affliction every one that loves Zion must view it.

When we think how few are led to a saving knowledge of the truth and the almost unparalleled hardness of sinners, we must exclaim, Has God forgotten to be gracious? Is the door of mercy closed? Truly the fault must be with professors of religion, and not with God; for behold the spirit of the world, how it prevails in the church. Where is the true follower of Christ who is not made to sigh on account of this great declension of religion? Look and behold that man in the political crowd, who takes an active part in the proceedings, and we hear the world exclaim, "O, he is a christian!" perhaps a class-leader, or exhorter. Who is that lady that dresses in the most ridiculous fashion, for the purpose of having the world admire her? O, she is a follower and imitator of the humble Jesus! O shame! where is thy blush?

That the churches have fallen is a well known fact; nearly all classes acknowledge this to be the case, and it is equally true that their fall is in consequence of disobedience. They have been warned of the great day which is near at hand, when Christ shall appear to redeem that which he has purchased. But they have pointed the finger of scorn at the faithful servant of God; they have rejected the light, and said, "my Lord delayeth his coming." More than this, they have not loved the glorious appearing of Christ. They have not lived humble, neither have they kept the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus; but on the other hand they have conformed to the world. The nominal christian has often been known to send his children to the ball-room, and to other places of amusement, where they soon find the road that leads to destruction. Surely iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold; but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory. He that is prepared for the reception of our Savior, the same shall be saved.

May those who stand upon the walls of Zion and faithfully sound the alarm, be sustained, and finally rewarded in the kingdom of God. C. H. WILLIAMS.

North Bay, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

GOOD AND BAD DEEDS.

The doctrine of reward and punishment is plainly the doctrine of Revelation: That while (at Jesus coming) the righteous will gain eternal life, the unrighteous are doomed to receive the wages of sin, which is eternal death. With this view the Bible harmonizes.

2 Cor. 5: 10,—"For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." If any question can be raised on this text, it is whether it includes both classes, the righteous and the wicked. It must turn on the true meaning of the little term "we must all appear." It would seem as though the last part of the verse plainly defines the term "we," whether they be good or bad. In the scriptural recognition of good deeds, none are counted good but the fruit of faith, all others, the fruit of unbelief, are counted bad deeds.

The disciples of Jesus have complied with the conditions of salvation, sweetly yielding themselves and their all to be Christ's forever. Their sins, or bad deeds, have been forgiven, and washed away in the blood of the Redeemer; now they are his, and consequently can "have boldness in the day of judgment." They have believed God, and it has been accounted to them for righteousness. They love Jesus and love to obey him. They keep his commandments, because they love so to do. So necessarily they have good deeds, as natural as for a good fountain to send forth good water.

Thus, when the time comes for men to be rewarded, the day of judgment "appointed," when we must all appear before him, to receive for deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad, "Then will the King say to them on the right hand, "Come, ye blessed of my Father," inherit glory, dominion, and a kingdom, with immortality, eternal life.

And who is it that receive this boon? They that have done good deeds. Hear Jesus, our great teacher, define the good deeds. "I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat. I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink. I was a stranger, and ye took me in. Naked, and ye clothed me. Sick, and ye visited me. I was in prison, and ye came unto me." This class, for patient well doing, will go through the gates into the city and eat of the tree of life in the midst of the paradise of God. But the other class, not christians, whose deeds have been bad and not good, have no fruit of faith. Their Master hungry, they know it, but do not feed him. Thirsty, and they give him no drink. Sick, they do not administer to his wants. What do they receive for deeds done in the body? Hear! "Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels."

This seems to define the text and makes the subject plain. The conclusion of the matter is, that neither class can get their reward till Jesus comes, "when he will reward every man according to his works." So let us continue seeking for glory and honor by well doing, that we may shun the doom of the wicked and receive the blessings of the faithful. L. BOUTELL.

Groton, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

"PREACH THE WORD."

How important that the servants of God heed this admonition of the apostle, now that the time has come when men "will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts . . . heap to themselves teachers having itching ears," and have turned away their ears from the truth unto fables.

This is no time to elaborate fine theories or amuse with swelling words, which sway the congregation of listeners as the wind sways the trees of the forest, and producing about the same effect. For as the forest resumes its former position after the wind is past, so the audience, pleased for the time with the efforts of the orator, go their several ways, the farmer to his farm, the merchant to his merchandise, to dig and delve and ply the arts of trade, and instead of laying up durable riches in righteousness, to heap up "treasure for the last days."

When the Lord is in earnest with his people,—when the sun is waning,—when the dark clouds of God's wrath hang over the heads of a guilty world, when "men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth;" now every watchman should "preach the word." Preach it in its purity, preach it "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven."

Each should present the motives for faith and repentance which the Master used when he began the promulgation of the gospel: "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 4: 17.) If relatively so over eighteen centuries ago, now specially nigh. Now "persuade men," holding up to view the great salvation "ready to be revealed," (not at death, but) "in the last time," "The grace that is to be brought at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

Preach Christ in the manger, in Gethsemane, betrayed, derided, crucified, buried, risen, ascended to the right hand of the Father; and fearless of the scorn and derision of the apostate church, preach Christ soon to come, to consummate the hope of his people, to "separate them as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats," and to receive his "unto himself, that where he is there they may be also."

Oh! brethren, "Preach the word." "Be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword." Let us be faithful, that when the conflict is over we may hear the Lord say,—

"Well and faithfully done,
Enter into my joy, and sit down on my throne."

Troy, Vt. N. Orcutt.

A REQUEST.

Bro. Naham Orcutt writes:—"I have been much pleased thus far with Bro. Preble's articles on the Sabbath question. Can we not have them in tract form? I would like to scatter some in this vicinity. I would engage to take fifty copies or more."

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. R. Preston.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me to say to the readers of the Crisis, and to all of "like precious faith," that I am one with the sect "that every where is spoken against." For the past three years I have been a member of the church of the United Brethren in Christ, and also a minister, sustaining (during that time) the relation of a pastor, and, like Paul, exercised myself (so far as the preaching of the gospel was concerned) to have a conscience void of offence toward God and man. Yet I had not learned the truth that the Bible reveals so plainly, that "if the dead rise not, then they also that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." And, that Christ "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom," and, that the "dead know not anything," and, that the wicked shall be "burned up," root and branch; and "be as though they had not been:" which truths I have recently learned.

Many (supposed) reasons are given by my friends for the change that has taken place in my mind, some say one thing and some another. And since they seem so curious to know my reason for so doing, I will offer an explanation.

While visiting two other brethren in holding a protracted meeting (at Floyd, Iowa), I fell in company with the Christian brethren at that place who attended the meeting. These brethren I had heard greatly misrepresented, so much so that I looked upon them as very bad people. Consequently I watched them closely during the meetings, which caused me to see that they were not as I had heard them represented as being, but quite the contrary.

Well, it so happened that the Christian Quarterly meeting came off immediately after our meeting had closed, and having leisure for a day or two I concluded to stay and hear their preachers "make a fool of the word of God," as I had frequently heard (and always supposed) they did. Having never (at that time) heard one of the Advent christians preach, I expected to have my "holy indignation" aroused very greatly. But how greatly was I disappointed! On Friday evening Eld. P. W. Hough addressed the congregation, who were very attentive to hear the words of "truth and soberness" that fell from his lips, the earnestness of which arrested my attention most particularly. After service a friend asked, "How did you like the discourse?" "Very well," said I; "I have not an objection to offer." I heard him again on Saturday morning with equal favor. Saturday evening, Eld. P. S. W. Deyo preached, after which the question was asked, "Which do you like best?" To which I answered, "I cannot tell, for I have no objection to either."

This hearing for myself removed the prejudice which kept me back from an investigation of the principles they advocate; and I immediately commenced "searching the Scriptures daily to see whether these things were so." And to my great surprise, the fanciful, dream-like theory vanished; which caused me greatly to rejoice, for to me now the Bible is a new book.

And now let me add, how any candid man can read and compare with the word of God such works as Ghostology, (by Eld. W. Sheldon), the Key of Truth, the Intermediate State, the Destiny of the Wicked, and Anti-Eternal Torment, and the host of other works published by the Christian Tract Society, comparing Scripture as used by the authors of these works, and yet not see the truth, the harmony, and the glory of the plan of salvation, as thus revealed in the word of God, is greatly surprising to me. Yet not so surprising as the fact that men occupying prominent positions in their respective church organizations, and, who profess to desire to know the whole truth, will refuse to investigate these truths for themselves when the means are placed within their reach.

For myself I wonder that I did not see these things before, from simply reading the Word. Oh reader! (if still averse to truth), remember that God holds you responsible for all the light that he has placed before you, "if you know these things, happy are ye if ye do them," and beware lest the time come when it shall be said, "Ye knew your duty, but ye did it not!"

I expect at the earliest opportunity to identify myself with the Christian brethren, and take part in the ministry, "preaching the faith which I once destroyed." Pray for me, ye faithful ones, that I may meet you in the coming kingdom of the Prince of peace.

Jared R. Preston.

Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa, Apr. 4th, 1864.

From H. M. Humphreville.

Bro. Grant, and all the dear children scattered abroad, greeting:—My heart is full of thankfulness this morning. Thank the good Lord for sparing my unprofitable life, thank his dear children for the interest manifested in my sickness, the many fervent prayers and kind words of encouragment and letters,—how oft they served to cheer my heart. Praise the Lord that my lot was ever cast among this people. We read, "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard, and a book of remembrance was kept." Methinks I would like to read that book. St. James says, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord will raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him." Although I was not raised up immediately, I received a clear witness that my sins were all forgiven, and I do believe that I live to praise God to-day in answer to the prayers of God's dear children; and I would say to them, be faithful in the discharge of that duty, namely, visiting the sick. If you are full of unbelief you need not tell them, they will know it without; but go to your closets and get your hearts warm with the love of God, and then you cannot only benefit others but be benefitted yourselves; and if you do not receive a direct answer to your prayers, remember that it is safe to trust in the Lord and know his time and way is the best; and may it be said to you, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

After being confined to the house and bed most of the time for four years, I am now so as to sit up all day and walk in the yard a little when it is pleasant weather. Pray for me, that I may be enabled to live answerable to blessings received.

H. M. Humphreville.

Northfield, Conn., March, 1864.

From Bro. H. E. Twing.

Bro. Grant:—With feelings I cannot express, I wish to say that widow in New Hampshire, I received your kind offering. I accept it as coming from the hand of God. O what a kind Father we have to whom we may tell our wants. His ear is always open to hear the cries of his children. My dear sister, God has blessed you. He will repay you with compound interest, all that you give to the sick, poor, and afflicted. I trust and hope we may meet face to face in the soon coming kingdom. How I should like to tell Jesus in his kingdom that widow helped a poor, sick, fatherless one. My father loved Jesus. He commended mother and me, his only child, into God's kind care; he went to his daily work, and was brought home dead! God has heard his prayers, and has been a kind father to me. If we have come...

To the kind unknown friend in Rhode Island, I would say, I received your kind token of love. I thank God, and you from my heart. My wife exchanged the money for cotton cloth, to make her garments she has long gone without. As we look at them we think God sent them to us, and praise his name.

Bro. R. E. Ladd and wife—how kind they have been to us. How good the Lord is to us. "Jesus says, "Inasmuch as ye do it to the least of these my disciples, ye have done it to me."

I would say to my friends that I have moved from Springfield, my old home, to Feeding Hills, Mass., some six miles from Springfield. Mary goes to Springfield to work every day that she can leave me alone. I intend to have Advent meetings at our home soon. This is a new field.

"How sweet the christian's hope to me,
While here I'm called to roam;
It points me to a better land
That I may call my home."

H. E. Twing.

Obituaries.

Jonathan Royce.

Died in Wales, Mass., March 13th, 1864, Jonathan G. Royce, aged fifty years.

He suffered much from pleurisy, which with the lung fever finally brought him to a premature death. He was a peace maker in precept and in practice. He thought it very strange that professed christians could urge on war, and even ministers, professedly the ambassadors of the Prince of peace, could clap their hands and hurrah when some inconsiderate youth in a moment of excitement would rush forward to enlist, while the pale cheek and tearful eye told too truly that it was the breaking of a mother's heart. He was not a professor, but often said to his wife, "If Mr. Pratt had a church here, I would join it." Having suffered much, he knew how to sympathize with the afflicted. He took much pleasure in alleviating the sufferings of others. Few men had so few enemies.

He sent for me a few days after he was taken sick, and though in much pain he was able to converse some. I asked him if he loved Jesus, to which he replied in the affirmative. I then asked if he could repose all in Christ? He said yes, there was nothing but Christ for him in this world; he had no desire to live but for his family. He talked about death calmly, which caused me to pray with Horatio Bonar—

"Calm me, O God, and keep me calm."

At length he says, "Will you preach my funeral sermon if I die?" I said, I hope you will get well, we can hardly spare you. Then fixing his eyes intensely upon me, he says, "Will you do it?" I could but say yes. Then says he, "I do not want these war ministers to preach my funeral sermon." Fighting christians! No wonder it sounded strange to a peacemaker. He then says, "Farewell, wife." O, thought I, what crushing words for a beloved husband to utter to one that could scarcely be persuaded to leave him for almost four weeks of suffering; and yet there was something soothing in the tone with which it was uttered, "Farewell, wife—farewell, children." O God! hear thou in heaven this heartfelt benediction for them in Jesus' name, is my prayer. Let them fare well here and in the kingdom to come.

The funeral was attended in the Baptist church, and in much weakness I was enabled to fulfill my promise in discoursing on the state of the dead and the resurrection; and many a tearful eye told the sad story that their dear friend and kind neighbor was dead.

H. Pratt.

John T. Roberts.

Died in Wakefield, N. H., of that fell destroyer consumption, Jan. 7th, 1864, Bro. John F. Roberts, only son of Lewis and Betsy Roberts, aged twenty-five years, six months, and seventeen days.

The subject of this notice was born in Wakefield, and there lived until his death. Was under my supervision with others for several terms as a pupil. I did not think when teaching him the rudiments of knowledge that I should be called upon to record his death. Mysterious are God's providences, and "his ways past finding out." Our brother experienced a change of heart about six years previous to his death, was immersed, and joined the F. W. Baptist church in Wakefield.

Although when taken sick he did not enjoy a hope in Christ, yet some months previous to his death he obtained a bright hope of immortality beyond this vale of tears, through the atoning blood of the Savior, and remarked to his friends when standing around his bedside, "Don't weep for me, for the Lord is with me." Bro. and Sr. Roberts looked upon their son as being one to smooth their passage to the tomb in being their stay and support in declining years, but death seized and claimed him as his own, and now their fond hope and cherished son lies a victim beneath the folds of death's icy arms, quietly sleeping, and calmly waiting to hear Him "who spake as never man spake," say, "Come forth, ye sleeping saints, to immortality and everlasting blessedness in Eden restored to die no more.

Our brother leaves a kind companion, an infant daughter, father, mother, and two sisters, besides other relatives and friends, to mourn his departure. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. J. Spinney, assisted by the writer, in which a sermon was preached from Acts 2: 21.

May God's divine grace be imparted to this mourning circle, and this dispensation be sanctified to their good.

"Our weeping days will soon be o'er,
And we our Savior see,
When death will cease forevermore,
And saints immortal be."

A. W. Sibley.

Harvey Goodel.

Died in Brimfield, Mass., Aug. 10th, 1863, Harvey Goodel, aged fifty-five.

Bro. Goodel was an earnest christian, the better loved where the better known. Since 1843 he has been looking and hastening unto the coming of the Lord. He sleeps in peace. His wife and some of his scattered children await with hope the coming King.

H. Pratt.

Carrie S. Fenton.

Carrie, the only child of Seth and Mary Fenton, of New Britain, Conn., died March 25th, 1864, of diphtheria, aged six years and eleven months.

By this afflictive stroke the parents suffer an inconceivable loss. They have not only been bereaved of a beautiful daughter, whom they loved with all the earnestness of fond parents, but one who from remarkable intelligence, especially concerning the gospel, which she delighted at this early age to study, and the exhibition of love to the Savior, endeared herself to all who knew her, and is now mourned by the numerous circle by whom she was sincerely beloved. We have often wondered at her apprehension of the things of the Redeemer. The mental development was great. She seemed an angel, being destined for a brief moment to bless those whom she was sent to instruct by her young and pure love to Christ, and her simple and humble faith. No better evidence is needed than her love of reading the Bible, and intelligent inquiries concerning its import. During the last winter she often spoke of the love of Jesus, death, and the sleep till the resurrection. "If I die, mother," she said, "I shall go to sleep—shall sleep in Jesus; it will be as if I was going to sleep, will it not, mother?"

The frost of death began to chill that fair and lovely flower. The hopes of earth vanished. The smile of a heavenly sphere lighted the countenance of the infant saint. In two weeks after the attack and after the greatest patience, the spirit composed itself for rest.

Said she, "'He that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.' Sing me to sleep, mother; sing me to sleep,"—and slept.

These lines she loved to sing:—

Peacefully lay her down to rest,
Place the turf kindly on her breast;
Sweet is the slumber beneath the sod,
While the pure soul is resting with God.
Quietly sleep, beloved one,
Rest from thy toil—thy labor is done;
Rest till the trump from the opening skies
Bid thee from dust to glory rise.
Peacefully sleep,
Peacefully sleep,
Sleep till the morning,
Peacefully sleep.

W. S. O.

Anna Angier.

Mrs. Anna Angier departed this life, after a brief illness, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Smith, of Dublin, N. H., Nov. 12th, 1863, aged ninety-seven years and seven months.

She was the last remaining member of the family of Gen. John Nixon, of Framingham, Mass., and could remember distinctly many incidents of the Revolutionary war, during the whole of which her father (Gen. Nixon) served with honorable distinction. She experienced religion at the advanced age of eighty-three, whilst residing with the writer, and lived a most exemplary christian life ever afterward.

In her last years, which were made peaceful by the kindness of her children, she retained her mental faculties in a remarkable degree, and by the benevolence and amiability which characterized her whole life, endeared herself to all with whom she became acquainted. It could truly be said of her, that she was a peace-maker. She turned none empty away from her door. Well do I remember when a child, the many times she sent me to carry things to the poor, and with what pleasure I would stand by her whilst she was taking the things out of a large brick oven waiting for my bundle to carry to a poor old lady. Truly "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

D. A. Bean.

Massachusetts, Vermont, and New York exchanges, please copy.

Bennie R. and James M. Waterman.

In Piermont, N. H., Jan. 30th, of membraneous croup, Bennie R., son of Wilber S. and Rosetta E. Waterman, aged fourteen months and sixteen days.

Little Bennie was a lovely child, but this bright "bud of promise" was not to bloom in our cold and cheerless world.

Also, Feb. 16th, of diphtheria, James M., only remaining child of Wilber S. and Rosetta E. Waterman, aged nine years, eleven months and three days.

James was an interesting and promising child, and we deeply mourn his loss. While in the bloom of health disease fastened its hand upon his brow, and after about two weeks of patient suffering he fell asleep.

"Parents, 'tis hard to yield your only one—
Your dearest treasure to an early grave!
But oh! your Father gave his only Son—
His best beloved—a guilty world to save.
Then yield your treasure back to Him who gave,
Nor murmur that he calls him thus so soon,
But look with faith beyond that early grave,
And view your loved one in that heavenly home."

Effie L. Cross.

Cora Turner.

Died in Hebron, Jan. 23d, 1864, of scarlet fever, Cora, only child of Winfield S. and Isabella Turner, aged three years and three months.

Thus have our young brother and sister been called to yield a lovely child to the king of terrors. Cora was a remarkable and interesting child; very affectionate in her disposition, she became endeared to all who knew her; and deeply is her loss felt by both the parents and grandparents with whom she was living. But they sorrow not as others without hope, having the promise she shall come again from the enemy's land. Yes, we shall behold little Cora redeemed from the grave to bloom in a heavenly clime, where she shall shine as the angels, to die no more. Sermon by the writer from Luke 20: 35, 36.

Sleep' little Cora, sweetly sleep
Deep in the lap of earth;
Thy little form is laid away
Till Christ shall call it forth.
Then from thy dreamless sleep shalt thou
Be waked to live again,
And in the paradise of God
With Christ forever reign.

J. T. Jordan.

Levi T. Knox.

Died in Bethlehem, Conn., March 28th, Levi T. Knox, of the late firm of Knox & Judson, aged thirty years.

He died in the triumphs of faith.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

London, March 30th, Queenstown 31st.

Copenhagen, March 28. At three o'clock this morning the enemy attempted to surprise our position at Dybool. He penetrated between two of our trenches, but was repulsed to his former position. The engagement lasted five hours. The conflict extended along the whole line. An iron-clad took an effective part in the contest. It is announced from North Schleswig that the Prussians in Jutland are moving southward.

Sonderburg, March 28—10 A. M. This morning at 3 o'clock an attack was made on Bastion 6 and the whole Dybool lines. The Prussians were twice repulsed. At last the Prussian soldiery refused to obey the order of their officers to advance. The iron-clad Ralfkrake fired on the Prussian right from Wenmangbrard. The engagement lasted seven hours. The cannonading was continuous. The Danes had 100 killed. Twenty-two Prussians were captured. Only four Danish regiments were engaged.

Two engagements favorable to the insurgents had occurred in Poland.

France is said to have declared it unadvisable to maintain the treaty of London as a basis of negotiations on the Danish question, and that she considers universal suffrage the only means of arriving at a solution.

German accounts say the Danes attacked the Prussian intrenchments, and after a hand to hand fight were driven back and the Prussians occupied their previous position.

The London Times thinks the conference will meet with reasonable hope of success, the basis being Danish integrity.

Liverpool April 2d, Queenstown 3d.

The political news is unimportant.

London. A telegram announcing the arrival of Garibaldi at Southampton is momentarily expected.

Although the Pope has been able to go through all the laborious solemnities of the Passion Week, his health is represented to be in a most critical state, and doubts of his recovery become daily more confirmed.

An adjourned meeting of the Atlantic Telegraph Company took place on the 21st ult. The contract with Glass, Elliott & Co. to manufacture and lay the cable agreed upon, was explained, and a resolution unanimously adopted, approving of the contract. The chairman predicted that within eighteen months the great work would be in successful operation.

HUNGARY.

It is stated that the military organization of Hungary by the revolutionary party was progressing on a basis of the former regimental list of the National Guards.

Southampton, April 2—evening. A telegram announcing the arrival of the Ripon, with Garibaldi on board, off Hurst Castle, is momentarily expected. On its receipt signal guns will be fired, the town flag will be hoisted, and peals rung from the different church bells. The Mayor and corporation will receive the General and present the address. The General and his friends will then proceed in an open carriage to the residence of the Mayor. The Mayor of Bristol and gentlemen from Newcastle, Glasgow and other towns have arrived as deputations to invite the General to visit those towns.

THE MEXICAN QUESTION.

Several of the French journals predict that the difficulty relative to the departure of Maximilian for Mexico will shortly be arranged.

The Oesterrische Zeitung of Vienna says that the negotiations between Maximilian and the Emperor of Austria were brought to a favorable issue on the 31st ult., and the Archduke's formal acceptance of the Mexican crown may be expected very shortly.

It is stated that Napoleon has sent Gen. Frossara to Vienna to smooth down the difficulties between Maximilian and the Emperor of Austria.

THE DANISH WAR.

The Prussians on the night of the 29th ult. succeeded in opening the first parallel before Duppel, without molestation from the Danes.

A part of the correspondence relative to Denmark has been published by the British Government, and brings matters down to the present time. It appears from this correspondence that the proposal for a conference has been accepted by all parties, and will probably lead to a settlement of the disputes, unless warlike passions are too much excited by events taking place before Duppel.

The Daily News says: "The correspondence sufficiently shows that no preparations whatever have been made for a conference, and it the Emperor Napoleon has only half the sagacity for which he gets credit, he will be able easily to transform it into the congress which he proposed last November, with the additional gratification of seeing it convened by the very statesmen who defeated it before."

The London Times gives partial credit to the report of an extensive attempt at revolt among the Hungarian troops in Denmark. The Austrian army broke up from before Fredericia in an unaccountable manner, and disaffection among the troops may be the cause. The Times treats the report of a wholesale execution as untrue.

Liverpool April 2d, Queenstown 4th.

Advices from Rome confirm the apprehensions felt for the Pope's life, which is not, however despaired of.

Prince Napoleon, it was reported, will go to Sweden.

The Paris Pays speaks of a serious conflict said to have taken place in Jutland between an Austrian and a Prussian regiment.

Garibaldi arrived at Southampton on the 3d and was enthusiastically received.

DOMESTIC.

Cairo, Ill., April 12. Federal cavalry, 4000 strong, occupied Eagle Pass, after a slight resistance from the rebels. Eagle Pass is 400 miles above Brownsville, and has been a great rebel highway for running cotton and other articles into Mexico. It was determined our troops should permanently occupy the place.

The French were marching on Matamoras. A fight had taken place in which the French were victorious. Three French frigates were off the bar preparing to cross. Cortanas had issued a proclamation ordering all the troops to concentrate on the Rio Grande below Matamoras to resist the occupation of that place by the French.

Corpus Christi had been reoccupied by our forces and they had captured 800 prisoners. The old residents had nearly all left the place previous to its reoccupation. Eight hundred California cavalry had arrived overland and joined the Union forces.

Refugees from rebel conscription were flocking into our lines by hundreds daily. Immense quantities of cotton had been secured by our troops.

Philadelphia, April 12. The Enquirer has a dispatch dated Nashville, Tenn., April 11, which says it is certain at last that East Tennessee has been abandoned by the rebel troops, and that they have destroyed all the bridges in their hasty retreat.

Seven of Longstreet's Generals have been court-martialed in consequence of the failure of the campaign in East Tennessee.

Johnston's army is receiving heavy reinforcements. Part of Beauregard's army and new troops have arrived at Dalton. Polk's army is on the way to Dalton. The bulk of Johnston's army is at Tunnel Hill.

Cairo, Ill., April 13th. The rebel General Buford sent a flag of truce at seven A. M. to-day, demanding the surrender of Fort Halleck, at Columbus, Ky. Also stating that the white soldiers would be treated as prisoners of war, but no protection would be promised for colored troops found in arms. Five hours were given for the removal of the women and children. The steamer Crawford arrived here at one P. M. crowded with the latter. As she was leaving Columbus two steamers arrived from below with three thousand veterans en route for home on a furlough, and a battery, which were landed, and which would doubtless materally change the calculations of the rebels.

The steamer Olive Branch, from New Orleans 6th, has arrived. She reports that fighting had been going on at Fort Pillow all day yesterday, up to the time she passed there, (3 P. M.) when there was a cessation of hostilities. Negotiations were pending and a flag of truce was visible. After passing the fighting was renewed and the Federal flag was seen to come down, but it was believed to have been shot away, as there seemed to be efforts to raise it again. Gen. Buford's demand was for the unconditional surrender of Fort Pillow, and stated that if the fort surrendered the negroes would be returned to their masters, but if forced to take the place no quarter would be shown them.

Col. Lawrence, of the 34th New Jersey Regiment, commanding the post, replied that his government placed him there to defend the fort and surrender was out of the question.

Cairo, Ill., April 14th. On Tuesday morning Forrest attacked Fort Pillow. Soon after the attack Forrest sent a flag of truce demanding the surrender of the fort and garrison—in the meanwhile so disposing his forces as to take the advantage of our forces. Major Booth, who commanded, refused the flag of truce and the fighting recommenced.

Afterward a second flag came in which was also repulsed. Both flags gave the rebels the advantage of gaining new positions. The battle was kept up until eight P. M., when Major Booth was killed and Major Bradford took command. The rebels now made such a furious attack that our men were compelled to surrender. Immediately upon the surrender a scene ensued which baffles all description.

Up to that time comparatively few of our men had been killed, but instantly on taking possession of the fort the fiends commenced an indiscriminate butchery of the whites and blacks, including those of both colors who had been previously wounded.

The black soldiers becoming demoralized rushed to the rear, the white officers having thrown down their arms. Both white and black were bayoneted, shot or sabered. Even dead bodies were horribly mutilated, and children and several negro women were murdered in cold blood.

Soldiers unable to speak from wounds were shot dead and their bodies thrown into the river. The dead and wounded negroes were piled in heaps and burned; and several citizens who had joined our forces for protection were killed and wounded.

Six guns were captured by the rebels and carried off. A large amount of stores was destroyed or carried off.

The intention of the rebels seemed to be to move on toward Memphis and capture the place.

Cairo, Ill., April 15. Three other negroes were buried alive by the rebels at Fort Pillow, making five in all. All were wounded but one. He was forced to help dig pits and was then thrown in and covered with the rest. Chalmers said to a Federal officer on the Platte Valley that it was their intention to show no mercy to Southerners serving in the Union army and negroes, but the genuine Yankees would be treated as prisoners of war.

According to dispatches in the Chicago Tribune, the Fort Pillow captured by the rebels is located at Columbus, Ky.

The Louisville Journal says it has authentic information that the rebels are making preparations for an invasion of Kentucky on a gigantic scale.

St. John, N. B., April 15. The great storm of sleet and wind which commenced on Saturday completely flattened out the telegraph line between here and Cape Race. Not a half a mile was left standing.

☞ Small-pox prevails at New Orleans and the lower Mississippi, to an alarming extent.

Newspaper Laws.

1. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office—whether directed to his name or to another—or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it be taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

3. If the subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it, if he takes it out of the post-office. The law proceeds on the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facia evidence of intentional fraud.

Items.

☞ Recent accounts received from Rome represent the health of the Pope as precarious, but private letters report that his recovery is considered impossible. Cardinal Wiseman has been sent for to the Vatican, and great uneasiness is said to prevail among the clergy in Rome in reference to important changes that will take place in the event of the Pope's death. Report assigns to the Emperor of the French the conviction that it will be impossible to retain the temporal power of the Papacy after the decease of Pius IX.

☞ The excitement over the Metropolitan fair in New York is as great as ever. The receipts for Monday, notwithstanding the inclement weather, were $42,917, making the total thus far $605,822. The sword vote Monday evening was 2,962 for McClellan, and 2,335 for Grant, with a scattering vote of 35, thus giving McClellan a majority of 627.

☞ A very extensive revival of religion is now in progress at Saco and Biddeford, Me. Rev. Mr. Earle is preaching to crowded audiences in the largest halls, and three hundred or more have recently expressed hope.

☞ The oldest newspaper in the world is published in Pekin. It is printed on a large sheet of silk, and, it is said, has made a weekly appearance for upwards of a thousand years.

From accurate statistics it is stated that in the New and Old World there are 8,250 lodges of Free Masons, with five thousand active members. The number of non-active and those who have withdrawn is nearly three million.

☞ At a great mass-meeting held in London on Good Friday, resolutions declaring that it was the duty of the British government to intervene on behalf of Poland were adopted. Upwards of 5,000 persons were present.

MARRIED.

At Portsmouth, N. H., April 13th, by Eld. Joseph W. White, Mr. Henry G. Thompson, of Portsmouth, to Miss Emma Stevens, daughter of Eld. Charles Stevens, of Exeter, N. H.

Notices.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau county, Ill., commencing Tuesday evening, May 17th, and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting.

In behalf of the conference,
N. W. Spencer, President.
C. W. Smith, Secretary.

Illinois Advent Christian Conference.

The Lord willing, this conference will hold its next annual session at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, at 2 o'clock P. M. Wyanet is on the Burlington and Quincy R. R. Those coming from the north on the Central R. R. will change for the Burlington at Mendota. Those coming from the south will take the Rock Island R. R. at Lasalle, and stop at Pond Creek, where they will find a team in readiness to convey them to the meeting. As this is our annual meeting, all of our ministering brethren are requested to be present, or report by letter. Brn. and Srs., remember this yearly gathering, and make a special effort to attend. Make the meeting a subject of prayer, and come with a determination to work, and then the Lord will meet with and bless us.

C. W. Smith, Sec. of Conf.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a conference of Free Sabbath Adventists, organized under the name of "The Church of the First Born," will be held at Portland, Me., commencing Thursday, May 5th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth, whether they see exactly with us or not, are cheerfully invited to attend. Strangers coming into the city will inquire for H. A. Weston, 432 Congress Street.

S. C. Hancock.

P. S. The Lord willing, I will preach in Westerly, R. I., at the Quarry meeting-house, Sunday, April 24th, also at Central Hall, East Boston, Thursday evening, April 28th, and over the following Sunday.

S. C. Hancock.

Notice to all who are interested.—By the advice of some friends, and my own inclination, I intend to revise, improve, and publish in tract form, the articles on the subject of the Sabbath, the Law, etc., recently published in the Crisis, if I can find sufficient encouragement. To those who may think favorably of the object, and will do what they can to give the work circulation, I would say, please write and let me know about how many copies you can dispose of. I also desire all persons interested, whether they be friends or opponents, if they can point out any errors, or suggest any improvements in what they have seen in the Crisis, to be free and propose them.

T. M. Preble.

East Weare, N. H.

Notice.

I have been detained from going to Iowa by sickness. Shall start, the Lord willing, on the 16th. Brethren will please communicate their wishes to me at Cascade, Iowa, Dubuque Co., at the present, as I go there first. After that where the Lord shall direct.

N. M. Henry.

Notice.

Eld. Edwin Burnham will commence a series of meetings with the Free Evangelical Church of North Attleboro, Mass., on Sunday, April 24th, and continue until May 3d. All in the vicinity who desire to be revived, reclaimed, converted, or who feel ready to unite in a faithful effort to "pull men out of the fire," are earnestly invited to attend. The prayers of all christians are solicited in behalf of the meeting.

C. Cunningham.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. Sheldon.

Notice.

Bro. G. F. Locke, East Weare, N. H., who has the excellent works on tea, coffee, and tobacco, by Dr. Alcott, all of which were advertised to be sold by him, post paid, for 30 cts., wishes to say that the postage is more than he at first supposed; so that he will be obliged to ask 34 cts. for the set. Every one should read these works.—Ed.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

Miles Grant, per order of
Publishing Committee.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Appointment for Lowell Street Chapel.

Miles Grant....................Sunday, April 24th

Plymouth, Mass....................Sunday, April 24th
H. L. Hastings.

Rutland, Vt....................Sunday, April 24th
H. F. Carpenter.

Portsmouth, N. H....................Sabbaths, May 8th and 15th
T. M. Preble.

Concord, N. H....................April 24th
A. Simpson.

Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., Sunday, April 24th and May 22d.
Kendall....................May 8th
Darien....................May 15th
C. F. Sweet.

Thorndike, Mass., (where the Brn. may appoint), Sabbath, April 24th, and through the week, as may be desired.
B. Spaulding.

Danielsonville, Ct....................Sunday, April 24th
D. A. Jones.

Abington, Ct....................Sunday, April 24th
E. Bellows.

Portsmouth, N. H....................April 24th
Elliot, Me....................May 1st
Worcester, Mass....................May 15th
F. H. Burbank.

Brunswick Village, (as Bro. Storer may appoint), Sunday, April 24th.
Yarmouth, Me., (Institute Hall)....................May 1st
Richmond, (Reed meeting-house)....................May 8th
R. R. York.

Collinsville, Ct....................Sunday, April 24th
Wrightville, Ct....................Sunday, May 1st
Northfield, Ct....................Sunday, May 8th
South Windsor, Ct....................Sunday, May 15th
South Manchester....................evening of the 15th as Bro. H. P. Hart may arrange.
C. Goodrich.

Ore Hill, Warren, N. H....................May 8th
West Plymouth, (Brick school-house)....................May 15th
No Name.

South Reading, Mass....................Sunday, April 24th
Holliston, Mass., (in the Town Hall), Sunday, May 1st
Will try and preach in Dover, Mass., some evening or evenings during the following week.
Please address me at Holliston, Mass.
H. K. Flagg.

Bro. Davis', Sandy Brook, near Hitchcockville, Conn., Sunday, April 24th.
Wrightville, Ct....................Sunday, May 8th
Lewis Andrews.

Meredith Village, N. H....................April 24th
Moultonborough, (Richardson School-house), May 1st
West Ossipee, (for baptism)....................May 8th
T. W. Piper.

Pittsfield....................Sunday, April 24th
New Durham Ridge (communion)....................May 1st
Tuftonborough, N. H....................Sunday, May 8th
West Alton, N. H. (funeral)....................Sunday, May 15th
Nottingham, N. H....................Sunday, May 22d
J. G. Smith.

Salem, Mass....................Sunday, April 24th
Concord, N. H....................Sunday, May 8th
Bradford, N. H....................Sunday, May 15th
Joseph W. White.

Windsor, Ct....................Sunday, May 1st
S. P. Babcock.

Lower Gilmanton, N. H., (Advent Chapel), evening, April 30th. Sunday, May 1st, Love feast 9 o'clock, A. M. Communion in the evening. Those wishing to be baptized will have an opportunity. Come, dear Brn. and Srs., and help in the good work of the Lord now going forward in the above place.
John G. Hook.

Agawam, Mass....................Sunday, April 24th
P. S. Butler.

Huntington, Mass., Baptist church, Sunday April 24th
Agawam, Mass....................Sunday, May 1st and through the week, if desirable.
W. J. Hale.

East Killingly, Ct....................April 24th
B. Robberts.

East Otis, Mass....................Sunday, May 15th
Cold Spring, Mass....................Sunday, May 29th
Geo. L. Teeple.

Hartland, Densmore Hill, Vt....................Sunday, April 24th
J. Couch.

Lynn, Mass....................Sunday, April 24th
East Boston....................Sunday, May 1st
A. W. Sibley.

Rocky Brook, R. I....................April 24th
Westerly, R. I....................May 1st
Ocean Port, N. J....................May 8th
J. K. Bellows.

Cold Spring, Mass....................April 24th
Where Bro. Cotton may appoint....................May 1st
Wm. A. Fenn.

Portland, Me....................Sunday, May 1st and 8th
Frankfort Mills....................Sunday, May 15th
J. Hemenway.

Worcester, Mass....................April 24th
Geo. A. Streeter.

Manchester, evenings of April 22d, 23d, and Lord's day, 24th.
S. S. Mooney.

Lawrence, Mass....................April 24th
A. Ross.

Hartford, Ct....................April 24th and May 1st
Cheshire Street, Ct....................May 5th
New Brtain, Ct....................May 8th
Collinsville, Ct....................May 11th
Southington, Ct....................May 12th
Plainville, Ct....................May 13th
Bristol, Ct....................May 15th
Plymouth, Ct....................April 17th
Warehouse Point, Ct....................May 18th
Scitico, Ct....................May 19th
Springfield, Mass., (State street)....................May 22d
J. S. White.

Appointments for Agawam.

P. Butler....................April 24th
H. Pratt....................May 8th

Atkinson, Me., or Fulton's Corner, Thursday evening, April 21st, and over Sunday.
Milo, Me., (where Brn. Billington and Farris may appoint), evenings, April 27th and 28th.
Medford, Me., (where Bro. John Lindsey may appoint), May 1st.
Meeting on Saturday evening, April 30th, if Bro. Lindsey thinks best.
Thomas Smith.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. Diamond, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.

2. Pearl, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.

3. Nonpareil, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.

4. Minion, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.

5. Testaments. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

Lardner's Works, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

Roy's Hebrew Dictionary, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

Englishman's Hebrew Concordance, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

Webster's Unabridged Pictorial Dictionary. Price $7.50,—for $6.50.

Lowth on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

Griesbach's Greek Testament, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

Polymicrian Greek Testament, Pocket form, with Lexicon; Roan binding. $1.75, post paid.

English Reference Bibles, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

H. Bailey—We have credited you the eight copies to No. 463.

I B Luther—Received. Paid to No. 462.

A E Babcock—Have none of the "Sermons."

D W Knight—Have none of Chadwick's. Can send you the Union Bible Dictionary by mail for $1.15.

A. Bickford—Have credited you the $2.00; pays to No. 488.

I Fine—D T Holley is credited $1.00.

C E Robinson—The money was received, and credited on books.

A Webster—Have put the whole on Tract Fund. Crisis paid to No. 488.

John Turpie (Delphi, Carrol Co., Ind.)—We are out of "Soul" and "Rich Man." Will send soon.

C N Wood (Fort Edward, N. Y.)—Out of the books you order. Will send when we obtain a new supply.

B Perham—H B's Pilgrim is sent regularly.

Mrs E Remick—Your paper is sent regularly to Westboro.

C P Dow—We have sent some to Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 446.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—J Hall 468, A L Arnold 470, M Christenson 470, L A Lang 477, B Shorts 453, A W Rowell 470, C. Bunnell 468, S. P. Vickery 453, I. S. Palmer 472, H Clegg 470, J. Hook 470, N. Purington 469, Mr. McKergow 470, B. Tilley 470, S. A. Jenness 470, S. Ellinwood 470, H. Strout 470, S. B. Davis 466, E. Griffin 470, J A Vergin 470, W. Collier 442, M J Pratt 470, D. Lindsey 443, A Morgan 480, S K Fenton 468, J P Darling 468, S Eaton 471, A Bowen 471, E J Brown 471, H Morgan 471, H O Straffen 471, H J Moss 471, W H Stone 415, A Russ 468, P Shafer 434, A Smith 469, G L White 468, G W Baker 471, J. M. Stow 471, R. Robbins 452, D V Corey 464, H Haynes 464, W. Taft 464, M. Avery 471, D Graves 471, A Newton 471, J. Harris 464, A. Bryant 472, D. W. Cole 471, T. R. Ricker 471, A W Estes 471, T. C. George 471, S. Porney 471, A. Waterman 468, W Lassell 451, J. E. Ainsworth 486, G. S. Rannells 471, Z Boody 473, H F Shepard 471, E B Staple 471, C L Sweet 471, Jas. Thorp 442, Jno. Thorp 442, J. Miller 471, A. Bagsley (what P. O.?), M. C. Pike 471, G. Mitson 471, L. Orcutt 464, L. Stebbins 471, W P Richardson 471, J Carpenter 471, H. Fisner 471, A. H. Warren 449, S. A. Bartlett 473, R Devereaux 468, P Rice 429, S Barton 468, A Richardson 468, H Deyo 470, Mrs D Bush 471, A Stevenson 469, M. B. Nutter 446, B O Emerson 470, D W Knightly 423, A D Smith 468, A Hamilton 470, M Merrill 468, C Colburn 471.

$2.00 each.—M Jones 495, M Saunders 434, A Chase 2nd 459, A. J. Lowell 498, N. Horr 463, Mrs. Buchanan 456, J Spenser 379, C Railsback 490, R. T. Church 494, J Elmore 488, J Brown 447, G W Chisman 455, L Parmelee 418, H L Johnson 458, L Marsh 487, R A Goble 497, L G Burroughs 500, A E Miller 455, A Harris 485, A. Smith 491, Mrs C Miller 465, J. Pay 498, H. Curtis 498, W Kahari 512, R Paul 497, G Miller 498, A. Hastings 496, D Rider 494, L H Washburn 446, S P Whitney 494, E. Oakes 490, T. Mills 453, G W Bailey 468, C R Danks 443, M A Sawyer 327, G W Barnes 481, J Sanderson 438, S J Moseley 507, C L Moseley 497, J B Estey 358, C C Dow 494.

50c each.—H. Stevens 457, A H Walker 457, H Gray 457, J. F. Dudley 455, J W Reed 458, S O Snow 458, E A Ricker 458, W. Wilbur 458, J Shipman 458, J Dunham 458, R M Seward 458, Mrs J Nason 441, B F Hammond 456, J. Hanson 458, E. King 459, S. Hall 458, L Parker 458, J Miles 458, D C Terry 468, S B Inslee 414, H Whipple 389.

D J Dow $2.20, [illegible]; C Deming $1.00, 508; D Rider (old acct.) $3.00; [illegible] Thompson $4.20, 490; A Rines 16c, 446.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

J. Hall $1.57, A. Freeman Jr 75c, A. Ames $2.00, J. Wilbur 8c, N Richards 25c, R Way 50c, C W Low 64c, L. D. Cowdery 50c, P. W. Matts $1.10, G. W. Chisman $1.00, L. Marsh $1.00, N. White $2.30, J. Harris 25c, G Stockwell 32c, S L Manley 30c, D C Terry $3.50, W A Eggleston $1.00, H H Warn 25c, L. L. Wood $1.00, A Thompson $1.50.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.

J Hall, A Freeman Jr., A Amos, N Richards, J Wilbur, P W Matts, C W Low, R Way, T B Ensign, L D Cowdrey, G. W. Chisman, H B Glidden, G Stockwell, D V Corey, A Bryant, M R Burroughs, N White, S L Manley, L Marsh, B. H. Albee, C L Page, L L Wood, H. H. Warn, M W Corliss, D J Dow, W. Tunmore, C Rima, C P Dow, H Barden, A Thompson, W Halsinger.

By Express.—M Richardson.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M. Mathews Weaver, D. Cogswell, H. E. Twing, O. P. Allen, A. H. Brown, J. Blain, L. J Davenport, C. W. Low, W. Hobbs, C. F. Sweet, C. A. Knowles, J. A. Libby.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Wm. Shepherd—Shamrock Mills, R. I.

M. W. Corliss—Presque Isle, Me.

Eld. A. W. Sibley—Crisis Box, Boston, Mass., until May 2nd.

Removal.—S. S. Brewer's Post Office address is now Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian mission the past week, as follows:—

A friend, $20.00; Daniel A. Jones, M. D. $10.00; Joseph Fairbanks, $5.00, from a Sister, through Bro. L. Otis, $5.00; Betsey Newton, $5.00; Thos. E. Wood, $5.00; N. W. Wait, $3.00; a Bro. in Christ, $2.00; C. Green, M. D., $2.00; Mr. Martin, $1.00; Geo. Phelps $1.00; Miss A. M. Allen, $1.00, E. P. Burditt, $1.00; P. Folsom, $1.00; Mr. Whitney $1.00; Sr. Swift 50 cts.

I am sorry to inform my friends that I have just received information that the steamboat in which I expected to take passage for Europe the 28th of the present month, was disabled on her return trip, and needs repairs, for which reason I shall not leave New York till the 12th of May. Until that time my P. O. address will be Williamsburg, Long Island, N. Y.

M. B. Czechowski.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. F. Woodward. [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal, conscious suffering of the Wicked?" [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents single, [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matthew 10: 28, Genesis 35: 17, &c.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Medo Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. [illegible]

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. [illegible]

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Woe" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, [illegible]

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible]

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible]

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets," [illegible]

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" [illegible]

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, [illegible]

9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. [illegible]

10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology, [illegible]

11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

THE CLOSE OF TIME.

The sands of Time are sinking,
Its glass will soon be run;
O! may we not cease praying—
Thy will, O God! be done!
* * * *
Oh! joyful, happy meeting,
When time shall have an end,
When we shall cease our weeping,
And friend shall meet with friend.

A righteous crown immortal
Shall be the saints' reward;
It's promised to the faithful
Who keep His sacred word.

Shall we be virgins sleeping,
The oil of grace delay,
Till we shall see Him coming?
O God! forbid, I pray.

A free and full salvation
Is offered unto all;
They shall not taste his supper,
Who do refuse the call.

The pure in heart shall see Him
Who made the universe;
The earth shall they inherit,
When He removes the curse.

May we be humble christians,
The path of virtue tread,
And live in sweet submission
To Christ, our living Head.

Our God will give us wisdom
To guide us to the last,
And in his glorious kingdom
We'll share a rich repast.

We'll sing the song of Moses,
And of the righteous Lamb;
That song that never closes—
All glory to His Name!

Dover, N. H. M. A. Y. H.

For the World's Crisis.

THE NEW COVENANT.

"Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah; not according to the covenant which I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel, after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sins I will remember no more."—Jer. 31: 31-34.

In order to examine the subject of this prophecy, in relation to the time of its fulfillment, certain inquiries demand our attention.

1. What age is referred to in the saying, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant"?
2. What people are meant by the house of Israel, and the house of Judah?
3. What length of time will it require to write his law in their inward parts?
4. Will all know him from the least to the greatest of them whom this covenant is written in their hearts?

I. The age referred to is indicated as then near; for said Paul, "In that he saith, A new covenant, he maketh the first old"; and the inference therefrom he states in these words: "Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away."—Heb. 8: 13. But when did he say, "I will make a new covenant"? Why, several hundred years before the Christian era. So if he made the first covenant old then, and the ages from then to the time when the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ began to be preached, and it became still older by a third more. Old enough, in fact, for it to vanish away when Christ said of the sacramental cup, on the night before he suffered, "This cup is the New Testament in my blood, which is shed for you."—Luke 22: 20. The cup here being put for that which it contained, and that which it contained being made typical of his blood. And this cup is called the New Testament in his blood; but this could not justly be called so, unless the new covenant was to come into operation by the shedding of his own blood. For "Testament" and "covenant" are synonymous terms, and is a peculiarity of the English version, and not of the Greek, which employs but one term—diatheka. So if that new covenant did not go into operation then, we have not yet come under the New Testament dispensation; and if so, we are under the curse of the law, which says, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." For if the new covenant is not now in force, then the Old Testament is, which requires the sacrifice of different kinds of animals to atone for sins. So our neglect to offer the sacrifices required would bring us under the curse of the law if that old covenant were now in force; which would now be in force if it were not already superceded by the new covenant.

The evidence, however, that the Old Testament is not now in force ought to be considered sufficient to convince even a Jew, much more a Gentile. For the very fact that while the Jews were the most zealous of the observances of the law, they were dispersed abroad and ever since prevented from offering their sacrifices, shows a breach of that covenant on the part of God himself, which is allowable only on the supposition that he thus manifested his abrogation of that covenant for their previous transgressions thereof. And this taking place so soon after the termination of the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9, which were to reach unto Messiah the Prince, is a clear proof that Jesus of Nazareth was the promised Messiah. For as he was to appear at that time, and no one but he did appear then (who have had any right to be considered otherwise than impostors), he alone has the right to the Messianic claim.

And of the Messiah it was written, that "when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me: in burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God." And on the fulfillment of this prediction Paul, in Heb. 10: 8-10, shows that it was when he came publicly into the world, as our great high priest, when the sacrifices of the law were no longer required; when God had prepared him a body of his own to offer instead. For then, and not till then, could he say, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not"; for God required those sacrifices until then. And that this is the conclusion of the apostle Paul is clear from his statement thereof; which is as follows:—"Above, when he saith, Sacrifice and offering for sin thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law; then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first that he might establish the second. By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."

By the word "first," Paul signifies the old covenant; and by "the second," he denotes the new covenant; as the connection shows. Hence the fulfillment of this prophecy was when Christ could truly say, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, [illegible] could not be until he came publicly into the world; for before this those sacrifices were demanded. Hence when he said, "A body hast thou prepared me," was when he said, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God"; which "will" Paul shows us was the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. And at that time also he gives us to understand that he took away the first that he might establish the second or new covenant. And the cessation of the sacrifices soon after the crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth, by the destruction of Jerusalem, and the carrying away of that people captive into all nations, is a manifest proof that he alone was their Messianic king. For had he not been, their rejection of him would have entitled them to the divine favor, instead of resulting in their being broken up as a nation. And as their sacrifices were to be abrogated by their own Messiah, and as they have been abrogated in fact for the last eighteen hundred years, they have no reason whatever to expect any other Messiah to come.

Their old covenant, which was written upon two tables of stone, is no where to be found. Their sacrifices, which they were commanded to offer for any transgression thereof, cannot now be offered. So it is to all intents and purposes abrogated; for had God designed its continuance any longer, he would not have suffered the two tables of stone, on which that covenant was written, to have been lost. So the finger of God is seen in the removal thereof as plain as in the original writing thereof by the finger of God. But prior to the abrogation of that covenant, Messiah was to appear, in fulfillment of the prophecy saying, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me." And as the Lord Jesus was the only one who did appear at the time indicated, he alone is the only true Messiah. So it is absolute folly for a Jew to reject him, and to cleave to the old covenant, the original of which is lost, when if they but believe in him they will be entitled to all the blessings of the new. "I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."

This last passage is quoted by Paul in Acts 13: 34, and applied to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; which goes to prove that the new or everlasting covenant was made and came into force then, by the death and resurrection of the Lord. And the whole scope of his argument, in his epistle to the Hebrews, is designed to prove the same. Some of his statements therein are so plain in that direction that they cannot be made to mean anything else. For instance, in speaking of the first covenant, and the new, he says that when he said, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God, he took away the first that he might establish the second; and then shows that his will, that he came to do, was to offer his body once for all. But if he took away the first then, the second would have to come into immediate force, as otherwise they would have been left without any law whatever.

Hence there is no other conclusion to which we can come except this; viz: that the old covenant or Testament was abrogated, and the new covenant was introduced by the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. Hence Paul could truly say of himself and his brethren in the ministry, God hath made us able ministers of the new covenant—(Greek, diatheka—covenant or Testament), not of the letter, but of the spirit; for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

No person who holds that the new covenant is not yet come into force, can say what Paul here says; for if it is all future, no one can be an able minister thereof, except of the letter, for to be an able minister of its spirit, is to make it operative in the present time, and thus prove that it is not wholly a thing in the future. Hence the age designated by the prophecy can be none other than the past, present, and future days of the New Testament dispensation.

II. What people are meant by the house of Israel, and the house of Judah? The house of Israel in its natural meaning would include all of the descendants of Jacob, and so include the house of Judah. But since there was a division of that house, and the ten tribes were known by that name, it became necessary to mention the house of Judah, so that none of the descendants of Jacob could be excluded from that covenant.

But Paul says truly that "they are not all Israel who are of Israel." Jacob obtained the name Israel because he had power to prevail with God; hence the true Israel are only those of his descendants who possess like characteristics, evil doers being reckoned as children of the wicked one, and not of the true Israel. Such must cease to do evil, and learn to do well, before they can be reckoned as the children of Israel. And this they cannot do unless they believe on the Lord Jesus Christ; for to reject him is the height of impiety, and involves a rejection of God who sent him to be the Savior of the world.

Under the Old Testament dispensation, Gentiles might become proselytes of the law, and become incorporated into the Jewish nation, and so become Israelites. So under the new covenant Gentiles can be grafted into the same stock, like as a wild olive is grafted into the good olive tree, and so by partaking of the root and fatness of the good olive tree become identified as belonging to the same tree. This is all perfectly natural, for God hath made of one blood all nations of men, so that a good man of one nation has the same nature as a good man of another nation. And all believers are acknowledged by Christ himself as brethren; and he being a real Israelite, of the tribe of Judah, his brethren become Israelites by partaking of his peculiar nature. So the house of Israel and the house of Judah includes not only the original and spiritual descendants of Jacob, but those also who, under both Testaments, become grafted into that great family of God.

But were it not so, Paul could not have said, "If ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." For if they were not also the seed of Jacob or Israel, they could not be the seed of Abraham; but if the seed of one, then of both; and so Israelites by a spiritual life transplanted through Christ. But the term Israel cannot apply to the Gentiles as the natural stock, but only as branches grafted into the stock. So the house of Israel would refer to the original stock, and would include its several branches. Hence when he saith "I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel," etc., it refers to [illegible] Accordingly, this covenant [illegible] written perfectly in the hearts of some, so such objection can be raised in his case.

But then the objection assumes to anticipate the time when this law shall be written, as though it was to be completed at once; whereas it includes a long duration of time, as will be seen under the next inquiry.

WM. HOBBS.

(To be concluded.)

For the World's Crisis.

TALK TO ME.

Oh! talk to me, ye friends of Jesus,
Tell me if He will soon appear
In triple glory, to redeem us
From sin and death and every fear.
And tell me of His voice awaking
Dear ones slumbering in the tomb,
Of the bright day that when breaking
Shall scatter all their night of gloom.

Talk to me of beautiful Eden,
Where none e'er sicken and die,
And love's dear tie cannot be riven,
And life's clear stream is never dry.
And tell me of the Holy City,
The sweet home of the pure and blest,
Who through a Savior's love and pity
Share in unending joy and rest.

Talk to me of its peaceful bowers,
And golden walks 'neath life's fair trees,
Shining fields and beauteous flowers,
Its healthful clime and perfumed breeze.
And tell me of the joyful singing,
And of the angel harpings there;
The alleluias sweetly rising
From all the praiseful crowd so fair.

And talk to me of crowns unfading,
And of the palms that victors wear,
And the robes of glory all pervading,
That gilds the robes the righteous wear.
And tell me of that blest to-morrow,
When we eternal things shall view,
And I will bid farewell to sorrow,
That did with grief my soul imbue.

Bristol, Ct. JANE J. AUSTIN.

For the World's Crisis.

CHEER UP!

God's promises are sure. None need trust in vain; for that which he hath promised he will also perform. Courage, then, and press forward in the christian race. We may have our dark seasons, it is true, but what is the cause? Unbelief! Just as certainly as we doubt God's promises we fall into trouble. Have faith, then, "For the Lord God is a sun and a shield; the Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Ps. 84: 11. What more could we ask than is contained in this promise? Reason would answer, Nothing. Why, then, should we ever allow ourselves to despond?

Do we have trouble? We have an Advocate, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, to intercede for us. "Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. 4: 16.

Are we in perilous times? It is a sign that we are in the last days. Are evil men and seducers waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived? It is another "sign of the times." Do we see distress of nations with perplexity, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth? Jesus says, "When these things begin to come to pass . . . . lift up your heads; FOR YOUR REDEMPTION DRAWETH NIGH." Shall we not cheer up?

G. W. GREEN.

Memphis, Ind.

For the World's Crisis.

THE PRIDE OF FASHION.

"If self must be denied,
And sin no more caressed,
They rather choose the way that's wide,
And strive to think it best."

The fashions—follow the fashions? Why not? No matter how expensive, foolish, absurd, despotic, ridiculous, ruinous to body, mind or soul, take the popular course—follow the fashion, in the church and out of it. No matter whether the bonnet is trimmed with white, black, blue, red, or scarlet, turned up or turned down, on the back side of the head or on the front side, stuck on the forehead or on the back of the neck, all right—it looks beautiful!

"Time was when women bonnets wore
Projecting half a yard before;
When beauty was thus hidden deep,
'Twas something e'en to get a peep;
But now, O woman's fickle mind!
They wear their bonnets all behind;
While men their features hide with hair,
The ladies go with faces bare,
And fancy all admire who stare!
So this will pass in history's page
As lovely women's barefaced age!"

No matter whether the dress be long or short, hooped or not hooped, Bloomer or not Bloomer, up to the knee or trailing in the mud and dirt, so be it is in the fashion. Is it fashionable to wear tight shoes, pinching the feet and toes? wear them—corns or no corns, all the same. Is it fashionable to wear jewelry? wear it—on the breast, the arms, the fingers, in the ears, rings from one to four on each finger—ear-rings, large and showy—necklaces, two or three in number, with hearts and crosses dependent from the same—bracelets, casing the arms half way to the elbow—a minute watch affixed to the waist, and moored to the neck with a golden cable—a world of little knick-knacks, called "charms."

All right, on with them, cost or no cost, Bible or no Bible—it's the fashion. If a dress or shawl cost fifty, a hundred, or two hundred dollars, instead of five or ten, on with them; no matter. If bob-tailed coats are the cut of the day, wear bob-tailed coats—if long, long. If stocks to choke the neck, and high collars become popular, buckle them on, tight as a drum-head, breath or no breath, bronchitis or no bronchitis, all the same. . . .

Is it fashionable to write, puff, and read novels, go to the theatre, the dance, and play the fiddle? follow the wake. "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined." It is the fashion.

If it is fashionable to pay five, ten, twenty, or a hundred dollars for a ticket to hear Jenny Lind sing in a theatre or a church, to fill Barnum's pockets, hurrah for Jenny Lind, hurrah! On they go, ministers and people—it's the fashion, it's popular!

Is it fashionable to make holiday feasts, New Year's calls, load the tables and side-boards with wines, cordials, rich dainties, poisonous confectionary, eat, drink, gormandize, play the glutton, the drunkard, and starve the poor? Go ahead, it's the fashion—no matter, all right! "Like priest, like people." Is it fashionable to hold fancy fairs, tea-parties, soirees, oyster suppers, pic-nics, [illegible] come. Sometimes, also, sinners, men of the world, have balls, dancing parties, etc., for the benefit of the poor, the widows, and the orphans, on the same principle—it's the fashion. Money we want—money we will have.

"Fashion rules the world, and a most tyrannical mistress she is, compelling people to submit to the most inconvenient thing imaginable, for fashion's sake. She pinches our feet with tight shoes, or chokes us with a tight handkerchief, or squeezes the breath out of our body by tight lacing.

"She makes people sit up at nights when they ought to be in bed, and keeps them in bed in the morning when they ought to be up doing.

"She makes it vulgar to wait on ourselves, and genteel to live idle, and useless.

"She makes people visit when they would rather stay at home, eat when they are not hungry, and drink when they are not thirsty.

"She invades our pleasure and interrupts our business.

"She compels people to dress gayly, whether upon their property or that of others; whether agreeable to the word of God or the dictates of pride.

"She ruins health and produces sickness, destroys life and occasions death.

"She makes foolish parents, invalids of children, and servants of all.

"She is a tormentor of conscience, despoiler of morality, an enemy of religion, and no one can be her companion and enjoy either.

"She is a despot of the highest grade, full of intrigue and cunning; and yet husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, and servants, black and white, voluntarily have become her obedient servants and slaves, and vie with one another to see who shall be most obsequious."

Dr. Edward Dixon, in "The Natural History of Crime," asks, "Is it saying more than can be substantiated, that our national taste for low and unintellectual adornment is the cause of half the dishonest failures, half the divorces, elopements, and crimes of a more secret and revolting character, that occur in our cities?"

There is no truth more firmly established among medical men, than that disease follows fashion as much as bonnets do. When thin slippers prevail, consumption is the prevailing epidemic with females in every fashionable community in the country. When the low-necked dresses are in the ascendant, sore throat and quinsy are the raging maladies. When "bustles" and "bishops" made their appearance, spinal affections became "the ton." The reign of corsets is denoted by collapsed lungs, dyspepsia, and a general derangement of the digestive organs. Indeed, so intimately are dress and disease connected, that an eminent skillful doctor says, that all he needs to determine of what a majority of the fashionable women are dying, is to have an inventory of their wardrobe handed to him.

If there is any one fashion more cruel and absurd than another, it is that of making little girls' dresses and skirts to be worn off from the shoulder. One cannot meet a child whose mother is more fashionable than wise, without feeling distressed for the efforts of the little one to use its arms, and constant shrugging of the shoulders, to give one or the other a little liberty.

This fashion undoubtedly does much to cause the almost universal deformity of shoulders observable in women.

And is there no other evil attendant on this loose mode of dressing, save ill health and personal deformity? Take from a lovely girl modesty, virtuous purity, a sense of female delicacy, and what remains?

"Whatever dims thy sense of truth,
Or stains thy purity,
Though slight as breath of summer air,
Count it as sin to thee."

D. F. NEWTON, Author of Home Thrusts.

For the World's Crisis.

DO NOT FORGET.

This age is one of forgetfulness. Forgetting that there is an allwise Being who rules all things, that his plans are all laid from Eden lost to Eden restored,—and men cannot even make one hair white or black, with all their strivings. Nations may strive to change the plans of God, as did Satan on the Mount, when he wished Jesus to fall down and worship him; but he could not avail any thing; so the next thing was, to try and drown him; but he was more mighty in power, and he could say to the sea, Be calm, and it obeyed. Thus we may learn that his power is limited, and cannot triumph at last; and as he is the leader of the nations, they cannot prevail. Therefore the nations and their leader are doomed.

Brethren and sisters, do not forget that God has chosen you for a better purpose. To separate yourselves from the nations of the world. Forget not that Jesus bought us with a price, suffered and bled on Calvary, and his own precious blood paid the debt. Forget not the example set for us, and the commandments given; to leave father, mother, wives, and children, houses and lands, for his sake and the gospel's, if need be, but not without reward. Forget not that time is short. Your work will soon be done, and what is done must be done quickly. Neither forget the armor that we are to wear, and also the spirit with which we are to use it. It will do as much now as it did in the apostle's day. It will do the finishing work of the gospel, and that is all that God wants of it. God wants sinners saved.

"O!" says one, "I cannot do any thing." Ah! brother, you have forgotten again. What? Forgotten God's promises,—"My grace is sufficient." Do not stop when God calls, but leave your farms, and shops, your houses, and all that is earthly, and run, sound the alarm; tell men of the danger before them in love and in tears. Put them in remembrance of these things. Arouse them from their slumber. Be not ashamed. Cry aloud and spare not. Tell them the judgment is just upon them,—what is done must be done quickly; that they shall not be forgetful of these things; that they may make preparations for the judgment.

Neither forget the prayer that Jesus offered for you. "Neither pray I for these alone, (speaking of his disciples), but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." So we have the help of one that is able; and he commands us to be watchful, and to strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to die. Let us not be forgetful of these things. Waiting for life,

JOHN C. WHEELER.

Mechanic Falls, Me.

☞ The trials of life are the tests which ascertain how much gold there is in us.

THE COMING HAIL-STORM.

BY [illegible] TAYLOR.

"Hast thou seen the treasures of the hail, which I have reserved against the time of trouble, against the day of battle and war?"—God to Job, 38: 22, 23.

Great hail-stones are sometimes sent by the Almighty as plagues and judgments on evil men and countries. God seems to reserve this heavenly artillery therewith to pour his wrath upon the wicked in the day when he goes forth in battle to fight against them. How terrible are his weapons of war! How awful is our God! Witness the following:

Among the plagues sent upon Egypt, was "a very grievous hail, such as hath not been on Egypt since the foundation thereof until now." This hail smote the herbs, break every tree of the field, destroyed crops, men, and beasts. "There was none like it in all the land of Egypt, since it became a nation." Exodus 9.

In the days of Joshua, God fought against the Amorites with "great hail-stones from heaven," so that "they were more which died with hail-stones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword." Joshua 10. These stones as well as those sent on Egypt must have been of immense size to have destroyed trees and men.

When Israel rebelled, Jehovah "smote them with blasting, mildew, and hail." Hag. 2: 17.

Hail is mentioned as one of the plagues under the first trumpet. Rev. 8: 7. This trumpet describes the Gothic invasion of the Roman Empire, A. D. 395–410, under Alaric and others. Nicephorus Calistus says that after the taking of Rome by Alaric in 410, hail-stones fell in many places of eight pounds weight. The prophecy was both figuratively and literally fulfilled.

In A. D. 824, there fell near Autun, in Burgundy, among the hail, pieces of ice sixteen feet long, seven feet wide, and two feet thick! This statement fully attested by the old writers, makes highly probable the account given by Hayne in his History of India, who says when speaking of the masses of hail-stones that have fallen in the Mysore country, that in the latter part of Tippoo Sultan's reign it is recorded and highly authenticated that a piece fell near Seringapatam of the size of an elephant!—Vide Appleton's Ency., Art.. Hail.

In 1680, Vallade assures us in his description of the Orkney Islands, that in the month of June that year, there fell pieces of ice during a storm a foot thick.

In 1693, Morton observed at Northampton, England, blades of ice which fell in a storm that were two inches long and one inch thick.

In 1720, hail fell at Crems, in France, some of the stones of which weighed six pounds.

In 1722, in the famous storm that occurred in Picardy, a province of France, in August, the least stones that fell accompanied with thunder and lightning, weighed a pound, and the largest eight pounds.

The following year hail-stones fell at Leicester, in England, five inches long.

In 1738, there fell hail in Thuringia, in Germany, as large as geese eggs, and in 1740, hail-stones fell in Rome the size of common hen's eggs.

The great hail-storm that passed over France on Sunday, July 13th, 1788, was most terrific. Two parallel lines of storm, each nine miles wide, and separated by a middle line of furious rain swept fearfully from the south-west to the north-east, over a tract of country extending five hundred and six hundred miles. It took place at nine o'clock in the morning, and without any eclipse was accompanied by a dreadful darkness. The fury of the tempest was terrifying. Wind, rain, hail, and thunder seemed to contend in impetuosity, to lay waste and destroy. The rich face of summer in one hour appeared as if converted to an universal winter, vines, fruit trees, corn, the forests were beaten in ruins. The ground was covered with heaps of solid ice. One district of sixty square leagues had not a single ear of corn, or fruit of any kind left. Of the sixty-six parishes in the district of Pontoise, forty-three were entirely desolated, and the rest nearly destroyed. In all, one thousand parishes were ravaged, and $5,000,000 worth of property destroyed. This judgment fell in France just previous to her blasphemious and awful atheistical revolution, when she defied God, slew his witnesses, and instituted universal massacres, making a hell on earth.

In 1798, in a paper read before the Royal Society, the Abbe of Maury testified that hail-stones fell in Germany from half an inch in diameter to the weight of eight pounds.

In 1801, Sir Robert Wilson describes a hail-storm that continued at intervals two days and nights at Marmorice Bay, Asia Minor, when the stones were as large as walnuts, and covered the ground two feet deep in February.

In 1831, Dr. Malcomsom describes another storm which occurred in India, when the stones ploughed up a gravel walk like musket balls, and passed through glass windows, making round holes without cracking them.

Matteucci, describing the storm of July 24th, 1832, at Tussi, certifies positively to the hail-stones having fallen of the weight of one and a half pounds, and states that it appears certain that one was found which weighed fourteen pounds, and that another forced its way through the roof of a house.

A little after midnight of March 28th, 1834, in a hail-storm which continued only ten minutes in Jackson, La., great numbers of the cattle were killed by the hail, and much damage done to the houses and woods. Darwin makes mention of many wild deer being killed, in a hail-storm at night in Buenos Ayres, one man finding and bringing in thirteen carcasses, and another seven. Ostriches, and other birds were also destroyed.

In 1856, on the 29th of August, hail-stones fell in Champlain, N. Y., some as large as Brazil-nuts, others sharp and jagged of the size of a large watch.

In Rev. 16: 21, the final plague of the seventh vial is, "And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent; and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail, for the plague thereof was exceeding great." Wesley makes this talent sixty pounds. Gauntlett one hundred pounds. The Egyptian talent was eighty-six pounds and nine ounces. The Jewish talent of silver was one hundred and thirteen pounds, ten ounces. A talent at Antioch weighed three hundred and ninety pounds. See Isa. 28: 2-17; Isa. 30: 35; Ezk. 13: 11-13; Ezk. 38: 22; and Rev. 11: 19. All this may be figurative, but should it prove literal, as the stones of A. D. 824, and that in the reign of Tippoo Sultan, 179?, shows it may be, then how awful! And if it should be universal as the prophecy would seem to indicate, then how grand, how fearful, how destructive will be this great judgment on a guilty world! Dr. Cumming and very many others think the seventh angel commenced to pour out his vial of wrath in 1848. If so, then the great last hail-storm is just at hand. Reader, will you find a shelter in Christ then? "The hail will sweep away your refuge of lies" in that solemn hour, and there is safety nowhere else but in the everlasting arms of the Son of God.

Castleton, Vt., February, 1864.

—Advent Herald.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating drinks as a Beverage.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM ATHOL, MASS.

DEAR TRY COMPANY:—Being in this pretty place, Athol, Mass., and seeing a number of pretty children in the Sabbath School, all readers of the Young Pilgrim, I asked them to meet at Eld. Geo. L. Streeter's, and read, sing and pray. We had a few good meetings; and, as the little girls earn considerable [illegible] them to send some to the Children's S. S. Fund, which they cheerfully subscribed, as follows:—

Eva Ellenwood	$0.25
Martha Sawtelle	.25
Waldo Hagar	.10
Frank Stratton	.10
Emma Streeter	.10
Sarah Streeter	.5
George Streeter	.5
Maria Mathews	.10

Little George Streeter says, "Tell them I want to be a good boy. I am five years old. I want to be good so I can live with Jesus when he comes."

Little Sarah, Georgie's sister, says, "I had five cents given me to buy candy with, and I wanted Aunt Maria to send it to the S. S. Fund. I am three years old."

Well, children, be good. By and by I hope to have time to write you some more about Canada. Keep on writing. I love to read your little letters. How glad I would be to see you all. If you are good, and I am, we shall meet in our happy Eden home by and by, where we shall see Jesus and be happy forever. Let us be faithful. Pray often. Study your Bibles. May God bless you. Amen.

March 31st, 1864. SISTER MARIA.

For the World's Crisis.

CHILD'S PRAYER CORRECTED.

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray, O Lord, my soul to keep;
Preserve my life till I awake,
And evermore, for Jesus' sake.

WILLIAM HOBBS.

LITTLE WILLIE'S SELF-DENIAL.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed Willie, as he ran eagerly into the room on his return from school, "we are to have a vacation all next week, and may I go with Dennis on Monday when he goes to get those vegetables papa has bought of Mr. Morton?"

"If it is a pleasant day, I know of nothing to prevent your going; that is, if Dennis is willing to take charge of you."

"Oh, I know he will, mamma, and I won't trouble him in the least. Only think, it is six miles there; what a splendid long ride I shall have."

The next day, as Willie walked to church with his parents, he often thought of the pleasure in store for the morrow; but in the Sabbath-school he was very much interested in the remarks of a stranger who addressed the school.

When he reached home, he said: "Mamma, that minister talked to us to-day about self-denial, and said the more we denied ourselves for the good of others the happier we should feel. Now is that really true?"

"It is, Willie. The Bible says: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive,' and we are told to 'deny ourselves, take up our cross, and follow Christ.'"

"Then I fear I am a very selfish little boy, for I don't like to deny myself at all. I ate all those oranges myself the other day, although I knew that Johnny Maloney would have been very glad of one, for he has just got over the fever, and I remember now how good they tasted when I was getting well after I was sick last fall."

"I am glad, Willie, to find you have been thinking of this matter. If you wish to prove the truth of the minister's words, do some self-denying act the first opportunity you have, and see if you feel happier for it."

The next morning dawned bright and cloudless, and Willie was in high spirits all the forenoon. He scarcely knew how to employ his time until the happy hour arrived for him to take his ride. He got tired of staying in the sitting-room, and so he thought he would pay a visit to Mrs. Maloney, who was washing in the kitchen.

"Oh, Masther Willie," she cried, "how nice ye'er looking this morning, and what a fine color ye have in yer cheeks. Here's poor Johnny as pale as this sheet I'm washing ever since the faver left him. The docthor says he ought to take a ride now and then, and go out in the country a bit; but the like of me, that has to wash for a living, can't do that at all."

A sudden thought startled Willie, and scarcely stopping to make any answer, he rushed out into the yard. Back and forth he paced with slow step, and a very anxious, perplexed look upon his face. All at once he came to a dead halt, and planting his foot firmly upon the bricks, he exclaimed, "I'll do it," and then ran into the house.

"Mamma," he said, "Johnny Maloney is down stairs, and he looks so pale and thin, I think the ride into the country this afternoon will do him more good than it will me; and as there is room for only one, I am going to let him go in my stead if you are willing."

"Most certainly I am, Willie," and clasping the little fellow to her heart, she gave him a kiss of approval. He flew to tell Mrs. Maloney of his decision, and resolutely stood by while Johnny was lifted up on the high seat beside Dennis. He watched them ride out of sight with a face on which smiles and tears were striving which should have possession, but the smiles gained the victory, and he went cheerfully on an errand for his mamma, which she had kindly postponed on account of the ride.

After Willie's mamma had put him to bed that night, she sat down beside him, and putting her hand fondly upon his little curly head, she said: "You have made me very happy, dear Willie, to-day, by so soon putting in practice the resolution you made yesterday. It was a great act of self-denial for you to give up the ride you anticipated so much pleasure in taking; and how is it? do you feel happier or not for staying at home to let Johnny go?"

"Happier than if I had taken the best ride in the world, mamma. And you say it made you happy, too, and I know Mrs. Maloney and Johnny were happy; and so only think how much happiness it caused. I am sure I don't mean to be selfish again as long as I live."—American Messenger.

REAL COURAGE.

Boys and girls, as well as men and women, are sometimes apt to mistake prudence for cowardice, and yet no two qualities can be more different.

"Pooh!" said a rough boy once to his more gentle cousin, "I do believe, John, you are afraid to go near that horse, just because he isn't tied!"

"There is no need of my going near him, Stephen," was the reply; "and there is danger of his kicking any one who teases him uselessly."

"Ha! ha!" shouted Stephen, "you're a bravey, now, ain't you? The idea of being afraid of a horse!" and, with a taunting look at John, the foolish boy walked up to the grazing animal, and poked him with a stick.

The horse gave an uneasy start, but continued pulling at the grass.

"See here!" exclaimed Stephen, growing bolder, "if you'll promise not to faint, John, I'll present you with a lock of his tail in a minute."

John didn't faint, but Stephen did; for, as he stealthily approached the horse in the rear, the animal bounded away after performing a flourish with his hoofs that laid his tormentor senseless in the dust.

John tried hard to restore Stephen to consciousness. He loosened his clothing, rubbed his hands and feet, and bringing water in his cap from a pool near by, dashed it in the boy's white face, but all in vain—there were no signs of life. The nearest house was their own home, a quarter of a mile distant. John felt that not a moment must be lost. He approached the now quiet horse, and leaping upon his back, rode swiftly, without saddle or bridle, to his uncle's house for help.

When, after a long illness, Stephen recovered, he was a wiser boy, and told his cousin that he really believed the horse had managed to knock a little common sense into him.

"And what a dunce I must have been, John," he added, "to fancy you were afraid of that horse."

FOUR PAIRS OF HANDS.

"Grandmother," said a little girl, "I wish I had four pairs of hands to help you with." "Oh, thought the old lady, "how happy I am in having a grandchild so ready and willing to comfort my old age. Four pairs of hands! According to that, I am afraid I shall hardly find enough to keep one pair busy."

In the afternoon grandmother went into the woods to cut herbs. "You will spread supper," she said to the little girl; "put on the brown loaf and a mug of milk and the cold mutton, and make a cup of tea." And the nice old lady put on her Shaker bonnet and took her way to the woods, wishing the four pairs of hands could go with her.

Sunset filled the earth with golden light when grandfather from the brick yard and grandmother from the forest turned their tired feet toward the cottage. Each thought of supper, and what a good sauce hunger was to give it a relish. Grandmother also pleased herself on the way fancying her little girl trotting about the old kitchen, and making its grey walls cheerful with her nimble fingers and glad songs.

The old lady came into the porch. There sat grandfather, tired and alone, leaning on the top of his staff. No supper, no tea-kettle singing, no little grandchild to welcome her. "Where is Elsie? Has she fallen into the well?" asked grandmother, her kind old heart going pit-a-pat. She looked out of the east window. "Elsie, Elsie," called grandmother, "why did you not get supper, as I bid you, child?"

"Oh, because—," drawled Elsie.

"For my part, I had rather have what one pair of hands will do, than what four pairs can promise," said the old lady.

Ah, selfish people are always generous with just that which they don't happen to have.—Child's Paper.

NOBLE REVENGE.

When I was a small boy, there was a black boy in the neighborhood, by the name of Jim Dick. Myself and a number of my playfellows were one evening collected together at our sports, and began tormenting the poor black by calling him, "Negro," "Blackamoor," and other degrading epithets; the poor fellow appeared excessively grieved at our conduct, and soon left us.

We soon after made an appointment to go a skating in the neighborhood; and on the day of the appointment I had the misfortune to break my skates, and I could not go without borrowing Jim's skates. I went to him and asked him for them. "Oh, yes, John, you may have them and welcome," was his answer.

When I went to return them I found Jim sitting by the fire in the kitchen, reading the Bible. I told him I had returned his skates, and was under great obligations to him for his kindness. He looked at me as he took the skates, and with tears in his eyes, said to me, "John, don't never call me blackamoor again," and immediately left the room. The words pierced my heart, and I burst into tears, and from that time resolved not to abuse a poor black in future.—Southey.

☞ Mind what you run after. Never be content with a bubble that will burst, or a fire-work that will end in smoke. Get that which you can keep—which is worth keeping.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(13 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CRISIS BOX, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

THE CLOSE OF TIME.

The sands of Time are sinking,
Its glass will soon be run;
O! may we not cease praying—
Thy will, O God! be done!
* * * * *
Oh! joyful, happy meeting,
When time shall have an end,
When we shall cease our weeping,
And friend shall meet with friend.

A righteous crown immortal
Shall be the saints' reward;
It's promised to the faithful
Who keep His sacred word.

Shall we be virgins sleeping,
The oil of grace delay,
Till we shall see Him coming?
O God! forbid, I pray.

A free and full salvation
Is offered unto all;
They shall not taste his supper,
Who do refuse the call.

The pure in heart shall see Him
Who made the universe;
The earth shall they inherit,
When He removes the curse.

May we be humble christians,
The path of virtue tread,
And live in sweet submission
To Christ, our living Head.

Our God will give us wisdom
To guide us to the last,
And in his glorious kingdom
We'll share a rich repast.

We'll sing the song of Moses,
And of the righteous Lamb;
That song that never closes—
All glory to His Name!

Dover, N. H. M. A. T. H.

For the World's Crisis.

THE NEW COVENANT.

"Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah; not according to the covenant which I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they broke, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel, after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sins will I remember no more."—Jer. 31: 31-34.

In order to examine the subject of this prophecy, in relation to the time of its fulfillment, certain inquiries demand our attention.

1. What age is referred to in the saying, "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant"?

2. What people are meant by the house of Israel, and the house of Judah?

3. What length of time will it require to write his law in their inward parts?

4. Will all know him from the least to the greatest of them when this covenant is written in their hearts?

I. The age referred to is indicated as then near; for said Paul, "In that he saith, A new covenant, he maketh the first old"; and the inference therefrom he states in these words: "Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away."—Heb. 8: 13. But when did he say, "I will make a new covenant"? Why, several hundred years before the Christian era. So if he made the first covenant old then, add the years from then to the time when the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ began to be preached, and it becomes still older by a third more. Old enough, in fact, for it to vanish away when Christ said of the sacramental cup, on the night before he suffered, "This cup is the New Testament in my blood, which is shed for you."—Luke 22: 20. The cup here being put for that which it contained, and that which it contained being made typical of his blood. And this cup is called the New Testament in his blood; but this could not justly be called so, unless the new covenant was to come into operation by the shedding of his own blood. For "Testament" and "covenant" are synonymous terms, and is a peculiarity of the English version, and not of the Greek, which employs but one term—diatheka. So if that new covenant did not go into operation then, we have not yet come under the New Testament dispensation; and if so, we are under the curse of the law, which says, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." For if the new covenant is not now in force, then the Old Testament is, which requires the sacrifice of different kinds of animals to atone for sins. So our neglect to offer the sacrifices required would bring us under the curse of the law if that old covenant were now in force; which would now be in force if it were not already superceded by the new covenant.

The evidence, however, that the Old Testament is not now in force ought to be considered sufficient to convince even a Jew, much more a Gentile. For the very fact that while the Jews were the most zealous of the observances of the law, they were dispersed abroad and ever since prevented from offering their sacrifices, shows a breach of that covenant on the part of God himself, which is allowable only on the supposition that he thus manifested his abrogation of that covenant for their previous transgressions thereof. And this taking place so soon after the termination of the sixty-nine weeks of Dan. 9, which were to reach unto Messiah the Prince, is a clear proof that Jesus of Nazareth was the promised Messiah. For as he was to appear at that time, and no one but he did appear then (who have had any right to be considered otherwise than impostors), he alone has the right to the Messianic claim.

And of the Messiah it was written, that "when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me: in burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God." And on the fulfillment of this prediction Paul, in Heb. 10: 8-10, shows that it was when he came publicly into the world, as our great high priest, when the sacrifices of the law were no longer required; when God had prepared him a body of his own to offer instead. For then, and not till then, could he say, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not"; for God required those sacrifices until then. And that this is the conclusion of the apostle Paul is clear from his statement thereof; which is as follows:—"Above, when he saith, Sacrifice and offering for sin thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law; then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God, he taketh away the first that he might establish the second. By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all."

By the word "first," Paul here signifies the old covenant; and by "the second," he denotes the new covenant; as the connection shows. Hence the fulfillment of this prophecy was when Christ could truly say, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not; which could not be until he came publicly into the world; for before this those sacrifices were demanded. Hence when he said, "A body hast thou prepared me," was when he said, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God"; which "will" Paul shows us was the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. And at that time also he gives us to understand that he took away the first that he might establish the second or new covenant. And the cessation of the sacrifices soon after the crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth, by the destruction of Jerusalem, and the carrying away of that people captive into all nations, is a manifest proof that he alone was their Messianic king. For had he not been, their rejection of him would have entitled them to the divine favor, instead of resulting in their being broken up as a nation. And as their sacrifices were to be abrogated by their own Messiah, and as they have been abrogated in fact for the last eighteen hundred years, they have no reason whatever to expect any other Messiah to come.

Their old covenant, which was written upon two tables of stone, is no where to be found. Their sacrifices, which they were commanded to offer for any transgression thereof, cannot now be offered. So it is to all intents and purposes abrogated; for had God designed its continuance any longer, he would not have suffered the two tables of stone, on which that covenant was written, to have been lost. So the finger of God is seen in the removal thereof as plain as in the original writing thereof by the finger of God. But prior to the abrogation of that covenant, Messiah was to appear, in fulfillment of the prophecy saying, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me." And as the Lord Jesus was the only one who did appear at the time indicated, he alone is the only true Messiah. So it is absolute folly for a Jew to reject him, and to cleave to the old covenant, the original of which is lost, when if they but believe in him they will be entitled to all the blessings of the new. "I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."

This last passage is quoted by Paul in Acts 13: 34, and applied to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; which goes to prove that the new or everlasting covenant was made and came into force then, by the death and resurrection of Christ. And the whole scope of his argument, in his epistle to the Hebrews, is designed to prove the same. Some of his statements therein are so plain in that direction that they cannot be made to mean anything else. For instance, in speaking of the first covenant, and the new, he says that when he said, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God, he took away the first that he might establish the second; and then shows that his will, that he came to do, was to offer his body once for all. But if he took away the first then, the second would have to come into immediate force, as otherwise they would have been left without any law whatever.

Hence there is no other conclusion to which we can come except this; viz: that the old covenant or Testament was abrogated, and the new covenant was introduced by the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. Hence Paul could truly say of himself and his brethren in the ministry, God hath made us able ministers of the new covenant—(Greek, diatheka—covenant or Testament), not of the letter, but of the spirit; for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

No person who holds that the new covenant is not yet come into force, can say what Paul here says; for if it is all future, no one can be an able minister thereof, except of the letter, for, to be an able minister of its spirit, is to make it operative in the present time, and thus prove that it is not wholly a thing in the future. Hence the age designated by the prophecy can be none other than the past, present, and future days of the New Testament dispensation.

II. What people are meant by the house of Israel, and the house of Judah? The house of Israel in its natural meaning would include all of the descendants of Jacob, and so include the house of Judah. But since there was a division of that house, and the ten tribes were known by that name, it became necessary to mention the house of Judah, so that none of the house of Israel could be said to be excluded from that covenant.

But Paul says truly that "they are not all Israel who are of Israel." Jacob obtained the name Israel because he had power to prevail with God; hence the true Israel are only those of his descendants who possess like characteristics, evil doers being reckoned as children of the wicked one, and not of the true Israel. Such must cease to do evil, and learn to do well, before they can be reckoned as the children of Israel. And this they cannot do unless they believe on the Lord Jesus Christ; for to reject him is the height of impiety, and involves a rejection of God who sent him to be the Savior of the world.

Under the Old Testament dispensation, Gentiles might become proselytes of the law, and become incorporated into the Jewish nation, and so become Israelites. So under the new covenant Gentiles can be grafted into the same stock, like as a wild olive is grafted into the good olive tree, and so by partaking of the root and fatness of the good olive tree become identified as belonging to the same tree. This is all perfectly natural, for God hath made of one blood all nations of men, so that a good man of one nation has the same nature as a good man of another nation. And all believers are acknowledged by Christ himself as brethren; and he being a real Israelite, of the tribe of Judah, his brethren become Israelites by partaking of his peculiar nature. So the house of Israel and the house of Judah includes not only the original and spiritual descendants of Jacob, but those also who, under both Testaments, become grafted into that great family of God.

If this were not so, Paul could not have said, "If ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." For if they were not also the seed of Jacob or Israel, they could not be the seed of Abraham; but if the seed of one, then of both; and so Israelites by a spiritual life transmitted through Christ. But the term Israel cannot apply to the Gentiles as the natural stock, but only as branches grafted into the tree. So the house of Israel would refer to the original stock, and would include its several branches. Hence when he said, "I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel," etc., it refers to the natural descendants of Jacob.

Accordingly, this covenant was made with that house in the person of its representative head, Jesus Christ. And however much it may be objected to in regard to the law being written perfectly in the hearts of some, no such objection can be raised in his case.

But then the objection assumes to anticipate the time when this law shall be written, as though it was to be completed at once; whereas it includes a long duration of time, as will be seen under the next inquiry.

Wm. Hobbs.

(To be concluded.)

For the World's Crisis.

TALK TO ME.

Oh! talk to me, ye friends of Jesus,
Tell me if He will soon appear
In triple glory, to redeem us
From sin and death and every fear.
And tell me of his voice awaking
Dear ones slumbering in the tomb,
Of the bright day that when breaking
Shall scatter all their night of gloom.

Talk to me of beautiful Eden,
Where none e'er sicken and die,
And love's dear ties cannot be riven,
And life's clear stream is never dry.
And tell me of the Holy City,
The sweet home of the pure and blest,
Who through a Savior's love and pity
Share in unending joy and rest.

Talk to me of its peaceful bowers,
And golden walks 'neath life's fair trees,
Shining fields and beauteous flowers,
Its healthful clime and perfumed breeze.
And tell me of the joyful singing,
And of the angel harpings there;
The alleluias sweetly rising
From all the praiseful crowd so fair.

And talk to me of crowns unfading,
And of the palms that victors bear,
And of the glory all pervading,
That gilds the robes the righteous wear.
And tell me of that blest to-morrow,
When we eternal things shall view,
And I will half forget the sorrow
That did with grief my soul imbue.

Bristol, Ct. Jane J. Austin.

For the World's Crisis.

CHEER UP!

God's promises are sure. None need trust in vain; for that which he hath promised he will also perform. Courage, then, and press forward in the christian race. We may have our dark seasons, it is true, but what is the cause? Unbelief! Just as certainly as we doubt God's promises we fall into trouble. Have faith, then, "For the Lord God is a sun and a shield; the Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Ps. 84: 11. What more could we ask than is contained in this promise? Reason would answer, Nothing. Why, then, should we ever allow ourselves to despond?

Do we have trouble? We have an Advocate, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, to intercede for us. "Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. 4: 16.

Are we in perilous times? It is a sign that we are in the last days. Are evil men and seducers waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived? It is another "sign of the times." Do we see distress of nations with perplexity, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth? Jesus says, "When these things begin to come to pass . . . . lift up your heads; FOR YOUR REDEMPTION DRAWETH NIGH." Shall we not cheer up? G. W. Green.

Memphis, Ind.

For the World's Crisis.

THE PRIDE OF FASHION.

"If self must be denied,
And sin no more caressed,
They rather choose the way that's wide,
And strive to think it best."

The fashions—follow the fashions? Why not? No matter how expensive, foolish, absurd, despotic, ridiculous, ruinous to body, mind or soul, take the popular course—follow the fashion, in the church and out of it. No matter whether the bonnet is trimmed with white, black, blue, red, or scarlet, turned up or turned down, on the back side of the head or on the front side, stuck on the forehead or or the back of the neck, all right—it looks beautiful!

"Time was when women bonnets wore
Projecting half a yard before;
When beauty was thus hidden deep,
'T was something e'en to get a peep:
But now, O woman's fickle mind!
They wear their bonnets all behind;
While men their features hide with hair,
The ladies go with faces bare,
And fancy all admire who stare!
So this will pass in history's page
As lovely women's barefaced age!"

No matter whether the dress be long or short, hooped or not hooped, Bloomer or not Bloomer, up to the knee or trailing in the mud and dirt, so be it is in the fashion. Is it fashionable to wear tight shoes, pinching the feet and toes? wear them—corns or no corns, all the same. Is it fashionable to wear jewelry? wear it—on the breast, the arms, the fingers, in the ears, rings from one to four on each finger—ear-rings, large and showy—necklaces, two or three in number, with hearts and crosses dependent from the same—bracelets, casing the arms half way to the elbow—a minute watch affixed to the waist, and moored to the neck with a golden cable—a world of little knick-knacks, called "charms."

All right, on with them, cost or no cost, Bible or no Bible—it's the fashion. If a dress or shawl cost fifty, a hundred, or two hundred dollars, instead of five or ten, on with it, bankruptcy or no bankruptcy—it's the fashion—we'll go it, sink or swim.

If high-crowned hats are in vogue, wear them—if low, low. If short brims, wear short brims—if long, long. If bob-tailed coats are the cut of the day, wear bob-tailed coats—if long, long. If stocks to choke the neck, and high collars become popular, buckle them on, tight as a drum-head, breath or no breath, bronchitis or no bronchitis, all the same. . . .

Is it fashionable to write, puff, and read novels, go to the theatre, the dance, and play the fiddle? follow the wake. "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined." It is the fashion.

If it is fashionable to pay five, ten, twenty, or a hundred dollars for a ticket to hear Jenny Lind sing in a theatre or a church, to fill Barnum's pockets, hurrah for Jenny Lind, hurrah! On they go, ministers and people—it's the fashion, it's popular!

Is it fashionable to make holiday feasts, New Year's calls, load the tables and sideboards with wines, cordials, rich dainties, poisonous confectionery, eat, drink, gormandize, play the glutton, the drunkard, and starve the poor? Go ahead, it's the fashion—no matter, all right! "Like priest, like people." Is it fashionable to hold fancy fairs, tea-parties, soirees, oyster suppers, pic-nics, etc., to raise money to sustain the pastor, pay off church debts, cushion the pulpit, etc., have a jolly time of it, eat and drink to the full, return home before the morning dawns—no matter, let us do evil that good may come. Sometimes, also, sinners, men of the world, have balls, dancing parties, etc., for the benefit of the poor, the widows, and the orphans, on the same principle—it's the fashion. Money we want—money we will have.

"Fashion rules the world, and a most tyrannical mistress she is, compelling people to submit to the most inconvenient thing imaginable, for fashion's sake. She pinches our feet with tight shoes, or chokes us with a tight handcherchief, or squeezes the breath out of our body by tight lacing.

"She makes people sit up at nights when they ought to be in bed, and keeps them in bed in the morning when they ought to be up doing.

"She makes it vulgar to wait on ourselves, and genteel to live idle, and useless.

"She makes people visit when they would rather stay at home, eat when they are not hungry, and drink when they are not thirsty.

"She invades our pleasure and interrupts our business.

"She compels people to dress gayly, whether upon their property or that of others; whether agreeable to the word of God or the dictates of pride.

"She ruins health and produces sickness, destroys life and occasions death.

"She makes foolish parents, invalids of children, and servants of all.

"She is a tormentor of conscience, despoiler of morality, an enemy of religion, and no one can be her companion and enjoy either.

"She is a despot of the highest grade, full of intrigue and cunning; and yet husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, and servants, black and white, voluntarily have become her obedient servants and slaves, and vie with one another to see who shall be most obsequious."

Dr. Edward Dixon, in "The Natural History of Crime," asks, "Is it saying more than can be substantiated, that our national taste for low and unintellectual adornment is the cause of half the dishonest failures, half the divorces, elopements, and crimes of a more secret and revolting character, that occur in our cities?"

There is no truth more firmly established among medical men, than that disease follows fashion as much as bonnets do. When thin slippers prevail, consumption is the prevailing epidemic with females in every fashionable community in the country. When the low-necked dresses are in the ascendant, sore throat and quinsy are the raging maladies. When "bustles" and "bishops" made their appearance, spinal affections became "the ton." The reign of corsets is denoted by collapsed lungs, dyspepsia, and a general derangement of the digestive organs. Indeed, so intimately are dress and disease connected, that an eminent skillful doctor says, that all he needs to determine of what a majority of the fashionable women are dying, is to have an inventory of their wardrobe handed to him.

If there is any one fashion more cruel and absurd than another, it is that of making little girls' dresses and skirts to be worn off from the shoulder. One cannot meet a child whose mother is more fashionable than wise, without feeling distressed for the efforts of the little one to use its arms, and constant shrugging of the shoulders, to give one or the other a little liberty.

This fashion undoubtedly does much to cause the almost universal deformity of shoulders observable in women.

And is there no other evil attendant on this loose mode of dressing, save ill health and personal deformity? Take from a lovely girl modesty, virtuous purity, a sense of female delicacy, and what remains?

"Whatever dims thy sense of truth,
Or stains thy purity,
Though slight as breath of summer air,
Count it as sin to thee."

D. F. Newton, Author of Home Thrusts.

For the World's Crisis.

DO NOT FORGET.

This age is one of forgetfulness. Forgetting that there is an allwise Being who rules all things, that his plans are all laid from Eden lost to Eden restored,—and men cannot even make one hair white or black, with all their strivings. Nations may strive to change the plans of God, as did Satan on the Mount, when he wished Jesus to fall down and worship him; but he could not avail any thing; so the next thing was, to try and drown him; but he was more mighty in power, and he could say to the sea, Be calm, and it obeyed. Thus we may learn that his power is limited, and cannot triumph at last; and as he is the leader of the nations, they cannot prevail. Therefore the nations and their leader are doomed.

Brethren and sisters, do not forget that God has chosen you for a better purpose. To separate yourselves from the nations of the world. Forget not that Jesus bought us with a price, suffered and bled on Calvary, and his own precious blood paid the debt. Forget not the example set for us, and the commandments given; to leave father, mother, wives, and children, houses and lands, for his sake and the gospel's, if need be, but not without reward. Forget not that time is short. Your work will soon be done, and what is done must be done quickly. Neither forget the armor that we are to wear, and also the spirit with which we are to use it. It will do as much now as it did in the apostle's day. It will do the finishing work of the gospel, and that is all that God wants of it. God wants sinners saved.

"O!" says one, "I cannot do any thing." Ah! brother, you have forgotten again. What? Forgotten God's promises,—"My grace is sufficient." Do not stop when God calls, but leave your farms, and shops, your houses, and all that is earthly, and run, sound the alarm; tell men of the danger before them in love and in tears. Put them in remembrance of these things. Arouse them from their slumber. Be not ashamed. Cry aloud and spare not. Tell them the judgment is just upon them,—what is done must be done quickly; that they shall not be forgetful of these things; that they may make preparations for the judgment.

Neither forget the prayer that Jesus offered for you. "Neither pray I for these alone, (speaking of his disciples), but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." So we have the help of one that is able; and he commands us to be watchful, and to strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to die. Let us not be forgetful of these things. Waiting for life,

John C. Wheeler.

Mechanic Falls, Me.

☞ The trials of life are the tests which ascertain how much gold there is in us.

THE COMING HAIL-STORM.

BY H. E. TAYLOR.

"Hast thou seen the treasures of the hail, which I have reserved against the time of trouble, against the day of battle and war?"—God to Job, 38: 22, 23.

Great hail-stones are sometimes sent by the Almighty as plagues and judgments on evil men and countries. God seems to reserve this heavenly artillery therewith to pour his wrath upon the wicked in the day when he goes forth in battle to fight against them. How terrible are his weapons of war! How awful is our God! Witness the following:

Among the plagues sent upon Egypt, was "a very grievous hail, such as hath not been on Egypt since the foundation thereof until now." This hail smote the herbs, break every tree of the field, destroyed crops, men, and beasts. "There was none like it in all the land of Egypt, since it became a nation." Exodus 9.

In the days of Joshua, God fought against the Amorites with "great hail-stones from heaven," so that "they were more which died with hail-stones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword." Joshua 10. These stones as well as those sent on Egypt must have been of immense size to have destroyed trees and men.

When Israel rebelled, Jehovah "smote them with blasting, mildew, and hail." Hag. 2: 17.

Hail is mentioned as one of the plagues under the first trumpet. Rev. 8: 7. This trumpet describes the Gothic invasion of the Roman Empire, A. D. 395-410, under Alaric and others. Nicephorus Calistus says that after the taking of Rome by Alaric in 410, hail-stones fell in many places of eight pounds weight. The prophecy was both figuratively and literally fulfilled.

In A. D. 824, there fell near Autun, in Burgundy, among the hail, pieces of ice sixteen feet long, seven feet wide, and two feet thick! This statement fully attested by the old writers, makes highly probable the account given by Hayne in his History of India, who says when speaking of the masses of hail-stones that have fallen in the Mysore country, that in the latter part of Tippoo Sultan's reign it is recorded and highly authenticated that a piece fell near Seringapatam of the size of an elephant!—Vide Appleton's Ency., Art.. Hail.

In 1680, Vallade assures us in his description of the Orkney Islands, that in the month of June that year, there fell pieces of ice during a storm a foot thick.

In 1693, Morton observed at Northampton, England, blades of ice which fell in a storm that were two inches long and one inch thick.

In 1720, hail fell at Crems, in France, some of the stones of which weighed six pounds.

In 1722, in the famous storm that occurred in Picardy, a province of France, in August, the least stones that fell accompanied with thunder and lightning, weighed a pound, and the largest eight pounds.

The following year hail-stones fell at Leicester, in England, five inches long.

In 1738, there fell hail in Thuringia, in Germany, as large as geese eggs, and in 1740, hail-stones fell in Rome the size of common hen's eggs.

The great hail-storm that passed over France on Sunday, July 13th, 1788, was most terrific. Two parallel lines of storm, each nine miles wide, and separated by a middle line of furious rain swept fearfully from the south-west to the north-east, over a tract of country extending five hundred and six hundred miles. It took place at nine o'clock in the morning, and without any eclipse was accompanied by a dreadful darkness. The fury of the tempest was terrifying. Wind, rain, hail, and thunder seemed to contend in impetuosity, to lay waste and destroy. The rich face of summer in one hour appeared as if converted to an universal winter, vines, fruit trees, corn, the forests were beaten in ruins. The ground was covered with heaps of solid ice. One district of sixty square leagues had not a single ear of corn, or fruit of any kind left. Of the sixty-six parishes in the district of Pontoise, forty-three were entirely desolated, and the rest nearly destroyed. In all, one thousand parishes were ravaged, and $5,000,000 worth of property destroyed. This judgment fell in France just previous to her blasphemious and awful atheistical revolution, when she defied God, slew his witnesses, and instituted universal massacres, making a hell on earth.

In 1798, in a paper read before the Royal Society, the Abbe of Maury testified that hail-stones fell in Germany from half an inch in diameter to the weight of eight pounds.

In 1801, Sir Robert Wilson describes a hail-storm that continued at intervals two days and nights at Marmorice Bay, Asia Minor, when the stones were as large as walnuts, and covered the ground two feet deep in February.

In 1831, Dr. Malcomsom describes another storm which occurred in India, when the stones ploughed up a gravel walk like musket balls, and passed through glass windows, making round holes without cracking them.

Matteucci, describing the storm of July 24th, 1832, at Tussi, certifies positively to the hail-stones having fallen of the weight of one and a half pounds, and states that it appears certain that one was found which weighed fourteen pounds, and that another forced its way through the roof of a house.

A little after midnight of March 28th, 1834, in a hail-storm which continued only ten minutes in Jackson, La., great numbers of the cattle were killed by the hail, and much damage done to the houses and woods. Darwin makes mention of many wild deer being killed, in a hail-storm at night in Buenos Ayres, one man finding and bringing in thirteen carcasses, and another seven. Ostriches, and other birds were also destroyed.

In 1856, on the 29th of August, hail-stones fell in Champlain, N. Y., some as large as Brazil-nuts, others sharp and jagged of the size of a large watch.

In Rev. 16: 21, the final plague of the seventh vial is, "And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent; and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail, for the plague thereof was exceeding great." Wesley makes this talent sixty pounds. Gauntlett one hundred pounds. The Egyptian talent was eighty-six pounds and nine ounces. The Jewish talent of silver was one hundred and thirteen pounds, ten ounces. A talent at Antioch weighed three hundred and ninety pounds. See Isa. 28: 2-17; Isa. 30: 35; Ezk. 13: 11-13; Ezk. 38: 22; and Rev. 11: 19. All this may be figurative, but should it prove literal, as the stones of A. D. 824, and that in the reign of Tippoo Sultan, 1790, shows it may be, then how awful! And if it should be universal as the prophecy would seem to indicate, then how grand, how [illegible]ful, how destructive will be this great judgment on a guilty world! Dr. Cumming and very many others think the seventh angel commenc[illegible] to pour out his vial of wrath in 1848. If [illegible] then the great last hail-storm is just at hand. Reader, will you find a shelter in Christ then? "The hail will sweep away your refuge of lies" in that solemn hour, and there [illegible] safety nowhere else but in the everlasting arms of the Son of God.

Castleton, Vt., February, 1864.

—Advent Herald.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM ATHOL, MASS.

Dear Try Company,—Being in this pretty place, Athol, Mass., and seeing a number of pretty children in the Sabbath School, all readers of the Young Pilgrim, I asked them to meet at Eld. Geo. [illegible] Streeter's, and read, sing and pray. We had a few good meetings; and, as the little girls earn considerable [illegible] to send some to the Children's S. S. Fund, which they cheerfully subscribed, as follows:—

Eva Ellenwood	$0.25
Martha Sawtelle	.25
Waldo Hagar	.10
Frank Stratton	.10
Emma Streeter	.10
Sarah Streeter	.5
George Streeter	.5
Maria Mathews	.10

Little George Streeter says, "Tell them I want to be a good boy. I am five years old. I want to be good so I can live with Jesus when he comes."

Little Sarah, Georgie's sister, says, "I had five cents given me to buy candy with, and I wanted Aunt Maria to send it to the S. S. Fund. I am three years old."

Well, children, be good. By and by I hope to have time to write you some more about Canada. Keep on writing. I love to read your little letters. How glad I would be to see you all. If you are good, and I am, we shall meet in our happy Eden home by and by, where we shall see Jesus and be happy forever. Let us be faithful. Pray often. Study your Bibles. May God bless you. Amen.

March 31st, 1864. Sister Maria.

For the World's Crisis.

CHILD'S PRAYER CORRECTED.

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray, O Lord, my soul to keep;
Preserve my life till I awake,
And evermore, for Jesus' sake.

William Hobbs.

LITTLE WILLIE'S SELF-DENIAL.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed Willie, as he ran eagerly into the room on his return from school, "we are to have a vacation all next week, and may I go with Dennis on Monday when he goes to get those vegetables papa has bought of Mr. Morton?"

"If it is a pleasant day, I know of nothing to prevent your going; that is, if Dennis is willing to take charge of you."

"Oh, I know he will, mamma, and I won't trouble him in the least. Only think, it is six miles there; what a splendid long ride I shall have."

The next day, as Willie walked to church with his parents, he often thought of the pleasure in store for the morrow; but in the Sabbath-school he was very much interested in the remarks of a stranger who addressed the school.

When he reached home, he said: "Mamma, that minister talked to us to-day about self-denial, and said the more we denied ourselves for the good of others the happier we should feel. Now is that really true?"

"It is, Willie. The Bible says: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive,' and we are told to 'deny ourselves, take up our cross, and follow Christ.'"

"Then I fear I am a very selfish little boy, for I don't like to deny myself at all. I ate all those oranges myself the other day, although I knew that Johnny Maloney would have been very glad of one, for he has just got over the fever, and I remember now how good they tasted when I was getting well after I was sick last fall."

"I am glad, Willie, to find you have been thinking of this matter. If you wish to prove the truth of the minister's words, do some self-denying act the first opportunity you have, and see if you feel happier for it."

The next morning dawned bright and cloudless, and Willie was in high spirits all the forenoon. He scarcely knew how to employ his time until the happy hour arrived for him to take his ride. He got tired of staying in the sitting-room, and so he thought he would pay a visit to Mrs. Maloney, who was washing in the kitchen.

"Oh, Masther Willie," she cried, "how nice ye'er looking this morning, and what a fine color ye have in yer cheeks. Here's poor Johnny as pale as this sheet I'm washing ever since the faver left him. The docthor says he ought to take a ride now and then, and go out in the country a bit; but the like of me, that has to wash for a living, can't do that at all."

A sudden thought startled Willie, and scarcely stopping to make any answer, he rushed out into the yard. Back and forth he paced with slow step, and a very anxious, perplexed look upon his face. All at once he came to a dead halt, and planting his foot firmly upon the bricks, he exclaimed, "I'll do it," and then ran into the house.

"Mamma," he said, "Johnny Maloney is down stairs, and he looks so pale and thin, I think the ride into the country this afternoon will do him more good than it will me; and as there is room for only one, I am going to let him go in my stead if you are willing."

"Most certainly I am, Willie," and clasping the little fellow to her heart, she gave him a kiss of approval. He flew to tell Mrs. Maloney of his decision, and resolutely stood by while Johnny was lifted up on the high seat beside Dennis. He watched them ride out of sight with a face on which smiles and tears were striving which should have possession, but the smiles gained the victory, and he went cheerfully on an errand for his mamma, which she had kindly postponed on account of the ride.

After Willie's mamma had put him to bed that night, she sat down beside him, and putting her hand fondly upon his little curly head, she said: "You have made me very happy, dear Willie, to-day, by so soon putting in practice the resolution you made yesterday. It was a great act of self-denial for you to give up the ride you anticipated so much pleasure in taking; and how is it? do you feel happier or not for staying at home to let Johnny go?"

"Happier than if I had taken the best ride in the world, mamma. And you say it made you happy, too, and I know Mrs. Maloney and Johnny were happy; and so only think how much happiness it caused. I am sure I don't mean to be selfish again as long as I live."—American Messenger.

REAL COURAGE.

Boys and girls, as well as men and women, are sometimes apt to mistake prudence for cowardice, and yet no two qualities can be more different.

"Pooh!" said a rough boy once to his more gentle cousin, "I do believe, John, you are afraid to go near that horse, just because he isn't tied!"

"There is no need of my going near him, Stephen," was the reply; "and there is danger of his kicking any one who teases him uselessly."

"Ha! ha!" shouted Stephen, "you're a bravey, now, ain't you? The idea of being afraid of a horse!" and, with a taunting look at John, the foolish boy walked up to the grazing animal, and poked him with a stick.

The horse gave an uneasy start, but continued pulling at the grass.

"See here!" exclaimed Stephen, growing bolder, "if you'll promise not to faint, John, I'll present you with a lock of his tail in a minute."

John didn't faint, but Stephen did; for, as he stealthily approached the horse in the rear, the animal bounded away after performing a flourish with his hoofs that laid his tormentor senseless in the dust.

John tried hard to restore Stephen to consciousness. He loosened his clothing, rubbed his hands and feet, and bringing water in his cap from a pool near by, dashed it on the boy's white face, but all in vain—there were no signs of life. The nearest house was their own home, a quarter of a mile distant. John felt that not a moment must be lost. He approached the now quiet horse, and leaping upon his back, rode swiftly, without saddle or bridle, to his uncle's house for help.

When, after a long illness, Stephen recovered, he was a wiser boy, and told his cousin that he really believed the horse had managed to knock a little common sense into him.

"And what a dunce I must have been, John," he added, "to fancy you were afraid of that horse."

FOUR PAIRS OF HANDS.

"Grandmother," said a little girl, "I wish I had four pairs of hands to help you with." "Oh, thought the old lady, "how happy I am in having a grandchild so ready and willing to comfort my old age. Four pairs of hands! According to that, I am afraid I shall hardly find enough to keep one pair busy."

In the afternoon grandmother went into the woods to cut herbs. "You will spread supper," she said to the little girl; "put on the brown loaf and a mug of milk and the cold mutton, and make a cup of tea." And the nice old lady put on her Shaker bonnet and took her way to the woods, wishing the four pairs of hands could go with her.

Sunset filled the earth with golden light, when grandfather from the brick yard and grandmother from the forest turned their tired feet toward the cottage. Each thought of supper, and what a good sauce hunger was to give it a relish. Grandmother also pleased herself on the way fancying her little girl trotting about the old kitchen, and making its grey walls cheerful with her nimble fingers and glad songs.

The old lady came into the porch, There sat grandfather, tired and alone, leaning on the top of his staff. No supper, no tea-kettle singing, no little grandchild to welcome her. "Where is Elsie? Has she fallen into the well?" asked grandmother, her kind old heart going pit-a-pat. She looked out of the east window. "Elsie, Elsie," called grandmother, "why did you not get supper, as I bid ye, child?"

"Oh, because—," drawled Elsie.

"For my part, I had rather have what one pair of hands will do, than what four pairs can promise," said the old lady.

Ah, selfish people are always generous with just that which they don't happen to have.—Child's Paper.

NOBLE REVENGE.

When I was a small boy, there was a black boy in the neighborhood, by the name of Jim Dick. Myself and a number of my playfellows were one evening collected together at our sports, and began tormenting the poor black by calling him, "Negro," "Blackamoor," and other degrading epithets; the poor fellow appeared excessively grieved at our conduct, and soon left us.

We soon after made an appointment to go a skating in the neighborhood; and on the day of the appointment I had the misfortune to break my skates, and I could not go without borrowing Jim's skates. I went to him and asked him for them. "Oh, yes, John, you may have them and welcome," was his answer.

When I went to return them I found Jim sitting by the fire in the kitchen, reading the Bible. I told him I had returned his skates, and was under great obligations to him for his kindness. He looked at me as he took the skates, and with tears in his eyes, said to me, "John, don't never call me blackamoor again," and immediately left the room. The words pierced my heart, and I burst into tears, and from that time resolved not to abuse a poor black in future.—Southey.

☞ Mind what you run after. Never be content with a bubble that will burst, or a fire-work that will end in smoke. Get that which you can keep—which is worth keeping.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
60 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 447. BOSTON, TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 6.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR, H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN, SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

LINES.

O Jesus, Master, lead me on,
Just as thou hast begun;
Safe has my journey hither been,
O Lord, my Shield, my Sun.

I know my gentle Shepherd's voice
Who leads me day by day,
And when dark clouds o'erspread my path,
He says, "This is the way!"

I'LL FOLLOW JESUS, close I'll cling
To Christ, my dearest Friend;
I'll praise him now, and hope to sing
His praises to the end.

Let foes deride, let friends forsake,
Let hate and envy come,
I'll suffer gladly for the sake
Of Him who calls me home.

I'll stand for Right, and stand for God,
If grace to me is given;
My heart shall hate the things of earth,
And love the things of heaven.

I need not go alone through earth,
Since Jesus is my Guide,
I'll follow him, and rest at last
On Jordan's other side.

MARIA MATHEWS WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION

Held at Stanbridge, C. E., Feb. 10th to Feb. 13th, 1863, between ELDER MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, and REV. DENNIS CHAPIN, Universalist Missionary of the District of Bedford, C. E.

WRITTEN BY C. P. DOW.

(Continued.)

Friday afternoon. Prayer by Elder C. P. Dow.

ELDER GRANT'S SECOND SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—The assertion was made by my opponent, that all of Daniel's prophecy was fulfilled in the first century. But was Daniel's prophecy of the division of the fourth universal empire, or imperial Rome, fulfilled in the first century? Was the prophecy concerning the "little horn," or Papacy, fulfilled in that century? The bare mention of these prophecies is sufficient to refute a theory so absurd. He inquires, "Was not Daniel at Jerusalem once at least?" I don't know that he was.

He has referred to Luke 21: 20–28, without repeating that quotation (for the want of time) which he claims was fulfilled in the first century. We remark, in it we find the declaration, "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles (How long?) UNTIL the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Was this all done in the first century? Let my friend prove that the signs foretold in this prophecy were fulfilled in that century. Let him prove his assertions by presenting the evidence on which they rest, if any can be produced. If he can not, we must conclude that something is wrong,—his application must be at fault.

He has referred to Peter's quotation of Joel's prophecy. See Acts 2: 12–18, where it is said concerning those who witnessed the outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, "And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this? Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine." "But Peter . . . said, . . . These are not drunken, as ye suppose,—but this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel: and it shall come to pass in the last days that I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit, and they shall prophesy." So much of the prophecy applied to that time, and was fulfilled in the outpouring of the Spirit. But the part that we quoted and applied to the present generation was not fulfilled there. Let him show to the contrary if he can. He seems to me to speak lightly of "wonders" I have referred to as fulfilling this prophecy, and says "many have seen sights besides my friend." But the "sights" or phenomena I have brought forward exactly fulfill the prediction, coming to pass at the right time, and fulfilled in the exact manner. These events are particular, not general, not commonplace events.

He refers again to mystical Babylon. Let him show that the city of Rome was cast down in the first century, and has been "found no more at all" since. We think it will require an effort on his part to do this. Or if the Pagan church is meant, as he claimed in his last speech, we ask the same question,—Was it destroyed in the first century? To apply the 18th chapter of Revelation to pagan Rome is a strange application. This is strange talk! He wishes to know how Christ can "come to the seven churches in Asia after they ceased to exist?" We answer, a resurrection would bring them all up,—"them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him,"—"the dead in Christ shall rise," and "be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." We will now renew our argument.

My friend quotes the language, "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."—Matt. 24: 31. Query. Did the Roman armies gather his (Christ's) elect? If the legions of pagan Rome were Christ's angels, where were the demons?

We will call attention to another sign (Rev. 16: 12–15);—"And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the river Euphrates, and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared. And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." If we have come to "the last days," then the time has arrived for this sign to appear. Already we find such men as Alexander, Emperor of Russia; Napoleon, Emperor of France; and other distinguished men and women in Europe, besides the millions in this country, who are consulting the spirits. It should be observed that these spirits of demons are to "go forth unto the kings of the earth," which is evidence that they do not rise up, or begin their work, among the kings, but in another locality. This corresponds with the facts. The spirits began their work in this country, and went "forth" from here to "the kings of the earth." Napoleon and the Emperor are very intimate with Mr. Hume, the noted medium from the United States. He has also visited many of the most distinguished persons in Europe, and been cordially received.

These spirits are to work "miracles." It is a well known fact that for some years the papers have heralded accounts of the "miracles" performed by the spirits. Thus we find this scripture has begun to be fulfilled. But this is not to be accomplished till we arrive near the time of the second coming of Christ, as may be seen by the following verse:—"Behold I come as a thief." When? At the time these spirits are doing their work. Upon whom does he thus come? On those not watching, and who are following these spirits, who teach that Christ will never come personally.

Again, if we are in "the last days," as the foregoing and other signs show, there must be a certain moral condition of the world. Paul says:—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

When we look around the world, we find just such a state of things. Fairs, festivals, levees, picnics, and other scenes of amusement are crowded, while prayer meetings are very thinly attended. The time has come when men are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

If it should be objected that men have ever been "proud," "covetous," and "lovers of pleasures,"—very true; but "in the last days" there will be such an increase of these evils among professors of religion, that the fact will become one of notice. If we have not yet arrived at the commencement of this sign, how will men appear when they are proud and covetous enough to fulfill it? We leave our friend to answer. We think the case so clear, that none need be mistaken in the signs which show that our Savior will soon appear the second time to gather the faithful, and set up his kingdom. We can see no evidence that these signs belong to the first century. The opposite was true of that church. (Time expired.)

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Chapin's Second Speech.

Mr. Moderator, Ladies and Gentlemen:—You perceive that he continues to read the Scriptures that I have read, but gives us no new light upon them. We will turn to the Scriptures. Heb. 1: 1, 2;—"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds." Now can my friend show one instance where the last days apply beyond the end of the world or age?

In Heb. 9: 26 we read, "But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." What does Paul mean here by the end of the world? In the end of the Jewish age? Dan. 7: 13; "I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." This was fulfilled at the time of the first advent. Was not this the time when Christ received his kingdom? When he went forth to preach he said, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He declared that "all power" was given him "in heaven and in earth." Daniel prophesied six hundred years before Christ. When John appeared he cried, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Christ said, "If I, by the finger of God, cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you."

My friend has referred to Rev. 18, to what I said about the Romish church. Why talk about a Romish church; Paul founded the Romish church. He says the church sits upon seven hills!

He wants you to understand that there is a symbol of war in the United States of America. What if there is? Wars have always been. This war proves nothing. He knows that "aion" means age. I can understand the Scriptures, if I cannot tell all history. The signs should all precede the end, and the disciples said, (1.) "Tell us when shall these things be?" (2.) "What shall be the sign of thy coming; (3) and of the end of the world?" Read Matt. 23, and see what he is talking about. Notice, he says judgments should come; "Judgment must begin at the house of God." Matt. 23: 35;—"Upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation." It must come upon that generation. It could not travel down to the nineteenth century. We see that Revelation was not a sealed book. "Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book, for the time is at hand."—Rev. 22: 10. Daniel's prophecy was sealed. "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end." Daniel's prophecy was sealed. Was there any difference? Let him answer. The end of the age was in that generation. The signs should all precede this end.

My friend must admit that revelation was not a sealed book, yet he claims that a part of it cannot be fulfilled until the nineteenth century. My friend thinks that Christ will come to the seven churches of Asia Minor. But they are dead, and we read that "the dead know not anything." There is no use to call upon a man to watch, long after he is dead. The language of Christ is, "Be ye therefore also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." How can all these things be? It strikes me that he is not right. We have read the Scriptures, chapter and verse, but this is no proof,—it means nothing when we read it. No; John's prophecy cannot be fulfilled for eighteen hundred years.

But we read, "I come quickly." Can this mean in the nineteenth century? But all this is no proof of our position! If I could only get history enough, I could prove it.

He tells us about the "spirits," or demons as he calls them, and thinks they prove his doctrine. We think differently, and suppose we have as good a right to our opinion as he has to his. Paul says the last days were then. My friend says nay,—but in the nineteenth century. We have his word for it, that is all. I don't ask you to take my word as proof; take the Scriptures. My friend has occupied his time in quoting Beecher, Lincoln, and others; he has told us many things about the Spiritualists, and also concerning "perilous times." I want to know how this applies to Mystery Babylon? Can not the Catholic church be a Christian church? Do they not believe on Christ? If they do not, then my friend does not believe on him. Why does he persecute his Romish brethren? We have showed that Mystery Babylon has nothing to do with the Roman Catholic church. It refers to the Pagan church, not to the church Paul planted. Why not locate the Roman church here? (Time expired.)

For the World's Crisis.

THE TOWER OF THE FLOCK.

What is its meaning? Is it a place, or a person? I answer, a place, and that only. I will just quote the verse in Micah 4: 8,—"And thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." All will say, I think that the tower of the flock and the stronghold of the daughter of Zion mean the same. Well, then, I will show, that both mean a place. 2 Samuel 5: 7, 8,—"Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion, the same is the city of David." Eighth verse,—"So David dwelt in the fort and called it the city of David. In the first place it is called tower and stronghold; the tower is the stronghold. Samuel says, as I quoted, that David took the strong-hold, the same is the city of David.

Again, 1 Chronicles 11: 5, 7,—"Nevertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David." "And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called it the city of David." Now who can fail to see that tower, stronghold, fort and castle, all mean one and the same place, and all mean nothing but the city of David, which he took from the Jebusites. So small a city as this, in the city of Jerusalem with a wall around it, made it look like a tower, a fort, and castle; hence the city was called by these different names. It is a mistake to call this tower, fort, and castle Christ's, and mean him by the name.

Who is this daughter of Zion? Matt. 21: 5,—"Tell ye the daughter of Zion, behold thy king cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting on an ass, and a colt, the foal of an ass." All know that the daughter of Zion here means the Jews. So the term always means them, when a people is spoken of. If any doubt this, take a large concordance and look at the phrase, Daughter of Zion. Now we can see who has the first dominion; the Daughter of Zion, or the Jews.

The kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem. Who is this? Zech. 9: 9,—"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion, shout, O daughter of Jerusalem. Behold thy king cometh unto thee. He is just and having salvation, lowly, and riding upon an ass." The first dominion and the kingdom comes to the daughter of Zion, and to the daughter of Jerusalem, which means one and the same, as all see by this passage I quote from Zechariah.

Now let us sum the whole up by the plain word of God. The tower of the flock is the city of David; the dominion and kingdom come to the daughter of Jerusalem, the Jews, as I have plainly shown, and this city of David is the city of the great King, Jesus. For he shall reign in Mount Zion in Jerusalem, just where David had his throne. [illegible] as says James in the fifteenth of Acts, verse 16, "I will return and build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof; and I will set it up."

This tabernacle of David, or city of David, or tower of David, or castle, or fort, must be built again, so that Christ may have the same place for his throne as his Father David had. He is to be the King of the Jews, the first dominion comes to them—daughter of Zion. And I, a Gentile, think I am grafted into the old olive tree, and stand by faith waiting to share with them the same inheritance.

Bristol, Ct. H. L. BRADLEY.

THE WICKED IN THE PURPOSE OF GOD.

"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."—JOHN 3: 36.

. . . . God's word is not yea, and nay, but yea and amen. The sentence, "he that believeth not the Son shall not see life," alone, and without qualification, proves this, that the moment an individual rejected the teaching of the Son of God, the sense of seeing life became extinct, yea more, was instantly and literally destroyed in the wrath of God, which would continue to abide upon him. . . . . Do facts justify such an inference from, or interpretation of the sentence? Certainly not! for the Son of God came not to destroy men's lives, but to preach the gospel, that those believing might have (not mortal life, for that they already possessed, but) everlasting life at the resurrection of the just ones from the dead. We are therefore compelled to look for some qualification of the sentence, which is readily found. Being preceded by the copulative conjunction "and," which unites it to the preceding sentence, both in grammar and in sense, (and thus prevents any person making the Lord talk nonsense by quoting it in a manner to prove an unsound theory;) the whole sentence reads, "he that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life." But what life shall he not see? The rules of grammar and sense reply, "everlasting life." There is not any thing in the text to warrant the conclusion, that unbelievers will not see a future mortal life at the resurrection, more than the inference that they should cease to see present mortal life. The text proves nothing in reference to a present or future limited life, but clearly defines the recipients of everlasting life. The wrath of God abideth on rejectors of the gospel in prospect, and when the great day of his wrath is come to execute judgment, he will punish unbelievers with everlasting destruction from his presence and the glory of his power. This is the time of their effective "condemnation," and which the righteous do not "come into," because he will give reward to his servants and prophets, and them that fear his name, small and great.—Rev. 11: 18. * * * * "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead. Prov. 21: 16. What more does this text prove than that "the man that wandereth out of the way of understanding is already "dead in trespasses and in sins," and shall remain there? Or as Paul says, "if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." Heb. 10: 26. Where is the proof that the quotation from Proverbs has any reference to men physically dead? The natural life of man is dependent on the air we breathe, and connection with the first Adam; and as God formed Adam from the dust of the ground, and willed him into an existence terminating in death, may he not with equal propriety will the rejectors of his truth into a second terminable life, to punish them for their own iniquity? Ezekiel and Paul evidently so believed and taught. Proof—Ezek. 18: 20; 2 Cor. 5: 10. When the Lord's purpose is accomplished with the workers of iniquity, they will remain punished with everlasting destruction, the antithesis of everlasting life.

There is a verse in Heb. 11, often quoted to prove that God has no other finale for the wicked, than the appointment "once" of man to die for the disobedience of Adam. But as the Scriptures teach . . . that mankind are to die for their own iniquity, we are warranted in looking for another appointment of "judgment," so the Christ once appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, which does not, however, prevent his second appearing—not for a sacrifice, but to execute judgment without mercy upon the despisers of his goodness. The appointment of "men once to die" was, "by one offence (margin) judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one, (or one righteousness,) the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." Rom. 5: 18. "Moreover the law entered that the offence might abound," in other words, that "every one might give an account of himself to God." Rom. 14: 12. Again, the knowledge of Christ to the obedient is a savor of life unto life, and to the disobedient is a savor of death unto death. 2 Cor. 2: 16. Accordingly it is appointed unto men once to die for one disobedience, "but AFTER THIS the judgment," on their own account.

"Vengeance belongeth unto me, and I will recompense, saith the Lord." A singular vengeance indeed, in which infants and idiots, in very many instances, are equally subjects with the ungodly and the sinner. . . .

When Paul the apostle was arraigned before the Jewish Sanhedrim in Jerusalem he cried out, "For the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." Being afterward transferred to Cesarea to appear before Felix the Governor, who was informed against Paul by a certain orator named Tertullus as being a pestilent fellow, a mover of sedition among the Jews, a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes, who also had gone about to profane the temple, Paul's answer was, "that they cannot prove the things whereof they now accuse me. But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things that are written in the law and the prophets; and have hope toward God which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, BOTH OF THE JUST AND UNJUST." Acts 24: 14, 15. "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled." But why should he tremble? Because God "commandeth now all men every where to repent," and men will no more escape the effect of their own disobedience, than Adam did from his. Therefore says Paul, "knowing the terror of the Lord we persuade men," that by obedience they might "flee from the wrath to come."

Daniel the prophet confirms Paul, chapter 12: 12, "And at that time shall Michael stand up . . . and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Or according to Bro. Hacking's translation of the text, "And multitudes of sleepers in the dust of the ground shall awake, these (the just) to the life of the age, and those (the unjust*) to the contempt of the age." Either translation in simplicity teaches us that as the righteous are awakened to receive the reward of well-doing, the wicked also are awakened to receive the reward of iniquity.

Jesus, the Son of God, confirms the testimony of both Daniel and Paul, so that the wicked are left without excuse. John 5: 28, 29. "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, ('for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised,') and shall come forth, they that have done good to the resurrection of life, and that have done evil to the resurrection of damnation." To me this testimony alone is conclusive in reference to dead ones having "done good," and having "done evil." The text can have no reference whatever to a restoration of the children of Israel, and bringing them out of their political graves to their own land, from the fact that they are not restored for any good they have done, but because they are beloved for the father's sake, and because the Lord will not change his purpose that he hath declared in reference to them. Proof—Rom. 11: 28, 29; Ezek. 36: 21–24. These testimonies ought to be conclusive, and put this matter at rest forever among lovers of the truth. But to consider it further; "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." 2 Peter 2: 9. This overwhelming testimony is beyond all cavil. The Lord hath amply arranged to fulfil his word, "to execute judgment against all, and to convict ALL the IMPIOUS of all their WORKS of impiety which they impiously did, and of all the HARSH words which impious sinners spoke against him." Jude 15. (Diaglott.) It is a fearful thing to strongly advocate a theory that contravenes "YAHVEH'S" purpose. It is literally and actually although it may be unknowingly serpentizing. Then, teachers, beware that you deceive not the wicked, and that you build upon a good foundation, lest you suffer loss when "that great and terrible day of the Lord come," Joel 2: 31, "to punish the world for their evil, and the WICKED for their iniquity." Isa. 13: 11.

—Gospel Banner.

* "The just" and "the unjust" are words that I have supplied as being more comprehensive of the truth than the words in parenthesis, page 9 of the Banner.

NANGLE ON NAPOLEON III.

The following article has been furnished us by Rev. M. Baxter. We had not before met with the name of its author. Mr. B. speaks of him as "the well-known editor of the Achill Missionary Herald, the Rev. Edward Nangle, of the Church of England, Rector of Shreen, Ballisodare, Ireland, who has, ever since 1858, strenuously advocated, in his journal, the view of Faber and Frere, as to Louis Napoleon being the revived, sword-slain, seventh head of the beast, or Roman Empire, and that he will 'make war with the saints, and overcome them' for three and a half years, and, with the aid of the Romish hierarchy, carry on a murderous and exterminating persecution against christians throughout the world, until his destruction at the descent of Christ at the battle of 'the great day of God Almighty.'" The article is very much the same in substance with that given in our April issue for 1863.—ED.

Rev. 13. The beast in this chapter is the same as the fourth, which is described in Daniel's vision (Dan. 7: 4–6), and united in itself the fierceness and cruelty of the other three. The "dragon" who gave his power, and seat, and great authority to the beast, is Satan. St. John saw one of his heads wounded to death, but his deadly wound was healed, and the beast revived to the possession of even greater power and authority than he had before, so that all the world wondered after him; and regarding his resuscitation as the work of God, while, in fact, it was the work of Satan, they virtually worshiped the devil, while they did homage to the beast, saying, "Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him?" We are not informed in this place which of the seven heads of the beast should receive the deadly wound, and be again revived; but we are expressly told elsewhere that this symbolical death and resuscitation should be accomplished in the seventh head. Thus, we read chap. 17: 11, —"The beast that was and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." In the words which we have italicized, there is a manifest reference to verse eight, where the beast first slain and then revived is described as "the beast that was and is not, and yet is." "He was," but receiving the deadly wound, he "is not;" and his deadly wound being healed, he "yet is." This is manifestly the seventh head, or the Roman secular power in its seventh or last form, because it is written, [illegible] The seventh head is, in a certain sense, an eighth, but he is still of the seven, because he is, in fact, the seventh head revived, and that this is the last form of the Roman secular power, is manifest, because it is written, that in his seventh revived head, he goeth into perdition. . . .

The seventh head, when it appeared, should continue for a short time, until it received a deadly wound with the sword (chap. 17: 10; 13: 3); but this deadly wound should be healed, and the seventh revived head should become the wonder of the world, and the greatest military power of the age (chap. 13: 3). The beast under his seventh and last head, should make way with the saints and overcome them. His usurped dominion should greatly extend for a time (chap. 13: 7), but this extension of his power and apparent victory should only be the precursor of his final and irretrievable downfall (chap. 13: 10). . . . This sixth head continued to exist until the year 1806, when Francis of Germany resigned the title. . . . The sixth head of the beast then ceased to exist. The dignity thus vacated was seized by Napoleon First, who added Rome and the States of the Church to his already ample dominions. The dynasty, therefore, which he founded was the seventh head of the beast, but it was to continue only for a short space, and therefore, in eleven years from its commencement, it received a deadly wound in the battle of Waterloo, its founder died a solitary prisoner on the ocean rock of St. Helena, and the Napoleon dynasty seemed to have perished with him. But God had purposed otherwise. In a manner as marvelous as it was unlooked for, the world has seen the healing of its deadly wound and the resuscitation of the Napoleon dynasty, in the person of the reigning Emperor. Thus the present French emperorship is, in a certain sense, the "eighth head of the beast," but at the same time he is "of the seven," being in fact the seventh head revived (chap. 17: 11).

This interpretation appears to us thoroughly satisfactory, while we discover insuperable objections to every other attempt to explain this wondrous prophecy. Nor can we imagine how such a concurrence of circumstances as those we have mentioned, so exactly agreeing with the terms of the prophecy, could be merely fortuitous. Time, however, will test the correctness of this view, which we have adopted after much investigation of the subject. If we are right, the Napoleon dynasty, true to the instinct of cruel hatred of God's people, which characterizes the beast through the whole term of its existence, will, at no distant period, take the lead in a war of opinion. Allied with the ecclesiastical power of Rome, the Papacy, which is described in a subsequent part of this chapter, a temporary victory will be obtained over God's people, until God vindicates his own truth in the final destruction of its enemies in the battle of "the great day," which is described (chap. 19), in which "the beast" and the "false prophet," or the secular and ecclesiastical power of Rome, are finally destroyed.

Some have concluded, and not, perhaps, without reason, that the verses in Rev. 13: 12–18, will yet receive a more perfect accomplishment than any which the world has ever yet witnessed. It is plain that this second beast is here represented as maintaining his power by doing great wonders, whether they be the result of human imposture, or wrought by diabolical agency. This the Romish priesthood has done in all ages, enumerating miracles among the marks of the true church. It is also plain that this second beast co-operates with the first beast, using its influence in support of its tyranny. The past and present history of the Romish church exhibits such an alliance between priestcraft and despotism, between the Romish priesthood and the secular power in its last form.

Rev. 17. There have been divers interpretations of this vision. The beast on which the woman rode, symbolized the secular power of the Roman Empire, which is described (chap. 13) as rising out of the sea or abyss, but it shall go into perdition under its seventh head, to be more fully described in the sequel, as "the beast that was, and is not, and yet is." The assumption of this final form of the beast and his destruction, should be so unlooked for, that it should excite the wonder of all, save God's elect.

Special wisdom from on high is needed to understand this vision. The seven heads of the beast represent the seven hills on which Rome is built; they also represent the seven kings as forms of government to which the Roman Empire shall be subjected.—Prophetic Times.

For the World's Crisis.

GO AND TELL JESUS.

"They went and told Jesus."

Thus did the apostles when they were with the Master here on the earth. They esteemed it a privilege to go and tell Jesus. And I am glad that here in this late hour we can make all our wants known to him. Do affliction's waves roll over thee? Have loved ones been torn from thy embrace? Go and tell Jesus. Do cares press on thee? Art thou perplexed and tried? Go and tell Jesus all about it, and thou shalt have strength given thee. Do foes press hard upon thee, and is thy name cast out as evil for the Son of man's sake? Go and tell Jesus. Do worldly professors turn a cold shoulder to thee, and set thee one side? Go and tell Jesus.

Do they speak evil of thee? Do they take up a reproach against thee? Are they talking behind thy back, and trying to injure thee and thy influence in the world? Go and tell Jesus all about it. Has the tongue of the slanderer been used against thee? Go and tell Jesus. Do not try to clear up thy character, but go and tell Jesus, and leave it in his hands; he will bring it out all right; only [illegible] away thy goods? Go and tell Jesus. Lay the case before him, and leave the matter in his care. He will make it right. Although he knows thy need of him, yet he will be inquired of.

Brethren and sisters, trust in Him, and commit all your ways unto him, for he careth for you. Finally, in every thing by prayer and supplications make all your wants known unto him; and whatsoever you do, whether you eat or drink, do all to the glory of God. And may the grace of our Lord be with you, and you be kept by the power of his word firm unto the end. In much tribulation,

No. Dana, Mass. GEO. A. STREETER.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SEVENTH DAY SABBATH—THE LAW.

THE OLD "DEAD SCHOOLMASTER"! THE LIVING JESUS.

NUMBER FOUR.—(Concluded.)

This brings me once more to speak on the subject of the "first day of the week" as the Sabbath. In the closing part of my last number I referred to the fact that neither of the apostles ever attended another seventh-day meeting after the one mentioned in Acts 18: 4. And I will now add, that this is the last time the word Sabbath is found in our version of the New Testament, except in Col. 2: 16. And no Sabbatarian will admit for one moment that that refers to the seventh-day Sabbath. Hence, it is proved that when Paul said, "From HENCEFORTH I will go unto the Gentiles, (Acts 18: 4–6), he did do it; and after that there is an entire silence in the New Testament in regard to the seventh-day Sabbath as a day of worship. After this, the disciples held their meetings on the "first day of the week," as the following will prove:—

"And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow."—Acts 20: 7. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16: 2. "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day."—Rev. 1: 10.

What was the practice of the early christians in regard to the Sabbath? The following unanswerable testimony is here presented in proof that the first day of the week was observed by the early christians as the Sabbath, or Lord's day:—

"Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, A. D. 101, who died only about half a dozen years after the death of the apostle John, speaks of the Lord's day familiarly and without explanations, as if every body understood it. And he gives this title to the first day of the week exactly after the manner of the apostle himself. 'Let us (christians) no more sabbatize,' he says, (that is, keep the seventh day, as the Jews did), 'but let us keep the LORD'S DAY.' 'Let every one that loves Christ keep holy the LORD'S DAY, the queen of days, the resurrection day, the highest of all days.'"

"Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch, about A. D. 162, says, 'Both custom and reason challenge from us that we should honor the LORD'S DAY, seeing on that day it was that our Lord Jesus completed his resurrection from the dead.'"

"Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons, a disciple of Polycarp, who had been the companion of the apostles, A. D. 167, says, 'On the LORD'S DAY every one of us christians keep the Sabbath, meditating on the law, and rejoicing in the works of God.'"

"Tertullian, who died A. D. 245, says, 'The LORD'S DAY is the holy day of the Christian church. We have nothing to do with the Sabbath (that is, the Jewish Sabbath.) The LORD'S DAY is the christian's solemnity.'"

"Barnabas, who, if not a companion of the apostles, lived in the apostolic age, says, 'We (christians) keep the eighth day'—that is, the first day of the week—'as a joyful holy day, on which day also Jesus arose from the dead.'"

"Athanasius, who died A. D. 326, says, 'The Lord transferred the Sabbath to the LORD'S DAY.'"

"Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, who died A. D. 397, says, 'The LORD'S DAY is sacred, or consecrated, by the resurrection of Christ.'"

"Augustine, who died A. D. 430, says, 'The LORD'S DAY was by the resurrection declared to christians; and from that very time it began to be celebrated as the christian festival.'"

The persecutors of these christians were accustomed to put to them this question:—"'Dominicum servasti?'—'Hast thou kept the LORD'S DAY?' If they had, they were marked as christians. This was the badge of their christianity. And if they said they had, and would not recant, they must be put to death. And when they continued steadfast, what was their answer? 'Christianus sum; intermittere non possum,'—'I am a christian; I cannot omit it. It is a badge of my religion, and the man who assumes it must of course keep the LORD'S DAY, because it is the will of his Lord; and should he abandon it, he would be an apostate from his religion.'"

Eusebius, "one of the most learned and eloquent men of the christian church," and called the "Father of Eccl. History," and who died about A. D. 339, in his "Commentary on the Psalms," in commenting on the ninety-second Psalm, says:—"The Word (Christ) by the new covenant, translated and transferred the feast of the Sabbath to the morning light, and gave us the true rest, viz., the saving LORD'S DAY; the first (day) of the light, in which the Savior of the world, after all his labors among men, obtained the victory over death." "On this day, which is the first of light and of the true Sun, we assemble, after an interval of six days, and celebrate holy and spiritual Sabbaths,—even all nations redeemed by him throughout the world,—and do those things, according to the spiritual law, which were decreed for the priests to do on the Sabbath; for we make spiritual offerings and sacrifices, which are called sacrifices of praise and rejoicing."

"Theodoret, another Eccl. Historian, who died about A. D. 460, speaking of the Ebionites, a party of Judaizing christians, says, 'They keep the Sabbath according to the Jewish law, and sanctify the LORD'S DAY in like manner as we do.' Haeret. Fab. 2. 1. 'This,' says Prof. Stewart, 'gives a good historical view of the state of things in the early [illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 447. BOSTON, TUESDAY, APRIL 26, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 6.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

LINES.

O Jesus, Master, lead me on,
Just as thou hast begun;
Safe has my journey hither been,
O Lord, my Shield, my Sun.

I know my gentle Shepherd's voice
Who leads me day by day,
And when dark clouds o'erspread my path,
He says, "This is the way!"

I'LL FOLLOW JESUS, close I'll cling
To Christ, my dearest Friend;
I'll praise him now, and hope to sing
His praises to the end.

Let foes deride, let friends forsake,
Let hate and envy come,
I'll suffer gladly for the sake
Of Him who calls me home.

I'll stand for Right, and stand for God,
If grace to me is given;
My heart shall hate the things of earth,
And love the things of heaven.

I need not go alone through earth,
Since Jesus is my Guide,
I'll follow him, and rest at last
On Jordan's other side.

MARIA MATHEWS WEAVER.
North Dana, Mass.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION

Held at Stanbridge, C. E., Feb. 10th to Feb. 13th, 1863, between ELDER MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, and REV. DENNIS CHAPIN, Universalist Missionary of the District of Bedford, C. E.

WRITTEN BY C. P. DOW.

(Continued.)

Friday afternoon. Prayer by Elder C. P. Dow.

ELDER GRANT'S SECOND SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—The assertion was made by my opponent, that all of Daniel's prophecy was fulfilled in the first century. But was Daniel's prophecy of the division of the fourth universal empire, or imperial Rome, fulfilled in the first century? Was the prophecy concerning the "little horn," or Papacy, fulfilled in that century? The bare mention of these prophecies is sufficient to refute a theory so absurd. He inquires, "Was not Daniel at Jerusalem once at least?" I don't know that he was.

He has referred to Luke 21 : 20–28, without repeating that quotation (for the want of time) which he claims was fulfilled in the first century. We remark, in it we find the declaration, "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles (How long?) UNTIL the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Was this all done in the first century? Let my friend prove that the signs foretold in this prophecy were fulfilled in that century. Let him prove his assertions by presenting the evidence on which they rest, if any can be produced. If he can not, we must conclude that something is wrong,—his application must be at fault.

He has referred to Peter's quotation of Joel's prophecy. See Acts 2 : 12–18, where it is said concerning those who witnessed the outpouring of the Spirit on the day of Pentecost, "And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this? Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine." "But Peter . . . said, . . . These are not drunken, as ye suppose,—but this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel: and it shall come to pass in the last days that I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit, and they shall prophesy." So much of the prophecy applied to that time, and was fulfilled in the outpouring of the Spirit. But the part that we quoted and applied to the present generation was not fulfilled there. Let him show to the contrary if he can. He seems to me to speak lightly of "wonders" I have referred to as fulfilling this prophecy, and says "many have seen sights besides my friend." But the "sights" or phenomena I have brought forward exactly fulfill the prediction, coming to pass at the right time, and fulfilled in the exact manner. These events are particular, not general, not commonplace events.

He refers again to mystical Babylon. Let him show that the city of Rome was cast down in the first century, and has been "found no more at all" since. We think it will require an effort on his part to do this. Or if the Pagan church is meant, as he claimed in his last speech, we ask the same question,—Was it destroyed in the first century? To apply the 18th chapter of Revelation to pagan Rome is a strange application. This is strange talk! He wishes to know how Christ can "come to the seven churches in Asia after they ceased to exist?" We answer, a resurrection would bring them all up,—"them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him,"—"the dead in Christ shall rise," and "be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." We will now resume our argument.

My friend quotes the language, "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."—Matt. 24 : 31. Query. Did the Roman armies gather his (Christ's) elect? If the legions of pagan Rome were Christ's angels, where were the demons?

We will call attention to another sign (Rev. 16 : 12–15);—"And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the river Euphrates, and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared. And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." If we have come to "the last days," then the time has arrived for this sign to appear. Already we find such men as Alexander, Emperor of Russia; Napoleon, Emperor of France; and other distinguished men and women in Europe, besides the millions in this country, who are consulting the spirits. It should be observed that these spirits of demons are to "go forth unto the kings of the earth," which is evidence that they do not rise up, or begin their work, among the kings, but in another locality. This corresponds with the facts. The spirits began their work in this country, and went "forth" from here to "the kings of the earth." Napoleon and the Emperor are very intimate with Mr. Hume, the noted medium from the United States. He has also visited many of the most distinguished persons in Europe, and been cordially received.

These spirits are to work "miracles." It is a well known fact that for some years the papers have heralded accounts of the "miracles" performed by the spirits. Thus we find this scripture has begun to be fulfilled. But this is not to be accomplished till we arrive near the time of the second coming of Christ, as may be seen by the following verse:—"Behold I come as a thief." When? At the time these spirits are doing their work. Upon whom does he thus come? On those not watching, and who are following these spirits, who teach that Christ will never come personally.

Again, if we are in "the last days," as the foregoing and other signs show, there must be a certain moral condition of the world. Paul says:—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

When we look around the world, we find just such a state of things. Fairs, festivals, levees, picnics, and other scenes of amusement are crowded, while prayer meetings are very thinly attended. The time has come when men are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

If it should be objected that men have ever been "proud," "covetous," and "lovers of pleasures,"—very true; but "in the last days" there will be such an increase of these evils among professors of religion, that the fact will become one of notice. If we have not yet arrived at the commencement of this sign, how will men appear when they are proud and covetous enough to fulfill it? We leave our friend to answer. We think the case so clear, that none need be mistaken in the signs which show that our Savior will soon appear the second time to gather the faithful, and set up his kingdom. We can see no evidence that these signs belong to the first century. The opposite was true of that church. (Time expired.)

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Chapin's Second Speech.

Mr. Moderator, Ladies and Gentlemen:—You perceive that he continues to read the Scriptures that I have read, but gives us no new light upon them. We will turn to the Scriptures. Heb. 1 : 1, 2;—"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds." Now can my friend show one instance where the last days apply beyond the end of the world or age?

In Heb. 9 : 26 we read, "But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." What does Paul mean here by the end of the world? In the end of the Jewish age? Dan. 7 : 13; "I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." This was fulfilled at the time of the first advent. Was not this the time when Christ received his kingdom? When he went forth to preach he said, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He declared that "all power" was given him "in heaven and in earth." Daniel prophesied six hundred years before Christ. When John appeared, he cried, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Christ said, "If I, by the finger of God, cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you."

My friend has referred to Rev. 18, to what I said about the Romish church. Why talk about a Romish church; Paul founded the Romish church. He says the church sits upon seven hills!

He wants you to understand that there is a symbol of war in the United States of America. What if there is? Wars have always been. This war proves nothing. He knows that "aion" means age. I can understand the Scriptures, if I cannot tell all history. The signs should all precede the end. The disciples said, (1.) "Tell us WHEN shall these things be?" (2.) "What shall be the sign of thy coming; (3) and of the end of the world?" Read Matt. 23, and see what he is talking about. Notice, he says judgments should come; "Judgment must begin at the house of God." Matt. 23 : 35;—"Upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation." It must come upon that generation. It could not travel down to the nineteenth century. We see that Revelation was not a sealed book. "Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book, for the time is at hand."—Rev. 22 : 10. Daniel's prophecy was sealed. "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end." Daniel's prophecy was sealed. Was there any difference? Let him answer. The end of the age was in that generation. The signs should all precede this end.

My friend must admit that revelation was not a sealed book, yet he claims that a part of it cannot be fulfilled until the nineteenth century. My friend thinks that Christ will come to the seven churches of Asia Minor. But they are dead, and we read that "the dead know not anything." There is no use to call upon a man to watch, long after he is dead. The language of Christ is, "Be ye therefore also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." How can all these things be? It strikes me that he is not right. We have read the Scriptures, chapter and verse, but this is no proof,—it means nothing when we read it. No; John's prophecy cannot be fulfilled for eighteen hundred years.

But we read, "I come quickly." Can this mean in the nineteenth century? But all this is no proof of our position! If I could only get history enough, I could prove it.

He tells us about the "spirits," or demons as he calls them, and thinks they prove his doctrine. We think differently, and suppose we have as good a right to our opinion as he has to his. Paul says the last days were then. My friend says nay,—but in the nineteenth century. We have his word for it, that is all. I don't ask you to take my word as proof; take the Scriptures. My friend has occupied his time in quoting Beecher, Lincoln, and others; he has told us many things about the Spiritualists, and also concerning "perilous times." I want to know how this applies to Mystery Babylon? Can not the Catholic church be a Christian church? Do they not believe on Christ? If they do not, then my friend does not believe on him. Why does he persecute his Romish brethren? We have showed that Mystery Babylon has nothing to do with the Roman Catholic church. It refers to the Pagan church, not to the church Paul planted. Why not locate the Roman church here? (Time expired.)

For the World's Crisis.

THE TOWER OF THE FLOCK.

What is its meaning? Is it a place, or a person? I answer, a place, and that only. I will just quote the verse in Micah 4 : 8,—"And thou, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem." All will say, I think that the tower of the flock and the stronghold of the daughter of Zion mean the same. Well, then, I will show, that both mean a place. 2 Samuel 5 : 7, 8,—"Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion, the same is the city of David." Eighth verse,—"So David dwelt in the fort and called it the city of David. In the first place it is called tower and stronghold; the tower is the stronghold. Samuel says, as I quoted, that David took the strong-hold, the same is the city of David.

Again, 1 Chronicles 11 : 5, 7,—"Nevertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David." "And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called it the city of David." Now who can fail to see that tower, stronghold, fort and castle, all mean one and the same place, and all mean nothing but the city of David, which he took from the Jebusites. So small a city as this, in the city of Jerusalem with a wall around it, made it look like a tower, a fort, and castle; hence the city was called by these different names. It is a mistake to call this tower, fort, and castle Christ's, and mean him by the name.

Who is this daughter of Zion? Matt. 21 : 5,—"Tell ye the daughter of Zion, behold thy king cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting on an ass, and a colt, the foal of an ass." All know that the daughter of Zion here means the Jews. So the term always means them, when a people is spoken of. If any doubt this, take a large concordance and look at the phrase, Daughter of Zion. Now we can see who has the first dominion; the Daughter of Zion, or the Jews.

The kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem. Who is this? Zech. 9 : 9,—"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion, shout, O daughter of Jerusalem. Behold thy king cometh unto thee. He is just and having salvation, lowly, and riding upon an ass." The first dominion and the kingdom comes to the daughter of Zion, and to the daughter of Jerusalem, which means one and the same, as all see by this passage I quote from Zechariah.

Now let us sum the whole up by the plain word of God. The tower of the flock is the city of David; the dominion and kingdom come to the daughter of Jerusalem, the Jews, as I have plainly shown, and this city of David is the city of the great King, Jesus. For he shall reign in Mount Zion in Jerusalem, just where David had his throne. So of course this must be built up, as says James in the fifteenth of Acts, verse 16,—"I will return and build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof; and I will set it up."

This tabernacle of David, or city of David, or tower of David, or castle, or fort, must be built again, so that Christ may have the same place for his throne as his Father David had. He is to be the King of the Jews, the first dominion comes to them—daughter of Zion. And I, a Gentile, think I am grafted into the old olive tree, and stand by faith waiting to share with them the same inheritance.

Bristol, Ct. H. L. BRADLEY.

THE WICKED IN THE PURPOSE OF GOD.

"He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."—JOHN 3 : 36.

. . . . God's word is not yea, and nay, but yea and amen. The sentence, "he that believeth not the Son shall not see life," alone, and without qualification, proves this, that the moment an individual rejected the teaching of the Son of God, the sense of seeing life became extinct, yea more, was instantly and literally destroyed in the wrath of God, which would continue to abide upon him. . . . . Do facts justify such an inference from, or interpretation of the sentence? Certainly not! for the Son of God came not to destroy men's lives, but to preach the gospel, that those believing might have (not mortal life, for that they already possessed, but) everlasting life at the resurrection of the just ones from the dead. We are therefore compelled to look for some qualification of the sentence, which is readily found. Being preceded by the copulative conjunction "and," which unites it to the preceding sentence, both in grammar and in sense, (and thus prevents any person making the Lord talk nonsense by quoting it in a manner to prove an unsound theory;) the whole sentence reads, "he that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life." But what life shall he not see? The rules of grammar and sense reply, "everlasting life." There is not any thing in the text to warrant the conclusion, that unbelievers will not see a future mortal life at the resurrection, more than the inference that they should cease to see present mortal life. The text proves nothing in reference to a present or future limited life, but clearly defines the recipients of everlasting life. The wrath of God abideth on rejectors of the gospel in prospect, and when the great day of his wrath is come to execute judgment, he will punish unbelievers with everlasting destruction from his presence and the glory of his power. This is the time of their effective "condemnation," and which the righteous do not "come into," because he will give reward to his servants and prophets, and them that fear his name, small and great.—Rev. 11 : 18. * * * * "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead. Prov. 21 : 16. What more does this text prove than that "the man that wandereth out of the way of understanding is already "dead in trespasses and in sins," and shall remain there? Or as Paul says, "if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." Heb. 10 : 26. Where is the proof that the quotation from Proverbs has any reference to men physically dead? The natural life of man is dependent on the air we breathe, and connection with the first Adam; and as God formed Adam from the dust of the ground, and willed him into an existence terminating in death, may he not with equal propriety will the rejectors of his truth into a second terminable life, to punish them for their own iniquity? Ezekiel and Paul evidently so believed and taught. Proof—Ezek. 18 : 20; 2 Cor. 5 : 10. When the Lord's purpose is accomplished with the workers of iniquity, they will remain punished with everlasting destruction, the antithesis of everlasting life.

There is a verse in Heb. 11, often quoted to prove that God has no other finale for the wicked, than the appointment "once" of man to die for the disobedience of Adam. But as the Scriptures teach . . . that mankind are to die for their own iniquity, we are warranted in looking for another appointment of "judgment," so the Christ once appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself, which does not, however, prevent his second appearing—not for a sacrifice, but to execute judgment without mercy upon the despisers of his goodness. The appointment of "men once to die" was, "by one offence (margin) judgment came upon all men to condemnation, even so by the righteousness of one, (or one righteousness,) the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." Rom. 5 : 18. "Moreover the law entered that the offence might abound," in other words, that "every one might give an account of himself to God." Rom. 14 : 12. Again, the knowledge of Christ to the obedient is a savor of life unto life, and to the disobedient is a savor of death unto death. 2 Cor. 2 : 16. Accordingly it is appointed unto men once to die for one disobedience, "but AFTER THIS the judgment," on their own account.

"Vengeance belongeth unto me, and I will recompense, saith the Lord." A singular vengeance indeed, in which infants and idiots, in very many instances, are equally subjects with the ungodly and the sinner. . . .

When Paul the apostle was arraigned before the Jewish Sanhedrim in Jerusalem he cried out, "For the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." Being afterward transferred to Cesarea to appear before Felix the Governor, who was informed against Paul by a certain orator named Tertullus as being a pestilent fellow, a mover of sedition among the Jews, a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes, who also had gone about to profane the temple, Paul's answer was, "that they cannot prove the things whereof they now accuse me. But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things that are written in the law and the prophets; and have hope toward God which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, BOTH OF THE JUST AND UNJUST." Acts 24 : 14, 15. "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled." But why should he tremble? Because God "commandeth now all men every where to repent," and men will no more escape the effect of their own disobedience, than Adam did from his. Therefore says Paul, "knowing the terror of the Lord we persuade men," that by obedience they might "flee from the wrath to come."

Daniel the prophet confirms Paul, chapter 12 : 12, "And at that time shall Michael stand up . . . and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Or according to Bro. Hacking's translation of the text, "And multitudes of sleepers in the dust of the ground shall awake, these (the just) to the life of the age, and those (the unjust*) to the contempt of the age." Either translation in simplicity teaches us that as the righteous are awakened to receive the reward of well-doing, the wicked also are awakened to receive the reward of iniquity.

Jesus, the Son of God, confirms the testimony of both Daniel and Paul, so that the wicked are left without excuse. John 5 : 28, 29. "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, ('for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised,') and shall come forth, they that have done good to the resurrection of life, and that have done evil to the resurrection of damnation." To me this testimony alone is conclusive in reference to dead ones having "done good," and having "done evil." The text can have no reference whatever to a restoration of the children of Israel, and bringing them out of their political graves to their own land, from the fact that they are not restored for any good they have done, but because they are beloved for the father's sake, and because the Lord will not change his purpose that he hath declared in reference to them. Proof—Rom. 11 : 28, 29; Ezek. 36 : 21–24. These testimonies ought to be conclusive, and put this matter at rest forever among lovers of the truth. But to consider it further; "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." 2 Peter 2 : 9. This overwhelming testimony is beyond all cavil. The Lord hath amply arranged to fulfil his word, "to execute judgment against all, and to convict ALL the IMPIOUS of all their WORKS of impiety which they impiously did, and of all the HARSH words which impious sinners spoke against him." Jude 15. (Diaglott.) It is a fearful thing to strongly advocate a theory that contravenes "YAHVEH's" purpose. It is literally and actually although it may be unknowingly serpentizing. Then, teachers, beware that you deceive not the wicked, and that you build upon a good foundation, lest you suffer loss when "that great and terrible day of the Lord come," Joel 2 : 31, "to punish the world for their evil, and the WICKED for their iniquity." Isa. 13 : 11.

—Gospel Banner.

* "The just" and "the unjust" are words that I have supplied as being more comprehensive of the truth than the words in parenthesis, page 9 of the Banner.

NANGLE ON NAPOLEON III.

The following article has been furnished us by Rev. M. Baxter. We had not before met with the name of its author. Mr. B. speaks of him as "the well-known editor of the Achill Missionary Herald, the Rev. Edward Nangle, of the Church of England, Rector of Shreen, Ballisodare, Ireland, who has, ever since 1858, strenuously advocated, in his journal, the view of Faber and Frere, as to Louis Napoleon being the revived, sword-slain, seventh head of the beast, or Roman Empire, and that he will 'make war with the saints, and overcome them' for three and a half years, and, with the aid of the Romish hierarchy, carry on a murderous and exterminating persecution against christians throughout the world, until his destruction at the descent of Christ at the battle of 'the great day of God Almighty.'" The article is very much the same in substance with that given in our April issue for 1863.—ED.

Rev. 13. The beast in this chapter is the same as the fourth, which is described in Daniel's vision (Dan. 7 : 4–6), and united in itself the fierceness and cruelty of the other three. The "dragon" who gave his power, and seat, and great authority to the beast, is Satan. St. John saw one of his heads wounded to death, but his deadly wound was healed, and the beast revived to the possession of even greater power and authority than he had before, so that all the world wondered after him; and regarding his resuscitation as the work of God, while, in fact, it was the work of Satan, they virtually worshiped the devil, while they did homage to the beast, saying, "Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him?" We are not informed in this place which of the seven heads of the beast should receive the deadly wound, and be again revived; but we are expressly told elsewhere that this symbolical death and resuscitation should be accomplished in the seventh head. Thus, we read chap. 17 : 11,—"The beast that was and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." In the words which we have italicized, there is a manifest reference to verse eight, where the beast first slain and then revived is described as "the beast that was and is not, and yet is." "He was," but receiving the deadly wound, he "is not;" and his deadly wound being healed, he "yet is." This is manifestly the seventh head, or the Roman secular power in its seventh or last form, because it is written, "he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." The seventh head is, in a certain sense, an eighth, but he is still of the seven, because he is, in fact, the seventh head revived, and that this is the last form of the Roman secular power, is manifest, because it is written, that in his seventh revived head, he goeth into perdition. . . .

The seventh head, when it appeared, should continue for a short time, until it received a deadly wound with the sword (chap. 17 : 10; 13 : 3); but this deadly wound should be healed, and the seventh revived head should become the wonder of the world, and the greatest military power of the age (chap. 13 : 3). The beast under his seventh and last head, should make way with the saints and overcome them. His usurped dominion should greatly extend for a time (chap. 13 : 7), but this extension of his power and apparent victory should only be the precursor of his final and irretrievable downfall (chap. 13 : 10). . . . This sixth head continued to exist until the year 1806, when Francis of Germany resigned the title. . . . The sixth head of the beast then ceased to exist. The dignity thus vacated was seized by Napoleon First, who added Rome and the States of the Church to his already ample dominions. The dynasty, therefore, which he founded was the seventh head of the beast, but it was to continue only for a short space, and therefore, in eleven years from its commencement, it received a deadly wound in the battle of Waterloo, its founder died a solitary prisoner on the ocean rock of St. Helena, and the Napoleon dynasty seemed to have perished with him. But God had purposed otherwise. In a manner as marvelous as it was unlooked for, the world has seen the healing of its deadly wound and the resuscitation of the Napoleon dynasty, in the person of the reigning Emperor. Thus the present French emperorship is, in a certain sense, the "eighth head of the beast," but at the same time he is "of the seven," being in fact the seventh head revived (chap. 17 : 11).

This interpretation appears to us thoroughly satisfactory, while we discover insuperable objections to every other attempt to explain this wondrous prophecy. Nor can we imagine how such a concurrence of circumstances as those we have mentioned, so exactly agreeing with the terms of the prophecy, could be merely fortuitous. Time, however, will test the correctness of this view, which we have adopted after much investigation of the subject. If we are right, the Napoleon dynasty, true to the instinct of cruel hatred of God's people, which characterizes the beast through the whole term of its existence, will, at no distant period, take the lead in a war of opinion. Allied with the ecclesiastical power of Rome, the Papacy, which is described in a subsequent part of this chapter, a temporary victory will be obtained over God's people, until God vindicates his own truth in the final destruction of its enemies in the battle of "the great day," which is described (chap. 19), in which "the beast" and the "false prophet," or the secular and ecclesiastical power of Rome, are finally destroyed.

Some have concluded, and not, perhaps, without reason, that the verses in Rev. 13 : 12–18, will yet receive a more perfect accomplishment than any which the world has ever yet witnessed. It is plain that this second beast is here represented as maintaining his power by doing great wonders, whether they be the result of human imposture, or wrought by diabolical agency. This the Romish priesthood has done in all ages, enumerating miracles among the marks of the true church. It is also plain that this second beast co-operates with the first beast, using its influence in support of its tyranny. The past and present history of the Romish church exhibits such an alliance between priestcraft and despotism, between the Romish priesthood and the secular power in its last form.

Rev. 17. There have been divers interpretations of this vision. The beast on which the woman rode, symbolized the secular power of the Roman Empire, which is described (chap. 13) as rising out of the sea or abyss, but it shall go into perdition under its seventh head, to be more fully described in the sequel, as "the beast that was, and is not, and yet is." The assumption of this final form of the beast and his destruction, should be so unlooked for, that it should excite the wonder of all, save God's elect.

Special wisdom from on high is needed to understand this vision. The seven heads of the beast represent the seven hills on which Rome is built; they also represent the seven kings as forms of government to which the Roman Empire shall be subjected.—Prophetic Times.

For the World's Crisis.

GO AND TELL JESUS.

"They went and told Jesus."

Thus did the apostles when they were with the Master here on the earth. They esteemed it a privilege to go and tell Jesus. And I am glad that here in this late hour we can make all our wants known to him. Do affliction's waves roll over thee? Have loved ones been torn from thy embrace? Go and tell Jesus. Do cares press on thee? Art thou perplexed and tried? Go and tell Jesus all about it, and thou shalt have strength given thee. Do foes press hard upon thee, and is thy name cast out as evil for the Son of man's sake? Go and tell Jesus. Do worldly professors turn a cold shoulder to thee, and set thee one side? Go and tell Jesus.

Do they speak evil of thee? Do they take up a reproach against thee? Are they talking behind thy back, and trying to injure thee and thy influence in the world? Go and tell Jesus all about it. Has the tongue of the slanderer been used against thee? Go and tell Jesus. Do not try to clear up thy character, but go and tell Jesus, and leave it in his hands; he will bring it out all right; only do thou trust in him, and thou shalt have joy and peace.

Have any sued thee at the law, and taken away thy goods? Go and tell Jesus. Lay the case before him, and leave the matter in his care. He will make it right. Although he knows thy need of him, yet he will be inquired of.

Brethren and sisters, trust in Him, and commit all your ways unto him, for he careth for you. Finally, in every thing by prayer and supplications make all your wants known unto him; and whatsoever you do, whether you eat or drink, do all to the glory of God. And may the grace of our Lord be with you, and you be kept by the power of his word firm unto the end. In much tribulation,

No. Dana, Mass. GEO. A. STREETER.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SEVENTH DAY SABBATH—THE LAW.

THE OLD "DEAD SCHOOLMASTER"! THE LIVING JESUS.

NUMBER FOUR.—(Concluded.)

This brings me once more to speak on the subject of the "first day of the week" as the Sabbath. In the closing part of my last number I referred to the fact that neither of the apostles ever attended another seventh-day meeting after the one mentioned in Acts 18 : 4. And I will now add, that this is the last time the word Sabbath is found in our version of the New Testament, except in Col. 2 : 16. And no Sabbatarian will admit for one moment that that refers to the seventh-day Sabbath. Hence, it is proved that when Paul said, "From HENCEFORTH I will go unto the Gentiles, (Acts 18 : 4–6), he did do it; and after that there is an entire silence in the New Testament in regard to the seventh-day Sabbath as a day of worship. After this, the disciples held their meetings on the "first day of the week," as the following will prove:—

"And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow."—Acts 20 : 7. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16 : 2. "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day."—Rev. 1 : 10.

What was the practice of the early christians in regard to the Sabbath? The following unanswerable testimony is here presented in proof that the first day of the week was observed by the early christians as the Sabbath, or Lord's day:—

"Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, A. D. 101, who died only about half a dozen years after the death of the apostle John, speaks of the Lord's day familiarly and without explanations, as if every body understood it. And he gives this title to the first day of the week exactly after the manner of the apostle himself. 'Let us (christians) no more sabbatize,' he says, (that is, keep the seventh day, as the Jews did), 'but let us keep the LORD'S DAY.' 'Let every one that loves Christ keep holy the LORD'S DAY, the queen of days, the resurrection day, the highest of all days.'"

"Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch, about A. D. 162, says, 'Both custom and reason challenge from us that we should honor the LORD'S DAY, seeing on that day it was that our Lord Jesus completed his resurrection from the dead.'"

"Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons, a disciple of Polycarp, who had been the companion of the apostles, A. D. 167, says, 'On the LORD'S DAY every one of us christians keep the Sabbath, meditating on the law, and rejoicing in the works of God.'"

"Tertullian, who died A. D. 245, says, 'The LORD'S DAY is the holy day of the Christian church. We have nothing to do with the Sabbath (that is, the Jewish Sabbath.) The LORD'S DAY is the christian's solemnity.'"

"Barnabas, who, if not a companion of the apostles, lived in the apostolic age, says, 'We (christians) keep the eighth day'—that is, the first day of the week—'as a joyful holy day, on which day also Jesus arose from the dead.'"

"Athanasius, who died A. D. 326, says, 'The Lord transferred the Sabbath to the LORD'S DAY.'"

"Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, who died A. D. 397, says, 'The LORD'S DAY is sacred, or consecrated, by the resurrection of Christ.'"

"Augustine, who died A. D. 430, says, 'The LORD'S DAY was by the resurrection declared to christians; and from that very time it began to be celebrated as the christian festival.'"

The persecutors of these christians were accustomed to put to them this question:—"'Dominicum servasti?'—'Hast thou kept the LORD'S DAY?' If they had, they were marked as christians. This was the badge of their christianity. And if they said they had, and would not recant, they must be put to death. And when they continued steadfast, what was their answer? 'Christianus sum; intermittere non possum,'—'I am a christian; I cannot omit it. It is a badge of my religion, and the man who assumes it must of course keep the LORD'S DAY, because it is the will of his Lord; and should he abandon it, he would be an apostate from his religion.'"

Eusebius, "one of the most learned and eloquent men of the christian church," and called the "Father of Eccl. History," and who died about A. D. 339, in his "Commentary on the Psalms," in commenting on the ninety-second Psalm, says:—"The Word (Christ) by the new covenant, translated and transferred the feast of the Sabbath to the morning light, and gave us the true rest, viz., the saving LORD'S DAY; the first (day) of the light, in which the Savior of the world, after all his labors among men, obtained the victory over death." "On this day, which is the first of light and of the true Sun, we assemble, after an interval of six days, and celebrate holy and spiritual Sabbaths,—even all nations redeemed by him throughout the world,—and do those things, according to the spiritual law, which were decreed for the priests to do on the Sabbath; for we make spiritual offerings and sacrifices, which are called sacrifices of praise and rejoicing."

"Theodoret, another Eccl. Historian, who died about A. D. 460, speaking of the Ebionites, a party of Judaizing christians, says, 'They keep the Sabbath according to the Jewish law, and sanctify the LORD'S DAY in like manner as we do.' Hæret. Fab. 2. 1. 'This,' says Prof. Stewart, 'gives a good historical view of the state of things in the early ages of the church. The zealots for the law wished the Jewish Sabbath to be observed as well as the LORD'S DAY; for about the latter there appears never to have been any question among any class of christians, so far as I have been able to discover. The early christians, one and all of them, held the first day of the week to be sacred."—Sabbath Manual, No. 2, pp. 3–126.

Says Mosheim:—"All christians were unanimous in setting apart the first day of the week on which the triumphant Savior arose from the dead, for the solemn celebration of public worship. This pious custom, which was derived from the example of the church of Jerusalem, was founded upon the express appointment of the apostles, who consecrated that day to the same sacred purpose, and was observed universally throughout all the christian churches, as appears from the united testimony of the most credible writers."—Mclaine's Mosheim, Cent. 1, part II, chap. 4, Sec. 4.

Enough of such testimony has been presented to prove that TWO SABBATHS were observed in the days of the apostles and early christians. The "party of Judaizing christians" kept the seventh day. Those who followed Christ and the apostles kept the first day. And thus it has been and is now; those who follow the Jews, or the teaching of the old dead "schoolmaster," will of course contend for the seventh-day Sabbath. But those who have followed, and still do follow, the teachings of the LIVING JESUS and the apostles, will observe the first day Sabbath.

TWO OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

The first is founded on Matt. 24: 20;—"But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the Sabbath day." The Sabbatarian contends that by this passage the Savior recognized the sacredness of the seventh-day Sabbath, up to this time, surely But we shall see. Two distinct things Jesus told the disciples to pray for. This is plain. All, I presume, understand that Christ had told the disciples that Jerusalem was to be destroyed by the Roman army; and when they—the disciples—should "see Jerusalem compassed with armies," then they must "flee to the mountains." But, in doing so, they were liable to meet with two obstacles, and only two. Therefore they must pray. Pray for what? Pray that your "flight be not in the winter, neither on the SABBATH DAY." If their flight should happen in the winter, it would be difficult for the disciples, with their families, to live in the mountains. If their flight should happen on the Sabbath day, they would find it extremely difficult to "flee" out of Jerusalem, as the gates would be closed according to Jewish law and custom. (See Ex. 16: 23; Neh. 13: 13–22.) This being the case, Jesus knew well that those who were so tenacious of their traditions of the Sabbath as to lead them to condemn him as a Sabbath breaker for restoring the withered hand, so that it was made "whole like as the other," and for making a woman straight whom Satan had bound and bent over, or bowed together, so that she could in no wise lift up herself for eighteen years, and all this just because Jesus had done these acts of mercy on the Sabbath. I say, Jesus knew well that such hypocrites would be a great hindrance to the disciples if their flight should take place on the Sabbath. Now consider, Christ had told the disciples to leave Jerusalem when they should see it compassed with enemies. Was Christ Lord also of the Sabbath? So he had once said. Why, then, should he direct his disciples to pray that their flight might not occur on the Sabbath day? The just inference is this: Christ really being "Lord of the Sabbath," the disciples would have a perfect right to leave Jerusalem at any time when Christ told them to. And, therefore, if the Jews would not let them leave, when Christ had ordered it, it proves that those old hypocrites had so monopolized all the privileges of that day by their traditions, that even the disciples could not obey the Lord Jesus without praying to God to prevent them from falling into the hands of such wicked men, who were so outrageously bigoted in regard to the Sabbath, that they would neither let Christ or his followers do that which was right on that day. Hence, the Sabbatarian finds nothing here to prove a sacred regard for the seventh-day Sabbath, but a wicked perversion of all its rights, by a class of men who were enemies to God, and violent opposers of his people.

The second objection is, "THE THIRD ANGEL'S MESSAGE." What is this third angel's message? Why, a late theory has been started, which claims that Rev. 14: 12, has special reference to a particular class of persons who believe in keeping "the commandments of God," as mentioned in this verse; and that these commandments have special reference to the "seventh-day Sabbath." The passage reads:—"Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus." It will be seen by the passage itself that it refers to the "commandments of God"—all of them—and not to any particular one. How, then, shall we determine what commandments are referred to? Please notice the last clause in the verse, "and the faith of Jesus." This proves that the commandments referred to are those of the New Testament; for there was no "faith of Jesus" before Christ came the first time. Be not alarmed, kind reader, this will be proved by the word of truth, an unerring guide. Hear:—"But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterward be revealed. Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster."—Gal. 3: 23–25.

No one need be surprised to see men, and women too, run into error when they will keep themselves "shut up unto the faith," but never come to it. Why will men be so blinded as to have faith in the visions of women instead of the visions of John? Why follow the teachings of the old dead "schoolmaster" instead of following the LIVING JESUS? They thus give countenance to the system for taking away sins on the head of a live goat! I would exhort all such to—"BEHOLD THE LAMB OF GOD, WHICH TAKETH AWAY THE SIN OF THE WORLD." John 1: 29.

THE CONTRAST. The objector may ask, why there is such a contrast between my present views and those advocated by me when I observed the seventh day? as strong grounds are taken in both instances; and both arguments are drawn from the Bible. The answer is obvious. In my former argument, in favor of the seventh day, I had for my basis the Old Testament. And as my premises were false, my conclusions were wrong! But in my present position my basis is the New Testament; consequently, as my premises are now true, my conclusions are therefore right.

In conclusion, I now propose to all Sabbatarians, as I have spoken once more upon the subject of the Sabbath, that if they think my present position is unscriptural, and can be shown to be such, I will just say, without [illegible] or [illegible], that if they desire, and will present a man well qualified to defend their [illegible] the question, I will, by the Lord's permission, meet him at any proper time and place, and we will have this matter tested.

East Weare, N. H. T. M. PREBLE.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, April 26, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

ANOTHER DISCUSSION.

We have arranged to have a discussion in Griswoldville, Me., with a Methodist minister by the name of Jones. It is to commence Tuesday evening, May 10th, and continue four evenings.

QUESTION. "Do the Scriptures teach that the wicked will suffer eternal misery?"

THE TRACT FUND.

We are much rejoiced at the prosperity of the tract fund. We think our Brn. and Srs. who put money into the tract fund are putting it where it will do the greatest amount of good. There is a great call for tracts. The publications relating to the great truths which have made us known to the world are sought for with a continual increasing interest. People are satisfied that some great event is really at hand; and they are anxious to read and hear about it. Let us keep the fountain of truth open, and continually flowing.

Send in the gifts to the Lord, and let the two thousand dollars be made up at once. As the perils increase, let our efforts keep pace with those made by the adversary. Let every one take hold of the good work with renewed energy.

ITS EFFECTS.

We are daily cheered with words of encouragement from our correspondents, which serve to lighten the burdens of labor, while on pilgrimage to the holy land. It has been our prayer and aim that the Crisis should produce an effect upon our readers similar to a prayer meeting. We do not mean one where persons of different opinions meet to dispute their different theories, and thus destroy all devotional feelings, and wound the fine sensibilities of the Lord's amiable children; but a paper that shall make each true child of God feel as he does when he has been to one of those meetings that tends to increase our love for God and our neighbor, and cause us to live better for having met. When we know this object is accomplished, we are comforted.

Bro. H. Crippen, Aurora, Ill., when speaking of the effect of reading "our paper," remarks, "It is a feast to my soul to hear from the Brn. and Srs. from abroad. It is laden with good reading. I feel as though I had attended a prayer meeting."

BRO. E. O. ALLEN, Springfield, Mass., writes:—

"Many of the brethren have already expressed my mind. I believe it is the most enlivening and vigorous, soul-stirring, religious paper the world has got in it."

OUR DISCUSSION WITH MOSES HULL.

In our last week's paper we gave a partial report of our discussion at Lynn, Mass., with Eld. Hull, who has recently departed from the faith he once advocated, and has embraced the doctrines of Spiritualists. He is very zealous in his new calling. We are sorry to see him making such earnest efforts to establish the doctrines of demons, and overthrow the truth of the Bible. During the debate, he made a bold attack upon the doctrine of the literal resurrection of the dead, as taught in the Scriptures; but the result was like that of a boy who should attempt to batter down the rock Gibralter with a pop-gun. The truth never looked brighter, firmer, and more precious to us, than during his effort to break the Scriptures.

Another point in his positive argument was based on the fact that men desire immortality, and therefore must exist eternally. To this we replied, if his position was correct, that all will have what they desire; then it would follow that men who desire wealth and honor in this world, will be sure to have it, which no one would attempt to prove. On the contrary, instead of the desire being a proof of present immortality, it is a positive evidence that we have not got it. Desire consists in an ungratified feeling. If a man desires immortality, wealth, or honor, when they are obtained, the desire ceases, because the object is gained which he longed for. According to Eld. Hull's theory, the spirit lives in the body just as a man lives in a house; hence the spirit is the one that has the desires, and not the body. Therefore it follows, according to all sound reasoning, and common sense, we think, that the spirit, if it is the "real man," as claimed by our opponent, is mortal, because it desires to be immortal.

Another prominent argument of Eld. Hull, to prove we are immortal, was based on the statement that we are the "offspring of God"; he is immortal, therefore we are immortal. This point was met as follows:—

1. "We are the offspring of God; he is omniscient, therefore we are omniscient."

2. "We are the offspring of God; he is omnipotent, therefore we are omnipotent"; both of which conclusions are untrue; consequently, as his argument proves too much, it proves nothing at all, excepting its own absurdity.

In order to get over this insurmountable difficulty, he assumed that man had all the attributes of the Deity in a small degree, but that he would continue to progress. This position we also found to be absurd. For there can be no degrees in omnipotence, omniscience, or immortality. If one has all power, no one can have any more; so if one is immortal, no one can be any more so; if one knows all things, no one can have any greater knowledge. We do not know how Eld. Hull will get out of these difficulties. We left them for his consideration.

He next endeavored to prove the truthfulness of his position from the phenomena of Spiritualism. We admitted the phenomena, but denied that in a single case was a communication ever received from a disembodied human spirit; and produced statements from the Spirits and Spiritualists, which would account for all the phenomena of Spiritualism, when the Bible account of demons is admitted. We found, according to the Scriptures, that man was made "lower than the angels"; hence they existed before the creation of man, and cannot be spirits of dead men. We also found that the angels were on probation, that some sinned, and were then called "evil angels," "unclean spirits," "devils," or more properly demons, "the angels that sinned," etc. These "evil angels" have the "devil," or prince of demons, as their chief, who is also known by various titles. The good angels, who kept "their first estate," are messengers sent by the Lord to his children in the world, and resemble men in their personal form, and have sometimes been called men, and mistaken for them. They have as real, personal, material organisms, as have men; but they are "not flesh and bones" like ourselves. The Scriptures do not inform us of what their bodies are composed; we only know they are not "flesh and bones." There are a multitude of materials of which they might be formed, and not be "flesh and bones." We know they are material beings, because they ate material bread made by the wife of Lot, and he also washed their material feet with material water. They have power to render themselves invisible to human eyes, when near us, as in the case when one frustrated the journey of Baalam. The good angels never pretend that they are the spirits of men, and once lived on this earth. The "evil angels," or demons, make this claim, in order to convince us that they are human spirits, and thereby lead us to believe the great lie of their noted leader, when he contradicted the Lord, and declared that man should not die, and consequently is immortal. See Gen. 3: 4.

These demons, as may be shown from facts of their own admission, mesmerize and control their mediums just as a mesmerizer does his subject; and when in that state, write, sing, and talk, through them, and claim to be the spirit of some friend or enemy of ours, of whom they form an image in their minds, and that image becomes a real object before the medium's mind, which she sees and describes as minutely as though that friend were actually present.

Eld. H. endeavored to prove that the identity of man cannot be preserved unless the mind continues to exist; or in other words, that man's identity does not consist in his physical organism, but in his mental power.

To this argument we replied, that man varies as much mentally as he does physically. We see the boy amusing himself with wooden horses, mud dams, little water wheels, toys, and small picture books. In a few years, we are charmed by the eloquence of the orator, and learn it is the one whom we used to see riding the wooden horse twenty-five years ago. How could we identify him mentally better than we could physically? He has changed as much in the one respect, as the other. We pass on fifty years more, and we visit an old man, who does not know enough to feed himself, and is as helpless as an infant. But this is the same one who, forty years ago, charmed thousands by his eloquence. How shall I identify him in these various conditions? There is certainly as great a change in his mental as his physical powers, and even greater.

To-day we meet a friend, with whom we have a delightful visit; to-morrow we visit the insane retreat, and there see the same one a raving maniac. How do we identify him? Certainly not by mental manifestations; for there is no resemblance whatever. We know him by his physical organism.

As our opponent claimed that man is a part of God, and that part is the mind, we inquired if a part of God became deranged? and if a part of God prompted men to do all their wicked deeds? [More anon.

MEANING OF DEATH.

An inquirer writes as follows:—

ELD. MILES GRANT:—Dear Sir,—Does the word, which in our version of the Bible is rendered 'death' in the original both of Heb. and Greek, mean simply 'separation?' and if so, is there any thing to show that it is the separation of man from God; or whether it may not be the separation of the different parts of the organic frame which would embrace extinction of life or being?

Also, will you please show whether there is, or is not, the same reason for understanding Rev. 20: 14, and Mal. 4: 1, 3, in a symbolical sense, representing an event taking place prior to the judgment, and having no reference to the future state, as Rev. 14: 11?"

ANS. The word thanatos, in Greek, rendered death, is defined, "death, i. e., the extinction of life, whether naturally, Luke 2: 26, Luke 9: 1; or violently, Matt. 10: 21; 15: 4."—Greenfield.

We find no idea of "separation" expressed in the definition of the word, in the Greek or Hebrew.

In answer to the second inquiry, we would say, we understand that Mal. 4: 1, 3, and Rev. 20: 14, are to be fulfilled at the same time, after the saints are gathered to meet the Lord, which is beyond the time of harvest, when the tares are to be burned up. The passage in Rev. 14: 11, we understand to be symbolical, and referring to a period before the harvest begins; for the saints will need "patience" while these events symbolized are transpiring; but it does not seem rational that christians should have special need of "patience" after their translation, when they are entirely delivered from all the wicked.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

The above named paper is valuable for all who have any thing to do with the cultivation of the ground. It is published and edited by Orange Judd, 41 Park-Row, New York city. Price for one copy one year, $1.00, 6 copies, $5.00, ten or more copies one year, 80 cents each. It is issued monthly, and each number contains 32 quarto pp., illustrated by many engravings. If you want a good Agricultural paper, send and get it. One hundred thousand copies are issued this month. It deserves a wide circulation.

SPIRIT TEACHINGS.

The following are questions answered by a spirit, as reported in the Banner of Light, April 23d, 1864:—

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Spirit.—If the audience have questions to propound, they are requested to do so without delay.

Question.—A correspondent sends us the following: Has God given man any laws outside of nature whereby he may govern his faith or practice?

Answer.—We know of no laws outside of nature, either pertaining to the mental or to the material. To us nature embraces all life, whether in the past, present or future. . . .

Q.—Philosophically speaking, there is then no difference?

A.—No, there is no difference. You have been told that the principle of immortality—call it the soul, spirit, or whatsoever you may choose to—is always the same; that the Bushman, the Hottentot, and the Anglo-Saxon in soul-principle are the same. This is true; as all intelligence has sprung from and revolves around the great central sun of Deity, so all must be alike; coming from Deity there can be no difference."

From the foregoing, we learn that all men are alike, because they are all a part of Deity; that there is no law to govern man but the law of nature, hence the Bible loses all its authority before such teachers. As strange as these doctrines may seem to some of our readers, we wish to say that they are spreading very rapidly, and being embraced by many of the most intelligent men and women in the world. We believe the worst is yet to come. Let us inquire "for the old paths," and walk therein.

ANCIENT AND MODERN.

The following contrast between the ancient and modern practice is quite striking. It is drawn by Elias Smith in his "Age of Enquiry."

"And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing."—Acts 8: 36–39.

"And as they went on their old way, they came to a certain . . . meeting house, and the parent said to the Parson, see, here is water in the basin, what doth hinder me to have my children christened? And he said, if thou art propounded, and ownest the covenant, thou mayest. And the parent answered, (by a bow) I do. And he commanded the child to be brought, and they both came to the deacon's seat, both the Parson and the parent, with the child in his arms, and when he had sprinkled the child, they both went away from the basin, and the spirit of Anti-christ caught away the Parson up into the sacred desk, and the parent went on his way with the child in his arms crying."

For the World's Crisis.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES."

This book still makes its way along, and makes its mark where it goes. It is full of solid, stubborn facts, of which the religious world have no idea. Yesterday I received the following letter from a Presbyterian Doctor of Divinity, the author of "Fables of Infidelity," to whom I recently sent a copy of "Signs:—

"CHICAGO, MARCH 14TH, 1864.

MR. H. L. HASTINGS:—Dear Sir—I have just concluded the perusal of your book. It is awful. I know no more fitting word. Can it be true? Alas! much of it certainly is, and the rest may be. Again, I say it is awful. Have we been dreaming, and are we now to be wakened by the thunders of God's judgments? I wish the concluding chapter, 'Looking Forward,' could be printed as a tract, and sent by mail to every minister in the United States and Great Britain. After reading it, I read three articles in the Evangelical Repository for March, in which similar views are ably advocated. The Editor, Rev. Joseph Cooper, D. D., seems to hold nearly your views. I have long been convinced that this earth regenerated is the promised abode of glorified saints. The Lord grant that the day of the restitution of all things may be as near as you intimate, and that we may be found ready and watching when our Lord comes. But in the matter of times and seasons, I feel no assurance. . . .

Thanks for the quickening I have received from the three volumes, "The Controversy," "Signs," and "Voice of the Church." Keep speaking the truth in love, and Christ's sheep will hear his voice. May the Lord be with your spirit. Affectionately yours,

R. PATTERSON."

"Looking Forward" was long ago published in tract form. I will send copies to any minister free, at the request of any one. Or will send ten copies to as many ministers, post paid, on receipt of $1.00.

For price of "Signs of the Times," see my book list and "new programme." If the friends will take hold of the matter, they can have "Signs" at fifty cents in cloth, twenty-five cents in paper, and free for the poor or for preachers. Let us hear from you at once. Direct orders, pledges, and monies to H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

HOW PAUL LOOKED.—St. Chrysostom terms him a little above three cubits, or four and a half feet high. But Neciforus has given us the most circumstantial account of Paul's person. St. Paul was of small statue, stooping, and rather inclined to crookedness, pale faced, of an elderly look, and bald on the head. Eyes lively, keen and cheerful, shaded in part by his eyebrows, which hung a little over. His nose rather long and not ungracefully bent. His beard pretty thick, with hair of a sufficient length, and like his locks interspersed with gray.—Ex.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to April 19th, $940.92

A. Webster pd	5.00
M. A. Lovering pd	1.00
Donald Taylor pd	1.00
A. M. Cole pd	.50
Mrs. L. Bills pd	.25
B. Jennings pd	.50
H. L. Wetherell pd	.25
W. H. Berryman pd	.25
Nancy Peak pd	.25
Edwin Phelps pd	2.00
E. Melcher pd	.20
J. M. Sanborn pd	.25
W. W. Smith pd	.25
A Sister pd	.25
Mrs. J. C. Foote pd	.50
C. S. R. pd	1.22
A Brother pd	.50
Miss Sophronia More pd	.50
A subscriber pd	2.25
A lover of the truth pd	.25
Mrs. I. W. Montague pd	3.00
S. P. C. and A. B. pd	.50
R. S. pd	.25
J. Kimball pd	1.00
A friend pd	.10
L. Longfellow pd	.75
O. L. Fletcher pd	1.00
H. Phillips pd	1.00
Wm. Bassford pd	.50
A friend pd	.50
A. B. Howard pd	1.00
L. J. Blossom pd	1.00
Mrs. A. P. Thompson pd	.25
Jason Kendall pd	100.00
Sarah M. Davis pd	.25
Mrs. S. Bowers pd	.25
E. B. Stearns pd	.25
R. Stearns pd	.25
D. Wheaton pd	.15
Abbie Barrett pd	.25
J. C. Goodrich pd	.25
S. Case pd	.50
C. Case pd	.50
E. H. Case pd	.50
Mrs. A. Case pd	.50
A Sister pd	.25
I. K. Lombard pd	1.00
E. B. Coon pd	1.00
C. F. Roberts pd	.25
W. H Nottage pd	.50
C. E. Burk pd	.50
W. J. Wilcox pd	.50
B. Noble pd	.50
W. G. Ruggles	2.00

For the World's Crisis.

OUR DUTY.

"Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel."—1 COR. 9: 14.

Here is the field all white for the harvest, and the laborers are few. Souls are perishing in every direction for want of knowledge. The day of the Lord is at hand, and the people, many of them, are not warned. And a great number who have caught the sound in the distance of the midnight cry, are calling loudly for more light; are anxious to learn the truth, and are praying for watchmen to come who can answer truthfully the question, "What of the night?"

Brethren and sisters, you mourn over this state of things, no doubt, but what can you do? you wish the whole world could hear the truth, but you cannot preach. Perhaps not; neither can I. But is there nothing we can do? We pray that the Lord will send forth more laborers into the vineyard. Very good so far, but is that all our duty? Certainly not. We should sustain what few there are in the field. There are teachers enough in these last days, if they were of the right kind. But there are more than ten out of twelve who teach (like the spies who went to examine the land of Canaan) that we cannot possess the land which God has promised to give us; and the people are fast turning back into Egypt. There are only a few Calebs and Joshuas who will stand up boldly for God's word,—who cling to his promises, and declare that we are well able to possess the goodly land.

Thank God, there are a few whom he hath called and placed as watchmen upon the walls; who are able and willing to blow the trumpet in Zion, and sound the alarm through the land, and who can give a portion of meat in due season to every hungry soul. But, alas! their hands are tied, their feet are fettered by the neglect of the church. They are obliged to labor with their hands for the support of their families, when they should be laboring for the salvation of souls. Some, who are filled with the Holy Ghost and faith, earnest laborers, whose hearts are burning with love for God and his truth, and who would be glad to spend all their time in spreading the gospel of his kingdom, are compelled to labor hard the most of the time on little farms (and those not their own,) to provide for their loved ones. Others are obliged to dabble in medicine. Men pay more for medicine to lengthen out this mortal life, than they do to be taught the way to a life that never ends.

So poor preachers, in order to reach their pockets, have to descend from their high calling, and prepare cordials and pain-curers to patch up broken constitutions, when they would much rather carry the bread of life and water of salvation to starving, perishing sinners, and leave the business of making medicine to others who cannot preach. But no. Preaching the gospel does not provide for their households, and they must do something that will, or deny the faith and be worse than infidels. Some real Gideons, called by God to lead Israel on to victory, are wearing out their strength and vigor, and exhausting their patience in the schoolroom. They do good there, no doubt; but there are others who could teach the sciences who cannot teach the way of life. Others, called to preach, are practicing the heeling and soleing art for the feet of their fellow men, while poor sinners are unhealed of the awful malady of sin. One, who is a Sampson in the hosts of Israel, is confined in a mill from Monday till Saturday.

Now, is this right? I ask in all candor, is it right? When there are so few who will go out to warn a sleeping world of a judgment to come, and to proclaim to the bride the joyful news of the coming of the Bridegroom—is it right for those few to be left to battle with poverty and want, while down deep in their hearts they feel that wo is theirs if they preach not the gospel?

O! ye men of wealth, will you hug your treasures, and let the people perish for lack of knowledge? Will you hoard up silver and gold to become cankered, and garments to become moth-eaten, while the vineyard is suffering for the want of laborers? Will you pile up greenbacks, and worry and fret day and night for fear the government will turn bankrupt, and you shall lose them? I tell you the fire of the last day will burn them up if you do not lose them before.

O! how you will wish in that day you had spent them in doing good. There is no bank that is safe but Zion's bank. The only safe place to lay up treasure is in heaven. Make to yourselves friends with the mammon of unrighteousness; use greenbacks to help scatter the glorious light of the gospel of the kingdom; spend them in doing good, and in that way lay up a treasure in heaven. [illegible] a mansion in the city which hath foundations, whose [illegible] is God; that when the governments, and banks, and houses of earth shall fail, you may be received into everlasting habitations. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Do not think I am selfish in this appeal. I am not a preacher, and never expect to be; but I respect and appreciate the noble band of faithful laborers who have devoted time and talent, wealth, health and reputation to the cause of Christ—who have labored so long and so earnestly, by preaching and writing, to tear away the cobwebs of tradition, and the vail of superstition from God's truth. And I believe that "they that preach the gospel should live of the gospel." "Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things, live of the things of the temple?"

There are some mighty champions for the cause of truth, who have devoted all the energies of their great minds to searching into the deep things of God. They have written books and tracts to scatter like autumn leaves over the world, that those who sit in darkness may see the light. Shall they bear the burden alone? If they do, I fear to them alone will come the joyful greeting,—"Well done, good and faithful servants, enter into the joy of your Lord." If the preachers make all the sacrifice, they will receive all the reward.

Come, let us rouse ourselves and look around us. Time is short! the judgment is hastening! What we do must be done quickly. Soon we shall be called to give an account of our stewardship. O may we be able to render up our account with joy and not with grief! M. O. FRENCH.

For the World's Crisis.

WILBRAHAM.

"Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?"—1 Chron. 29: 5.

To all those who are indulging the happy thought—"I will go to Wilbraham this year, if the Lord will." That beautiful mountain! That consecrated spot! "Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord."—Ps. 102: 4. Whether the Lord has set his name there I know not, but one thing I know, he seems to overshadow it as a "MERCY-SEAT." Glory be to his name! Amen. He has made it a mercy-seat to my soul, and he has made it a mercy-seat to my children. How can I but speak his praise? David says, "I have not hid thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy faithfulness and thy salvation: I have not concealed thy loving-kindness and thy truth from the great congregation."—Ps. 40: 10. Neither would I hide thy righteousness, nor conceal thy loving kindness (lest some misapprehend me), but declare thy faithfulness and thy salvation.

There is one that will understand me, if none other. 'Tis that mother who has wept between the porch and the altar over children seduced by the perils of these last days; who has felt, at times, that even her covenant-keeping God was not able to deliver them from the fowler's snare into which they were taken with both feet,—that mother who has drunk the wormwood and the gall when she bade her sons farewell to go to the field of blood, and then received them again, by faith, as she wrestled, Jacob-like, at the midnight hour when all others slept,—that mother who, like Abraham, has hoped against hope, year after year, then suddenly, as it were, in two short years had these all given to her in the Lord. Can she hold her peace? Is there one to chide her? The very stones will cry out, she feels, if she declare not such loving-kindness, such salvation. Thus do I feel. I am constrained to cry out, "Come, all ye that fear God, and I will tell you what he hath done for my soul."

Wilbraham was the spot where two of three dear sons submitted to God. Have I not cause to love it? Parents, take your children, if you can. Take them with prayer and with fasting. I had fasted eighteen hours (for the Lord's sake I tell this; he will not let me keep it back), when I first set my foot upon that sacred encampment, and the first thing I did was to fall upon my knees and cry to God for his blessing upon me while there; and this was the time he gave me my second son. This was in '62. In '63 we went back carrying our "lamb" with us—our third son! and there he put on Christ, with eight others near his own age. Glory to God!

It was hard to break the ice to take the first of these sons with us; but my God gave me the assurance, if we would do it, the money thus spent would fill our pillows with down the rest of our days with that son; and it has thus far, and I can trust for all that's to come. Amen.

After what I have told you, I may well encourage you all to go to Wilbraham. But let me adjure you to go praying. Begin now to pray about it, and continue to pray about it until the time comes; and as you begin to prepare, pray the more fervently; pray all the way there, and do not cease to pray after you arrive there. Find you a secret place when there, visit it, and you will be blest, and be made a blessing. Be not deceived with the vain thought, I am at Wilbraham, and shall be blest as a matter of course. As well imagine you will float up stream. Wilbraham is a fearful place to backslide! It is like going into a large city. The mind is all the time diverted with something new. Home habits are broken up. The flesh becomes weary of good things, and cries out, "O that I had the wings of a dove, then would I fly away and be at rest." The only antidote for all this is work, work, WORK. From the beginning of the meeting to the end of the meeting, work all the time for poor sinners, and you will not lose your journey. God will surely give you souls for your hire; and in watering you will be watered. Hold up Christ wherever you go. Know nothing but Christ and him crucified throughout the whole meeting. Let Christ be raised so high, even like the brazen serpent, that all in that vast encampment may look and live.

Beloved brethren, one and all, let me exhort you to exalt Christ at that meeting as he never was exalted there before. Preach Christ, pray Christ, live Christ; and there will be a shout in that camp for Christ that never was heard there before. Wilbraham is the place, emphatically, to labor for souls. There we find them, and there the Lord is pleased to be gracious unto them. Shall we let the golden hour slip in some trifling affair of our own, or petty difference? This is like children contending over marbles while their brothers are drowning. To the winds with our trifles, and we to the rescue!

Let us have a pentecostal season at Wilbraham in '64. Let us all begin now to pray for it. Not only those, who expect to go, but those who do not; and let us keep praying for it until we can believe for it, then it is ours. Your unworthy Sister,

E. S. WILLARD.

Hammonton, Atlantic Co., N. J., Apr. 8th.

P. S.—Our eldest son is speaking for himself over the signature "N. L.," Rochester, N. Y.

Again let me say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies; who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's."—Ps. 103: 2–5. "Pray for us." E. S. W.

For the World's Crisis.

HELP THE NEEDY.

"I was eyes to the blind and feet was I to the lame"—JOB 29: 15.

This text may be lived out by those who have the same interest at heart and have the ability. We present the case of our unfortunate Brother Randal Curtise, formerly of Worcester, Mass., now in Maine. He lost his leg last June, by having the cars run over it, in the town of Worcester. He had it amputated above the knee. His doctor's bill and other expenses were heavy. The death of his mother and sister occurred at his home a little before his misfortune, leaving him poor. His leg is not quite healed, but he hopes that he will be able soon to go to work, but cannot tell. He can get an artificial leg. We think our brethren will feel it duty to release Bro. Curtise from this heavy burden. We present this to you, that you may consider his case, and take hold of this benevolent work, and furnish him with the money. The leg will cost one hundred dollars. Who will help our afflicted brother, who, by some assistance, will be able to support himself and family?

Bro. Curtise needs no recommendation where he is known. A contribution should be taken up immediately. We start this on our own responsibility, believing it will be for the glory of God, and thankfully received. Money can be sent to Elder M. Grant, Boston, Bro. W. F. Higgins, No. 6 Home Street, Worcester. All money received will be credited in the Crisis. N. F. NASON, Newport.

ISRAEL DAMMAN, Corinna, Me.

For the World's Crisis.

ORTHODOXY, OR SPIRITUALISM. WHICH?

I copy the following from an obituary notice in the Winsted Herald of March 11th, 1864:

"Born unto spirit life, from Collinsville, Ct., March 2nd, Frank E., only son of Stephen and Harriet Burbank, aged sixteen years, and five months. . . . . Silently and peacefully he left us, saying but a short time before his departure, 'I am going home.' Although we mourn his loss, we have the assurance that, though absent in body, he is present in spirit."

This was inserted in the list of "deaths," but I see no notice of any death in it. I think it ought to come under the head of "Births," and then if the same notice were given of every one who dies, perhaps people might be persuaded to believe that Revelation is fulfilled where it says, "And there shall be no more death." This would be some like the modern philosophy of immortality, which claims that although a man may butt his head against a beam, yet there is neither head, nor beam, nor pain, in reality, but all is imagination.

But, seriously, I regard this as only a sign of the last days, in which men, having a form of godliness, attempt to steal the march on the blessed Savior by claiming no death, and hence no need of a life-giving one. Can orthodoxy repudiate the doctrine of the above extract? All of it is in harmony with the daily sayings of professedly orthodox teachers. And yet it is undoubtedly spiritualistic.

But I do not like that word "Spiritualism" as applied to such barefaced denial of God's word. Satan has stolen it from the vocabulary of heaven and applied it to his vile teachings. The word is not opposed to material in a Bible sense, but to carnal. And yet there is nothing more carnal in all the world in its results than this same Spiritualism. The greatest sensuality and grossness are found in its train, all glossed over by the term "spiritual." The Bible calls it "the mystery of iniquity," and truly so. But its "mystery" is unfolded to every one who believes the Bible which says, "The dead know not any thing." To such the gospel is not hid, neither are the workings of Satan a wonder.

The above extract shows which way the world is drifting in religious matters and opinions. The Lord help us to walk in the light of God's word. F. BURR.

Dansville, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF MAINE CENTRAL QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

This conference was convened at the Town House in Rome, commencing Mar. 3d, at 7 o'clock, P. M. Prayer and social meeting. The traveling being quite bad, but few were in attendance; but those few met in the spirit of the truth, and the time was well occupied.

March 4th, 10 o'clock A. M. The time until noon was occupied by the brethren and sisters. The principal subject under consideration was our faith in God and the fulfillment of all his promises. At 1 o'clock P. M., sermon by Elder Seavey, from Gal. 6: 2;—"Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." Bro. S. always seems to have a timely admonition to the flock, and it is to be regretted that his health is such as to compel him to suspend his public labors, and especially at this time, when there is such a cry for help, and comparatively so few to enter the field.

7 o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Wheeler, from 1 Tim. 4: 12;—"Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." Bro. W. labored with a zeal worthy of his subject, and although the house was crowded, the congregation listened with deep interest, and we felt that it was a profitable season.

Mar. 5th, 9 1-2 o'clock A. M. Prayer and social meeting. The Spirit of the Lord was with the brethren and sisters to own and to bless, and all appeared to be thankful for the continuance of God's blessings to his children. One o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Stratton, from Rom. 8: 14;—"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Bro. S. enjoyed much freedom in presenting his subject, and the congregation were deeply interested and much instructed. May the Lord continue to direct and bless his labors. 7 o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Hanscomb, from Rom. 12; 1;—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Subject, the necessity of a full consecration to the Lord. At the close of the sermon we were still further interested with remarks from Bro. Howard upon the same subject.

Mar. 6th, 9 o'clock A. M. A short time was occupied by business. Watchmen present at this conference:—H. B. Seavey, L. L. Howard, D. M. Hanscomb, Sam'l Bragg, E. D. Haggett, Chas. Stratton, I. Wight, and J. Wheeler. Agreed that we hold our next conference with the brethren at South Livermore. The Clerk was requested to report this conference for publication in the Crisis.

Half past nine A. M. Prayer and social meeting. Notice was given last evening that we might expect a sermon from some of the watchmen at half past ten o'clock this forenoon, but the Lord directed otherwise, and the brethren and sisters continued their exhortations and testimonies until half past twelve P. M., and all present were encouraged, strengthened, and instructed; all felt that it was good to be there. Thank the Lord! May he ever keep us humble and ready to do his commandments.

One o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Sam'l Bragg, from 2 Pet. 3: 4;—"Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." Subject, the soon coming of our Life-giver. Bro. B. clearly presented his subject, and we felt that it was meat in due season. O! how it cheers the hearts of the pilgrims to have the evidences presented of the soon return of Him whom they love; and we feel thankful that there are those qualified to present reasons why we may expect our Lord and Master; and may we so live that we shall be found watching, having our names recorded in his book of life.

Although it rained the last two days of these meetings, the house was full of earnest listeners, many of whom could not get seats. I would say for the encouragement of brethren abroad, this conference, like that at Cornville, was characterized by that perfect union of spirit, and sympathy of feeling, which is characteristic of the love of God. The brethren exhibit a realizing sense of the rapidly approaching close of probation, the time when it shall be said, "Let him that is filthy be filthy still"; that we are living in the "day of the preparation of the Lord"; that a full consecration to God is necessary, "which is our reasonable service." There seems to be an increasing willingness to "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ," in "honor preferring one another."

We closed these meetings Sunday afternoon, to meet again at South Livermore, the second week in June next, the Lord willing. The brethren of this conference desire the prayers of the watchmen and brethren generally, that we may be good, kept humble, meek, unspotted from the world, and fully prepared to meet each other in the kingdom of God.

D. W. Griffin, Clerk.

Starks, Apr. 11th, 1864.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. Barnes.

Bro. Grant:—I am a stranger to you, but permit me to convey a part of my mind and thoughts. I have been a member of the Methodist church for thirty years, and Mr. Barnes some longer than that. Three years ago this winter, Mr. Barnes heard Bro. Peter Deyo preach on the destruction of the wicked and the sleep of the dead, and he fell in love with the doctrine. I never heard the Advent doctrine until two years ago last fall, when Bro. Wm. Sheldon preached here. He preached so plainly, and proved his doctrine so clearly, as the good book says, "way-faring men, though fools," need "not err therein."

I thought that I had read the Bible before; but when I came to hear the word of God expounded so differently than I ever had before, it set me to thinking. I commenced it for myself, and when I found that I could not sustain my position in the church and have the Bible for my guide, I thought it time to back off from the track. I did so and joined the Advent church, at the time Bro. Sheldon was here. I have had many cold shoulders turned towards me since I left, but if it is for righteousness' sake, amen to it.

I wish we could have more preaching here. We have had none of our faith since the conference last fall, when Bro. Himes was here.

Strawberry Point, Iowa. L. Barnes.

From Bro. Donald Taylor.

Bro. Grant:—In a late number of the Crisis, I noticed some very touching remarks from Bro. D. T. Taylor, to the readers of the World's Crisis, in behalf of the Tract Fund. I am one who has been benefited, and have received much instruction, both from the Crisis and tracts.

The tracts you gave me in December, I have scattered to good advantage. It was my aim to send them to the most intelligent. A great many have been led to read and search, and some have seen the consistency of the truths we hold. I have had a good deal of talk with various characters, ministers, Elders, deacons, drunkards, and professors of religion, and with as many different results. I was told to-day by one of the deacons, that he could notice a difference in his minister's prayers and preachings lately, that is, since you had that controversy and gave him those tracts. On asking, what was the difference?. He does not use the term "immortal soul!" The deacon and I are very much of the same opinion.

I am, dear brother, yours in Christ,

Donald Taylor.

From H. McClary.

Bro. Grant:—I can witness to all you have written concerning your meetings in Montreal. My prayer is, God speed you on in your good work of faith and labor of love. There was the circumstance of the young man, who gave up his tobacco. I saw him just before I left. He stood firm to his promise. During my stay in Montreal, I visited different cathedrals. I will give a short sketch of the conversation that took place between myself and the steward of the M. E. Cathedral. He informed me the pulpit cost two thousand dollars, the singing machine twelve thousand dollars, the total amount of the whole building was fifty-six thousand dollars. While looking over the costly house of worship, I thought of good old Wesley's words to his church, "As you increase in riches and numbers, you will decrease in piety." I attended a soldiers' class meeting in the vestry. When I entered, the class leader, the city missionary, was at prayer. I knelt down at a vacant seat, with the soldiers. The stench of the tobacco was very disgusting. The experiences given, of all but one, was about their leanness, O my leanness. One had got a labor on him. He was like the Bereans,—more noble than those of Thessalonica. He was searching the Scriptures daily to see if these things are so. He had been visiting the poor, and holding meetings with them. He wished to know of the class leader, why there was so much division among the churches and people. He said he was sorry to see it.

Brethren, let us lift up our heads and look up because we know that our redemption draweth nigh. Yes! we see the sword coming. Let us warn the people that the blood of their souls may not be required at our hands.

Home Missionary.

East Hatley, C. E.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

Bro. Grant:—The good work of the Lord is going on gloriously in Springfield. Bro. Morgan's house is well filled with worshipers and inquirers for the way of life. The good Lord opened the river which had been frozen up by sin and Satan, and four willing souls were planted, in obedience to Christ's command, in the likeness of his death, a few weeks since; and now some eight or ten more are waiting for the coming Sabbath to figure forth their faith in the resurrection of the dead, and the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, and so answer a good conscience toward God. Even so, amen.

H. Pratt.

Springfield, Mass., April 18th, 1864.

From Bro. L. L. Howard.

Bro. Grant:—I wish to say to the brethren and sisters in answer to the numerous requests for meetings, that I cannot go at present. My companion has been prostrate now nearly four weeks with rheumatic fever. She has been quite helpless during that time, and still remains so. I solicit the prayers of brethren and sisters, that the Lord will restore her to health speedily. These last days are truly days of trial and affliction, but still I am glad I am living in so sublime a day, where I can witness the signs of Jesus' coming. I will respond to the call of brethren and sisters as soon as I am at liberty.

L. L. Howard.

Rome, Me., April 15th, 1864.

From Sr. A. Mussey.

I have arrived in safety in New York, where I shall remain and labor for the upbuilding of the cause of God, and the salvation of sinners, till I feel the Lord bids me go. Any wishing my labors while in this region, or in my way back to Boston, may write me while here, Direct to A. Mussey, 201 Twenty-Second Street, rear house, between Seventh and Eighth Avenue. (Care of J. T. Howland.)

April 18th, 1864. A. Mussey.

The Test.—"When you see a dog following two men," says Rev. Ralph Erskine, in one of his sermons, "you know not to which of them he belongs while they walk together; but let them come to a parting road, and one go one way and the other another way, then you will know which is the dog's master. So at times will you and the world go hand in hand. While a man may have the world and a religious profession too, we cannot tell which is the man's master, God or the world; but stay till the man comes to a parting road; God calls him this way, and the world calls him that way. Well, if God be his master, he follows religion, and lets the world go; but if the world be his master, then he follows the world and the lusts thereof, and lets God and conscience and religion go."

MARRIED.

In Bangor, Me., by Eld. Thomas Smith, Mr. Adam Elliott and Mrs. Rachel S. Griffin, both of Holden, Me.

Obituaries.

Amos Smith.

Fell asleep in Christ, in Holden, April 15th, 1864, Bro. Amos Smith, aged seventy-six years.

Bro. Smith has not been able to go out of his room for about six months. His disease was consumption. He has been a believer in the soon coming of Christ since 1843. The sleep of the saints, the final destruction of the wicked, the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust; the restitution of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, and that we should, according to the word of the Lord, obtain immortality and eternal life at the coming of Christ; were truths which he held firm unto the end.

John Richardson.

Sarah Youngs.

Died in Danielsonville, Ct., April 9th, 1864, of inflammatory fever, Sr. Sarah A. Youngs, wife of Bro. Horace Youngs, aged twenty-one years.

Two years ago, together with her companion, she first professed faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as her Savior, and was baptized into his death. Her last work was a work of love for the afflicted. After a few days of extreme suffering, she died. An affectionate husband, a mother, and many friends, mourn deeply her early fall. May such illustrations of human frailty impress all, and beget in us the prayer of David, "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I." There may the afflicted seek hope and comfort in this trying hour.

H. F. C.

George P. Osborn.

Died at Lower Gilmanton, N. H., March 16th, 1864, Geo. P. Osborn, son of the late Samuel C. and Julia Ann Osborn, aged twelve years, ten months, and ten days.

George was a good boy. He sleeps beside his sainted father, who fell asleep in Jesus a few months since. We trust they will rise together in the morning of the resurrection to die no more.

John G. Hook.

Herbert Burnside.

Died in Glocester, of dysentery and cholera infantum, Sept. 2d, 1863, Herbert Burnside, son of Emily and Calvary Mitchell, aged one year, nine months and six days.

This little bud, so loved and fair,
Will in the kingdom have a share;
Although we see him here no more,
Yet he will live for evermore.

A. A. Randall.

Albion Hyde.

Died in Saco, Me., April 13th, Albion Ross, son of Ariel P. and Abbie Hyde, aged one year and one month.

Bro. and Sr. Hyde sorrow over the death of their little one, but not as those that have no hope. Jesus will bring their lovely babe again from the land of the enemy. We endeavored to comfort them with this hope.

C. Goodrich.

☞ A grievous famine prevails throughout a large part of Hungary. The harvest is a failure, and the valley of the Theiss, noted for its abundant production, has become a desert. Thousands of the inhabitants, sick and footworn, are wandering about in search of food.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

San Francisco, April 18th. The steamer Orizaba, from Panama, brings letters from Acapulco to the 8th inst. The occupation of Colima by two thousand French is confirmed. Proposals have been made to old Juan Alvarez to acknowledge the empire. He declined to listen to them and said that the French were the enemies of his country and he would resist them to the last extremity.

It is believed that the French will find the mountaineers of Guerrero among the most uncomfortable enemies in Mexico. Latest advices from Oajaca state that Gen. Diaz held the city with six thousand Mexicans. He was confident of his ability to defend the State against the present French force. In an emergency he could safely retreat to Cheropas or Guerrero. The natives of these States are, all hostile to the French.

Chicago, April 19th. The Journal's letter from Grand Ecore, of the 10th inst., says:

Our cavalry had been driving the enemy for two days, but on the afternoon of the 8th sent back word for infantry supports. Gen. Ransom, in command of the 3d and 4th divisions of the 13th corps, was ordered to send forward a brigade and he did so. At noon he followed with the 4th division.

After advancing about five miles from where the 3d division of his command and the 19th corps were encamped, the rebels made a stand, and our line, consisting of only 2,400 infantry, formed in a belt of woods with an open field in front, and the enemy in the woods on either side. Gen. Stone, of Ball's Bluff fame, Chief of Gen. Banks' staff, was on the field and took direction of movements.

Gen. Ransom was in favor of advancing only in force, but his wish was disregarded. After a skirmish across the field for about an hour, the enemy advanced on us in overwhelming number, estimated at ten thousand. Gen. Ransom got all the available troops to the front and opened on them. The enemy lost heavily, but advanced steadily. Soon all of the cavalry gave way and the army fell back. The panic of the cavalry so demoralized the army that the retreat became a rout.

The General did all in his power to rally the men, but finding it impossible without reinforcements, made every effort to save the artillery. While endeavoring to get the Chicago Mercantile Battery off safely, Gen. Ransom was wounded in the leg. Capt. C. E. Dickey, his Adjutant, was instantly killed.

Our loss was large, probably two thousand. The Mercantile Battery lost all its guns. Capt. White is a prisoner. Lieutenants Throop and McBride are killed.

While the 4th division was falling back in disorder, the 3d division, numbering 1800 men, came up and was immediately routed. Finally the 19th army corps with 7,000 men came up and formed in line. They checked the enemy and held them at bay until we got off all our trains except that of the cavalry.

The whole army is falling back here where it must wait to reorganize before proceeding further towards Shreveport.

New York, April 19th. Late Richmond papers contain the following dispatch:

"To Gen S. Cooper—The following report was received at Baton Rouge on the 3d inst., from the Surgeon General of Banks' army:

We met the enemy near Shreveport. The Union force was repulsed with great loss. How many can you accommodate in the hospital at Baton Rogue?

The steamer Essex, or Benton, has been destroyed by torpedoes in Red river, and a transport was captured by the Confederates. Farragut is reported to be preparing to attack Mobile, six monitors coming to him. The garrison of New Orleans and Baton Rouge were very much reduced for the purpose of increasing Banks' forces.

(Signed) D. H. Maury,
Major-General Commanding.

Cairo, Ill., April 20. The greater portion of Hickman, Ky., has been burned by the guerrillas. The officers of the steamer Anderson saw about 400 guerrillas in Henderson, Ky., on the 18th, and passed without landing.

Chicago, Ill., April 20. The Evening Journal publishes extracts from private letters from the members of the Chicago Mercantile Battery, dated April 12th, to the effect that on the day after the recent disaster to the 15th army corps, Gen. A. J. Smith with the 19th army corps engaged the rebels and defeated them, capturing 2000 prisoners and 20 cannon.

Cairo, Ill., April 21st. Advices from Grand Ecore, Red river, up to the morning of the 15th, have been received. The battle of the 8th was fought at Sabine Cross Roads. The rebels were commanded by Generals Magruder, Holmes, and Taylor, all under Kirby Smith. The enemy's loss on the 8th is placed at fifteen hundred. On the 9th another fight took place at Pleasant Hill, where, as previously stated, the rebels were most gloriously whipped and routed by our forces under Gen. Smith, Gen. Banks, Commanding-in-Chief. The rebel loss was heavy—two to our one. Among their killed were Gens. Mouton and Parsons.

After the first day's fight, Gen. Banks being short of rations, sent word to the Admiral to return with the fleet, which had advanced to within eighty miles of Shreveport, and was preparing to blow up the steamer at New Falls City, which the rebels had sunk in the channel. On the reception of Gen. Banks' dispatch the fleet turned back, and on the way down was attacked by large numbers of the enemy on both sides of the river, who attempted to capture the transports. A fight ensued between the gunboats and rebels, in which the latter were splendidly repulsed with five hundred or six hundred killed and a large number wounded, while none on the gunboats were injured. Gen. Greene, commanding the rebels, had his head blown off by a shell.

Philadelphia, April 21. The Inquirer says that rebel deserters state that Lee's force on the Rapidan is 60,000 strong. Longstreet was at Charlotteville marching toward Staunton for the purpose of advancing down the Shenandoah Valley. Lee's army had received seven days' rations for a forward movement.

Washington, April 22nd, 1864. A German refugee, who left Richmond on Monday last, states that every available man in Virginia has been forced into the army by conscription, even including theatrical performers. This week the reserve militia of every district is to meet and elect officers, to be ready to act as minute men.

Official reports from Plymouth, N. C., state that the rebel ram floated down the river in the night and passed the batteries at Plymouth, and was first discovered immediately under the bows of the Miami, floating with the current.

Commander Flusser who was regarded as one of the best officers in the service, went forward, sighted and fired bow gun with shell which struck the ram, rebounded and killed him, one piece cutting his heart out.

The ram then went at the Southfield, and she was sunk in five minutes. The ram is 120 feet long drawing eight feet of water, has two independent propellers and can make about four knots. She has two guns, only twenty-pounders.

New York, April 22. The Times' Washington dispatch says it is understood that the recent development of the intentions of the rebels renders an early movement of the army of the Potomac highly probable.

The recent order of Gen. Grant, banishing sutlers from the army, rids it of 2800 supernumeraries.

The war department has ordered an addition of 15,000 beds to the present hospitals in Washington. All the patients that can bear moving will be sent North at once.

Report gains credence that Lee has sent part of his army into the Shenandoah Valley with the view of compelling Gen. Grant to divide his army by sending a force in pursuit.

The Governors of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin are here, and are urging the President to call for 200,000 six months' men for special service. Four of the above States propose to furnish one half of that number. The President has expressed himself favorable to the proposition.

The Times' dispatch says information received here confirms the suspicions of a wide-spread conspiracy in the Northwestern States, to inaugurate armed resistance to the government. Crawford county, Ohio, the headquarters of a gang of butternuts, has been placed under martial law, and other counties in that State will probably be put in the same position. Ohio, Southern Indiana and Southern Illinois, contain the principal portion of the incipient rebels, whose leaders only await a disaster to the National arms to give the signal of revolt.

The hospitals of the army are being cleared of their inmates.

The Herald's dispatch says Major General Crittenden has been assigned to an important command and ordered to report to General Burnside.

Serious apprehensions are entertained of difficulty with the Sioux Indians during the coming season. Reliable information has been forwarded to the War Department to the effect that there are 1400 lodges of warriors within seventy miles of Fort Union and 600 lodges on Powder creek, emptying into the Yellow Stone. They have been joined by the Assiniboines, Crows and Western Sioux, and are preparing to attack Fort Union and to destroy the steamers on the Upper Missouri. General Pope, it is understood, has ordered a strong force into the Indians' country, and a bloody Indian campaign is anticipated.

Baltimore, April 23. The following highly important intelligence was received from Fortress Monroe this morning:

On Sunday last the rebels assaulted our works at Plymouth, N. C., and were twice repulsed.

On Monday forenoon, at one o'clock, the gunboat Bombshell ran up the Roanoke river to look out for the iron-clad ram reported coming down. Soon after passing our works the Bombshell was fired into by a rebel battery and sunk.

About three o'clock the rebel ram came down, ran past our batteries, and then ran into the gunboat Smithfield and sunk her.

The gunboat Miami, a very strong vessel, lay close to the ram, and Capt. Flusser cleared her decks for action and fired a nine inch shell, which rebounded from her side, exploded, and killed Capt. Flusser. The Miami was then immediately run down the river out of danger.

The rebel ram, so far as heard from, has not fired a shot and now has possession of the river below Plymouth. Our garrison at Plymouth is cut off from all communication. The post, however, is well garrisoned and has plenty of provisions, ammunition and arms. Gen. Butler is confident that it will withstand any further assault the rebels can make.

Army of the Potomac, April 24. The Richmond Sentinel of the 22d inst. says the following dispatch has been received by Gen. Bragg:

"Plymouth, N. C., April 20.

To Gen. Braxton Bragg:

I have stormed and carried the place, capturing one Brigadier, 1600 prisoners, stores and 25 pieces of artillery. (Signed) R. F. Hoke,
Brigadier General."

"A telegram was also received by the President from Col. John Taylor Hood, dated Rocky Mount, 21st inst., giving further particulars of the capture of Plymouth with naval co-operation. He says about 2500 prisoners were taken, including 300 or 400 negroes, 30 pieces artillery, 100,000 pounds of meat, 1000 barrels flour, and a full garrison outfit. Our loss was about 300 in all. Col. Nierce was among the killed.

Two gunboats were sunk, another disabled, and a small steamer captured."

Items.

☞ In France, a strict inquiry into the removal of Voltaire's remains has been ordered, and the Emperor has given instructions that the heart shall be enclosed in a silver vase, and deposited either in the great hall of the Imperial Library, or at the Institution of France. Probably nothing else will be found, as the priests and legitimists will keep their own secrets, and as fifty years have elapsed since the time when the body was said to be stolen away.

☞ The aggregate sum received from all the Fairs yet held on behalf of the Sanitary Commission exceeds a million of dollars. They foot up as follows: Chicago, $80,000; Boston, $140,000; Cincinnati, $245,000; Albany, $32,000; Brooklyn, $400,000; Cleaveland, $60,000; Buffalo, $40,000; Poughkeepsie, $17,158; total, $1,019,158. The Metropolitan Fair ought to, and no doubt will, exceed them all combined.—Tribune.

☞ Slugs are said to have invaded Australia in hosts. A professed eye-witness says he saw them moving, in millions, in a compact body, stripping the country, marching about a mile and a half a day, and clearing a breadth of half a mile in their march. Shepherds hope the birds will destroy them.

☞ A proposal was recently made by a lady of Turin to present Garibaldi with a gold ring on his saint's day. This was to be done in the church before a congregation of ladies, when the Host was elevated. But Garibaldi, on hearing of the singular and rather sacrilegious ovation, declined it.

☞ In London, recently, a girl aged nineteen was so frightened by a friend who played the ghost on her that she died in a few weeks. The fright caused the girl to bleed freely at the nose; she also lost her appetite and mind, and finally died of obscure disease of the brain and hysteria.

☞ The Sultan has appointed two Christian members of the Grand Council, and others have been promoted to high official positions. This liberal tendency on his part is a mark of progress in Turkey.

New York, April 24. The Sanitary Fair closed last evening, having realized the sum of $1,011,000.

Notices.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau county, Ill., commencing Tuesday evening, May 17th, and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. Spencer, President.
C. W. Smith, Secretary.

Notice.

Despise not the day of small things. A ragged school will commence in Coaticook, the first Sunday in May, 1864. There are three Sabbath schools in this city, but there are many poor children in and about Coaticook whose parents are so poor they cannot even send them to a day school. The object of this school is to lead children of all classes from the city of destruction, to the celestial city. We believe, according to the signs of the times, the judgment is near. We believe it is time to lift up our heads and look up, knowing that our redemption draweth near; also that there are greater trials yet to come upon the true people of God; also that we receive immortality at the resurrection. We believe in a full trust in God; a thorough work of God; a holiness that does not by silence give countenance to religious festivals, secret societies, conformity to the world, selling the right to worship God in sanctuaries dedicated to his service; nor that God has required one man to punish another for sin. Children will be provided with suitable clothes and books. Donations will be thankfully received from any one. A correct account will be kept; and a report will be given at the end of the year. Thus we believe and thus we shall teach by example and precept. Two matrons are needed. Any one wishing to volunteer, apply to Harley McClary, Compton, C. E.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

Questions.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 13th, 1864, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. Come one and all that can.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

Chas. P. Dow.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—Ed.

Illinois Advent Christian Conference.

The Lord willing, this conference will hold its next annual session at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, at 2 o'clock P. M. Wyanet is on the Burlington and Quincy R. R. Those coming from the north on the Central R. R. will change for the Burlington at Mendota. Those coming from the south will take the Rock Island R. R. at Lasalle, and stop at Pond Creek, where they will find a team in readiness to convey them to the meeting. As this is our annual meeting, all of our ministering brethren are requested to be present, or report by letter. Brn. and Srs., remember this yearly gathering, and make a special effort to attend. Make the meeting a subject of prayer, and come with a determination to work, and then the Lord will meet with and bless us.

C. W. Smith, Sec. of Conf.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a conference of Free Sabbath Adventists, organized under the name of "The Church of the First Born," will be held at Portland, Me., commencing Thursday, May 5th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth, whether they see exactly with us or not, are cheerfully invited to attend. Strangers coming into the city will inquire for H. A. Weston, 432 Congress Street.

S. C. Hancock.

P. S. The Lord willing, I will preach in Westerly, R. I., at the Quarry meeting-house, Sunday, April 24th, also at Central Hall, East Boston, Thursday evening, April 28th, and over the following Sunday.

S. C. Hancock.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. Sheldon.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

Miles Grant, per order of
Publishing Committee.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Appointment for Lowell Street Chapel.

Miles Grant....................Sunday, May 1st

Lee, N. H.......Saturday evening, May 7th and Sunday, the 8th. H. L. Hastings.

Elder Himes is to visit the East on special business, and will preach as follows —
Boston....................Sunday, May 1st
New York City....................Sunday, May 8th
Philadelphia....................Sunday, May 15th
State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill.........May 25th and through the week.

New Britain, Ct....................Sunday, May 1st
F. H. Berick.

Hoosick, N. Y....................Sunday, May 1st
Sandy Hill, N. Y..........Sundays, May 15th, 22d, 29th
H. F. Carpenter.

Holliston, Mass., (in the Town Hall), Sunday, May 1st
Dover, Mass., Tuesday evening, May 3d, and perhaps Wednesday and Thursday evenings, if desired.
Will brethren in Dover drop me a line at Holliston, informing me where to call? H. K. Flagg.

Lawrenceville, C. E., (where Bro. E. Lawrence may appoint), Sunday, May 8th. Pere H. Lawrence.

Haverhill, Mass....................Sunday, May 8th
A. W. Sibley.

Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich' Hall, Main St.), May 1st
Hiram Munger.

Holden, Me., (Chapel near Bro. Israel Clewley's), Sunday, May 8th.
Surry, Me., School-house, North Bend, Sunday, May 15th
Thomas Smith.

Rocky Brook, R. I....................Sunday, May 1st
Wm. Shepherd.

Prospect, Ct., (at Bro. Wm. Mix's)......Sunday, May 1st
Wallingford, (North Farms)..........Sunday, May 8th
O. D. Woodruff.

Wallingford, (North Farms)..........Sunday, May 1st
Seth Woodruff.

New Hampton, N. H....................Sunday, May 1st
A. Simpson.

Sandy Brook, near Hitchcockville, Ct., (at Bro. Davis') Sunday, May 15th. Lewis Andrews.

Appointments for Springfield, No. 5 Oak St.
P. Butler....................May 1st and 8th
H. Pratt....................May 15th

East Canaan, N. H....................Sunday, May 1st
North Sutton (where Bro. I. Andrews may appoint), May 8th. F. S. Ranson.

Montreal, C. E., evening, May 7th, and Sunday, the 8th
East Farnham, at 2 o'clock P. M..........May 13th
Bolton, C. E., (Sargent School-house), quarterly meeting, May 14th and 15th.
Lake School-house....................May 17th
Peasley Corner....................May 18th
Ward's Corner, in Magog....................May 19th
Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. Chas. P. Dow.

Hartford, Ct..........April 24th and May 1st
Cheshire Street, Ct....................May 5th
New Britain, Ct....................May 8th
Collinsville, Ct....................May 11th
Southington, Ct....................May 12th
Plainville, Ct....................May 13th
Bristol, Ct....................May 15th
Warehouse Point, Ct....................May 18th
Seitico, Ct....................May 19th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block)..........May 22d
J. S. White.

Appointment for Agawam.
H. Pratt....................May 8th

Medford, Me., (where Bro. John Lindsey may appoint), May 1st.
Meeting on Saturday evening, April 30th, if Bro. Lindsey thinks best. Thomas Smith.

Elliot, Me....................May 1st
Worcester, Mass....................May 15th
F. H. Burbank.

Kendall....................May 8th
Darien....................May 15th
C. F. Sweet.

Yarmouth, Me., (Institute Hall)..........May 1st
Richmond, (Reed meeting-house)..........May 8th
R. R. York.

Wrightville, Ct....................Sunday, May 1st
Northfield, Ct....................Sunday, May 8th
South Windsor, Ct....................Sunday, May 15th
South Manchester..........evening of the 15th as Bro. H. P. Hart may arrange. C. Goodrich.

Ore Hill, Warren, N. H....................May 8th
West Plymouth, (Brick school-house)..........May 15th
J. M. Sanborn.

Wrightville, Ct....................Sunday, May 8th
Lewis Andrews.

Moultonborough, (Richardson School-house), May 1st
West Ossipee, (for baptism)....................May 8th
T. W. Piper.

New Durham Ridge (communion)..........May 1st
Tuftonborough, N. H..........Sunday, May 8th
West Alton, N. H. (funeral)..........Sunday, May 15th
Nottingham, N. H..........Sunday, May 22d
J. O. Smith.

Concord, N. H....................Sunday, May 8th
Bradford, (New Town Hall), N. H., Sunday, May 15th
Joseph W. White.

South Windsor, Ct....................Sunday, May 1st
S. P. Babcock.

Agawam, Mass....................Sunday, May 1st and through the week, if desirable. W. J. Hale.

East Otis, Mass....................Sunday, May 15th
Cold Spring, Mass....................Sunday, May 29th
Geo. L. Teeple.

East Boston....................Sunday, May 1st
A. W. Sibley.

Westerly, R. I....................May 1st
Ocean Port, N. J....................May 8th
J. K. Bellows.

Where Bro. Cotton may appoint..........May 1st
Wm. A. Penn.

Portland, Me..........Sundays, May 1st and 8th
Frankfort Mills..........Sunday, May 15th
J. Hemenway.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted. ☜

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

J. M. Reed, Barzillai Brown, Garry B. Bishop, Sarah P. Sprague, Weeden Holloway, Thomas Frost, Polly King, Mrs. Henry White, Wm. Greenleaf, H. C. Anderson, Otis King.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their Post Office and State. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

Mrs. M. J. Jones, Wm. Hurd, John Sawyer, R. C. Jackman, C. Farrington, Stephen C. Wilcox, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. E. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E. Soper, Henry Hilliard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman, Esther Ann Pratt, Aaron Bagsley, John Brown, T. Lane.

Mary Boyd wants her paper stopped. Where does she live?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. C. Jackman—You have paid to No. 468. If you will please give your P. Office when you send money, you will save us the trouble of hunting through our books for the name, and the delay of crediting it.
C. B. Turner—P. Keyes is credited the $1.50.
D. G. M.—It is forwarded.
S. Farnham—Acknowledged in No. 445.
J. Jeffrey—You are credited to No. 495.
D. A. Shaw—To No. 492.
John Gillies—To No. 463.
Maria Knowlton—Sr. Hunter's paper is mailed regularly.
W. G. Ruggles—We make it right by crediting you the other $2.00 this week.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 447.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—Wm. Jordan 468, A. McFadden 449, J. Crosby 487, A G Case 454, M Cates 471, R Stevens 471, T Tewksbury 468, J Chandler 416, I F Potter 43?, L Curtis 447, I Richards 471, A Worth 467, A S Catlin 464, E Wetherell 468, Mrs L Bills 468, W Colbath 470, F L Storrs 465, E Melcher 468, S Calef 455, E Barnes 468, H C Smith 471, L A. Osborn 471, J. Brown 471, L. H. Chase 471, J W Merrill 471, J B Huckings 471, W Prothero 468, P Chaille 471, Mrs L Kelley 471, I W Montague 482, S Wells 455, Mrs H Speare 471, Mrs R Keithline 471, J Evans 460, Mrs L Neice 464, Mr Justice 470, W Keith 468, H M Ferrin 471, J R Whipple 471, J Perkins 471, J Butler 471, Miss I Curtis 471, Mrs J Coverly 471, H. Runnells 471, L. Munson 471, J. S. Gavitt 471, Mrs O S Flint 480, Mrs H Wilson 468, C H Barrett 468, A. Kingsbury 468, J. Kimball 468, Mrs. J C Foote 462, L. K. Gaines 494, J. Banning 432, B Herrick 471, A E Colton 468, J. Perkins 478, M F Dibble 478, R Osburn 471, R B Northrop 471, M. J. Quick 471, N W Willey 471, T. S. Mitchem 471, J Kelly 471, C O Lord 471, D Mitchell 471, J Baker 471, M Flanders 471, Mrs S Bowers 471, L. C. Rice 468, I Tuttle 461, E W Brown 471, F M Naracong 471, P Webster 471, J Allen 471, Mrs A Barrett 472, A Clark 471, G F Clough 468, J L Tinkcom 468, D Hutchinson 413, N J Pribble 468, J Whipple 471, G Green 472, J Pulver 459, A Williams 444, J Reynolds 444, Mrs M H Lyman 473, M Mensink 471, H D Meenk 471.

$2.00 each.—J P Davis 471, W Bassford 462, N Shumway 494, G Glover 441, G S Wise 459, A Saltmarsh 476, U Baker 475, S Perkins 446, P Axe 494, Mrs L Morrill 486, J Brown (what P. O.?), A M Cole 478, I Tripp 460, J O Merrill 497, A. M. Bancroft 497, A. D. Searles 497, G Pease 497, J Fifield 482, C C West 495, B Kent 462, J F Pickering 499, J C Hastion 494, J N Howes 495, J P Saunders 468, L Moore 449, Mrs. J Hulce 497, W H Moody 497, A Pierce 495, J Allard 497, Mrs N J Kingsbury 445, C H Randall 475, J N Hines 489, S Woodcock 484, S. Rollins 470, J Webber 468, L D Lord 572, J F Wood 497, J. W. Stratton 497, L. J. Blossom 510, F D Gilles 497, M G Page 499, A B Howard 481, N N Thompson 484, I F Chase 490, E Skillings 468, H M Ring 445, E. B. Stearns 481, W Burrows 468, O. Gould 496, A O Thomas 438, Mrs J Wentworth 501, H Young 497.

50c each.—F M Bolt 458, Mrs J Ray 458, L M Goodridge 456, L A Cook 439, J P Goodwin 458, E K Mastin 458, H W Norville 459, J L Locke 458, Runnells 458, Mrs A H Curtis 458, A L Kingsley 456, S. Barrett 448, I A Thayer 458, D. A. Kinyon 458, M Linehan 458, D. Hurry 458, A H Bolton 446.

H. Hitchcock $1.03, 474; L. Roundsville $1.50, 458; F Berry $3.00, 491; R Varnam $1.50, 510; Mrs M Hodgkins $1.50, 453; J H F Varney 93c, 428; J. W. Rogers $3.00, 507; S. M. Clarke $3.00, 513; D. J. Smith $5,00, 497, C Wilson $3.00, 477, E Hill $3.00, 476; C Pratt $5.00, 448; J. M. Sanborn $1.50, 361, Mrs. M. Wilson $3.00, 489; J D Chester $2.50, 457; C F Roberts $2.25, 448.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

J N Snyder $1.00, S D Beegle 50c, H Hitchcock $1.00, L Roundsville 95c, F M Bolt 15c, R C Jackman $2.00, P Axe 20c, T Wheeler 25c, J Pinkham 70c, H C Smith $1.00, A M Bancroft $1.00, E Phelps $1.00, C C West 22c, J S Peregrine 30c, L Longfellow $1.00, C H Leverton $1.50, Mrs. N. J. Kingsbury 25c, M E Cornell 25c, J N Hines 30c, E. A. McClellan $4.00, J. M. Rannells $1.18, C Haynes 20c, C D Trott 25c, J Nichols 50c, Mrs M Wilson $5.00, F. Baker 25c, C. F. Roberts 30c, L C Johnson 10c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.

S D Beegle, F Cilley, H Hitchcock, A Bell, L Roundsville, A G Case, O H Emery, T Wheeler, R C Jackman, J Parkman, J Pinkham, W H Berryman, E Phelps, D C Tourtellot, J S Peregrine, C C West, H C Smith, D A Kinyon, S G Coon, C H Leverton, L Longfellow, I A Thayer, M Linehan, N J Kingsbury, M F Dibble.

By Express.

Wm Johnston, A M Bancroft, J G Hook, B Spaulding

N. B.—Several orders are now on hand unfilled—waiting for a new supply of some books ordered.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W A Manning, P W Hough, W H Berryman, J Freeman, S M H, L L Howard, A Mussey, N M Henry, M B Streeter, B Perham, H Pratt, M A Wilbur, M Cawkins, L B Waugh, L C McKinstry, D G M, A Ross, P S W Deyo, J K Bellows, M Baxter, D L Clark, H F Carpenter, D Wheeler, R Noble, H McClary, J Porter, S M Davis, B F Truex, Jas Barnes.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Pere H. Lawrence—From the 1st of May, until further notice, Lawrenceville, C. E.
D. T. Taylor—Rouses Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian mission the past week, as follows:—

Friends of Missions, 41. L. and L. F., $20, John Ostrander, $8.77; A friend, $7; I. R. Gates, $4; Sr. A. M. Locke, $2, John Pettinger, $2, Andrew Jackson, John Lyle, Mrs. Josiah Blaisdel, Martin Cheney, A friend of missions, C. R. Wiggin, Joseph S. White, $1.00 each.

My P. O. address will be Williamsburg, L. I., N. Y., Box 138, till May 12th. M. B. Czechowski.

☞ Received from an "aged friend," Melrose, $5.00. May the Lord sustain our aged friend. W. Pratt.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. Diamond, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.

2. Pearl, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.

3. Nonpareil, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.

4. Minion, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.

5. Testaments. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS
AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, 6 vols. sheep (used some), $4.00. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine. $3.00.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., nearly new, $6.50. Ditto, new, $7.00
Englishman's Greek Concordance, sheep (used a little), $4.00.
Rollin's History, one vol., sheep, and marbled edges, (Harper's ed.), new, $3.00. Ditto, two vols. $3.00.
Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.
Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $3.50.
Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.
Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.
Davidson's Connexion of Sacred and Profane Literature, 3 vols., half cloth, $2.00.
Wakefield's Translation of the New Testament, and Notes, new bound, half morocco, $3.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by express.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Newton on the Prophecies, sheep, new, $2.25.
Josephus' complete works, $1.50.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
"The End," by John Cumming, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Threefold Test of Modern Spiritualism, 75 cts.
Buck's Theological Dictionary, sheep, $1.50.
Septuagint (Greek Old Testament), Leipzig edition, half sheep, $2.00.
Hebrew Bible (Old Testament and New), Bagster's ed., $2.00.
Our Lord's Great Prophecy, (by Buck), cloth, $1.50.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Murdoch's Ecclesiastical History, one vol. sheep, $1.00.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. Woodard, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

Lardner's Works, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.
Roy's Hebrew Dictionary, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.
Englishman's Hebrew Concordance, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $2?.
Webster's Unabridged Pictorial Dictionary. Price $7.50,—for $6.50.
Lowth on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.
Griesbach's Greek Testament, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.
Polymicrian Greek Testament, Pocket form, with Lexicon; Roan binding. $1.75, post paid.
English Reference Bibles, a good selection. $1.00 to $1.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Expository Works on Prophecy.

Removal.—I have moved to Ashburnham Depot, Mass., where all letters and orders must be directed. I have now on hand the following works:

1. The Days in which we Live. 2. The Slaying of the Witnesses. 3. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. 4. Exposition of Revelation Sixth. 5. Treatise on Revelation XIII. in Two Parts,—A History of the Leopard and Two-Horned Beast. 6. The History of an Immortal Soul. 7. A third and new edition of The Rich Man and Lazarus, with additional pages and cover. The Last Day Tokens, Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Please see notice in another column. All the above works sent by mail for one dollar and thirty cents. Several are illustrated with good engravings. ☞ Write Name, Post Office, County and State, in a plain manner. ☜

S. S. Brewer, Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Dear friend, get them, read them, and circulate them. They will do you and all that read them good.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is [illegible] cents for each four ounces, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each four ounces or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is [illegible]; but three or four tracts may be sent in the same parcel at the same price. A Book weighing 4 ounces would cost [illegible] cents postage, one weighing [illegible] would cost [illegible] cents, or just as much as if it weighed [illegible] ounces.

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. P. Woodward. [illegible], postage [illegible].

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal, conscious suffering of the Wicked?" [illegible], postage [illegible].

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible], postage [illegible].

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." [illegible], postage [illegible]. Bound [illegible], postage [illegible].

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents singly, 50 cents per dozen, $3.00 per hundred. Postage 2 cents for each package of four tracts or less.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matthew 10: 28, Genesis 35: 17, &c.

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible] pages for 1 cent; 1,000 for $1. By mail, 1,000 pages for $1. Singly, by mail, 1 cent for every 12 pages, postage, [illegible].

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; the guilt of a slumbering world, and the duty of a faithful church. A stirring tract of 36 pages. By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. A graphic sketch of the old world, destroyed by the deluge, the present world reserved unto fire; and the new world which God shall create. By H. L. Hastings. 36 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, showing that the last days, marked by divine goodness and human iniquity, are even now upon us. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of leading Scriptural statements regarding the world and man, the cause, the coming of the Redeemer, the resurrection of the dead, the renovation of the earth, and the opposing position of the church, presented in simple Scripture language, and confirmed by EIGHTY-EIGHT quotations from the writings of the most noted of the fathers, reformers, and ministers in all ages. A solid and unanswerable tract. By H. L. Hastings. 36 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, said by a Methodist minister who had been converted from Universalism, to be the best thing he ever read on that subject. By H. L. Hastings. 20 pages.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies to the fact of an approaching crisis, from numerous noted writers and speakers, [illegible] of statesmen, and divines, well adapted to impress the minds of the careless. By D. T. Taylor. 32 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies from about EIGHTY of the most noted of the great men in the church, from the times of the apostles down, showing a uniform faith in the doctrine of the new creation. By D. T. Taylor. 20 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, containing the testimonies of twenty thousand Baptists on the kingdom; Adam Clarke on the duration of the earth; Matthew Henry on the hope of the church; the restitution, by Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, Methodius and Cyprian; a warning voice, by Cotton Mather; and loving Christ's appearing, by Richard Baxter. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, by H. Grattan Guinness; with notes and quotations from early Christian writers, by H. L. Hastings, showing that Christians have no part in the wars or governments of this world. 24 pages.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," being extracts from his "Treatise on Christian Doctrine," giving his views upon the nature and condition of man in life and death. 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality of the soul, or of the race, or of the lost. By C. F. Hudson. A convincing tract, showing that upon these points the Scriptures are silent. 24 pages.

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. 20 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. 24 pages.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.
BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.00; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of the chain of symbols, and the proximity of the Judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 80 cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrible, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, [illegible] cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Popery during the 42 prophetic months they were to make war upon the saints. In the second part we have presented our reasons for believing the Papacy to be "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.25. Single, by mail, [illegible] cts.

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the Kingdom of God, Matt. 21: 43; what is to be understood by taking it away, suffering violence, Israel, the New Covenant, Signs of the Times, [illegible] of the Great Day of the Lord, &c. &c. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25. Single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets," showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets, and by them to the doomed nations. [illegible] and incidental instances are brought to view in this little work. Per dozen, by mail, [illegible] cts. Single, by mail, [illegible] cts.

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" History of False Christs, Earthquakes, Famines, Pestilences, arranged in Chronological order; Abounding of Iniquity, Immorality of the Age, Great Spiritual Dearth, Spiritualism—[illegible] and degrading tendencies, A Spiritualist's Invocation to Satan, Progression, The Gospel Preached in all the world as a witness, The Harvest ripe, The End of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25. Single, by mail, 25 cts.

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars; Meteorological Wonders, Fearful Sights and Great Signs in the Heavens—Blood, Fire, and Pillars of Smoke, &c. &c. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these Last Day Wonders, that God in his infinite mercy has hung as flaming signals in the heavens, to herald the approach of the Great Day of His Wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.25. Single, by mail, 25 cts.

9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.

10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; embracing testimony from the above sources, concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen, by mail, [illegible] cts. Single, 6 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 8 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.30.
☞ Be sure to write your name, Post Office, County, and State in a plain manner.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life. by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability, and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo., pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. 160 pp. In cloth, [illegible]. Paper, [illegible].

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. Cloth, [illegible]. Paper, [illegible]. With the following and Mr. H.'s other Tracts, [illegible] pages in all, [illegible].

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From Sir James Stephen, with notes. [illegible], postage [illegible]. $2.00 per 100.

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible], postage [illegible]. $2.00 per 100.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible], postage [illegible]. $2.00 per 100.

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Mr. Manuel. [illegible], postage [illegible]. $2.00 per 100.

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Quarterlies, [illegible], April and [illegible], and April and October, 1860. (Price [illegible], postage [illegible].)

God." Bro. S. enjoyed much freedom in presenting his subject, and the congregation were deeply interested and much instructed. May the Lord continue to direct and bless his labors. 7 o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Hanscomb, from Rom. 12: 1;—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Subject, the necessity of a full consecration to the Lord. At the close of the sermon we were still further interested with remarks from Bro. Howard upon the same subject.

Mar. 6th, 9 o'clock A. M. A short time was occupied by business. Watchmen present at this conference:—H. B. Seavey, L. L. Howard, D. M. Hanscomb, Sam'l Bragg, E. D. Haggett, Chas. Stratton, I. Wight, and J. Wheeler. Agreed that we hold our next conference with the brethren at South Livermore. The Clerk was requested to report this conference for publication in the Crisis.

Half past nine A. M. Prayer and social meeting. Notice was given last evening that we might expect a sermon from some of the watchmen at half past ten o'clock this forenoon, but the Lord directed otherwise, and the brethren and sisters continued their exhortations and testimonies until half past twelve P. M., and all present were encouraged, strengthened, and instructed; all felt that it was good to be there. Thank the Lord! May he ever keep us humble and ready to do his commandments.

One o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Sam'l Bragg, from 2 Pet. 3: 4;—"Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." Subject, the soon coming of our Life-giver. Bro. B. clearly presented his subject, and we felt that it was meat in due season. O! how it cheers the hearts of the pilgrims to have the evidences presented of the soon return of Him whom they love; and we feel thankful that there are those qualified to present reasons why we may expect our Lord and Master; and may we so live that we shall be found watching, having our names recorded in his book of life.

Although it rained the last two days of these meetings, the house was full of earnest listeners, many of whom could not get seats. I would say for the encouragement of brethren abroad, this conference, like that at Cornville, was characterized by that perfect union of spirit, and sympathy of feeling, which is characteristic of the love of God. The brethren exhibit a realizing sense of the rapidly approaching close of probation, the time when it shall be said, "Let him that is filthy be filthy still"; that we are living in the "day of the preparation of the Lord"; that a full consecration to God is necessary, "which is our reasonable service." There seems to be an increasing willingness to "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ," in "honor preferring one another."

We closed these meetings Sunday afternoon, to meet again at South Livermore, the second week in June next, the Lord willing. The brethren of this conference desire the prayers of the watchmen and brethren generally, that we may be good, kept humble, meek, unspotted from the world, and fully prepared to meet each other in the kingdom of God.

D. W. GRIFFIN, Clerk.

Starks, Apr. 11th, 1864.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. Barnes.

BRO. GRANT:—I am a stranger to you, but permit me to convey a part of my mind and thoughts. I have been a member of the Methodist church for thirty years, and Mr. Barnes some longer than that. Three years ago this winter, Mr. Barnes heard Bro. Peter Deyo preach on the destruction of the wicked and the sleep of the dead, and he fell in love with the doctrine. I never heard the Advent doctrine until two years ago last fall, when Bro. Wm. Sheldon preached here. He preached so plainly, and proved his doctrine so clearly, as the good book says, "way-faring men, though fools," need "not err therein."

I thought that I had read the Bible before; but when I came to hear the word of God expounded so differently than I ever had before, it set me to thinking. I commenced it for myself, and when I found that I could not sustain my position in the church and have the Bible for my guide, I thought it time to back off from the track. I did so and joined the Advent church, at the time Bro. Sheldon was here. I have had many cold shoulders turned towards me since I left, but if it is for righteousness' sake, amen to it.

I wish we could have more preaching here. We have had none of our faith since the conference last fall, when Bro. Himes was here.

Strawberry Point, Iowa. L. BARNES.

From Bro. Donald Taylor.

BRO. GRANT:—In a late number of the Crisis, I noticed some very touching remarks from Bro. D. T. Taylor, to the readers of the World's Crisis, in behalf of the Tract Fund. I am one who has been benefited, and have received much instruction, both from the Crisis and tracts.

The tracts you gave me in December, I have scattered to good advantage. It was my aim to send them to the most intelligent. A great many have been led to read and search, and some have seen the consistency of the truths we hold. I have had a good deal of talk with various characters, ministers, Elders, deacons, drunkards, and professors of religion, and with as many different results. I was told to-day by one of the deacons, that he could notice a difference in his minister's prayers and preachings lately, that is, since you had that controversy and gave him those tracts. On asking, what was the difference?. He does not use the term "immortal soul!" The deacon and I are very much of the same opinion.

I am, dear brother, yours in Christ,

DONALD TAYLOR.

From H. McClary.

BRO. GRANT:—I can witness to all you have written concerning your meetings in Montreal. My prayer is, God speed you on in your good work of faith and labor of love. There was the circumstance of the young man, who gave up his tobacco. I saw him just before I left. He stood firm to his promise. During my stay in Montreal, I visited different cathedrals. I will give a short sketch of the conversation that took place between myself and the steward of the M. E. Cathedral. He informed me the pulpit cost two thousand dollars, the singing machine twelve thousand dollars, the total amount of the whole building was fifty-six thousand dollars. While looking over the costly house of worship, I thought of good old Wesley's words to his church, "As you increase in riches and numbers, you will decrease in piety." I attended a soldiers' class meeting in the vestry. When I entered, the class leader, the city missionary, was at prayer. I knelt down at a vacant seat, with the soldiers. The stench of the tobacco was very disgusting. The experiences given, of all but one, was about their leanness, O my leanness. One had got a labor on him. He was like the Bereans,—more noble than those of Thessalonica. He was searching the Scriptures daily to see if these things are so. He had been visiting the poor, and holding meetings with them. He wished to know of the class leader, why there was so much division among the churches and people. He said he was sorry to see it.

Brethren, let us lift up our heads and look up because we know that our redemption draweth nigh. Yes! we see the sword coming. Let us warn the people that the blood of their souls may not be required at our hands. HOME MISSIONARY.

East Hatley, C. E.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—The good work of the Lord is going on gloriously in Springfield. Bro. Morgan's house is well filled with worshipers and inquirers for the way of life. The good Lord opened the river which had been frozen up by sin and Satan, and four willing souls were planted, in obedience to Christ's command, in the likeness of his death, a few weeks since; and now some eight or ten more are waiting for the coming Sabbath to figure forth their faith in the resurrection of the dead, and the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, and so answer a good conscience toward God. Even so, amen.

H. PRATT.

Springfield, Mass., April 18th, 1864.

From Bro. L. L. Howard.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say to the brethren and sisters in answer to the numerous requests for meetings, that I cannot go at present. My companion has been prostrate now nearly four weeks with rheumatic fever. She has been quite helpless during that time, and still remains so. I solicit the prayers of brethren and sisters, that the Lord will restore her to health speedily. These last days are truly days of trial and affliction, but still I am glad I am living in so sublime a day, where I can witness the signs of Jesus' coming. I will respond to the call of brethren and sisters as soon as I am at liberty.

L. L. HOWARD.

Rome, Me., April 15th, 1864.

From Sr. A. Mussey.

I have arrived in safety in New York, where I shall remain and labor for the upbuilding of the cause of God, and the salvation of sinners, till I feel the Lord bids me go. Any wishing my labors while in this region, or in my way back to Boston, may write me while here, Direct to A. Mussey, 201 Twenty-Second Street, rear house, between Seventh and Eighth Avenue. (Care of J. T. Howland.)

April 18th, 1864. A. MUSSEY.

THE TEST.—"When you see a dog following two men," says Rev. Ralph Erskine, in one of his sermons, "you know not to which of them he belongs while they walk together; but let them come to a parting road, and one go one way and the other another way, then you will know which is the dog's master. So at times will you and the world go hand in hand. While a man may have the world and a religious profession too, we cannot tell which is the man's master, God or the world, but stay till the man comes to a parting road; God calls him this way, and the world calls him that way. Well, if God be his master, he follows religion, and lets the world go; but if the world be his master, then he follows the world and the lusts thereof, and lets God and conscience and religion go."

MARRIED.

In Bangor, Me., by Eld. Thomas Smith, Mr. ADAM ELLIOTT and Mrs. RACHEL S. GRIFFIN, both of Holden, Me.

Obituaries.

AMOS SMITH.

Fell asleep in Christ, in Holden, April 15th, 1864, Bro. Amos Smith, aged seventy-six years.

Bro. Smith has not been able to go out of his room for about six months. His disease was consumption. He has been a believer in the soon coming of Christ since 1843. The sleep of the saints, the final destruction of the wicked, the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust; the restitution of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, and that we should, according to the word of the Lord, obtain immortality and eternal life at the coming of Christ; were truths which he held firm unto the end. JOHN RICHARDSON.

SARAH YOUNGS.

Died in Danielsonville, Ct., April 9th, 1864, of inflammatory fever, Sr. Sarah A. Youngs, wife of Bro. Horace Youngs, aged twenty-one years.

Two years ago, together with her companion, she first professed faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as her Savior, and was baptized into his death. Her last work was a work of love for the afflicted. After a few days of extreme suffering, she died. An affectionate husband, a mother, and many friends, mourn deeply her early fall. May such illustrations of human frailty impress all, and beget in us the prayer of David, "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I." There may the afflicted seek hope and comfort in this trying hour.

H. F. C.

GEORGE P. OSBORN.

Died at Lower Gilmanton, N. H., March 16th, 1864, Geo. P. Osborn, son of the late Samuel C. and Julia Ann Osborn, aged twelve years, ten months, and ten days.

George was a good boy. He sleeps beside his sainted father, who fell asleep in Jesus a few months since. We trust they will rise together in the morning of the resurrection to die no more.

JOHN G. HOOK.

HERBERT BURNSIDE.

Died in Glocester, of dysentery and cholera infantum, Sept. 2d, 1863, Herbert Burnside, son of Emily and Calvary Mitchell, aged one year, nine months and six days.

This little bud, so loved and fair,
Will in the kingdom have a share;
Although we see him here no more,
Yet he will live for evermore.

A. A. RANDALL.

ALBION HYDE.

Died in Saco, Me., April 13th, Albion Ross, son of Ariel P. and Abbie Hyde, aged one year and one month.

Bro. and Sr. Hyde sorrow over the death of their little one, but not as those that have no hope. Jesus will bring their lovely babe again from the land of the enemy. We endeavored to comfort them with this hope. C. GOODRICH.

☞ A grievous famine prevails throughout a large part of Hungary. The harvest is a failure, and the valley of the Theiss, noted for its abundant production, has become a desert. Thousands of the inhabitants, sick and footworn, are wandering about in search of food.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

San Francisco, April 18th. The steamer Orizaba, from Panama, brings letters from Acapulco to the 8th inst. The occupation of Colima by two thousand French is confirmed. Proposals have been made to old Juan Alvarez to acknowledge the empire. He declined to listen to them and said that the French were the enemies of his country and he would resist them to the last extremity.

It is believed that the French will find the mountaineers of Guerrero among the most uncomfortable enemies in Mexico. Latest advices from Oajaca state that Gen. Dias held the city with six thousand Mexicans. He was confident of his ability to defend the State against the present French force. In an emergency he could safely retreat to Cheropas or Guerrero. The natives of these States are, all hostile to the French.

Chicago, April 19th. The Journal's letter from Grand Ecore, of the 10th inst., says:

Our cavalry had been driving the enemy for two days, but on the afternoon of the 8th sent back word for infantry supports. Gen. Ransom, in command of the 3d and 4th divisions of the 13th corps, was ordered to send forward a brigade and he did so. At noon he followed with the 4th division.

After advancing about five miles from where the 3d division of his command and the 19th corps were encamped, the rebels made a stand, and our line, consisting of only 2,400 infantry, formed in a belt of woods with an open field in front, and the enemy in the woods on either side. Gen. Stone, of Ball's Bluff fame, Chief of Gen. Banks' staff, was on the field and took direction of movements.

Gen. Ransom was in favor of advancing only in force, but his wish was disregarded. After a skirmish across the field for about an hour, the enemy advanced on us in overwhelming number, estimated at ten thousand. Gen. Ransom got all the available troops to the front and opened on them. The enemy lost heavily, but advanced steadily. Soon all of the cavalry gave way and the army fell back. The panic of the cavalry so demoralized the army that the retreat became a rout.

The General did all in his power to rally the men, but finding it impossible without reinforcements, made every effort to save the artillery. While endeavoring to get the Chicago Mercantile Battery off safely, Gen. Ransom was wounded in the leg. Capt. C. E. Dickey, his Adjutant, was instantly killed.

Our loss was large, probably two thousand. The Mercantile Battery lost all its guns. Capt. White is a prisoner. Lieutenants Throop and McBride are killed.

While the 4th division was falling back in disorder, the 3d division, numbering 1800 men, came up and was immediately routed. Finally the 19th army corps with 7,000 men came up and formed in line. They checked the enemy and held them at bay until we got off all our trains except that of the cavalry.

The whole army is falling back here where it must wait to reorganize before proceeding further towards Shreveport.

New York, April 19th. Late Richmond papers contain the following dispatch:

"To Gen S. Cooper—The following report was received at Baton Rouge on the 3d inst., from the Surgeon General of Banks' army:

We met the enemy near Shreveport. The Union force was repulsed with great loss. How many can you accommodate in the hospital at Baton Rogue?

The steamer Essex, or Benton, has been destroyed by torpedoes in Red river, and a transport was captured by the Confederates. Farragut is reported to be preparing to attack Mobile, six monitors coming to him. The garrison of New Orleans and Baton Rouge were very much reduced for the purpose of increasing Banks' forces.

(Signed) D. H. MAURY,
Major-General Commanding.

Cairo, Ill., April 20. The greater portion of Hickman, Ky., has been burned by the guerrillas. The officers of the steamer Anderson saw about 400 guerrillas in Henderson, Ky., on the 18th, and passed without landing.

Chicago, Ill., April 20. The Evening Journal publishes extracts from private letters from the members of the Chicago Mercantile Battery, dated April 12th, to the effect that on the day after the recent disaster to the 15th army corps, Gen. A. J. Smith with the 19th army corps engaged the rebels and defeated them, capturing 2000 prisoners and 20 cannon.

Cairo, Ill., April 21st. Advices from Grand Ecore, Red river, up to the morning of the 15th, have been received. The battle of the 8th was fought at Sabine Cross Roads. The rebels were commanded by Generals Magruder, Holmes, and Taylor, all under Kirby Smith. The enemy's loss on the 8th is placed at fifteen hundred. On the 9th another fight took place at Pleasant Hill, where, as previously stated, the rebels were most gloriously whipped and routed by our forces under Gen. Smith, Gen. Banks, Commanding-in-Chief. The rebel loss was heavy—two to our one. Among their killed were Gens. Mouton and Parsons.

After the first day's fight, Gen. Banks being short of rations, sent word to the Admiral to return with the fleet, which had advanced to within eighty miles of Shreveport, and was preparing to blow up the steamer at New Falls City, which the rebels had sunk in the channel. On the reception of Gen. Banks' dispatch the fleet turned back, and on the way down was attacked by large numbers of the enemy on both sides of the river, who attempted to capture the transports. A fight ensued between the gunboats and rebels, in which the latter were splendidly repulsed with five hundred or six hundred killed and a large number wounded, while none on the gunboats were injured. Gen. Greene, commanding the rebels, had his head blown off by a shell.

Philadelphia, April 21. The Inquirer says that rebel deserters state that Lee's force on the Rapidan is 60,000 strong. Longstreet was at Charlotteville marching toward Staunton for the purpose of advancing down the Shenandoah Valley. Lee's army had received seven days' rations for a forward movement.

Washington, April 22nd, 1864. A German refugee, who left Richmond on Monday last, states that every available man in Virginia has been forced into the army by conscription, even including theatrical performers. This week the reserve militia of every district is to meet and elect officers, to be ready to act as minute men.

Official reports from Plymouth, N. C., state that the rebel ram floated down the river in the night and passed the batteries at Plymouth, and was first discovered immediately under the bows of the Miami, floating with the current.

Commander Flusser who was regarded as one of the best officers in the service, went forward, sighted and fired bow gun with shell which struck the ram, rebounded and killed him, one piece cutting his heart out.

The ram then went at the Southfield, and she was sunk in five minutes. The ram is 120 feet long drawing eight feet of water, has two independent propellers and can make about four knots. She has two guns, only twenty-pounders.

New York, April 22. The Times' Washington dispatch says it is understood that the recent development of the intentions of the rebels renders an early movement of the army of the Potomac highly probable.

The recent order of Gen. Grant, banishing sutlers from the army, rids it of 2800 supernumeraries.

The war department has ordered an addition of 15,000 beds to the present hospitals in Washington. All the patients that can bear moving will be sent North at once.

Report gains credence that Lee has sent part of his army into the Shenandoah Valley with the view of compelling Gen. Grant to divide his army by sending a force in pursuit.

The Governors of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin are here, and are urging the President to call for 200,000 six months' men for special service. Four of the above States propose to furnish one half of that number. The President has expressed himself favorable to the proposition.

The Times' dispatch says information received here confirms the suspicions of a wide-spread conspiracy in the Northwestern States, to inaugurate armed resistance to the government. Crawford county, Ohio, the headquarters of a gang of butternuts, has been placed under martial law, and other counties in that State will probably be put in the same position. Ohio, Southern Indiana and Southern Illinois, contain the principal portion of the incipient rebels, whose leaders only await a disaster to the National arms to give the signal of revolt.

The hospitals of the army are being cleared of their inmates.

The Herald's dispatch says Major General Crittenden has been assigned to an important command and ordered to report to General Burnside.

Serious apprehensions are entertained of difficulty with the Sioux Indians during the coming season. Reliable information has been forwarded to the War Department to the effect that there are 1400 lodges of warriors within seventy miles of Fort Union and 600 lodges on Powder creek, emptying into the Yellow Stone. They have been joined by the Assiniboines, Crows and Western Sioux, and are preparing to attack Fort Union and to destroy the steamers on the Upper Missouri. General Pope, it is understood, has ordered a strong force into the Indians' country, and a bloody Indian campaign is anticipated.

Baltimore, April 23. The following highly important intelligence was received from Fortress Monroe this morning:

On Sunday last the rebels assaulted our works at Plymouth, N. C., and were twice repulsed.

On Monday forenoon, at one o'clock, the gunboat Bombshell ran up the Roanoke river to look out for the iron-clad ram reported coming down. Soon after passing our works the Bombshell was fired into by a rebel battery and sunk.

About three o'clock the rebel ram came down, ran past our batteries, and then ran into the gunboat Smithfield and sunk her.

The gunboat Miami, a very strong vessel, lay close to the ram, and Capt. Flusser cleared her decks for action and fired a nine inch shell, which rebounded from her side, exploded, and killed Capt. Flusser. The Miami was then immediately run down the river out of danger.

The rebel ram, so far as heard from, has not fired a shot and now has possession of the river below Plymouth. Our garrison at Plymouth is cut off from all communication. The post, however, is well garrisoned and has plenty of provisions, ammunition and arms. Gen. Butler is confident that it will withstand any further assault the rebels can make.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, April 24. The Richmond Sentinel of the 22d inst. says the following dispatch has been received by Gen. Bragg:

"PLYMOUTH, N. C., April 20.

To Gen. Braxton Bragg:

I have stormed and carried the place, capturing one Brigadier, 1600 prisoners, stores and 25 pieces of artillery. (Signed) R. F. HOKE,
Brigadier General."

"A telegram was also received by the President from Col. John Taylor Hood, dated Rocky Mount, 21st inst., giving further particulars of the capture of Plymouth with naval co-operation. He says about 2500 prisoners were taken, including 300 or 400 negroes, 30 pieces artillery, 100,000 pounds of meat, 1000 barrels flour, and a full garrison outfit. Our loss was about 300 in all. Col. Nierce was among the killed.

Two gunboats were sunk, another disabled, and a small steamer captured."

Items.

☞ In France, a strict inquiry into the removal of Voltaire's remains has been ordered, and the Emperor has given instructions that the heart shall be enclosed in a silver vase, and deposited either in the great hall of the Imperial Library, or at the Institution of France. Probably nothing else will be found, as the priests and legitimists will keep their own secrets, and as fifty years have elapsed since the time when the body was said to be stolen away.

☞ The aggregate sum received from all the Fairs yet held on behalf of the Sanitary Commission exceeds a million of dollars. They foot up as follows: Chicago, $80,000; Boston, $140,000; Cincinnati, $245,000; Albany, $32,000; Brooklyn, $400,000; Cleaveland, $60,000; Buffalo, $40,000; Poughkeepsie, $17,158; total, $1,019,158. The Metropolitan Fair ought to, and no doubt will, exceed them all combined.—Tribune.

☞ Slugs are said to have invaded Australia in hosts. A professed eye-witness says he saw them moving, in millions, in a compact body, stripping the country, marching about a mile and a half a day, and clearing a breadth of half a mile in their march. Shepherds hope the birds will destroy them.

☞ A proposal was recently made by a lady of Turin to present Garibaldi with a gold ring on his saint's day. This was to be done in the church before a congregation of ladies, when the Host was elevated. But Garibaldi, on hearing of the singular and rather sacrilegious ovation, declined it.

☞ In London, recently, a girl aged nineteen was so frightened by a friend who played the ghost on her that she died in a few weeks. The fright caused the girl to bleed freely at the nose; she also lost her appetite and mind, and finally died of obscure disease of the brain and hysteria.

☞ The Sultan has appointed two Christian members of the Grand Council, and others have been promoted to high official positions. This liberal tendency on his part is a mark of progress in Turkey.

New York, April 24. The Sanitary Fair closed last evening, having realized the sum of $1,011,000.

Notices.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau county, Ill., commencing Tuesday evening, May 17th, and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. SPENCER, President.
C. W. SMITH, Secretary.

Notice.

Despise not the day of small things. A ragged school will commence in Coaticook, the first Sunday in May, 1864. There are three Sabbath schools in this city, but there are many poor children in and about Coaticook whose parents are so poor they cannot even send them to a day school. The object of this school is to lead children of all classes from the city of destruction, to the celestial city. We believe, according to the signs of the times, the judgment is near. We believe it is time to lift up our heads and look up, knowing that our redemption draweth near; also that there are greater trials yet to come upon the true people of God; also that we receive immortality at the resurrection. We believe in a full trust in God; a thorough work of God; a holiness that does not by silence give countenance to religious festivals, secret societies, conformity to the world, selling the right to worship God in sanctuaries dedicated to his service; nor that God has required one man to punish another for sin. Children will be provided with suitable clothes and books. Donations will be thankfully received from any one. A correct account will be kept; and a report will be given at the end of the year. Thus we believe and thus we shall teach by example and precept. Two matrons are needed. Any one wishing to volunteer, apply to Harley McClary, Compton, C. E.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

QUESTIONS.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 13th, 1864, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. Come one and all that can.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

CHAS. P. DOW.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—ED.

Illinois Advent Christian Conference.

The Lord willing, this conference will hold its next annual session at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, at 2 o'clock P. M. Wyanet is on the Burlington and Quincy R. R. Those coming from the north on the Central R. R. will change for the Burlington at Mendota. Those coming from the south will take the Rock Island R. R. at Lasalle, and stop at Pond Creek, where they will find a team in readiness to convey them to the meeting. As this is our annual meeting, all of our ministering brethren are requested to be present, or report by letter. Brn. and Srs., remember this yearly gathering, and make a special effort to attend. Make the meeting a subject of prayer, and come with a determination to work, and then the Lord will meet with and bless us. C. W. SMITH, Sec. of Conf.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a conference of Free Sabbath Adventists, organized under the name of "The Church of the First Born," will be held at Portland, Me., commencing Thursday, May 5th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth, whether they see exactly with us or not, are cheerfully invited to attend. Strangers coming into the city will inquire for H. A. Weston, 432 Congress Street. S. C. HANCOCK.

P. S. The Lord willing, I will preach in Westerly, R. I., at the Quarry meeting-house, Sunday, April 24th, also at Central Hall, East Boston, Thursday evening, April 28th, and over the following Sunday. S. C. HANCOCK.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. SHELDON.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of
Publishing Committee.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

Miles Grant .... Sunday, May 1st

Lee, N. H. .... Saturday evening, May 7th and Sunday, the 8th. H. L. HASTINGS.

Elder Himes is to visit the East on special business, and will preach as follows:—
Boston .... Sunday, May 1st
New York City .... Sunday, May 8th
Philadelphia .... Sunday, May 15th
State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill. .... May 25th and through the week.

New Britain, Ct .... Sunday, May 1st
F. H. BERICK.

Hoosick, N. Y. .... Sunday, May 1st
Sandy Hill, N. Y. .... Sundays, May 15th, 22d, 29th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Holliston, Mass., (in the Town Hall), Sunday, May 1st
Dover, Mass., Tuesday evening, May 3d, and perhaps Wednesday and Thursday evenings, if desired.
Will brethren in Dover drop me a line at Holliston, informing me where to call? H. K. FLAGG.

Lawrenceville, C. E., (where Bro. E. Lawrence may appoint), Sunday, May 8th. PERE H. LAWRENCE.

Haverhill, Mass .... Sunday, May 8th
A. W. SIBLEY.

Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich' Hall, Main St.), May 1st
HIRAM MUNGER.

Holden, Me., (Chapel near Bro. Israel Clewley's), Sunday, May 8th.
Surry, Me., School-house, North Bend, Sunday, May 15th
THOMAS SMITH.

Rocky Brook, R. I .... Sunday, May 1st
WM. SHEPHERD.

Prospect, Ct., (at Bro. Wm. Mix's) .... Sunday, May 1st
Wallingford, (North Farms) .... Sunday, May 8th
O. D. WOODRUFF.

Wallingford, (North Farms) .... Sunday, May 1st
SETH WOODRUFF.

New Hampton, N. H .... Sunday, May 1st
A. SIMPSON.

Sandy Brook, near Hitchcockville, Ct., (at Bro. Davis') Sunday, May 15th. LEWIS ANDREWS.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SPRINGFIELD, No. 5 OAK ST.
P. Butler .... May 1st and 8th
H. Pratt .... May 15th

East Canaan, N. H. .... Sunday, May 1st
North Sutton (where Bro. I. Andrews may appoint), May 8th. F. S. RANSOM.

Montreal, C. E., evening, May 7th, and Sunday, the 8th
East Farnham, at 2 o'clock P. M. .... May 13th
Bolton, C. E., (Sargent School-house), quarterly meeting, May 14th and 15th.
Lake School-house .... May 17th
Peasley Corner .... May 18th
Ward's Corner, in Magog .... May 19th
Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. CHAS. P. DOW.

Hartford, Ct .... April 24th and May 1st
Cheshire Street, Ct .... May 5th
New Brtain, Ct .... May 8th
Collinsville, Ct .... May 11th
Southington, Ct .... May 12th
Plainville, Ct .... May 13th
Bristol, Ct .... May 15th
Warehouse Point, Ct .... May 18th
Scitico, Ct .... May 19th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block) .... May 22d
J. S. WHITE.

APPOINTMENT FOR AGAWAM.
H. Pratt .... May 8th

Medford, Me., (where Bro. John Lindsey may appoint), May 1st.
Meeting on Saturday evening, April 30th, if Bro. Lindsey thinks best. THOMAS SMITH.

Elliot, Me. .... May 1st
Worcester, Mass .... May 15th
F. H. BURBANK.

Kendall .... May 8th
Darien .... May 15th
C. F. SWEET.

Yarmouth, Me., (Institute Hall) .... May 1st
Richmond, (Reed meeting-house) .... May 8th
R. R. YORK.

Wrightville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 1st
Northfield, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
South Windsor, Ct. .... Sunday, May 15th
South Manchester .... evening of the 15th as Bro. H. P. Hart may arrange. C. GOODRICH.

Ore Hill, Warren, N. H. .... May 8th
West Plymouth, (Brick school-house) .... May 15th
J. M. SANBORN.

Wrightville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
LEWIS ANDREWS.

Moultonborough, (Richardson School-house), May 1st
West Ossipee, (for baptism) .... May 8th
T. W. PIPER.

New Durham Ridge (communion) .... May 1st
Tuftonborough, N. H. .... Sunday, May 8th
West Alton, N. H. (funeral) .... Sunday, May 15th
Nottingham, N. H. .... Sunday, May 22d
J. O. SMITH.

Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, May 8th
Bradford, (New Town Hall), N. H., Sunday, May 15th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

South Windsor, Ct. .... Sunday, May 1st
S. P. BABCOCK.

Agawam, Mass. .... Sunday, May 1st and through the week, if desirable. W. J. HALE.

East Otis, Mass. .... Sunday, May 15th
Cold Spring, Mass. .... Sunday, May 29th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

East Boston .... Sunday, May 1st
A. W. SIBLEY.

Westerly, R. I. .... May 1st
Ocean Port, N. J. .... May 8th
J. K. BELLOWS.

Where Bro. Cotton may appoint .... May 1st
WM. A. PENN.

Portland, Me. .... Sundays, May 1st and 8th
Frankfort Mills .... Sunday, May 15th
J. HEMENWAY.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted.

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

J. M. Reed, Barzillai Brown, Garry E. Bishop, Sarah P. Sprague, Weeden Holloway, Thomas Frost, Polly King, Mrs. Henry White, Wm. Greenleaf, H. C. Anderson, Otis King.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their POST OFFICE and STATE. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

Mrs. M. J. Jones, Wm. Hurd, John Sawyer, R. C. Jackman, C. Farrington, Stephen C. Wilcox, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. E. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E. Soper, Henry Hilterd, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman, Esther Ann Pratt, Aaron Bagsley, John Brown, T. Lane.

MARY BOYD wants her paper stopped. Where does she live?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. C. Jackman—You have paid to No. 468. If you will please give your P. Office when you send money, you will save us the trouble of hunting through our books for the name, and the delay of crediting it.
C. B. Turner—P. Keyes is credited the $1.50.
D. G. M.—It is forwarded.
S. Farnham—Acknowledged in No. 445.
J. Jeffrey—You are credited to No. 495.
D. A. Shaw—To No. 492.
John Gilles—To No. 463.
Maria Knowlton—Sr. Hunter's paper is mailed regularly.
W. G. Ruggles—We make it right by crediting you the other $2.00 this week.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 447.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—Wm. Jordan 468, A. McFadden 449, J. Crosby 487, A G Case 454, M Cates 471, R Stevens 471, T Tewksbury 468, J Chandler 416, I F Potter 43?, L Curtis 447, I Richards 471, A Worth 467, A S Catlin 464, E Wetherell 468, Mrs L Bills 468, W Colbath 470, F L Storrs 465, E Melcher 468, S Calef 455, E Barnes 468, H C Smith 471, I. A. Osborn 471, J. Brown 471, L. H. Chase 471, J W Merrill 471, J B Huckings 471, W Prothero 468, P Chaille 471, Mrs L Kelley 471, I W Montague 482, S Wells 455, Mrs H Speare 471, Mrs R Keithline 471, J Evans 460, Mrs L Neice 464, Mr Justice 470, W Keith 468, H M Ferrin 471, J R Whipple 471, J Perkins 471, J Butler 471, Miss I Curtis 471, Mrs J Coverly 471, H. Runnells 471, L. Munson 471, J. S. Gavitt 471, Mrs O S Flint 480, Mrs H Wilson 468, C H Barrett 468, A. Kingsbury 468, J. Kimball 468, Mrs. J C Foote 462, L. K. Gaines 494, J. Banning 432, B Herrick 471, A E Colton 468, J. Perkins 478, M F Dibble 478, R Osburn 471, R B Northrop 471, M. J. Quick 471, N W Willey 471, T. S. Mitchem 471, J Kelly 471, C O Lord 471, D Mitchell 471, J Baker 471, M Flanders 471, Mrs S Bowers 471, L. C. Rice 468, I Tuttle 461, E W Brown 471, F M Naracong 471, P Webster 471, J Allen 471, Mrs A Barrett 472, A Clark 471, G F Clough 468, J L Tinkcom 468, D Hutchinson 413, N J Pribble 468, J Whipple 471, G Green 472, J Pulver 459, A Willimas 444, J Reynolds 444, Mrs M H Lyman 473, M Meusink 471, H D Meenk 471.

$2.00 each.—J P Davis 471, W Bassford 462, N Shumway 494, G Glover 441, G S Wise 459, A Saltmarsh 476, U Baker 475, S Perkins 446, P Axe 494, Mrs L Morrill 486, J Brown (what P. O.?), A M Cole 478, I Tripp 460, J O Merrill 497, A. M. Bancroft 497, A. D. Searles 497, G Pease 497, J Fifield 482, C C West 495, B Kent 452, J F Pickering 499, J C Bastion 494, J N Howes 495, J P Saunders 468, L Moore 449, Mrs. J Hulce 497, W H Moody 497, A Pierce 495, J Allard 497, Mrs N J Kingsbury 445, C H Randall 475, J N Hines 459, S Woodcock 484, S. Rollins 470, J Webber 468, L D Lord 572, J F Wood 497, J. W. Stratton 497, L. J. Blossom 510, F D Gilles 497, M G Page 499, A B Howard 481, N N Thompson 484, I F Chase 490, E Skillings 468, H M Ring 445, E. B. Stearns 481, W Burrows 468, O. Gould 496, A O Thomas 438, Mrs J Wentworth 501, H Young 497.

50c each.—F M Bolt 458, Mrs J Ray 458, L M Goodridge 456, L A Cook 439, J P Goodwin 458, E K Mastin 458, H W Norville 459, J L Locke 458, Runnells 458, Mrs A H Curtis 458, A L Kingsley 458, S. Barrett 448, I A Thayer 458, D. A. Kinyon 458, M Linehan 458, D. Hurry 458, A H Bolton 446.

H. Hitchcock $1.00, 474; L. Roundsville $1.50, 458; F Berry $3.00, 491; R Varnam $1.50, 510; Mrs M Hodgkins $1.50, 453; H F Varney 93c, 428; J. W. Rogers $3.00, 507; S. M. Clarke $3.00, 513; D. J. Smith $5.00, 497; C Wilson $3.00, 477; E Hill $3.00, 476; C Pratt $3.00, 448; J. M. Sanborn $1.50, 361; Mrs. M. Wilson $3.00, 489; J D Chester $2.50, 452; C F Roberts $2.20, 448.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

J N Snyder $1.00, S D Beegle 50c, H Hitchcock $1.00, L Roundsville 95c, F M Bolt 15c, R C Jackman $2.00, P Axe 20c, T Wheeler 25c, J Pinkham 70c, H C Smith $1.00, A M Bancroft $1.00, E Phelps $1.00, C C West 22c, J S Peregrine 30c, L Longfellow $1.00, C H Leverton $1.50, Mrs. N. J. Kingsbury 25c, M E Cornell 25c, J N Hines 30c, E. A. McClellan $4.00, J. M. Rannells $1.18, C Haynes 20c, C D Trott 25c, J Nichols 50c, Mrs M Wilson $5.00, F. Baker 25c, C. F. Roberts 30c, L C Johnson 10c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

S D Beegle, F Cilley, H Hitchcock, A Bell, L Roundsville, A G Case, G H Emery, T Wheeler, R C Jackman, J Parkman, J Pinkham, W H Berryman, E Phelps, D C Tourtellot, J S Peregrine, C C West, H C Smith, D A Kinyon, S G Coon, C H Leverton, L Longfellow, I A Thayer, M Linehan, N J Kingsbury, M F Dibble.

BY EXPRESS.

Wm Johnston, A M Bancroft, J G Hook, B Spaulding

N. B.—Several orders are now on hand unfilled—waiting for a new supply of some books ordered.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W A Manning, P W Hough, W H Berryman, J Freeman, S M H, L L Howard, A Mussey, N M Henry, M E Streeter, B Perham, H Pratt, M A Wilbur, M Cawkins, L B Waugh, L C McKinstry, D G M, A Ross, P S W Deyo, J K Bellows, M Baxter, D L Clark, H F Carpenter, D Wheeler, R Noble, H McClary, J Porter, S M Davis, B F Truex, Jas Barnes.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Pere H. Lawrence—From the 1st of May, until further notice, Lawrenceville C. E.
D. T. Taylor—Rouses Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian mission the past week, as follows:—

Friends of Missions, 41. L. and L. F., $20; John Ostrander, $8.77; A friend, $7; I. R. Gates, $4; Sr. A. M. Locke, $2; John Pettinger, $2; Andrew Jackson, John Lyle, Mrs. Josiah Blaisdel, Martin Cheney, A friend of missions, C. R. Wiggin, Joseph S. White, $1.00 each.

My P. O. address will be Williamsburg, L. I., N. Y., Box 138, till May 12th. M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

☞ Received from an "aged friend," Melrose, $5.00. May the Lord sustain our aged friend. W. PRATT.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. PEARL, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. TESTAMENTS. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS
AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, 6 vols. sheep (used some), $4.00. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine. $3.00.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., nearly new, $6.50. Ditto, new, $7.00
Englishman's Greek Concordance, sheep (used a little), $4.00.
Rollin's History, one vol., sheep, and marbled edges, (Harper's ed.), new, $3.00. Ditto, two vols. $3.00.
Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.
Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $3.50.
Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.
Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.
Davidson's Connexion of Sacred and Profane Literature. 3 vols., half cloth, $2.00.
Wakefield's Translation of the New Testament, and Notes, new bound, half morocco, $3.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by EXPRESS.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Newton on the Prophecies, sheep, new, $2.25.
Josephus' complete works, $1.50.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
"The End," by John Cumming, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Threefold Test of Modern Spiritualism, 75 cts.
Buck's Theological Dictionary, sheep, $1.50.
Septuagint (Greek Old Testament), Leipsig edition, half sheep, $2.00.
Hebrew Bible (Old Testament and New), Bagster's ed., $2.00.
Our Lord's Great Prophecy, (by Buck), cloth, $1.50.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Marsh's Ecclesiastical History, one vol. sheep, $1.00.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. WOODARD, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

LARDNER'S WORKS, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defence of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.
ROY'S HEBREW DICTIONARY, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.
ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW CONCORDANCE, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $22.
WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED PICTORIAL Dictionary. Price $7.50,—for $6.50.
LOWTH on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.
GRIESBACH'S GREEK TESTAMENT, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.
POLYMICRIAN GREEK TESTAMENT, Pocket form, with Lexicon; Roan binding. $1.75, post paid.
ENGLISH REFERENCE BIBLES, a good selection. $1.00 to $1.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Expository Works on Prophecy.

REMOVAL.—I have moved to Ashburnham Depot, Mass., where all letters and orders must be directed. I have now on hand the following works:

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 2. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. 3. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. 4. EXPOSITION OF REVELATION SIXTH. 5. TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII. IN TWO PARTS,—A HISTORY OF THE LEOPARD AND TWO-HORNED BEAST. 6. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. 7. A third and new edition of THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS, with additional pages and cover. THE LAST DAY TOKENS, Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Please see notice in another column. All the above works sent by mail for one dollar and thirty cents. Several are illustrated with good engravings. ☞ Write NAME, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE, in a plain manner.

S. S. BREWER, Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Dear friend, get them, read them, and circulate them. They will do you and all that read them good.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. P. Woodward. 30c, postage 3c.

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal, conscious suffering of the Wicked?" 25c, postage 4c.

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." 20c, postage 3c.

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." 20c, postage 3c. Bound 30c, postage 4c.

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matthew 10: 28; Genesis 35: 17, &c.

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; the guilt of a slumbering world, and the duty of a faithful church. A stirring tract of 36 pages. By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. A graphic sketch of the old world, destroyed by the deluge; the present world reserved unto fire; and the new world which God shall create. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, showing that the last days, marked by divine goodness and human iniquity, are soon now upon us. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of leading Scriptural statements [illegible]

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies from about EIGHTY of the most noted of the great men in the church, [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 30 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] arranged by H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, by H. Grattan Guinness; with [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," being extracts from his "Treatise on Christian Doctrine," giving his views upon the nature and condition of man in life and death. 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality of the soul, or of the race, or of the lost. By C. F. Hudson. A convincing tract, showing that upon these points the Scriptures are silent. 24 pages.

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. 20 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. 24 pages.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY.
BY S. S BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Medo Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. [illegible]

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. [illegible]

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, [illegible] "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." [illegible]

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible] "The Two-Horned Beast." [illegible]

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible]

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." [illegible]

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" [illegible]

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars; [illegible]

9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.

10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; [illegible]

11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition; [illegible]

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.30. ☞ Be sure to write your name, Post Office, County, and State in a plain manner.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Mattel. [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the [illegible]

MY CROSS.

It is not heavy, agonizing woe,
 Bearing me down with hopeless, crushing weight;
No ray of comfort in the gathering gloom,
 A heart bereaved, a household desolate.

It is not sickness, with her withering hand,
 Keeping me low upon a bed of pain;
Longing each morning for the weary night,
 At night for weary day to come again.

It is not poverty, with chilling blast,
 The sunken eye, the hunger-wasted form;
The dear ones perishing for lack of bread,
 With no safe shelter from the winter's storm.

It is not slander, with her evil tongue,
 'Tis no "presumptuous sin" against my God;
Not reputation lost, or friends betrayed,
 That such is not my cross, I thank my God.

Mine is a daily cross of petty cares,
 Of little duties pressing on my heart;
Of little struggles hard to reconcile,
 Of inward struggles overcome in part.

My feet are weary in these daily rounds,
 My heart is weary of its daily care,
My sinful nature often doth rebel,—
 I pray for grace my daily cross to bear.

It is not heavy, Lord, yet oft I pine;
 It is not heavy, but 'tis everywhere;
By day and night each hour my cross I bear,
 I dare not lay it down—Thou keep'st it there.

I dare not lay it down, I only ask,
 That, taking up my daily cross, I may
Follow my Master humbly, step by step,
 Through clouds and darkness unto perfect day.

—Selected by L. J. Beach.

For the World's Crisis.

THE NEW COVENANT.

(Concluded.)

"Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah; not according to the covenant which I made with their fathers, in the day that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they broke, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel, after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and their sins will I remember no more."—Jer. 31: 31-34.

III. What length of time will it require to write his law in their inward parts? As the law thus written denotes the new covenant, and the pronoun "their" refers to the house of Israel and the house of Judah, and as house is used figuratively to denote family, and as this family is divided into different members, as "least and greatest," it clearly refers to successive generations; and as a consequence, it would require time to write this law in their inward parts. And as house of Israel and house of Judah are divisions peculiar to this age, and are to be done away with in the age to come, the writing of this covenant in their inward parts is confined to this age, so that by the time the new age is introduced it will have been indelibly written in their hearts, never to be effaced. And as Jesus Christ is the representative head of the two houses of Israel, and is also the Mediator of the new covenant, which came into active force by the shedding of his own blood, it began to be thus written then.

Thus the beginning of the time required to write this law in their inward parts is indicated. But since this cannot be written in the hearts of all, from "the least to the greatest" of them, while none of them have yet begun to exist, it will require the whole period of human generation to write it in their hearts. And as the terms "house of Israel" and "house of Judah" are terms applicable to this age alone, it cannot be extended beyond this age; and hence the length of the time required to write this law in their inward parts is confined to the gospel dispensation, which ends with the resurrection of the whole (not half) house of Israel.

IV. Will all know him from the least to the greatest of them when this covenant is written in their hearts? As this covenant is the law of God written in their hearts, it becomes necessary to find a brief summary of that law. And we find one endorsed as such by Christ himself in Mark 12: 29-31, quoted from Deut. 6: 4; which, varying the translation so as to agree with that of the best critics, reads thus: Hear, Israel; the Lord our God, the Lord is one: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Upon these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets; and is therefore a complete summary of the spirit of the new covenant.

Love is the fulfilling of the law. But to love God as here indicated involves a more perfect knowledge of him than we are likely to attain at present. If any think they have already attained, they should be reminded that others have not, neither are they likely to until the resurrection from the dead.—For the fact that the carnal nature is not eradicated until the resurrection, as a general thing, shows that a perfect state may not be expected until then. For, as Paul says, now we see in part, and know in part, but when that which is perfect is come, then we shall see as we are seen, and know as we are known.

Christians disagree about the nature of Deity, yet all agree that there is but one God, with very few exceptions. Some worship him as one and indivisible. Others hold to a trinity in unity. That the latter are in error is manifest from the statement—"The Lord our God, the Lord is one: and thou shalt love him," etc. For we read, "The law of God is perfect, converting the soul"; whereas, it would be imperfect if God was triune, in that it contains no statement to that effect, but to the contrary—Jehovah is one.

It is claimed that the Hebrew word for God—Elohim—is plural, and therefore may denote trinity, which, in connection with the statement, The Lord is one, would constitute an agreement in favor of a trinity. If that were so, it would be very necessary to assert a unity, for a trinity without unity would be deplorable indeed. But the inference is not just, because the Hebrew has a plurality of excellence, when no other plurality is meant. If this were not so, the translation of the term in the singular would have been unjustifiable. But its translation in the singular, which has been invariably adhered to by all translators, is a good proof that it does not signify plurality of persons. And the fact that such differences about God, whether he is one or several, have been the occasion of bitter controversies and persecutions, shows that the present state is imperfect. Nevertheless, all nominal christians profess to believe in one supreme Being, showing that that part of the law of God is written in their hearts, although imperfectly comprehended by them. But when that which is perfect is come, that which is imperfect will be done away.

A covenant implies conditions between parties. God agrees to write his law in their hearts. But on what condition? On condition of continuance in the faith—"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life." And said Christ, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

Here the only true God is spoken of apart from Jesus whom he sent. But to know him as the only true God, either involves eternal life, or leads to it; and as this eternal life is given conditionally on faith in Christ, so this knowledge is obtained conditionally. But the conditions continue during this life—"He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved"; so that the covenant will not be perfected until the age to come. For if he that endureth unto the end shall be saved, the inference is fair that they will all be saved, who endure, when the end does come. Hence the resurrection from the dead will perfect that new covenant and bring the saved into the complete knowledge of the ever blessed God; so that none will have occasion to say, Know thou Jehovah, for they shall all know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord. "Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and shall place you in your own land, then shall ye know that I have spoken it, and performed, saith the Lord." Amen, even so let it be.

Wm. Hobbs.

For the World's Crisis.

DISPENSATIONAL TRUTHS.

Bro. Grant:—Being permitted almost and yet refused the privilege to present in a church here a subject entitled "The Dispensational Truths of God's Word, due in every age," I therefore made out the following for their pastor, and send you a copy, viz:

Brother ——:—Think not that I should be offended for being refused a place to present some of the most solemn truths of God's word; nay, "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glorying." "If we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his." But when I see those who profess to be the Lord's people, who profess to be followers of Christ, yet who turn away from these so oft repeated truths, these most solemn and weighty admonitions and warnings, so frequently uttered by the prophets and holy men of old, and by the Lord Jesus Christ; and also by his disciples and apostles who spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost,—then these declarations of Christ recur with weight to my mind, "For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels."

When I consider that there are over two hundred passages of Scripture in the New Testament, as well as very many in the Old, which directly or indirectly refer to or are connected with the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the establishment of his everlasting kingdom upon the earth; and the way and manner of his coming, the signs and tokens of his coming, the chronology of the Bible, the prophetic periods, and all the great and leading events so plainly set forth and given, together with the promised aid of the Comforter, or "Spirit of truth" to guide us into all truth, and to show us things to come,—and the very many warnings and admonitions for us to take heed in regard to this event, to watch and be found watching,—to see or seeing to these things, to look, or looking for such things, to know, or knowing, in regard to these great events in connection with Christ's coming; and thereby in so doing we shall be kept from the snares of these last days,—"from the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth," (Rev. 3: 10);—and yet when I see the alarming position taken by the popular churches and clergy of the present day, and their increasing opposition to these solemn declarations of God's word, and their continued unbelief of the same, and their manifest unwillingness to receive or proclaim them as did the Lord Jesus Christ, and his apostles, and prophets, to warn an ungodly world as a faithful watchman should, (see Ezek. 33: 2-6); "But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand,"—and when, instead of arousing the church to "watch" and take heed to these things, and faithfully warning an ungodly world of its hastening doom, there is manifested this apparent apathy, this worldly conformity of the church, and an increasing tendency to the pursuits, fashions, and pleasures of this life,—then truly we can but be astonished at the unparalleled inconsistency of many professors of the religion of Christ; and the more so, as in this we see a striking fulfillment of the inspired word, of what should be in the last days. And yet we do not wonder, as this is but an evidence, a token, of the certainty of the fulfillment of prophecy, and of our close proximity to the trying day, and verifying the apostle's assertion, viz: "This know, also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." "For men shall be . . . . lovers of pleasure, more than lovers of God." "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." When we fear they now despise prophecyings instead of doing well by taking heed to the more sure word of prophecy, until the day dawn, and instead, in view of that coming day, of being holy in all manner of conversation and godliness, (2 Peter 3: 11), that there is a retaining of vain conversation, and instead of looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, there appears to be an expectation of a long time of peace and safety, instead of viewing the matter as Peter declares, "But the end of all things is at hand; be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer." "Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, (are they now looking for such things?) be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace, (not engaged in carnal warfare, or encouraging that or any other wickedness in any manner; not in levity, or jesting, or joking; not in worldly festivals, public suppers, exhibitions, concerts or worldly amusements, but) without spot and blameless."

There seems to be a form of godliness, but without the power, developed in many of the churches of the present day; when, to-day they are preaching up war, to-morrow praying for peace and for war, and the next day engaged in some enterprise to entertain the world and obtain thereby mammon, honors, or worldly favors. There seems to be a wonderful development of that very position represented by the Revelator, in connection with Christ's coming, viz: "I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead." "If, therefore, thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee." "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot." "So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth." Rev. 3.

In view of these solemn truths and declarations, and the position of those who are saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming," who are now "smiting their fellow-servants, and eating and drinking with the drunken," (Matt. 24; Luke 21), I am forcibly reminded of this solemn declaration of our Savior, "Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord," etc. "And then I will profess unto them, I never knew you." When I see the position of those who are saying, "Where is the promise of his coming," it but confirms my faith and strengthens the evidence that we are truly in the last days when, as now verified, "they willingly are ignorant of" these things. 2 Peter 3: 4, 5.

Now, in view of the coming of Christ and the first resurrection, if Paul said, "Comfort one another with these words," (1 Thess. 4), and, "These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority," (Titus 2: 13-15), and, I charge you by the Lord that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren," (2 Thess. 5,) as in this chapter Paul says, "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night." And still further, in view of what he says, if Paul's brethren now prefer to be in darkness, or believe they are to be in darkness in regard to the day of the Lord, then they view the matter very different from Paul, who says, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." "Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day; we are not of the night, nor of darkness. "Therefore let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober." 1 Thess. 5.

Now, brother, in kindness and charity let me add, "Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." "Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned; behold, the Judge standeth before the door." James 5: 8, 9. Brother, let not this apply to your church, nor any other church, any further than it must, and will apply, and no further. And instead, "if any root of bitterness springing within us"—"If ye love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us." 1 John 4: 12. And, as in his third epistle he says, "I have no greater joy, than to hear that my children walk in truth."

Sincerely, S. L. Manley.

For the World's Crisis.

PEN PICTURES OF BIBLE SCENES.

NUMBER TEN.

The Sacrifice of Abraham.

A cloudless morn with its delicious freshness has dawned upon the plains and hillsides of Palestine. The newly risen sun looks down upon a scene of patriarchal simplicity, that our eyes, perchance, have never gazed upon. Here beneath the shadow of graceful palms nestle the white tents of Abraham, surrounded with an air of quiet beauty. Yonder on the hillsides, going forth to their daily pasturage, may be seen long lines of herds and flocks, bespeaking the abundant wealth of the patriarch. It is a quiet scene, secluded and far from the busy haunts of city life, amid the thinly peopled plains, that are some day to swarm with the descendants of this same wealthy wanderer.

There is a busy scene of preparation this morning in the chief tent, for a long journey. The youthful Isaac is to accompany his father on the mysterious mission. But neither the boy nor his loving, trusting mother little dream of the awful rites that await him on the distant mountain. All are ready for the journey, but still the youth lingers at the door of the tent entwined in his mother's arms, who prays that no evil may fall upon him; she imprints a last kiss upon his sunny brow and he joins his father.

The buoyant heart of Isaac rejoices in the new scenes that constantly burst upon his gaze. Life is new to him, and now with all the fulsome joyousness of boyhood he drinks in its first fresh experiences. Sweet to his ear is the morning hymn of the birds. Fresh with dew bloom the flowers in his pathway. And like the lullaby of his mother, murmur the rills over their pebbly beds.

Thus the morning passes, and noon, which has drank up the dew, and at length from over the distant line of hills linger the last rays of the setting sun. The hasty tent is pitched, the party partake of refreshments and at last seek repose for the night. The boy Isaac pillows his head upon his father's bosom to dream over the day's romance; while Abraham, his father, prays for strength to meet the trying scene that awaits him. He prays with agonizing earnestness, while all a fond father's tenderness wells up in his bosom, yet doubts not the justice of his God in directing him to offer up his son, his only son Isaac, the light and joy of his declining years. Unshaken in his trust, unmoved in his faith, he doubts not, murmurs not, but bows his heart in humble submission to the mandate of heaven.

Another day dawns and passes with its scenes to cheer the heart of Isaac, and yet another, the third since they left their tented home in the shady groves of far off Beersheba. They are nearing their journey's end. Already in the distance appears the mount of sacrifice where the patriarch is to seal his faith in the blood of his only son.

Bidding his servants abide there, he places the wood on the shoulder of Isaac, and taking the fire and sacrificial knife himself, the father and son slowly ascend the slopes of Moriah. The father with heavy heart, and Isaac with less of wonted joyousness, for he beholds not the accustomed lamb that till then has been led to the altar. He exclaims:

"My father, behold the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb for the burnt offering?"

Oh! how these earnest tones of childish inquiry sink into the father's heart. All the fond paternal emotions of his nature strive for expression, but he subdues them and answers,

"My son, God will provide himself a lamb."

At length they reach the sacred spot. A rude altar of stone is reared, the wood is laid upon it, and now, methinks, almost unnerved by the suppressed agony of grief he kneels upon the earth and offers up his heart's last appeal to heaven. He stands once more beside the altar, and tremblingly lays hold of Isaac, the victim gives one soul-searching gaze of inquiry, and reading for the first time his fate in his father's solemn, determined look, bows his head like a willow upon his bosom.

He is bound upon the altar, and the blade glitters in the sunbeams over the heaving bosom of Isaac. Oh! ye who have known a father's love picture, if ye can, the agony of that moment. Ye who have faith and have trusted, say, was it strong enough for such a trial as this? There is a rush of pinions and a voice above stays the uplifted hand.

It is enough; the sublime faith of the patriarch has been tested. God has been honored, and Isaac, the heir of Heaven's promises, yet lives. A victim from the thicket serves instead of Isaac for the sacrifice, and Moriah is consecrated as the altar place where in after ages the tribes of Israel shall sacrifice in the glorious temple of Jehovah.

Orrin P. Allen.

Selected for the Crisis.

OUR REST.

"The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared to the glory that shall be revealed in us."

My feet are worn and weary with the march
 Over rough roads and up the steep hill-side:
Oh, city of our God, I fain would see
 Thy pastures green, where peaceful waters glide.

My hands are weary, laboring, toiling on,
 Day after day, for perishable meat:
Oh, city of our God, I fain would rest,
 I sigh to gain thy glorious mercy-seat.

My garments, travel-worn and stained with dust,
 Oft rent by briars and thorns that crowd my way,
Would fain be made, O Lord my righteousness,
 Spotless and white in heaven's unclouded ray.

My eyes are weary looking at the sin,
 Impiety and scorn upon the earth:
Oh, city of our God, within thy walls
 All, all are clothed upon with the new birth.

My heart is weary of its own deep sin—
 Sinning, repenting, sinning still alway:
When shall my soul thy glorious presence feel,
 And find its guilt, dear Savior, washed away?

Patience, poor soul: the Savior's feet were worn,
 The Savior's heart and hands were weary too;
His garments stained, and travel-worn and old,
 His sacred eyes blinded with tears for you.

Love thou the path of sorrow that he trod,
 Toil on, and wait in patience for thy rest:
O city of our God, we soon shall see
 Thy glorious walls, home of the loved and blest.

For the World's Crisis.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO THE DESPONDING.

Weary and faint one, art thou disheartened at these midnight tossings on life's tumultuous sea? Be patient; the haven is nearing; every bound over these dark waves is bringing us nearer the long looked for shore. Soon shall thy Lord appear. Listen to his gracious assurance, "I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you."

How well qualified is the Man of sorrows to be our Comforter! how well fitted to dry our tears, who shed so many himself. How sweet those promises to his disciples, "Your sorrow shall be turned into joy." "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice. We can think of them as coming from a brother born for adversity; the "Friend that sticketh closer than a brother!" one who with holy sympathy said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

We have tried the world; it has deceived us. Has our God ever done so? Then let us leave all false props and refuges, and lean on his omnipotent arm. "He fainteth not, neither is weary." He will receive us just as we are, with our erring, treacherous, truant heart, forgotten vows and broken resolutions. Though we have wounded a loving Savior's heart by these repeated declensions, he will not give us up. Hear his encouraging words, "Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out."

Then be not weary, but gird on thine armor for fresh conquests, and be gaining daily some new victory over sin. Be patient under provocation; slow to wrath, resigned in trial. Let the world take knowledge of us that are bearing Christ's Spirit and sharing his cross. Let us not barter our life in the "world to come" for some perishable nothings of earth. What would we not sacrifice if we were at last included in that gracious benediction, "Come, ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world?" Let us awake to our high destiny, live up to our transcendent privileges, and look forward with joyous emotion to that morn when He who is our life shall appear, that we may appear with him in glory.

All the joys of the resurrection morn we cannot tell; but it will be a blessed jubilee day of creation, when the summons shall sound forth, "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." The sleeping ashes of saints start at the tone of the archangel's trumpet; and the dishonored dust rises a glorified body like its risen Lord's. Then shall begin a joyful inscription, "Unto Him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood." "Salvation to our God, which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb."

Would we be among that number, we must keep that which is committed to our trust, and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness; remembering who it is that Jesus says shall sit with him upon his throne,—"Him that overcometh."

Biddeford, Me. Julia A. Libby.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.—No. 5.

We have drawn from sacred history our illustrations of the power of prayer. Volumes might be filled with evidences of its efficacy derived from living witnesses. Compared with the great mass of those who pray, they are few who are "mighty in prayer" who hold converse with God; but viewed as a whole, there is a great multitude who know that they have the petitions they desire of him.

Many who read these articles will recall remarkable answers to prayer—those answers that are not included in the specific blessings offered for our acceptance in the Bible, but yet are included in the general assurances given of a Father's love, care and protection of his children. Many a poor pilgrim has been clothed and fed in a way that evinced a direct interposition of God in answer to prayer; many a deliverance from peril or recovery of health can be traced to an importunate pleading with the Most High, which could not be denied. But these instances might be more abundant,—they ought to be the experience of every child of God.

"Good prayers," says an English divine, "never come weeping home. I am sure I shall receive either what I ask, or what I ought to ask." Says Chalmers, "Make me sensible of real answers to actual requests, as evidences of an intercourse between myself on earth and my Savior in heaven."

The language of an old writer is not out of place here:—"Never more wonder that men pray so seldom, for they are very few that feel the relish, and are enticed with the deliciousness, refreshed with the comforts, and acquainted with the secrets of a holy prayer."

Those only who habituate themselves to closet prayer, experience the effects above described. Those who love to retire alone, and pour out their hearts to Him who seeth in secret, are fed with the "hidden manna," and openly rewarded with an unction and power in the performance of public duties, that carries the conviction home to the hearts of others that such walk with God; that they have fellowship with Christ, and are full of faith and the Holy Ghost.

I care not how eloquent may be the prayer of one who seldom or never retires alone to kneel before God in supplication; there is a lack of vitality, of living faith, of divine unction clearly perceptible to the spiritually minded. Their life is unmarked by breathings after purity, and progress in holiness; you cannot perceive any advancement in christian attainment: just as they appear now, they appeared years ago. They have, perhaps, a strictly moral character, a stereotyped deportment, always consistent; but they can not tell of any new victories gained, of any additional grace bestowed, of new lessons learned in the school of Christ; there is no increase of spirituality, of divine unction.

When they pray in the social meeting, you do not feel your own faith quickened, and borne upward to the throne in unison with theirs. When they speak, you may admit the talents, but feel a conviction of dryness, your soul is not watered with the grace communicated through them.

How different your feelings in respect to others. As soon as they open their lips in prayer, you are conscious of a union of spirit with Christ, of a faith that apprehends a present Christ, that draws the mind heavenward, and draws supplies from the storehouse of grace. The language employed may be exceeding simple, but it is expressive of submission, and implies trust in the promises. Such prayers do not tickle the ear and please by their eloquence, while no deep impression is made on the heart; but you feel revived, quickened, drawn nearer God, refreshed in spirit by the soul-breathings, Spirit-inspired supplications of the christian who communes with Christ in his closet.

Secret prayer is especially required of the disciple of Jesus. For social prayer we have examples, but for closet devotions we have the precept, "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and shut thy doors about thee, and pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." Retired from the world, in the solitude and quiet of the closet, how freely the soul may pour out its fervent desires into the ear of its Father, God. No disturbing influences from without distract the mind thus alone with God. If the utterances are broken, and void of eloquence, our Father is not displeased, if there be a fervent desire for the blessings asked.

Here the burdened heart can cast its load on Jesus, here the tempted soul can find grace to help; here the weeping, broken-hearted penitent may with tears and sighs and groans unbosom all his sorrows; here the one whose soul is panting for the fullness of love, and deep impress of a Savior's image, may plead with boldness the blood of cleansing and the precious promises. Here the weak may find strength, the ignorant obtain wisdom, the beclouded mind be illuminated.

O! the blessedness of secret prayer—closet devotion; not the mental withdrawment, for which some plead, instead of the actual personal retirement enjoined by Christ, but the being alone with God, and with the lips offering prayer and praise to Him who has promised to bless us openly.

M. D. W.

REASONS FOR ATTENDING THE HOUSE OF GOD.

I do so unless prevented by illness or circumstances:

1. Because God has blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it, making no exceptions for rainy Sabbaths.

2. Because I expect my minister to be there, and should be surprised if he were to stay at home for the weather.

3. Because my absence for slight reasons will lead him to think that there is some personal objection to him, when, perhaps, he is devoting all his energy to the salvation of his charge.

4. Because my non-attendance is calculated to paralyze his exertions, and lead him to suppose that his visits and sermons are useless.

5. Because, by staying away, I may lose the sermon that would have done me great good, and shall lose the prayers which invariably bring God's blessing on the true heart.

6. Because, whatever station I hold in the church, my example must influence others; for if I stay away, why not they?

7. Because, among the crowd of pleasure-seekers, I see that no bad weather keeps the delicate female from the ball, the party, or the concert.

8. Because, though my excuses satisfy myself, they still must undergo God's scrutiny, and I must be well-grounded to bear that.

9. Because there is a special promise, where only two or three meet together in God's name, he is in the midst of them.

10. Because absence from the house of God, for reasons which would not keep me from going to my place of business on week-days, must be discouraging to all true friends of the church, particularly its minister, and dishonoring to God.

11. Because an avoidable absence from worship is an infallible evidence of spiritual decay. Disciples first follow Christ at a distance, and then, like Peter, do not know him.

12. Because I know not how many more Sabbaths God may still vouchsafe me, and it would be a poor preparation for my first Sabbath in heaven to have slighted my last Sabbath on earth.

Potatoes—How heavy to Seed.—Eds. Prairie Farmer:—In reply to some inquiry of late about the quantity of potatoes to plant in a hill, I would say that I have experimented and tested the matter well, and have come to the conclusion that one good sized potato is the best to plant in a hill to get the largest and best sized ones. Plant about three-and-a-half feet apart each way, so as to tend with plow both ways. F. T. T.

Have you cleaned your Cellar?—If there is any spot about the farm premises that needs a thorough overhauling and cleaning it is the cellar. It is now a good time to do this, if you have not attended to it already. Do not leave a decayed apple or vegetable about it—give it a thorough airing. Remember that the health as well as comfort of the family depends greatly upon this sanitary regulation.

☞ A punctual man can always find leisure; a negligent one never.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

UNLEAVENED ROLLS.

By request I insert the following receipt for making unleavened bread:—

You can use any kind of flour or meal you please. Mix thin enough for griddle cakes, with cold water or sweet milk. Have your baker ready (French roll, or egg-frier), by heating quite hot on the top of the stove. Pour in your dough, and let it stand from five to ten minutes, according to the amount of heat; then place in the oven, and bake from fifteen to twenty minutes. It is the lightest and best bread, also the most wholesome. N. M. P.

[We eat no other.—Ed.

DESTRUCTIVENESS OF GLUTTONY.

But where alcohol kills one man, gluttony in this country kills ten. Our people are a nation of gluttons. The kinds of food we eat, in connection with the qualities eaten and the frequency of the times of eating, so demoralize us intellectually and spiritually, that it is no great stretch of the truth to say of us that we have no well-settled and fixed character as a nation, and that as individuals the great majority lack well-considered and clearly fixed principles and the love for these which human nature is created to entertain and to exhibit.

Let us see what eating too frequenty has to do with one's higher nature. The stomach is a muscular organ, and can get tired as surely as an arm or a leg. One rises in the morning, eats breakfast at six, goes to his business, which involves him in thought or in work, and with the wear and tear of his life upon him, involving expenditures of nervous energy in various directions, the food which, were he to live purely from the point of animal quiescence, would digest in four hours, cannot be made into chyme and all pass out of the stomach in less than six. By the time then that the stomach is emptied of food his dinner bell rings, and he proceeds to fill up his stomach afresh. The after part of the day he works as hard, perhaps even harder than the fore part. Of course it takes quite as long for the stomach to dissolve and empty itself of his dinner as it did of his breakfast. It, therefore, is only relieved at six o'clock, when his supper bell rings. He eats it, and not unlikely has to work after it. But suppose he does not, his stomach is not emptied till about midnight. Here, then, is an organ which is compelled, from the person's birth clear up into mature life, to be taxed and tasked eighteen hours out of each twenty-four. I leave it for you to decide whether there is a probability or likelihood of its becoming tired. If you think there is none, imagine how you would feel if you were to take the other structures of your body and serve them in the same way. How long do you suppose you could live and maintain good health and work incessantly, with no relaxation for eighteen hours out of each twenty four-hours? There are a great many persons that do it;—and my reply is,—there are quite as many persons who die from it as there are who do it.

Two Meals a Day.—The points of importance are—

I. That by the eating of only two meals a day, the stomach gets ample opportunity to rest and so recovers tone.

II. That the organs of assimilation, or what may be called the blood-making organs, have so much time to secrete the food that they can do it slowly and therefore perfectly.

III. That the proper time for doing it is accorded to them, which is during the night. A man who eats his last meal at three o'clock in the afternoon has the first digestive processes complete by nine o'clock, and then the assimilative or blood-making organs commence their work. If he goes to bed and to sleep, the organs of accretion, by which new supplies are furnished to the system, carry on their labor in his unconscious state so silently and yet so perfectly and successfully that what he needs in the way of nutrition is furnished to him.

IV. That, under such a condition of things the stomach goes to sleep when the brain goes to sleep, and the person thus rests throughout the entire organism. I do not believe there is one man in ten thousand who would not break up entirely his dreams, if he were to adopt the two meals a day system and eat proper food. His sleep would be a state of pure unconsciousness, and when awakened from it at the proper time, he would be so essentially refreshed as to feel that all the changes which nature needed to carry on in his system had been wrought out for him, meanwhile he knew nothing about it.

Many of the diseases which afflict those who eat three meals a day and which arise from over-eating, from indigestion and from imperfect assimilation of food would vanish, and the persons now suffering from them would know them no more.

V. A greatly superior condition of the nervous system would ensue; and every man and woman who lived mainly by thinking would receive such an increase of brain power as to be joyfully surprised at it.

VI. Greatly superior opportunities for accomplishing intellectual labors would follow, by reason of the fact, that whereas now under the three meal system a man can only go to his office or his study and get his brain fairly aglow, his mind taking entire possession of it, and getting ready to develop thought in the highest order, before the dinner bell comes and the charm is broken up; he would, under the two meals a day system, be able to begin his work in the morning, and increase his appliance thereto, till at last complete absorption of his conscious nature would be had, and from that time onward for four or five or six hours, he would be able to think continuously; and there is no thinker who does not understand how necessary continuity is to profoundness of thought.

Lastly, other things being equal and the general habits of life correct, a great benefit to be derived from eating two meals a day is in increase of spiritual perception. Are you aware what a wonderful gift the power of spiritual discernment is? I rank it higher than any other faculty which man possesses; yet it is one upon which men and women generally put the lowest estimate and prize it the least. I cannot account for their doing so only on the hypothesis that they know but little of its uses and immense value. To be largely gifted with it by constitutional organization and natural endowment, and yet to have such habits of life as to keep one in such relations to it as practically to make it of no service to him, is horrible to me. My nature longs for communion with the source of all truth, agonizes at times to pass behind the veil; makes the most earnest appeals to be admitted to see what the common eye never can behold.

Under my former habits of life, when I was a meat-eater, tobacco-chewer, tea and coffee-drinker, indulged in beer, cider and other stimulating beverages, though never to the loss of my self-respect, I was of the "earth, earthy." I felt as if I was tied down to perishable things by gross connections. I had gleams of light and love from the upper world. I was not satisfied with my then present state, nor was I at all complacent to myself in view of my intellectual attainments or my possibilities of increase of knowledge. I was uneasy, had my times of unhappiness, felt as if I was placed in a world of which I knew little. But when I came to see on the one hand what a great clog a man's physical nature may be to his spirit, and on the other hand what a great aid it may be, what a wonderful medium it may become for the transmission of spiritual knowledge to his inner consciousness, from the Source of such knowledge, how it may be made to serve the high and holy purpose of bringing home to him wisdom, knowledge, love and power from God himself, I determined that henceforward my body should be sanctified, and that I would use it, and no longer abuse it.

I commend it to all of you, and to all to whom this statement may come, this point as of immense importance:—Do you desire to become more thoroughly spiritualized, to have more intimate relations to truth, to have her make her way into you, take possession of you, train you, guide you, develop you, and give you her own blessed attributes and elements of character, so that you shall be her living impersonation? sanctify your bodies, break up your wretched, miserable, foolish, depraving habits, and rise out of the low level now occupied, into one where the light from above shall shine upon your faces, and you shall see visions of glory ineffable!—Laws of Life.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR STOMACH.

This is one of your first duties. On its performance largely depends the performance of all others. The stomach is the seat of life, the source of health. Its connection with heart and brain is most intimate, and most controlling. It ought, therefore, to be well used. If kindly treated, it will be one of your best friends; if abused, one of your worst enemies. It has a quick sense of imposition and injury; is as full of revenge as a savage, and punishes without pity or remorse. Woe be to the culprit on whom its vengeance falls. Its instruments of vengeance are a fearful host of horrible diseases, acute and chronic. The most common are headache, dyspepsia and bronchitis. This is a trio at the very thought of which any person may tremble. Whoever would escape them must not do violence to his stomach; he must be strictly temperate in all his eating:

1. If you would avoid the headache, the dyspepsia, or the bronchitis, take care of your stomach.

2. If you desire a sound body, take care of your stomach.

3. If you wish an active, vigorous intellect, take care of your stomach.

4. If you covet strong, musical, vocal powers, take care of your stomach.

5. If you want to be a successful preacher, and to preach on till superannuated by age, take care of your stomach.

But how are you to do it? By the persistent observance of three very simple rules:

1. Never eat when you are not hungry—never. No matter how tempting the dishes, nor how urgent the entreaties of those who prepare them. Better disoblige foolish friends a little than incur the wrath of your own stomach.

2. Eat only such food as by experience you find agrees with you—such as your stomach comfortably digests. Never mind what doctors say on this subject; let your stomach be its own judge. God intended it should be such. It is a safer guide than all the doctors in Christendom. Never, never disregard it.

PORK AS FOOD.

Whatever may be thought of other flesh meats, no doubt can be entertained of the deleterious properties of swine's flesh. It is the source of nine-tenths of the scrofula in the world. Not a hog is butchered in the great pork markets, whose liver is not ulcerated; and if this important gland of the body be thus diseased, what must be the state of the entire tissues? God forbade the Jews to eat the hog; and it is stated that among them scrofula is not known. Our attention has been called to this subject by the statement recently made in the public prints, that a whole family were poisoned in New York the other day by eating raw ham, and one of the number died. A microscopical examination of the ham showed that it was diseased, and filled with a kind of insect known as "trichimos," although to the eye it appeared perfectly healthy.

Exercise.—Exercise is healthful, because the more we exercise the faster we breathe. If we breathe faster, we take that much more air into the lungs; but it is the air we breathe which purifies the blood, and the more air we take in, the more perfectly is that process performed; the purer the blood is, as everybody knows, the better the health must be. Hence, when a person's lungs are impaired, he does not take in air enough for the wants of the system; that being the case, the air he does breathe should be the purest possible, which is out-door air. Hence, the more a consumptive stays in the house, the more certain and more speedy is his death.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The care of Teeth.—It is often asked at how early age ought the teeth to be cleansed? We answer, as soon as they are exposed to the action of external influences, which is as soon as they make their appearance. If parents would pay attention to the simple practice of frequent and thorough cleansing of their children's teeth, and would accustom them to the habit of cleansing them for themselves as soon as they are old enough, much unnecessary suffering would be prevented, and their bills with the dentist would be much smaller.—Voice of the West.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 448. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 3, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 7.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ETERNAL SPRING.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

The blushing flowers of spring,
That star our path to-day,
(Types of a bright, eternal spring),
To-morrow pass away;
Though blighted, dead and gone,
A gem unseen by man
Is hid, and from its prison lone
Will burst to life again.

A few short months at most,
The bird repeats her song,
Then spreads her snowy wing to fly
Where summer lingers long;
But will she e'er forget
The bowers she's loved so well?
No! o'er the dear remembered spot
Her song again shall swell.

The dearest, brightest, best,
Are labelled for the tomb,
The grave's the only place of rest
This side the land of bloom;
But will the grave give back
The ones we've loved so dear?
Yes! Eden will restore the love
And sweetness perished here.

The golden links of love
Will glow, undimmed by time,
And Sharon's rose and starry worlds
Will ever bloom and shine.
The dearest, brightest, best,
Will meet no more to sever,
And beauty with perfection rest
In that long, bright forever.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION

Held at Stanbridge, C. E., Feb. 10th to Feb. 13th, 1863, between ELDER MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, and REV. DENNIS CHAPIN, Universalist Missionary of the District of Bedford, C. E.

WRITTEN BY C. P. DOW.

(Continued.)

Friday afternoon. Prayer by Elder C. P. Dow.

ELDER GRANT'S THIRD SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—We are asked, "Why not locate the Roman church here?" We answer, because the angel locates it on the "seven hills." My friend has referred to Joel's prophecy concerning the "last days." The gospel dispensation, being the last period of merciful opportunity to man, and when viewed in the light of an opinion long entertained by the church; viz., that the six days of creation were designed to typify the length of man's probation on this planet, each day of the six representing a thousand years, as Peter more than intimates, when he says, "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Pet. 3: 8), would make it proper to designate the last two days of the great week of time, "the last days." But we are living in the last of the "last days."

Concerning the claim that Dan. 7: 13, 14, was fulfilled during the first century, or, to use his own language, "This was fulfilled at the time of the first advent"; we would inquire, Did "the saints of the Most High take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever"? Was "the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven" then "given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom"? and have "all dominions" served and obeyed him ("one like the Son of man") since that time? (Dan. 7: 18, 27.) There can be but one reasonable answer. Yet it must be so if his position is correct. But it is claimed "John preached the kingdom at hand." Yes. And it was at hand in the sense of approaching, and this is the sense of the original word (engizo); it was the next kingdom of universal empire to come. Daniel was informed that four universal monarchies of Gentile extraction should arise, and be followed by a fifth, which was to be the kingdom of God, set upon earth, to be introduced by the personal, visible coming of the Son of man; and this kingdom was to be given to the saints, every vestige of Gentile government being destroyed to make room for this fifth kingdom.

"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," or age, is explained by my friend to mean—to the end of the Jewish age. But has not Christ been with his people since by the agency of his Spirit? Why not understand it to mean the Christian age? He says he "wants you to understand that there is a symbol of war in the United States." Yes, more than a "symbol of war"; war, bloody, cruel war itself. But that fact alone is not to be regarded as a sign of the end near; but when war there and elsewhere, together with the vast and utterly unparalleled preparations for war now being made are understood in the light of prophecy (Rev. 11: 18; Joel 3: 9; Jer. 25), this becomes a significant sign of the end near. Other points might be noticed if we had the time, but we must proceed to sum up our argument as based upon the signs referred to. I have already referred to the opinion that God designed this world to continue just six thousand years in its present condition, as a scene of trial to man; and shall here set up the claim that the best chronology of the world's duration shows that it will attain to that age during the present century. We can only refer to this item of evidence in our favor in a very brief manner.

But we must pass to our summing up. In Luke 21: 28, 31, we read—"And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." "So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." The kingdom of God is only near when the signs are seen. Did "the times of the Gentiles" END in the first century? It is not until they end that the Son of man will come. My friend has said that prophecy was all fulfilled in the first century.

1. We have shown that none of "these things" (the signs) were seen at or before the destruction of Jerusalem; and my friend has entirely failed even to attempt to show that they did by presenting definite facts to establish his position, as this audience well know; therefore, in the absence of facts to the contrary, and as a consequence resulting from our premises, we claim that the kingdom was not near then.

2. The signs of the approaching king and kingdom were not until "after the tribulation" predicted. If that tribulation was accomplished at the destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 70, then the signs were "after" that event and date; but they did not occur "immediately after" Jerusalem's destruction, hence the "tribulation" did not occur there, as we think we have clearly established; nor did it end till near the close of the last century; therefore the event foretold—the coming of the kingdom, redemption—could not come before, or earlier. This must appear plain, we think, to every one who will candidly consider these points.

3. The generation that sees the signs is the one to witness the event preceded and foretold by them. We have shown that the present generation has seen them. My friend has not been able to show to the contrary, but says "the facts we admit." And well he might, for facts are stubborn things. Hence we conclude that we have the best of reasons to expect the Savior to come and set up his kingdom in this nineteenth century. Because we cannot reasonably expect this generation to live beyond.

4. In Dan. 2: 44, we read, "And in the day of these kings, shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." In this passage we learn that God's kingdom is not set up until the other four are ended, the fourth in its divided state, as symbolized by the ten toes of the image; and when it comes, these will be destroyed. Now the four universal empires are in the past; the ten divisions of the fourth still exist; the time is evidently near; and all things, so far as the prophecy concerning the four kingdoms is concerned, are in a prepared condition for the fifth kingdom to come. Hence the time has fully come for the signs to appear. We look to see if they have come, and lo! they are here. We see them all around us, minutely fulfilled in a most literal manner, as we have proved.

5. In our exposition of the 17th chapter of Revelation, we have identified the power represented by the last head of the Beast, the one that is to carry the harlot woman to the judgment. That power or kingdom now exists with Louis Napoleon at its head, and is doing the very things foretold in the prophecy. And as Napoleon III. is manifestly "the man of destiny," the one that is to accomplish the work, and carry the papal Harlot to her judgment, and as he cannot be expected to live beyond the present century, being fifty-five years old, therefore we expect the overthrow of this harlot woman and the coming of Christ to take place within the present century.

6. The kingdom of God cannot come until the fourth goes down, and until Babylon goes down like a mill-stone cast into the sea. Rev. 18: 21;—"And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found NO MORE AT ALL." This did not take place at the destruction of Jerusalem, nor during the first century. Nor has this event taken place since that time. Babylon, or Rome, the city on the seven hills, the only one on our planet thus located, exists to-day. Hence neither Christ nor his kingdom have come yet; but from this chain of prophecy are manifestly near. This I have shown in proof of my position.

7. I have shown that the marriage of the Lamb cannot come till the whole church is gathered by the angels. But they are not gathered thus until Rome goes down. She has not gone yet, therefore the marriage of the Lamb is yet future, as we have clearly seen. How absurd to attempt to locate this event at the destruction of Jerusalem, where the church was scattered instead of being gathered, not by holy angels of God, but by the warlike hordes of pagan Rome. There was no Bridegroom there. If the marriage of the Lamb took place there, the Bride did not know it. When this event takes place, the mighty triumph of the church will take place, and swelling voices like the mighty thunderings and the deep-toned rush of many waters, shall proclaim the contest ended, Jesus on the throne, the saints gathered to him, "the Bride with the Bridegroom forever to remain." Nothing like this took place in the first century. But signs show it near, and to be expected in the nineteenth century. Demons are doing their fearful work, and would if possible "deceive the very elect." Nothing can be clearer than that the Scriptures teach, that the coming of Christ is FUTURE, PERSONAL, and may be expected in the nineteenth century. (Time expired.)

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Chapin's Third and Last Speech.

Mr. Moderator, Ladies and Gentlemen:—I rise to address you for the last time during this discussion. These will be my closing remarks. My friend on the affirmative of the question will have the closing speech, and sum up what he has said. What I have to say further I must say in this speech, and leave you to judge whether I have sustained my position by the Scriptures or not. My friend was pleased to tell you that the phrase, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," could not mean those that were then alive, but meant those that should live in the nineteenth century. Let us read the Scripture. Matt. 28: 19, 20;—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded YOU: and, lo, I am with YOU alway, even unto the end of the world." Who did Christ mean? To whom was he speaking? Does prophecy go backward? If I was to say to this audience "Lo, I am with you ALWAYS," would you think I meant some other people? Could you think so? I shall not give my opponent the opportunity of twisting the Scriptures so.

He has spoken of what Christ said, "That upon you may come all the blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation" (Matt. 23: 35, 36). These things must come upon the Jews. This referred to the first century, not to the nineteenth century. That people should say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Was not this fulfilled in that time? Let us see. Mark 11: 1-10;—"And when they were nigh to Bethpage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you; and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him and bring him. And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye, The Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither. And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loosed him. And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt? And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded; and they let them go. And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him. And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches of the trees, and strewed them in the way. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: hosannah in the highest." Did not the kingdom come then? Did not Christ come there? It must be so. We see this point is proved. We see ourselves fastened. Luke 12: 32;—"Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." What is this little flock? Believers. How could they see the kingdom unless they were there to receive it? Where did they receive it in this world? It must have been there, in that time. Here we see it fastened again. The accomplishment of events establishes it.

My friend has said somewhat about the time. What can we know about the time? It will come "as a thief." I know that the prophetic day is as a thousand years. Peter says, 2 Pet. 3;—"But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." What can we know about time, then? We should not be ignorant of this fact. I allow it. Then what can we know by the days of prophecy, if sometimes a day is as a thousand years, and sometimes a thousand years is as one day? I would ask the gentleman what he can know by them? Christ says, "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." This settles it. It drives through the whole of it. We pass the point. When Christ says, "all these things shall come upon this generation," there can be no discordant matters. Christ manifested his power. Doubtless there was a manifestation of the kingdom. The sick were healed, the deaf and blind were cured, devils were cast out, and the dead were raised. If the kingdom did not come then, we can not depend upon any thing. I have called attention to these scriptures over and over again. I have not referred to history at all. My friend has depended upon history.

We have proved that the kingdom came in the first century. Prophecy was all fulfilled there. Could the kingdom be preached before it came? Was there not a power there when the prison was opened? Christ "taught as one having authority, and not as the scribes." He could not be with them unless they were there. All the blood spilled upon the earth was to come upon them. I want to know if it was not a great day of judgment? If he comes to them, they must stay where they are. You perceive he could not come to them if he brought them with him. We leave this point with you. You can examine the subject. I am not disposed to tell you that you must believe as I do. But I want you to notice the bearing of the scriptures. I think my friend is mistaken. I think so. "Behold, I come quickly." Did not this mean those who lived then? that he would come to them? And what does the word "quickly" mean? Does it stretch over eighteen hundred years? Does it travel down to the nineteenth century? We have no right to so explain the word "quickly." It will never answer. It makes sad work with the Bible. In the prophetic scriptures, all through the New Testament, it is declared, "I come as a thief."

My friends here are looking for the second coming of Christ. They are expecting him to come soon. They think he will come in the nineteenth century. I do not think so. They have often been mistaken in the past—I think they are mistaken now. Why not believe the Scriptures? History is not reliable; it is not always correct. I hope my friend will consider the scriptures I have brought forward. He must be mistaken, or I am mistaken. We cannot both be right. The Bible is right, whether my friend is or not. (Time expired.)

Concluded next week.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTS

Suggested by the death of little Bertie, only child of D. S. and L. A. Merrill, of East Boston.

Lone and dark is the tomb where your loved one is sleeping,
With the signet of Death on his cold, pallid brow;
You have laid him to rest amid sorrow and mourning,
And the home he once gladdened is desolate now.

His dear voice is hushed and his busy hands folded,
Death holds him a captive in darkness and gloom;
But oh, leave him in hope, for the promise is given—
"Thy children again to their borders shall come."

Again in your arms you will ere long enfold him,
The same cherished form you have laid in the tomb;
The same, but no trace of disease on his features,
All radiant in beauty and health's rosy bloom.

In that glorious kingdom to which we are hasting,
No shadow shall fall on an infantile brow;
No parent shall carry a child to his burial,
No blight nor disease shall those favored ones know.

How gladly we'll welcome the morn of redemption,
When the promised Life-Giver our dear ones shall bring;
Our hearts thrill with joy as we think of the greeting,
When they from the dust shall in loveliness spring.

East Boston, Mass. S. M. H.

For the World's Crisis.

"AVOID THEM."

Yes, reject that heretic. Listen to an affectionate apostle, ever watching with constant prayer and tearful anxiety the interests of the church of God, when he says, "A man that is an heretic after the first and second admonition reject."—Titus 3: 10. Do you wait to know why you should reject him? He is an unchristian man. Would Paul warn us against a real christian? He is an injurious man. Would Paul alarm us where there is no danger? Perhaps you are waiting to know who is a heretic. May we not know? Has the apostle required us to reject a man whom we may never recognize? Let us get his portrait as reflected in the mirror of truth.

An heretic is not every one who holds an error, even though he may chance to mention it to his neighbor. A heretic is an errorist, but every man in error is not an heretic. A heretic is a promoter of heresy, hence if we can ascertain what heresy is, we shall soon recognize the heretic. The Greek term airesis, rendered heresy, is derived from the verb aireo, and means primarily a choice. As those who choose similar ideas and principles usually associate themselves together, airesis comes to signify in a secondary sense a sect, a school, etc. (See Liddell and Scott.) It is always used in harmony with this idea in the Scriptures. It occurs nine times in the New Testament. Five times it is rendered "sect." "Sect (heresy) of the Sadducees." Acts 5: 17. "Certain of the sect (heresy) of the Pharisees.—Acts 15: 5. After the strictest sect of our religion, I lived a Pharisee."—Acts 26: 5. "As concerning this sect (heresy) we know that every where it is spoken against." Acts 28: 22.

The accusers of Paul before Felix brought the following charge against him: "We have found this man a pestilent fellow and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world and a ring-leader of the sect (heresy) of the Nazarenes." Acts 34: 5. They blamed him not so much that he believed as they thought an error, but because he made division and raised up a party wherever he went. For this reason, doubtless, they charged him with heresy (Acts 25: 14), although they themselves were really the sect-makers, inasmuch as they obliged christians to leave the synagogue and go by themselves. Paul states that there were heresies among the church in Corinth, not because they held wrong views of Scripture merely, but because there were divisions, parties, separate companies among them. 1 Cor. 11: 18, 19. In Galations 5: 20, the apostle places heresies in connection with seditions, and we well know that sects are the results of separations. Peter clearly sets forth heresies as the work of "false teachers" whose "pernicious ways" "many shall follow." 1 Peter 2: 1. Have not false teachers ever been the promoters of sects and parties among christians? Now, since heresy so clearly signifies sect, what can a heretic be but a promoter of sectarianism, partyism, etc.? Who then are the party-makers, the sect-makers? They are the heretics whom we reject. So Paul affectionately pleads with us saying, "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." Rom. 16: 17.

Who then ought to plead guilty of this sin and be speechless when wise churches avoid them? First of all, let the creed-maker come penitently forward. A creed may be harmless if intended merely to set forth a summary of one's faith for the removal of ignorance and prejudice, but this is not the purpose to which they have been and are likely to be devoted. They have served rather as so many bars and gates through which the sheep must pass, if they would find the fold. For such a purpose they should readily admit all the "sheep," that there might be but "one fold;" but alas for human creeds! They admit many a goat to the fold, while they leave many a sheep to shiver in the cold till the outside members are compelled to seek other shelter, and behold a new fold, another "little flock," and presently another creed-gate. So sects multiply through creed-making.

The creed-maker may inquire, "Are there not truths essential to salvation?" Certainly there are; but do you think you have got them all in your articles of faith? Have you embodied Abraham's creed in your own? It is written, "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness." His creed was a divine instrument. It embraced all the words of God. Does yours? His will admit the whole flock, for all the sheep hear his (the shepherd's) voice. Will yours? Your creed looks to the man that with fiery zeal maintains the "unity of the trinity," or that accepts baptism as a door to the church, or that admires while he does not obey, the church discipline as delivered by Wesley; or that believes most firmly this, that, or the other fundamental and dispensational truth; but to whom does God look? "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit and trembleth at my word." Isa. 66: 2. Do you dare claim that your creed will admit all to whom God looks? Then by your creed you divide the flock of Christ, and stand before the world a heretic, and having given you a first and second admonition, we shall reject you.

Secondly, let the rejector of truth come and plead guilty. Truth comes not to condemn, but to enlighten; not to divide and scatter the flock, but to edify. Though thus coming in love, and upon an errand of mercy, it has ever met resistance and been an outcast. Christ came as a teacher sent from God. He came unto his own, his own received him not. His disciples they cast out of the synagogue, and hence arose "the sect of the Nazarenes." Who were the heretics? Who were responsible for the division? Not certainly Christ, who taught in meekness the truth, and never counseled a separation from the church; but Pharisees, hypocrites, and lawyers, who resisted the truth. Luther arose amid the darkness of Rome, with "his face as it were the sun," pouring forth a flood of light. He was cast out and his followers. A new sect arose, but who was responsible? Not Luther, but the Pope.

Wesley arose a polished shaft in the hand of God. A great reformation followed and another sect. Did Wesley seek to divide? Did he counsel separation from the mother church? Who then were heretics, but those who cast him out?

Then came the proclamation of the soon coming King. Did the heralds of Jesus' advent at hand seek to become a separate people, a sect? Would they not gladly have remained in their respective churches? Did they counsel division? Why then are they now a distinct people? They have been driven forth by such as resist the truth. Behold then in one who will not candidly investigate, who will not "prove all things," and "hold fast that which is good," who will "shut up the kingdom of heaven against men," and neither go in himself nor suffer them that are entering to go in; behold in such an one a heretic and reject him.

We now come to a third class of heretics. Those who tear, rend, and divide the flock of Christ, by driving into their midst, wedge-like, some erroneous or doubtful doctrines. They are one-idea men. They dote upon some new idea that they have chanced to get, till it assumes immense proportions. Whether it be a seed from the enemy's tare basket, or a kernel of corn from heaven, their mind is not sufficiently well balanced to decide, even if they should pause for so important a work. Impatient to be recognized as the discoverer and reflector of some new light, (?) off they start, and soon make their appearance in the midst of some devoted, peaceful, happy church. Not a prayer have they offered that they may discern the spiritual condition of the church so as to give to each "meat in due season." One brother is in trial, another severely tempted; brotherly kindness needs strengthening in some; and faith confirmed in others; some are bowed by affliction's weight, while others are on the point of being allured by earthly joys: not a thought of all this has the hobbyist. His heart is not large enough to contain any thing but his one idea. To him there is no gospel outside of it. To him there is no honesty of heart that does not embrace it. He proclaims it with zeal of course. The church fearful lest they should resist some truth, listen patiently, although unedified. They investigate, they pray for divine help, they prove it, but in the sincerity of their hearts they—most of them—brand it "error." Still it is pressed upon them, and pressed again, till they remonstrate, and then what a pitious wail against priestcraft and church tyranny. The sympathy of a few are enlisted and there is division. Who is responsible? Not the church, who so patiently sifted a pile of dust, hoping to find a grain of gold, but who remonstrated against being choked with the dust they had sifted! No! but the man who insisted that they should live upon it. When will men learn that gospel liberty is not liberty to choke a church to death with their own thoughts, without any resistance? Not till the church generally "mark them which cause divisions, . . . and avoid them."

I might mention as a fourth class those who worship men, rather than Christ. Such were some in Corinth. Paul was more to some than Christ, while Cephas and Apollos were more to others, and from this fact sprang three parties; and had not Paul corrected them, three sects would have arisen. He who sets up a man as an ensign to the people, rather than Christ, is a sect-maker, a heretic. "Mark them . . . and avoid them.

But the most heretical thing of all is an ungodly life in a nominal christian. One has somewhere said that "the greatest heresy is a wicked life." Paul styles a wicked man in a church a "root of bitterness," from which the church may expect "trouble." Heb. 12: 15. Comp. Deut. 29: 18. Heresy lieth not so much in the head as in the heart. A man may have truth, but if he makes his knowledge a test of christian fellowship, he divides christians and becomes a heretic, even with his truth. A man may hold an error, yet, if he does not "strive," but simply gives to every man a reason of the hope that is in him with meekness and fear, he will not divide christians,—and hence will not be a heretic, though in error. St. Augustine, I believe, once said, "I may be in error, but I will not be a heretic." Paul classes heresy among the works of the flesh. The Spirit yields no such fruit. Heresy, then, is chargeable to an impure heart, an ungodly life. Let churches, then, mark the movements of wicked men. Though they may have a name with the church, though their money may be offered to sustain worship, though their position be high, mark them. If you listen to them, they will divide you, or lead you all from Christ. "Avoid them." "A man that is an heretic, after the first and second admonition reject."

H. F. C.

For the World's Crisis.

THE CHURCH IN MONTREAL.

I have twice surveyed the field where Eld. Grant fought one of his stormiest battles, and gained some of his most successful victories. I spent eight days each time, being sent for by the brethren to attend the opening of their new place of worship in Craig St., which they have hired for $120 a year.

This army of the Lord is not demoralized, but in unity of spirit, bent on making new conquests and gaining new territory. I have found men of principle, who all their lives long have been sceptical, having lost all confidence in a time-serving ministry, a nominal christianity, and the popular theology of the day; who on their knees with uplifted hands to heaven now thank the Lord that Eld. Grant ever came to Montreal, whose name and memory will never be forgotten by this people. Others say they have found a new Bible, rejoicing much in the harmony of revelation. I have not for the last fifteen years seen a more happy, loving people, nor a people among whom I have felt more freedom, or liberty of speech, in addressing an audience upon the cardinal doctrines of revelation.

We continued our meetings every evening, and the congregations and interest increased up to the last, when, according to the request of the brethren, we closed with the Lord's Supper, when we understandingly commemorated the death of Christ, not the son of Mary only, but the Son of God.

We hail nothing short of a divine atonement. We cast no rubbish upon the positive testimony of Scripture. Divine blood was shed. See Acts 20: 28. It is called the blood of God. Again, "As Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Also on the Isle of Patmos—"He that liveth" and will "live forevermore" "was dead."—Rev. 1: 18. And at the Lord's Supper we hail with veneration a divine sacrifice instead of a human atonement, which is unavoidable, if only (as some tell us) the human nature died. But without mental reservation, we can say with Paul, "Christ died" and "Christ rose again." "And the God of peace that brought alive from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep."—Heb. 13: 20. And again, Peter charges it home upon the Jews that they killed the Prince of Life.

God required all that constituted the Christ for an atonement; and just such, and nothing less than such, was nailed to the cross, and poured out his soul unto death. Here is a sacrifice worthy of Christ to offer, and of the Father to accept. Here is firm footing. Here is solid rock. My faith builds here, and all is fable or an idle fancy beside. "Let no man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of this world, and not after Christ."

And I think I hear a voice, coming from some dark corner on the other side of the Atlantic, saying, "If your doctrine be true, then the universe must have been without a God for three days and three nights." Hush! Bro., "you do greatly err, not knowing the Scriptures, neither the power of God." It was not God the Father that died, but the Son of God. You must again read and reread every letter of the sacred page, and then ask how many times it is repeated, that He (Christ) was raised by the power of God? or is it anywhere said that he raised himself?

On the morning of the day that I left the city, I was sent for by a joyful Sister to tell me of a much beloved husband, who on the previous evening had sat down with her for the first time in his life at the Lord's table; and with a heart full to overflowing, and eyes streaming with gratitude to God,—"O!" said she, "this is what I once never expected to see." She had been a Methodist for years, and had tried her skill to bring him in also; but he, being a man of an intelligent, independent turn of mind, and of good morals, chose rather to think for himself, and seeing the moral laxity of professors, together with the inconsistency of the religious creeds of the day, and being unable to reconcile the doctrine of eternal torment in misery with the revealed character of God, settled down in scepticism until Eld. Grant entered Montreal, and the awful story was circulated, and the clergy warned their flocks against an "Infidel" who was going to discuss with a gospel minister.

Curiosity prompted this gentlemen, with many others, to turn out and hear for themselves what this "infidel" had to say for himself. But with astonishment many honest minds among the hundreds that crowded Nordheimer's and Boneventure Halls, night after night, soon came to the conclusion that whatever christianity there was between them, "the infidel had it."

The appeal made to reason and common sense, from the stand-point of Revelation, was so strong, and the urgent necessity of breaking off every sin, turning to the Lord, and an immediate preparation for the mighty future opening upon our planet,—the above gentleman, with many another awakened conscience, followed up, determined to see the end of these meetings. And upon his return home one evening that his wife was not out, he told her that Mr. Grant had called upon all that were desirous of being prayed for to stand up. "And did any rise?" she inquired. "Yes," said she, "and your humble servant among them." This to her was overwhelming. Suffice it to say he is now a living christian, a man of principle, and enjoying a high degree of God's favor, with a commendable zeal for the spread of Bible christianity. They are both united to the Lord and to his church.

Another case somewhat remarkable was that of an intelligent female, who with her pious husband had for years been a member of a Congregational church in England, but had dissolved all connection with it, for the reason, to use her own words, "The church had become a hot-bed of strife and contention," and on her knees before the Lord she had vowed never to join another. Being a conscientious woman, the inconsistencies of ministers and church members with high professions had so operated upon her mind, that she had well nigh lost all confidence in everything bearing the name of religion, having lost the Spirit. In this state of mind she and her husband entered Nordheimer's Hall; and strange to say, she was arrested by the influence of Bro. Grant's first prayer, which passed over her whole frame like a shock of electricity. She followed up meeting after meeting, until she found more than she had lost, and became acquainted with sound doctrine and New Testament christianity, practical and experimental. Herself and husband are living ornaments of a living church, waiting for immortality and eternal life, not at the hour of death, but at the revelation of the Son of man.

One case more, and I shall close this lengthy article. A pious brother, who was in respectable standing at the St. James street chapel, and well qualified to meet his portion in the financial demands of Methodism, became convinced of the soundness of the doctrine that "a dead man is a dead man," or that a man could not be dead and alive at one and the same time, and that "all the wicked will God destroy," or "burn up root and branch," and "be as though they had not been." He resolved upon a middle course between light and darkness, truth and error, and so remain in his church and class.

But on the first Sunday of this honest experiment, the minister, addressing himself to the children of a parent who had just been laid in the grave, told them that "their pious mother was looking down from heaven upon them, and was pleased, or displeased, according as their actions were good or bad." This master in Israel had surely never read that "the dead know not anything," and that in the grave there is neither wisdom nor device. Could it be that he had never read the benediction which Jesus pronounced upon the twelve—"Blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear. For verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see the things which ye see, and have not seen them, and to hear the things which ye hear, and have not heard them"? But the eyes and ears of a dead woman in Montreal, now-a-days, can do more than all the eyes and ears of prophets and righteous men, or all others in olden time put together, light has been so increased. However, this dose of doxy was a little too strong for this weak brother, and so to the minister and class-leader he quietly "gave a reason of the hope that was in him," and respectfully withdrew, and joined himself to a people "of like precious faith."

There are not perhaps upon this continent fifty or fifty-one members of the church who have more understandingly embraced "the faith once delivered to the saints" than have these in Montreal. The rubbish of modern theology had to be swept from the foundation, and a "thus saith the Lord" had to be given, before they moved, and every inch of ground over which they passed was disputed; "the sword of the Lord and of" our modern "Gideon" were withdrawn, and the hostile armies of the aliens had to be vanquished; and at the peril of name and reputation, and even of personal safety, Bro. Miles Grant planted the standard of truth in the city of Montreal, which the foiled enemy sorely feels at this hour.

And I would here remark that many among the hundreds of men and women, who have heard the truth upon these occasions, now hold at a discount the immortality of the soul, and the doctrine of eternal torment in misery, but who will never confess it, lest they should be put out of the synagogue. J. PORTER.

Danville, Apr. 18th, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

"FOLLOW THOU ME."

This is a commandment our Savior has enjoined upon us to observe. If we do not observe it, we know what the result will be. But before we can observe it, we must know what he means. We cannot literally follow the person of Christ as could the Apostles of old, for he has ascended to where he tells us we cannot come. Then how are we to take up our cross and follow Christ? I answer thus: we are to follow in his footsteps, walk as he walked when here upon earth, do as he did. When we do all this we are following our Savior. Let each of us examine ourselves, and see if we are following that Jesus which we expect so soon to see coming in the clouds of heaven.

Sinners, will you not come, take up your cross, and follow that Jesus that has laid down his life for you? You will find the way much safer than the one you are now traveling. C. H. SWEET.

☞ When Algernon Sidney was told that he might save his life by telling a falsehood—by denying his hand-writing—he said, "When God has brought me into a dilemma in which I must assert a lie or lose my life, he gives me a clear indication of my duty, which is to prefer death to falsehood."

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 448. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 3, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 7.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ETERNAL SPRING.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

The blushing flowers of spring,
 That star our path to-day,
(Types of a bright, eternal spring),
 To-morrow pass away;
Though blighted, dead and gone,
 A gem unseen by man
Is hid, and from its prison lone
 Will burst to life again.

A few short months at most,
 The bird repeats her song,
Then spreads her snowy wing to fly
 Where summer lingers long;
But will she e'er forget
 The bowers she's loved so well?
No! o'er the dear remembered spot
 Her song again shall swell.

The dearest, brightest, best,
 Are labelled for the tomb;
The grave's the only place of rest
 This side the land of bloom;
But will the grave give back
 The ones we've loved so dear?
Yes! Eden will restore the love
 And sweetness perished here.

The golden links of love
 Will glow, undimmed by time,
And Sharon's rose and starry worlds
 Will ever bloom and shine.
The dearest, brightest, best,
 Will meet no more to sever,
And beauty with perfection rest
 In that long, bright forever.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION

Held at Stanbridge, C. E., Feb. 10th to Feb. 13th, 1863, between ELDER MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, and REV. DENNIS CHAPIN, Universalist Missionary of the District of Bedford, C. E.

WRITTEN BY C. P. DOW.

(Continued.)

Friday afternoon. Prayer by Elder C. P. Dow.

ELDER GRANT'S THIRD SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—We are asked, "Why not locate the Roman church here?" We answer, because the angel locates it on the "seven hills." My friend has referred to Joel's prophecy concerning the "last days." The gospel dispensation, being the last period of merciful opportunity to man, and when viewed in the light of an opinion long entertained by the church; viz., that the six days of creation were designed to typify the length of man's probation on this planet, each day of the six representing a thousand years, as Peter more than intimates, when he says, "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Pet. 3: 8), would make it proper to designate the last two days of the great week of time, "the last days." But we are living in the last of the "last days."

Concerning the claim that Dan. 7: 13, 14, was fulfilled during the first century, or, to use his own language, "This was fulfilled at the time of the first advent"; we would inquire, Did "the saints of the Most High take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even for ever and ever"? Was "the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven" then "given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom"? and have "all dominions" served and obeyed him ("one like the Son of man") since that time? (Dan. 7: 18, 27.) There can be but one reasonable answer. Yet it must be so if his position is correct. But it is claimed "John preached the kingdom at hand." Yes. And it was at hand in the sense of approaching, and this is the sense of the original word (engizo); it was the next kingdom of universal empire to come. Daniel was informed that four universal monarchies of Gentile extraction should arise, and be followed by a fifth, which was to be the kingdom of God, set upon earth, to be introduced by the personal, visible coming of the Son of man; and this kingdom was to be given to the saints, every vestige of Gentile government being destroyed to make room for this fifth kingdom.

"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," or age, is explained by my friend to mean—to the end of the Jewish age. But has not Christ been with his people since by the agency of his Spirit? Why not understand it to mean the Christian age? He says he "wants you to understand that there is a symbol of war in the United States." Yes, more than a "symbol of war"; war, bloody, cruel war itself. But that fact alone is not to be regarded as a sign of the end near; but when war there and elsewhere, together with the vast and utterly unparalleled preparations for war now being made are understood in the light of prophecy (Rev. 11: 18; Joel 3: 9; Jer. 25), this becomes a significant sign of the end near. Other points might be noticed if we had the time, but we must proceed to sum up our argument as based upon the signs referred to. I have already referred to the opinion that God designed this world to continue just six thousand years in its present condition, as a scene of trial to man; and shall here set up the claim that the best chronology of the world's duration shows that it will attain to that age during the present century. We can only refer to this item of evidence in our favor in a very brief manner.

But we must pass to our summing up. In Luke 21: 28, 31, we read—"And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." "So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." The kingdom of God is only near when the signs are seen. Did "the times of the Gentiles" END in the first century? It is not until they end that the Son of man will come. My friend has said that prophecy was all fulfilled in the first century.

1. We have shown that none of "these things" (the signs) were seen at or before the destruction of Jerusalem; and my friend has entirely failed even to attempt to show that they did by presenting definite facts to establish his position, as this audience well know; therefore, in the absence of facts to the contrary, and as a consequence resulting from our premises, we claim that the kingdom was not near then.

2. The signs of the approaching king and kingdom were not until "after the tribulation" predicted. If that tribulation was accomplished at the destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 70, then the signs were "after" that event and date; but they did not occur "immediately after" Jerusalem's destruction, hence the "tribulation" did not occur there, as we think we have clearly established; nor did it end till near the close of the last century; therefore the event foretold—the coming of the kingdom, redemption—could not come before, or earlier. This must appear plain, we think, to every one who will candidly consider these points.

3. The generation that sees the signs is the one to witness the event preceded and foretold by them. We have shown that the present generation has seen them. My friend has not been able to show to the contrary, but says "the facts we admit." And well he might, for facts are stubborn things. Hence we conclude that we have the best of reasons to expect the Savior to come and set up his kingdom in this nineteenth century. Because we cannot reasonably expect this generation to live beyond.

4. In Dan. 2: 44, we read, "And in the day of these kings, shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." In this passage we learn that God's kingdom is not set up until the other four are ended, the fourth in its divided state, as symbolized by the ten toes of the image; and when it comes, these will be destroyed. Now the four universal empires are in the past; the ten divisions of the fourth still exist; the time is evidently near; and all things, so far as the prophecy concerning the four kingdoms is concerned, are in a prepared condition for the fifth kingdom to come. Hence the time has fully come for the signs to appear. We look to see if they have come, and lo! they are here. We see them all around us, minutely fulfilled in a most literal manner, as we have proved.

5. In our exposition of the 17th chapter of Revelation, we have identified the power represented by the last head of the Beast, the one that is to carry the harlot woman to the judgment. That power or kingdom now exists with Louis Napoleon at its head, and is doing the very things foretold in the prophecy. And as Napoleon III. is manifestly "the man of destiny," the one that is to accomplish the work, and carry the papal Harlot to her judgment, and as he cannot be expected to live beyond the present century, being fifty-five years old, therefore we expect the overthrow of this harlot woman and the coming of Christ to take place within the present century.

6. The kingdom of God cannot come until the fourth goes down, and until Babylon goes down like a mill-stone cast into the sea. Rev. 18: 21;—"And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found NO MORE AT ALL." This did not take place at the destruction of Jerusalem, nor during the first century. Nor has this event taken place since that time. Babylon, or Rome, the city on the seven hills, the only one on our planet thus located, exists to-day. Hence neither Christ nor his kingdom have come yet; but from this chain of prophecy are manifestly near. This I have shown in proof of my position.

7. I have shown that the marriage of the Lamb cannot come till the whole church is gathered by the angels. But they are not gathered thus until Rome goes down. She has not gone yet, therefore the marriage of the Lamb is yet future, as we have clearly seen. How absurd to attempt to locate this event at the destruction of Jerusalem, where the church was scattered instead of being gathered, not by holy angels of God, but by the warlike hordes of pagan Rome. There was no Bridegroom there. If the marriage of the Lamb took place there, the Bride did not know it. When this event takes place, the mighty triumph of the church will take place, and swelling voices like the mighty thunderings and the deep-toned rush of many waters, shall proclaim the contest ended, Jesus on the throne, the saints gathered to him, "the Bride with the Bridegroom forever to remain." Nothing like this took place in the first century. But signs show it near, and to be expected in the nineteenth century. Demons are doing their fearful work, and would if possible "deceive the very elect." Nothing can be clearer than that the Scriptures teach, that the coming of Christ is FUTURE, PERSONAL, and may be expected in the nineteenth century. (Time expired.)

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Chapin's Third and Last Speech.

Mr. Moderator, Ladies and Gentlemen:—I rise to address you for the last time during this discussion. These will be my closing remarks. My friend on the affirmative of the question will have the closing speech, and sum up what he has said. What I have to say further I must say in this speech, and leave you to judge whether I have sustained my position by the Scriptures or not. My friend was pleased to tell you that the phrase, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," could not mean those that were then alive, but meant those that should live in the nineteenth century. Let us read the Scripture. Matt. 28: 19, 20;—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded YOU: and, lo, I am with YOU alway, even unto the end of the world." Who did Christ mean? To whom was he speaking? Does prophecy go backward? If I was to say to this audience "Lo, I am with you ALWAYS," would you think I meant some other people? Could you think so? I shall not give my opponent the opportunity of twisting the Scriptures so.

He has spoken of what Christ said, "That upon you may come all the blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation" (Matt. 23: 35, 36). These things must come upon the Jews. This referred to the first century, not to the nineteenth century. That people should say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Was not this fulfilled in that time? Let us see. Mark 11: 1-10;—"And when they were nigh to Bethpage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you; and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him and bring him. And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye, The Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither. And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met; and they loosed him. And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt? And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded; and they let them go. And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him. And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches of the trees, and strewed them in the way. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: hosannah in the highest." Did not the kingdom come then? Did not Christ come there? It must be so. We see this point is proved. We see ourselves fastened. Luke 12: 32;—"Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." What is this little flock? Believers. How could they see the kingdom unless they were there to receive it? Where did they receive it in this world? It must have been there, in that time. Here we see it fastened again. The accomplishment of events establishes it.

My friend has said somewhat about the time. What can we know about the time? It will come "as a thief." I know that the prophetic day is as a thousand years. Peter says, 2 Pet. 3;—"But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." What can we know about time, then? We should not be ignorant of this fact. I allow it. Then what can we know by the days of prophecy, if sometimes a day is as a thousand years, and sometimes a thousand years is as one day? I would ask the gentleman what he can know by them? Christ says, "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." This settles it. It drives through the whole of it. We pass the point. When Christ says, "all these things shall come upon this generation," there can be no discordant matters. Christ manifested his power. Doubtless there was a manifestation of the kingdom. The sick were healed, the deaf and blind were cured, devils were cast out, and the dead were raised. If the kingdom did not come then, we can not depend upon any thing. I have called attention to these scriptures over and over again. I have not referred to history at all. My friend has depended upon history.

We have proved that the kingdom came in the first century. Prophecy was all fulfilled there. Could the kingdom be preached before it came? Was there not a power there when the prison was opened? Christ "taught as one having authority, and not as the scribes." He could not be with them unless they were there. All the blood spilled upon the earth was to come upon them. I want to know if it was not a great day of judgment? If he comes to them, they must stay where they are. You perceive he could not come to them if he brought them with him. We leave this point with you. You can examine the subject. I am not disposed to tell you that you must believe as I do. But I want you to notice the bearing of the scriptures. I think my friend is mistaken. I think so. "Behold, I come quickly." Did not this mean those who lived then? that he would come to them? And what does the word "quickly" mean? Does it stretch over eighteen hundred years? Does it travel down to the nineteenth century? We have no right to so explain the word "quickly." It will never answer. It makes sad work with the Bible. In the prophetic scriptures, all through the New Testament, it is declared, "I come as a thief."

My friends here are looking for the second coming of Christ. They are expecting him to come soon. They think he will come in the nineteenth century. I do not think so. They have often been mistaken in the past—I think they are mistaken now. Why not believe the Scriptures? History is not reliable; it is not always correct. I hope my friend will consider the scriptures I have brought forward. He must be mistaken, or I am mistaken. We cannot both be right. The Bible is right, whether my friend is or not. (Time expired.)

Concluded next week.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTS

Suggested by the death of little Bertie, only child of D. S. and L. A. Merrill, of East Boston.

Lone and dark is the tomb where your loved one is sleeping,
With the signet of Death on his bold, pallid brow;
You have laid him to rest amid sorrow and mourning,
And the home he once gladdened is desolate now.

His dear voice is hushed and his busy hands folded,
Death holds him a captive in darkness and gloom;
But oh, leave him in hope, for the promise is given—
"Thy children again to their borders shall come."

Again in your arms you will ere long enfold him,
The same cherished form you have laid in the tomb;
The same, but no trace of disease on his features,
All radiant in beauty and health's rosy bloom.

In that glorious kingdom to which we are hasting,
No shadow shall fall on an infantile brow;
No parent shall carry a child to his burial,
No blight nor disease shall those favored ones know.

How gladly we'll welcome the morn of redemption,
When the promised Life-Giver our dear ones shall bring;
Our hearts thrill with joy as we think of the greeting,
When they from the dust shall in loveliness spring.

East Boston, Mass. S. M. H.

For the World's Crisis.

"AVOID THEM."

Yes, reject that heretic. Listen to an affectionate apostle, ever watching with constant prayer and tearful anxiety the interests of the church of God, when he says, "A man that is an heretic after the first and second admonition reject."—Titus 3: 10. Do you wait to know why you should reject him? He is an unchristian man. Would Paul warn us against a real christian? He is an injurious man. Would Paul alarm us where there is no danger? Perhaps you are waiting to know who is a heretic. May we not know? Has the apostle required us to reject a man whom we may never recognize? Let us get his portrait as reflected in the mirror of truth.

An heretic is not every one who holds an error, even though he may chance to mention it to his neighbor. A heretic is an errorist, but every man in error is not an heretic. A heretic is a promoter of heresy, hence if we can ascertain what heresy is, we shall soon recognize the heretic. The Greek term airesis, rendered heresy, is derived from the verb aireo, and means primarily a choice. As those who choose similar ideas and principles usually associate themselves together, airesis comes to signify in a secondary sense a sect, a school, etc. (See Liddell and Scott.) It is always used in harmony with this idea in the Scriptures. It occurs nine times in the New Testament. Five times it is rendered "sect." "Sect (heresy) of the Sadducees." Acts 5: 17. "Certain of the sect (heresy) of the Pharisees.—Acts 15: 5. After the strictest sect of our religion, I lived a Pharisee." Acts 26: 5. "As concerning this sect (heresy) we know that every where it is spoken against." Acts 28: 22.

The accusers of Paul before Felix brought the following charge against him: "We have found this man a pestilent fellow and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world and a ring-leader of the sect (heresy) of the Nazarenes." Acts 34: 5. They blamed him not so much that he believed as they thought an error, but because he made division and raised up a party wherever he went. For this reason, doubtless, they charged him with heresy (Acts 25: 14), although they themselves were really the sect-makers, inasmuch as they obliged christians to leave the synagogue and go by themselves. Paul states that there were heresies among the church in Corinth, not because they held wrong views of Scripture merely, but because there were divisions, parties, separate companies among them. 1 Cor. 11: 18, 19. In Galatians 5: 20, the apostle places heresies in connection with seditions, and we well know that sects are the results of separations. Peter clearly sets forth heresies as the work of "false teachers" whose "pernicious ways" "many shall follow." 1 Peter 2: 1. Have not false teachers ever been the promoters of sects and parties among christians? Now, since heresy so clearly signifies sect, what can a heretic be but a promoter of sectarianism, partyism, etc.? Who then are the party-makers, the sect-makers? They are the heretics whom we reject. So Paul affectionately pleads with us saying, "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." Rom. 16: 17.

Who then ought to plead guilty of this sin and be speechless when wise churches avoid them? First of all, let the creed-maker come penitently forward. A creed may be harmless if intended merely to set forth a summary of one's faith for the removal of ignorance and prejudice, but this is not the purpose to which they have been and are likely to be devoted. They have served rather as so many bars and gates through which the sheep must pass, if they would find the fold. For such a purpose they should readily admit all the "sheep," that there might be but "one fold;" but alas for human creeds! They admit many a goat to the fold, while they leave many a sheep to shiver in the cold till the outside members are compelled to seek other shelter, and behold a new fold, another "little flock," and presently another creed-gate. So sects multiply through creed-making.

The creed-maker may inquire, "Are there not truths essential to salvation?" Certainly there are; but do you think you have got them all in your articles of faith? Have you embodied Abraham's creed in your own? It is written, "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness." His creed was a divine instrument. It embraced all the words of God. Does yours? His will admit the whole flock, for all the sheep hear his (the shepherd's) voice. Will yours? Your creed looks to the man that with fiery zeal maintains the "unity of the trinity," or that accepts baptism as a door to the church, or that admires while he does not obey, the church discipline as delivered by Wesley; or that believes most firmly this, that, or the other fundamental and dispensational truth; but to whom does God look? "To this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit and trembleth at my word." Isa. 66: 2. Do you dare claim that your creed will admit all to whom God looks? Then by your creed you divide the flock of Christ, and stand before the world a heretic, and having given you a first and second admonition, we shall reject you.

Secondly, let the rejector of truth come and plead guilty. Truth comes not to condemn, but to enlighten; not to divide and scatter the flock, but to edify. Though thus coming in love, and upon an errand of mercy, it has ever met resistance and been an outcast. Christ came as a teacher sent from God. He came unto his own, his own received him not. His disciples they cast out of the synagogue, and hence arose "the sect of the Nazarenes." Who were the heretics? Who were responsible for the division? Not certainly Christ, who taught in meekness the truth, and never counseled a separation from the church; but Pharisees, hypocrites, and lawyers, who resisted the truth. Luther arose amid the darkness of Rome, with "his face as it were the sun," pouring forth a flood of light. He was cast out and his followers. A new sect arose, but who was responsible? Not Luther, but the Pope.

Wesley arose a polished shaft in the hand of God. A great reformation followed and another sect. Did Wesley seek to divide? Did he counsel separation from the mother church? Who then were heretics, but those who cast him out?

Then came the proclamation of the soon coming King. Did the heralds of Jesus' advent at hand seek to become a separate people, a sect? Would they not gladly have remained in their respective churches? Did they counsel division? Why then are they now a distinct people? They have been driven forth by such as resist the truth. Behold then in one who will not candidly investigate, who will not "prove all things," and "hold fast that which is good," who will "shut up the kingdom of heaven against men," and neither go in himself nor suffer them that are entering to go in; behold in such an one a heretic and reject him.

We now come to a third class of heretics. Those who tear, rend, and divide the flock of Christ, by driving into their midst, wedge-like, some erroneous or doubtful doctrines. They are one-idea men. They dote upon some new idea that they have chanced to get, till it assumes immense proportions. Whether it be a seed from the enemy's tare basket, or a kernel of corn from heaven, their mind is not sufficiently well balanced to decide, even if they should pause for so important a work. Impatient to be recognized as the discoverer and reflector of some new light, (?) off they start, and soon make their appearance in the midst of some devoted, peaceful, happy church. Not a prayer have they offered that they may discern the spiritual condition of the church so as to give to each "meat in due season." One brother is in trial, another severely tempted; brotherly kindness needs strengthening in some; and faith confirmed in others; some are bowed by affliction's weight, while others are on the point of being allured by earthly joys; not a thought of all this has the hobbyist. His heart is not large enough to contain any thing but his one idea. To him there is no gospel outside of it. To him there is no honesty of heart that does not embrace it. He proclaims it with zeal of course. The church fearful lest they should resist some truth, listen patiently, although unedified. They investigate, they pray for divine help, they prove it, but in the sincerity of their hearts they—most of them—brand it "error." Still it is pressed upon them, and pressed again, till they remonstrate, and then what a pitious wail against priestcraft and church tyranny. The sympathy of a few are enlisted and there is division. Who is responsible? Not the church, who so patiently sifted a pile of dust, hoping to find a grain of gold, but who remonstrated against being choked with the dust they had sifted! No! but the man who insisted that they should live upon it. When will men learn that gospel liberty is not liberty to choke a church to death with their own thoughts, without any resistance? Not till the church generally "mark them which cause divisions, . . . and avoid them."

I might mention as a fourth class those who worship men, rather than Christ. Such were some in Corinth. Paul was more to some than Christ, while Cephas and Apollos were more to others, and from this fact sprang three parties; and had not Paul corrected them, three sects would have arisen. He who sets up a man as an ensign to the people, rather than Christ, is a sect-maker, a heretic. "Mark them . . . and avoid them.

But the most heretical thing of all is an ungodly life in a nominal christian. One has somewhere said that "the greatest heresy is a wicked life." Paul styles a wicked man in a church a "root of bitterness," from which the church may expect "trouble." Heb. 12: 15. Comp. Deut. 29: 18. Heresy lieth not so much in the head as in the heart. A man may have truth, but if he makes his knowledge a test of christian fellowship, he divides christians and becomes a heretic, even with his truth. A man may hold an error, yet, if he does not "strive," but simply gives to every man a reason of the hope that is in him with meekness and fear, he will not divide christians,—and hence will not be a heretic, though in error. St. Augustine, I believe, once said, "I may be in error, but I will not be a heretic." Paul classes heresy among the works of the flesh. The Spirit yields no such fruit. Heresy, then, is chargeable to an impure heart, an ungodly life. Let churches, then, mark the movements of wicked men. Though they may have a name with the church, though their money may be offered to sustain worship, though their position be high, mark them. If you listen to them, they will divide you, or lead you all from Christ. "Avoid them." "A man that is an heretic, after the first and second admonition reject."

H. F. C.

For the World's Crisis.

THE CHURCH IN MONTREAL.

I have twice surveyed the field where Eld. Grant fought one of his stormiest battles, and gained some of his most successful victories. I spent eight days each time, being sent for by the brethren to attend the opening of their new place of worship in Craig St., which they have hired for $120 a year.

This army of the Lord is not demoralized, but in unity of spirit, bent on making new conquests and gaining new territory. I have found men of principle, who all their lives long have been sceptical, having lost all confidence in a time-serving ministry, a nominal christianity, and the popular theology of the day; who on their knees with uplifted hands to heaven now thank the Lord that Eld. Grant ever came to Montreal, whose name and memory will never be forgotten by this people. Others say they have found a new Bible, rejoicing much in the harmony of revelation. I have not for the last fifteen years seen a more happy, loving people, nor a people among whom I have felt more freedom, or liberty of speech, in addressing an audience upon the cardinal doctrines of revelation.

We continued our meetings every evening, and the congregations and interest increased up to the last, when, according to the request of the brethren, we closed with the Lord's Supper, when we understandingly commemorated the death of Christ, not the son of Mary only, but the Son of God.

We hail nothing short of a divine atonement. We cast no rubbish upon the positive testimony of Scripture. Divine blood was shed. See Acts 20: 28. It is called the blood of God. Again, "As Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Also on the Isle of Patmos—"He that liveth" and will "live forevermore" "was dead."—Rev. 1: 18. And at the Lord's Supper we hail with veneration a divine sacrifice instead of a human atonement, which is unavoidable, if only (as some tell us) the human nature died. But without mental reservation, we can say with Paul, "Christ died" and "Christ rose again." "And the God of peace that brought alive from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep."—Heb. 13: 20. And again, Peter charges it home upon the Jews that they killed the Prince of Life.

God required all that constituted the Christ for an atonement; and just such, and nothing less than such, was nailed to the cross, and poured out his soul unto death. Here is a sacrifice worthy of Christ to offer, and of the Father to accept. Here is firm footing. Here is solid rock. My faith builds here, and all is fable or an idle fancy beside. "Let no man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of this world, and not after Christ."

And I think I hear a voice, coming from some dark corner on the other side of the Atlantic, saying, "If your doctrine be true, then the universe must have been without a God for three days and three nights." Hush! Bro., "you do greatly err, not knowing the Scriptures, neither the power of God." It was not God the Father that died, but the Son of God. You must again read and revere every letter of the sacred page, and then ask how many times it is repeated, that He (Christ) was raised by the power of God? or is it anywhere said that he raised himself?

On the morning of the day that I left the city, I was sent for by a joyful Sister to tell me of a much beloved husband, who on the previous evening had sat down with her for the first time in his life at the Lord's table; and with a heart full to overflowing, and eyes streaming with gratitude to God,—"O!" said she, "this is what I once never expected to see." She had been a Methodist for years, and had tried her skill to bring him in also; but he, being a man of an intelligent, independent turn of mind, and of good morals, chose rather to think for himself, and seeing the moral laxity of professors, together with the inconsistency of the religious creeds of the day, and being unable to reconcile the doctrine of eternal torment in misery with the revealed character of God, settled down in scepticism until Eld. Grant entered Montreal, and the awful story was circulated, and the clergy warned their flocks against an "Infidel" who was going to discuss with a gospel minister.

Curiosity prompted this gentlemen, with many others, to turn out and hear for themselves what this "infidel" had to say for himself. But with astonishment many honest minds among the hundreds that crowded Nordheimer's and Boneventure Halls, night after night, soon came to the conclusion that whatever christianity there was between them, "the infidel had it."

The appeal made to reason and common sense, from the stand-point of Revelation, was so strong, and the urgent necessity of breaking off every sin, turning to the Lord, and an immediate preparation for the mighty future opening upon our planet,—the above gentleman, with many another awakened conscience, followed up, determined to see the end of these meetings. And upon his return home one evening that his wife was not out, he told her that Mr. Grant had called upon all that were desirous of being prayed for to stand up. "And did any rise?" she inquired. "Yes," said she, "and your humble servant among them." This to her was overwhelming. Suffice it to say he is now a living christian, a man of principle, and enjoying a high degree of God's favor, with a commendable zeal for the spread of Bible christianity. They are both united to the Lord and to his church.

Another case somewhat remarkable was that of an intelligent female, who with her pious husband had for years been a member of a Congregational church in England, but had dissolved all connection with it, for the reason, to use her own words, "The church had become a hot-bed of strife and contention," and on her knees before the Lord she had vowed never to join another. Being a conscientious woman, the inconsistencies of ministers and church members with high professions had so operated upon her mind, that she had well nigh lost all confidence in everything bearing the name of religion, having lost the Spirit. In this state of mind she and her husband entered Nordheimer's Hall; and strange to say, she was arrested by the influence of Bro. Grant's first prayer, which passed over her whole frame like a shock of electricity. She followed up meeting after meeting, until she found more than she had lost, and became acquainted with sound doctrine and New Testament christianity, practical and experimental. Herself and husband are living ornaments of a living church, waiting for immortality and eternal life, not at the hour of death, but at the revelation of the Son of man.

One case more, and I shall close this lengthy article. A pious brother, who was in respectable standing at the St. James street chapel, and well qualified to meet his portion in the financial demands of Methodism, became convinced of the soundness of the doctrine that "a dead man is a dead man," or that a man could not be dead and alive at one and the same time, and that "all the wicked will God destroy," or "burn up root and branch," and "be as though they had not been." He resolved upon a middle course between light and darkness, truth and error, and so remain in his church and class.

But on the first Sunday of this honest experiment, the minister, addressing himself to the children of a parent who had just been laid in the grave, told them that "their pious mother was looking down from heaven upon them, and was pleased, or displeased, according as their actions were good or bad." This master in Israel had surely never read that "the dead know not anything," and that in the grave there is neither wisdom nor device. Could it be that he had never read the benediction which Jesus pronounced upon the twelve—"Blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear. For verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see the things which ye see, and have not seen them, and to hear the things which ye hear, and have not heard them"? But the eyes and ears of a dead woman in Montreal, now-a-days, can do more than all the eyes and ears of prophets and righteous men, or all others in olden time put together, light has been so increased. However, this dose of doxy was a little too strong for this weak brother, and so to the minister and class-leader he quietly "gave a reason of the hope that was in him," and respectfully withdrew, and joined himself to a people "of like precious faith."

There are not perhaps upon this continent fifty or fifty-one members of the church who have more understandingly embraced "the faith once delivered to the saints" than have these in Montreal. The rubbish of modern theology had to be swept from the foundation, and a "thus saith the Lord" had to be given, before they moved, and every inch of ground over which they passed was disputed; "the sword of the Lord and of" our modern "Gideon" were withdrawn, and the hostile armies of the aliens had to be vanquished; and at the peril of name and reputation, and even of personal safety, Bro. Miles Grant planted the standard of truth in the city of Montreal, which the foiled enemy sorely feels at this hour.

And I would here remark that many among the hundreds of men and women, who have heard the truth upon these occasions, now hold at a discount the immortality of the soul, and the doctrine of eternal torment in misery, but who will never confess it, lest they should be put out of the synagogue. J. PORTER.

Danville, Apr. 18th, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

"FOLLOW THOU ME."

This is a commandment our Savior has enjoined upon us to observe. If we do not observe it, we know what the result will be. But before we can observe it, we must know what he means. We cannot literally follow the person of Christ as could the Apostles of old, for he has ascended to where he tells us we cannot come. Then how are we to take up our cross and follow Christ? I answer thus: we are to follow in his footsteps, walk as he walked when here upon earth, do as he did. When we do all this we are following our Savior. Let each of us examine ourselves, and see if we are following that Jesus which we expect so soon to see coming in the clouds of heaven.

Sinners, will you [illegible] take up your cross, and follow that [illegible] that has laid down his life for you? You will [illegible] the way much safer than the one you are now traveling. C. H. SWEET.

☞ When Algernon Sidney was told that he might save his life by telling a falsehood—by denying his hand-writing—he said, "When God has brought me into a dilemma in which I must assert a lie or lose my life, he gives me a clear indication of my duty, which is to prefer death to falsehood."

For the World's Crisis.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

The church, in its wilderness journey from the days of the first Advent to the "perilous times" of the second Advent, may be aptly compared to the man of Jerusalem traveling to Jericho, who fell among robbers; who, having stripped and wounded him, went away leaving him half dead. As the condition of the traveler when he set out on his journey finely clad and equipped, full of hope and vigor, compares with his stripped and wounded condition when left by the robbers; so does the primitive church at Jerusalem, filled with the Holy Ghost, compare with her shorn, half-dead condition of the present day. Who will act the part of the Good Samaritan to her now?

We see in the parable what she is to expect from those to whom she might naturally look for relief—her guides; they each pass by "on the other side." To whom, then, is she to look to pour in the oil and the wine, to bind up her wounds, conduct her to the inn, take care of her at his own charges, and hire others to do what he can not do himself? Here is a work to be done, a work of cost, a work of detention, a work of self-denial, without human sympathy or reward. Who is ready for the sacrifice? Who?

We are fully aware to lift a voice here and expect to be heard, is like sending up a cry amid the roar of Niagara. But God can hear, and he bids us speak trusting in him to command listening ears.

What is the work to be accomplished? Even to restore that which has been ruthlessly taken away. What is this?

CHRISTIAN UNION.

Her beautiful "over all"—"LOVE," is taken away, and how forlorn is her condition without it! even like that of the unfortunate traveler, wounded, fallen, stripped, half-dead. How is she to be raised up? By the restoration of this her "bond of perfection." How is this to be done?

BY LOVE.

The love that "many waters can not quench," the love of Christ; the love that recognizes our Lord in every one who bears His image; the love that holds every thing subordinate to this image; the love that will not sunder this bond any more than it will sunder the bond from Christ himself; the love that remembers His words—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me"; the love that will "endure all things for the elect's sake, that they may also obtain the salvation that is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory"; the love that will not "judge thy brother," nor "set at naught thy brother"; the love that is content that "every one of us shall give account of himself to God"; the love that walks charitably, and will not destroy thy brother with thy meat, for whom Christ died; the love that heeds these words—"The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost"; the love that remembers—"He that in these things serveth Christ, is acceptable to God and approved of men"; the love that follows after the things that make for peace, and the things wherewith one may edify another; the love that obeys these words—"For meat destroy not the work of God"; the love that says, "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak"; the love that will have its faith to itself before God, rather than make that faith a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way; in short, the love that never fails, that bears the infirmities of the weak; that does not please itself, but pleases his neighbor for his good to edification, even as Christ pleased not himself; that bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.

Are we prepared for this Samaritan work? Shall we not have to learn a few lessons upon the house-top, in prayer, ere we are fitted to usher in this new dispensation of LOVE?—to fulfill the new commandment—"That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another"? How many, Peter-like, will cry out even to the above, "'Not so, Lord'—they do not believe the truth, therefore we can not fellowship them, even if they do bear thine image!"

With all humility and self-abasement, as in the same condemnation, without a reflection upon the motives of any, suffer us here to premise, that we have as a people set up, unwittingly, a blind adoration for truth in the place of Christ himself, and gone throughout the length and breadth of the land crying to all, indiscriminately, Bow the knee, under pain of death, without regard to the image of Christ in his saints, thus making something else superior to Christ himself for salvation! We stand appalled at the thought, and cry out, Father, forgive, we knew not what we did! But have we not done it? Are we not verily guilty concerning our brother? Have we not set up a standard, and cut off on this side according to it, and cut off on that side according to it, until we have been left to imbibe the very same denunciatory, sectarian spirit which forced us from the churches in which we were cradled?—and we are now, in our turn, suffering from each other the very blows we dealt, in our blind zeal, upon others. Not that we would love truth less, but Christ more. We would make every thing bow to Christ in his saints. We would hold every thing subordinate to

CHRISTIAN LOVE.

Until we come to this point we are scattering abroad instead of gathering with or in Christ. We are tearing open the wounds—yea, we are wounding Him in the house of his friends. We are not pouring in the oil and wine to restore His fallen spouse. O! thou true, good Samaritan, our eyes are upto thee in this our distress. Come, thou, to our rescue! Imbue every child of thine with thy Spirit, and the work is done,—that we revile not, threaten not, but commit the keeping of our souls to him in well-doing; that we lift up the fallen Cornelius, and bid him stand upon his feet saying, I also am a man; that we perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but all who fear God and work righteousness are accepted with him; that we call no man common or unclean; that each saint become a good Samaritan; that the Martha spirit be banished, and the Mary spirit imitated; that the children of Issachar, who have "understanding of the times, and know what Israel ought to do, come forward; and the children of Zebulon not of double heart"; that, as the thousands of Israel came with one heart to bring the kingdom of Saul to David according to the word of the Lord, so, in accordance to the same word, in the great antitype, may the thousands of saints now come forward with one heart to bring the kingdoms of this world to

"David's greater Son."

May this one idea, like the rod of Moses, swallow up every other, until the grand chorus shall ascend from every loyal heart—

> "Bring forth the royal diadem,
> And crown him Lord of all."

E. S. WILLARD.

Hammonton, N. J., March, 1864.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, May 3, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

ANOTHER DISCUSSION.

We have arranged to have a discussion in Griswoldville, Me., with a Methodist minister by the name of Jones. It is to commence Tuesday evening, May 10th, and continue four evenings.

QUESTION. "Do the Scriptures teach that the wicked will suffer eternal misery?"

MEETINGS IN BOSTON.

We spent the last two Lord's days with the church in Lowell street, Boston, and find it in a healthy condition, with an interesting Sabbath School. Their meetings are well attended by an intelligent audience. Three requested prayers, and others are inquiring for the way of life. The truth is gaining ground in the city; but error is advancing much more rapidly. These are days when fables are taking the place of the word of the Lord. The great body of the people seem to care but little about what is taught in the Scriptures. It is astonishing to see the rapid progress towards infidelity, which is seen among those who hold the first positions in society.

A clergyman from one of the churches called on us a few days since to obtain some facts on the subject of Spiritualism. He wished to preach against it, as he found his friends were becoming poisoned by its false and seducing teachings. He was surprised to see what progress that system was making. We apprehend that greater surprise awaits him. But few have but even a faint idea of the work Satan is accomplishing through Spiritualism. It still looks "like a lamb" to them, while it is doing the work of the "dragon." We are glad to see some waking up to a sense of their danger. Let such sound the alarm to all around. This is the hour of peril,—emphatically so. Christian soldier, do not think of sleeping now. "Watch, and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."

☞ To those interested in our next series of meetings in Montreal, C. E., we would say the time of their commencement is changed from June 14th to June 9th.

OUR DISCUSSION WITH ELD. HULL.

We hear of very encouraging results from our late discussion in Lynn, with Eld. Moses Hull. Truth seeks the light, while error succeeds best in darkness.

During the debate, our opponent took a bold position against the marriage laws; claiming that adultery is sanctioned by all the churches in the land, because they will not allow a man, who finds a woman whom he may chance to love more than his present wife, to leave her at pleasure, and unite with his new love, with the privilege of leaving the latter whenever he finds another that suits him better. This is called the "Divine law of marriage," as taught by the spirits. The present laws of marriage seem to be quite obnoxious to many of the Spiritualists. They are seeking to have them abolished. They are out-spoken on the subject. When they take the reins of government, we may expect a very radical change in the social, political, moral and religious aspects of society. A prominent Spiritualist lecturer stated in our hearing that the spirits and Spiritualists purpose to take steps at once to revolutionize all the present systems of the world, and bring all into harmony.

Eld. Hull claimed that the man leaves at the death of the physical organism; and that this man is the spirit which returns to make the communications. His Bible argument was about the same as most bring forward to sustain the immortality of the soul. He did as well as any one could do, perhaps, on that side; but the waves of error only spent their strength in vain, when they dashed against the truth of the "Rock of Ages." The Bible, and the christian's hope, never looked better, or more valuable, than when passing through the criticisms designed for their overthrow. The test only served to show the strength of our foundation. It stands ever sure.

We laid the following points before our opponent, but he was pleased to pass them unnoticed:—His spirit-man is either transmitted, created, or pre-existent; either view, we endeavored to show, would involve him in very serious difficulties.

1. If the spirit-man is transmitted from father to son, then it is divisible; and if divisible, it is destructible; hence not immortal, as he assumes.

2. If it is created at birth, then the Lord must be at work night and day manufacturing spirits, not excepting illegitimates.

3. If preexistent, then there must be a vast reservoir of spirits waiting to be imprisoned in tenements of clay. Why should the Lord put them in such corrupt prisons?

In further consideration of Eld. Hull's theory of the spirit-man, we remarked, that the spirit is either the man, or it is not. If it is the conscious entity, then it is the MAN; because man is a conscious being; and there are not two conscious entities in the same individual.

The spirit is either the whole man, or a part of him. It is not claimed to be the whole of him; then it must be either a part of him, or no part of him. If no part, then it is something foreign to him, and the discussion also. If it is a part of him, then it is not a man by itself, and therefore should never be called man, more than an arm, eye, or foot. We do not find the spirit ever denominated man; therefore, we conclude it is not the man, consequently not a conscious entity by itself.

Again, if the spirit is a part of man, then it commences with him, and stops when he does, and therefore is not a man by itself. If man is mortal, then every part of him is mortal also; hence it follows, that if the spirit is a part of man, it must be mortal; for what is true of the whole is of ALL its parts. Job 4: 17;—"Shall MORTAL MAN be more just than God?" Then the Scriptures teach that the entire man is mortal.

Now let one plain passage be brought to show that a part of man is immortal, then Job 4: 17 is not true. We asked our opponent which position he would take, that the spirit is a part of man, or no part of him? We got no answer.

If the spirit is a PART of man, then it was made when he was. But man was made of dust—the entire man—no intimation to the contrary. Gen. 2: 7;—"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." Deut. 4: 32;—"God created man upon the earth." "The first man is of the earth, earthy."—1 Cor. 15: 47. Nothing added to him but "the breath of life," hence nothing else to take away. He is called man before he receives the breath of life, and after it is taken away; therefore the breath of life does not constitute him a man. And as he is a man complete in all his parts, before he receives "the breath of life," it follows that it is not a component part of him.

Again, if the spirit is the man, it is either mortal or immortal. If a part of man, it is mortal, because man is mortal. If immortal, it is not a part of man; hence man has no such spirit, as intimated in the question. Man's hand is a part of him; his eye, brain, heart, blood, etc., are parts of him and mortal, because parts of a mortal being. The hand severed is not a man, so of EVERY part—spirit and all.

We find no proof that any thing leaves man at death but "the breath of life" in his nostrils. This breath is all the spirit we find added to the natural man after his creation, and all that is taken away at death. "Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils." Isa. 2: 22. Job says, "The spirit of God is in my nostrils."—Job 27: 3. David says, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath (spirit), they die, and return to their dust."—Ps. 104: 29. Again, when speaking of man, he says, "His breath (spirit) goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4. In Eccl. 12: 7, we read, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit (breath) return unto God who gave it." In these examples from Job, David and Solomon, the words "spirit" and "breath" are from the same Hebrew word, ruach. These scriptures show that there is one spirit in a man's nostrils, called "the breath of life, which leaves him at death. As it was given him by his Creator after he was made, it is proper to say it returns to him when he takes "away their breath."

It is very evident that the Scriptures plainly teach there is a spirit in man's nostrils which leaves him at death; now do they teach any where that there is yet another spirit which leaves at the same time, which is the real man? We fail to find any proof of such a doctrine in the Bible, philosophy, facts, or common sense.

"A NATION MAKER."

The world are still wondering at the movements of Napoleon. He is pretty sure to keep on the top wave, and secure the chief advantage to be gained from every great movement among the nations. In a late communication to one of our exchanges, published in New York, the correspondent calls him the "Nation Maker," and says, "After fixing Maximilian in Mexico, he designs recognizing the Southern Confederacy. Keep a sharp look-out over the bows for the war-ships of Napoleon."

NAPOLEON'S STATUE.

The city of Rouen has recently had a very nice equestrian statue of Napoleon erected, by a distinguished French sculptor. When completed, the committee were invited to visit it. While it was being exhibited, "the great horse and rider fell to the floor, broken into a thousand pieces." Some think it is ominous of what is coming, when the governments of earth will be dashed to pieces.

THE CONFEDERATE STEAMER ALABAMA.

The following questions and answers, concerning the noted steamer Alabama, that has made so much trouble on the seas, were published in the Banner of Light, a leading Spiritualist paper, dated April 9th, 1864. The questions are put to a spirit speaking through a medium in Boston:—

"SPIRIT.—The audience are now at liberty to propound whatever questions they may desire to have answered. If the audience have no questions to offer, we will resign our control to one who is desirous of answering a series of questions that have been spiritually, that is to say, silently, propounded by the public for many months.

QUES. 1.—Is the Confederate steamer called the Alabama under the control of any disembodied spirit?

ANS.—Yes.

Q. 2.—Is there any possibility of our approaching this individual, or these individuals, with any hope of success?

A.—No.

Q. 3.—It has been said that one Gibbs, of former piratical notoriety, is Commander-in-Chief of the Alabama. Is it so?

A.—Yes.

Q. 4.—Will that Confederate steamer fall into the hands of the Federal authorities?

A.—If the earthly powers of light are favorable, the answer will be no. But if our human telescopes fail us, then the answer will be yes.

Q. 5.—Is the human Commander-in-Chief of the Alabama, Semmes, a medium?

A.—Yes.

Q. 6.—What are his powers?

A.—Clairvoyant, seeing and speaking.

Q. 7.—Has that steamer ever been driven into close quarters by the Federal authorities?

A.—Yes.

Q. 8.—Is she free, or now confined?

A.—She is free."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—MATT. 16: 3.

Many are watching "the signs of the times" with great interest; and while they watch they see tokens that a great event is coming, which cannot be long delayed. There is another—a large class—that is as blind as were the Antediluvians, or ancient Sodomites. They see no danger, and fear none. They have turned aside to fables, and appear to be satisfied. They treat all admonitions with contempt, and those who would kindly warn them are looked upon as a set of deluded fanatics, unworthy of notice.

The Editor of "The Last Vials," published in England, says:—

"The public press foresees nothing until it has happened, and yet it sets up to be the leader of the blind, and the illuminator of the age. The preparations of Russia against Turkey have, at last, forced themselves upon the notice even of the public press. Till now, with incredible blindness, the public journals have invariably maintained that Russia was preparing for a war with the Western Powers. They have discovered at length that her chief preparations have been in the South, where no attack on the part of the Western Powers could have been apprehended. They have discovered that she has a design upon Turkey—a design of aggression, not of defence; as the 'Vials' suggested some months ago, specially and equally so, before the Crimean war. The Turkish government has sent in a formal protest, complaining that Russian armies are assembling on the frontiers of Bessarabia, and in the Caucasus, whilst Russian fleets are gathering on the Black Sea. In fact, Turkey is enclosed by Russian forces all along her northern, north eastern, and north western frontier—closed in by a semicircle of hostile troops, and threatened with invasion at the earliest opportunity. We may expect soon to hear that the Eastern question has been revived more decidedly than ever, and in a much more formidable shape.

That France is preparing for war is admitted on every side. But it is not suspected that an alliance between France and Russia on the Eastern question is to be the result of all these preparations. In spite of all our truly christian endeavors to get up a war between France and Russia, we believe that those two powers will unite against all Europe, and especially against ourselves. Their interests in the East are too nearly allied to admit of any final result except a political alliance. Each wishes for a part of the Turkish Empire, and each knows that each would be powerless without the other. An alliance between France and Russia against Turkey seems, therefore, absolutely certain, and that alliance will be equally against all the allies of Turkey, far and near. Italy will join with all her forces, and will repay us as we deserve, for our generous sympathy—the sympathy of empty words and selfish deeds. We have lost the sympathy of Italy for ever by our selfish indifference, and thrown her into the arms of France as an ally in every work of good or evil.

When Russia, France, and Italy have combined against the East, then we shall see the opening of a new epoch of the world. The Mahometan Empire broken up at last—the Holy Land set free—the gates of Jerusalem thrown back that the chosen people may enter in. We shall see the results of the Crimean war, and of our most iniquitous policy. We shall see that we have protected the infidel empire of Turkey only that its ruin should recoil upon ourselves. We have supported the Mahometan empire, as it were, upon our shoulders just to the very instant when France is ready with her iron fleet—when France is ready to encounter us at sea with every prospect of success. And just at that moment down falls the Mahometan empire, and we, should we attempt to prop it up, shall be exposed to an immediate attack from a fully-prepared enemy! There never yet was a time when an Eastern war would have been one half so perilous to England as it would be now, because the French iron fleet is now fully completed. Yet it is just at this time that an Eastern war will be forced upon us by the Turkish question, and we shall be compelled to send our forces abroad when we need all of them at home. Such is the genuine result of the Crimean war—that war has only put off the evil day to make it doubly evil when once it has begun. This is a memorable comment upon the text—'Thine own wickedness shall reprove thee'—yet no man regards it!

It is to be observed that, within the last few days, even the Morning Post, the Prime Minister's own paper, has given a long leading article on the subject of the immense preparations which are now being made by Russia. It describes these preparations as on the largest scale, and concludes by this significant remark—'Russia knows perfectly that no aggression will be made upon herself. She must, therefore, be preparing for an aggression on her own part, against some foreign power.' Such an admission in a ministerial paper is as decisive as it is unusual, and may be looked upon as a positive evidence of some great Russian scheme not yet fully matured. But, as the scene of preparation is chiefly in the south of Russia, and on the borders of Turkey, we must conclude with certainty that nothing is intended but the invasion of Turkey—both in Europe and on the side of the Caucasus; an invasion on a vast scale, aiming both at the possession of Constantinople and of Asiatic Turkey. Into this scheme we believe that France will enter sooner or later, and probably at once. By proposing a Congress the Emperor Napoleon has most artfully exhibited himself as the friend of peace, and the enemy of all violent measures. The Congress having failed, he has gained his point most thoroughly; for by proposing a Congress he has represented himself as a lover of peace, and the Congress being set aside by other powers, he is justified in resorting to violent measures. This is what he intended when he proposed a Congress which he knew well to be impossible. He will now join with Russia, and plead, in justification, that he was willing to have arranged everything peaceably; but that the powers of Europe, by refusing a Congress, had driven him into war. To suppose that he was serious in the suggestion of a Congress, is to show little knowledge of his character. But it will be very convenient for him to say hereafter—'See what mischief you have done by objecting to my proposition; you may thank yourselves for all the confusion and embarassment in which you are involved.' For his own part, we believe that he will now join with Russia in the East, and the revolution in the West. We also believe that in refusing to accept the Congress, our Government has been playing the Emperor's game, and giving him the advantage at which he aimed, and which he expected.

Among 'the signs of the times' we must not forget the earthquake. Earthquakes, we know, are repeatedly foretold in the Book of Revelation as one of the heaviest judgments of the day of the Lord. But it may be said that earthquakes are common at all times; not, however, in every place, and in every degree of violence. The late earthquake which shook this country was so very remarkable that it may justly be regarded as a 'sign of the times.' We have had many shocks before, but none so violent as the last. No other shock was accompanied by so terrific a sound; no other went so near to the violence of the tropical earthquakes; and certainly, no other has excited such surprise and terror. It was quite exceptional; it was quite distinct in its character; it, therefore, may be regarded as a 'sign.' As the Times remarked—'The fabled rock of Britain has been shaken: the ocean throne has been heaved up.' One degree more of violence would have laid the city of Hereford in ruins. For our own part, we cannot but regard it as a 'sign' and a warning. The rock has been shaken; the ocean throne has been heaved up! Is not this physical convulsion a forerunner of a political convulsion? Will not the rock be shaken, and the throne heaved up—politically as well as physically? And may it not only be a sign in its kind, but also in its degree?—a sign of a political earthquake which will bring us to the very verge of destruction, and then leaves us tottering on the brink. The physical earthquake has been the greatest that we have experienced in these islands. This fact raises it to the position of a 'sign;' it showed us our impotence and our helplessness, but it did not destroy. So it may be, very soon, in that political earthquake which seems ready to shake the ground under our feet; it may be sufficient to show us our impotence and our helplessness amidst all our boasting, yet not so violent as to destroy.

That some great political earthquake will soon be felt, we can no longer doubt. After the Italian campaign of 1859, the Emperor made it known that should he ever find himself threatened with an European coalition, he would throw himself on the Revolution, and would proclaim an European Republic. That Republic would have France for its head, and the whole naval and military power of France as its weapon of offence, or rather as its vanguard. We have heard this stated by a person who received the information from Marshal D'Hilliers, one of the Emperor's favorite officers. That crisis has arrived. England, Austria, and Prussia, by rejecting the Congress, have disclosed their intention of virtually forming a coalition against France. France has taken the alarm, and we may be assured that in due time the Revolutionary threat will be carried out. The new French pamphlets already announce the project of a revolution. If the Emperor is allowed to carry out his designs—well and good. He will take the Rhine, Belgium, and so forth. But if his designs should be opposed, as we must expect, he at once throws himself upon the Revolution, and proclaims an European Republic. You may take your choice between Scylla and Charybdis. Allow him to get Belgium and the Rhine—including, of course, Antwerp—and the rest of the European powers will be reduced to insignificance. We ourselves especially shall become cyphers in European influence when the French shall be in possession of Belgium, the Rhine, Antwerp, and the Scheldt. But as such a thing can never be quietly permitted, we shall form the anticipated coalition. We shall avoid Scylla, and then fall into Charybdis. The Emperor of France is the head of what he calls a Republic; he was chosen by popular suffrage, not enthroned by divine right. France is a Republic, with an Emperor, elected by the people, at its head. The same Republic will be proclaimed throughout all Europe, Russia only excepted. The people everywhere will be called upon to rise—to dethrone their right-divine sovereigns, and to substitute sovereigns elected by popular suffrage. The whole naval and military power of France, and all the genius of its Emperor, will be at their service; and the "peoples" of Europe, with such an ally at their side, will either subvert all established institutions, or throw them into remediless confusion! That will be an earthquake unequalled in the world! 'Such as never was since men were upon the earth: so mighty an earthquake, and so great.' (Rev. 16.) Take your choice between that earthquake and submission. Submit to the dictation of Napoleon the Third, let him push the boundaries of France as far as the First Napoleon did, or else prepare for the great earthquake. There seems, now, no alternative; the oracles of Paris have spoken, and the French army and navy, without any rivals in the world, are ready to carry out the announcement. Choose which we may, an earthquake appears inevitable.

And as a retribution from heaven, such a judgment is most signally deserved. When Napoleon the First threatened Europe, the selfish and unprincipled monarchs roused up the 'peoples' to action by promising them liberty when the common enemy should be subdued. Bravely the people fought—without shrinking they gave their life's blood in the cause of their sovereigns. When the war was ended those sovereigns broke their word, and brought back their subjects to bondage. Perjury and treachery prevailed, and triumphed over Europe for fifty years. The tyranny of the petty sovereigns was worse than the tyranny of Napoleon. Now comes the retribution. Napoleon the Third will wake up against monarchs that very popular fury which those monarchs evoked against Napoleon the First! He will evoke it, strengthened by the indignation and perjuries of fifty years, and sustained by all the power and genius of France. What an earthquake will then shake the globe! And the earthquake will be as real and as dangerous if we avoid a coalition, and permit the Emperor to undermine us at his will. The only difference between the two cases will be a difference of time. By storm, or by regular approaches, the Emperor is determined to gain the citadel of empire.

As for ourselves, we believe more firmly than ever that the invasion of England is the prime object of the Third Napoleon—it is the first and foremost subject of his life, of his thoughts, and of his actions. The revenge of St. Helena is the central sun round which his solitary dreams revolve. It is that which keeps him in his course. Take away that attraction, and all his schemes fly loose into endless confusion. He has long ago, by the Crimean war, produced a perpetual enmity between England and Russia. He has raised up Italy to immense power as a check upon Austria. Prussia is always subservient to the policy of Russia. Our only allies, in case of our being attacked, are thus either alienated or neutralized. Were we to be invaded to-morrow, Austria dare not stir, for she is kept in check by Italy and Hungary. Russia would not stir, for she remembers our rancorous fury in the Crimean war. Prussia would do nothing without the permission of Russia. America would turn directly against us, for our selfish policy has exasperated both parties, both the Federals and the Confederates; and the Northern States would take the opportunity of getting possession of Canada. The large French force, which has been accumulated in Mexico, has a most suspicious appearance. In case of a war with England that force is ready at once to join with the Northern States in an attack upon Canada, or else to rush down suddenly upon our West Indian Islands, which are scarcely protected at all; and it is quite possible that the secret object of the Mexican expedition was not the conquest of Mexico, but the forming of a centre of operations against British America, and our West Indian colonies."

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to April 27th,	$1077.29
Mrs. M. Gove pd.	.25
B. F. Millard pd.	.25
Mrs. A. Phelps pd.	.25
A friend pd.	.50
A sister pd.	.12
A. B. Fabrick pd.	1.00
Mrs. W. S. Cheney pd.	.25
E. R. Downs pd.	.25
L. M. Plum pd.	.25
E. C. Pierce pd.	2.00
M. Bishop pd.	.25
A. H. Doolittle pd.	1.00
A friend in O. pd.	.75
"Friends" pd.	11.00
Annie Smith pd.	.26

New Subscribers in April.

The number of new subscribers in April is 290, of which 165 were by the efforts of our Volunteer Agents. Although not so large a number as in the previous months, it is still encouragingly large, and nearly twice as many as were received in the same month last year.

Don't relax your efforts, brethren, because the summer months are coming. Work while the day lasts; the night is coming soon, when you can work no longer. Go forth, then, bearing the precious seed, and when the harvest comes, you will return bringing your sheaves with you.

W. B. H.

ONE EACH.—H A Arnold, M Alderman, R Andrews, I M Aldrich, S Bassford, C N Bussell, C P Burroughs, Martha E Boynton, Wm. Baker, A Brooks, W. Burnham, B Bethell, C H Colby, M J Clarke, A S Calkins, W F Carpenter, D U Churchill, M A Cook, Mrs I Davis, S B Davis, I Damman, C R Danks, J Elkins, J A Frenen, J Gay, S B Gowell, L C Glazier, W J Hale, J V Himes, A C Haley, C Haley, H L Hastings, A Johnson, W Johnston, F Kies, J A Libby, I B Luther, D Libby, E Leonard, J S Morgan, J T Ongley, E Orton, M A G Otis, Lydia Pierce, W Prothero, H W Pierce, J Pinkham, M Ruggles, J Richardson, B Roberts, R Smith, J Stubbs, S Snell, L H Shaw, A W Sibley, B P Stevens, A S Sheldon, N Shumway, Rosella M. Thayer, C B Turner, E F Treat, J Thorpe, E Tallman, J B Trefethen, J C Wheeler, T Woodward, R J Whitehead, J B Walker, N J Winchell, B Whitney, R W Wilson.

TWO EACH.—L Allen, H Bailey, S S Brewer, R F Berry, M F Dibble, J H Harding, Wm. Lassell, W A Munroe, D S Morse, W H Pierce, J Porter, H Sparks, J W Taylor, J H F Varney, G Wightman, G B Whitford.

THREE EACH.—Mrs. M R Burroughs, S G Coon, D V Corey, D J Dow, C P Dow, E M Glidden, C Goodrich, P W Hough, S Kail, L Lord, H Munger, A McCurdy, D Skinner, J Whitman.

FOUR EACH—H K Flagg, L Robbins.

FIVE—J. G. Hook.

SEVEN—Chas. Stratton.

FOURTEEN—M. Grant.

For the World's Crisis.

OUR SINGING BOOKS.

It seems that the new singing books prepared by the Christian Publication Society will not be published so soon as was expected. I am therefore advised to get out a new edition of the Christian Lyre, to meet the present demand. In so doing, the rise in paper and stock being about fifty per cent since the last edition was published, the price of the book must be advanced in order to meet expenses.

Hereafter the "Christian Lyre" will be retailed at 75 cts. per copy. In gilt, $1.00 per copy. Wholesale to the trade, or agents to sell again, 25 per cent discount.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

For the World's Crisis.

THE DISCUSSION AT LYNN.

The discussion recently holden at Lynn, Mass., between Elds. Grant and Hull, was one of interest to both sides of the house; especially to every inquiring mind and searcher after truth. It was interesting from the fact that there was before a large and attentive audience a conflict between Christ and anti-Christ, truth and error, light and darkness, Christology and demonology. Such a conflict as this could not fail to interest all the lovers of truth and right, and perhaps it was less interesting to those who set darkness for light, error for truth,—those whose visions have grown dim and perceptions dull as it regards what is truth and what is not.

We do not know as Mr. Hull made any proselytes to his faith during this debate, but on the other hand some saw the truth that a man cannot think with his head cut off. We were not able to be there only the last four evenings. We regret we could not have been there during the entire debate, and witnessed the affair from the commencement, but circumstances ordered it otherwise.

At times during the last four evenings the battle waxed hot,—the demons doing their best, no doubt, with their "man Moses;" but when the great gun, viz: the truth, was brought to bear, and facts presented in the masterly manner in which they were by our brother in the negative of the debate, commanding the attention of the unprejudiced and intelligent portion of the audience, the enemy was obliged to hide behind some relics of heathen mythology which had been buried in the dust of ages long ago, which served as he thought, as a place of defence. The fort in which the enemy was concealed was badly shattered, and we think it will take him some time to make it as good as it was before.

This debate has resulted in good, checking the onward march of Spiritualism in this place to some extent. Some have abandoned it altogether, after testing its virtues for eight years, having decided that its tendencies are to immorality, adultry, and every evil work. God grant that others may see its falsity and abandon the course which thousands of its devotees are pursuing and be led to rejoice in the truth as it is in Christ. More anon about Lynn.

A. W. SIBLEY.

April 28th, 1864.

Correspondence.

From Bro. T. C. Corliss.

BRO. GRANT:—I have had the consolation of Christ's Spirit for more than thirty years. I love the Crisis. I also respect the feelings of christians, some of whom have not received light on the sleep of the dead, and other truths that are advocated by me. I esteem the forbearing spirit manifested by the conductors of the paper; but I am sorry to say that I have not seen as much of that spirit manifested by the correspondence of the paper. Probably some have met with bitter opposition by professing christians of other different denominations.

In the northern part of Wisconsin, where I have been for the last six months, there has been a gracious revival of religion. I have heard the fervent prayers and resolves to continue faithful to the end of the race. This work has been mostly among the Methodists. I believe the grace and Spirit of God is with them. I have felt the living witness myself when among them, and I pray God to help them, and send by whom he will. I find among this people the fruits of christian character. Wherever I find a person or people that sustain that character, I regard them as belonging to our Father's family.

Dear brethren, who write for the Crisis, do not write any thing that will "offend" those who believe in the truth, but differ somewhat from us. I believe in being patient to all men. We are admonished not to hurt the "oil and the wine." Rev. 6: 6. When I reflect that the end of all things is so nigh, I pray God to help me to order my conversation aright, for the Psalmist says such as order their conversation aright will be shown the salvation of God. Ps. 50: 23.

It rejoices my heart, dear brethren, to hear of the ingathering of so many souls to Christ before the Master of the house shall rise up and shut the door. Soon he that is filthy will be filthy still; and he that is holy, will be holy still. "Behold I come quickly."

Yours in hope of eternal life,

TIMOTHY C. CORLISS.

Pleasant Valley, St. Croix, Wis.

From Sr. E. Belcher.

BRO. GRANT:—I do love this blessed tract cause, and I feel more than ever persuaded that it is of the Lord, and shall do all I can, with the limited means in my hands, to have the work go on. I spend no money for tea, coffee, tobacco, snuff, nor any vain and foolish ornaments, in which to deck my corruptible person. I wish to be found having my garments pure, and walking as do the children of light.

I have long felt the necessity of earnestly seeking for a deeper work of grace in my heart. I feel that I must have it to fit me for these perilous times. I want to have that perfect love which casteth out fear; for while we are troubled with fear, which hath torment, it is an evidence that we have not perfect love. I want to have that holy confidence which can say under all circumstances, He doeth all things well; which can feel amid the swelling tempest, or the surging billows of earth's last commotion, that the very hairs of my head are all numbered. O how I long to be entirely freed from unbelief. How I long to be able to cast all my care on him who careth for me. I know that his promises are sure; yet, still, I often find my poor, foolish heart asking what shall I do in this or that time of need; or how shall I endure this or that trial; just as though I had not a Father in heaven, who is very pitiful, and of tender mercy, who is a sun and shield, and gives grace and glory, and withholds no good thing from those that walk uprightly. I want that preparation of heart that can constantly cry, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

Dear christian friends, let us not be satisfied with any thing short of this. Pray for your unworthy sister, that she may both feed and be fed on the words of life.

Armaton, Wis. EMMA PILCHER.

From Bro. R. H. Nye.

BRO. GRANT:—Dear sir, I saw a January number of your World's Crisis, and was very much interested in some articles which it contained. Reason and common sense seem to be the basis of your doctrine; which I believe to be the doctrine of our blessed Savior. The doctrine you advocate is not popular with the people of Canaan, as a community; although there are some that believe in it. The day is not far distant when there may be more.

One year ago I did not think favorably of it; in fact, I did not think of it at all—would not allow myself to do so. I suppose that Mr. Grant has learned by this time, that the sleep of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked, is a very terrible doctrine, even for some of our good christians. Not but a few moments ago, a man—a minister, I should have said—spoke to me as follows: "How could you sing yesterday, after hearing such a sermon as that?" Well, that sermon was what our good people called an Advent one,—one of the worst kind. It made some mad and some tremble, and some it pleased. How different folks look at things. R. H. NYE.

Canaan, Me.

From Bro. J. Freeman.

BRO. GRANT:—Feeling a desire to let you and the readers of your good paper know what we are and have been doing for our Master's cause, I enclose this note. We have a church composed of nearly forty members. We trust all are looking for the speedy return of our Lord. Blessed with good prayer-meetings, an interesting Sabbath school, of thirty members, we feel to rejoice, though for a long time we have been without regular preaching. In answer to prayer the Lord has directed one of his servants to care for us. Bro. P. W. Hough preached for us Sunday, April 10th, and will continue every two weeks for one year. May the Lord bless and crown his labors with success, is the prayer of the church.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

Cascade, Iowa. JOHN FREEMAN.

From Bro. C. P. Dow.

BRO. GRANT:—The cause of truth is onward in the region where I labor. I am doing what I can for the Crisis. It is a powerful instrumentality for good. It bears its weekly messages of truth to many homes, and joy to many hearts. May God prosper it more and more. Let our trust be in Jehovah-jireh—the Lord will provide. Powerful enemies we have, but the God of truth is more mighty than they. Labor, pray, hope. May we be holy, and thus clothed with power. Amen. C. P. DOW.

Stanbridge, C. E.

From Bro. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still detained at home on account of the sickness of my wife; but I hope soon, by the goodness of the Lord, to attend to my appointments and answer the calls of the brethren. My trust is in the Lord. Pray for us. Thine as ever, in affliction,

L. BOUTELL.

Groton, Mass., April 25th, 1864.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—Please notice the following rules:

1. State all your business items distinctly, and put them all on a sheet by themselves, or on the last leaf of your letter, so that it may be torn off when the letter is opened.

2. Always, in writing to this office, give your post-office, State, and county. If your post-office be one name and your town another, give both, stating which is which.

3. If you wish your paper changed to another post-office, first state the name of the person, the post-office, county, and State, where it is sent, then the person, post-office, county, and State, where you wish it sent.

☞ A Quaker once hearing a person tell how much he felt for another, dryly asked him: "Friend, hast thou felt in thy pocket for him?"

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF HELEN MARR PREBLE.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in East Weare, N. H., March 29th, 1864, my beloved wife, Helen M. Preble, aged fifty-two years, lacking five days, after a long and distressing illness of dropsy and heart disease.

Her maiden name was Eaton. The place of her birth, and where she lived until we were married, was within about one mile of the place where she died. But while we lived together, we resided, traveled, and labored in several of the States of this Union. The Advent cause has had her strength and influence, without any faltering, for more than twenty-three years of the best part of her life.

In early life, at the age of eighteen, she gave her heart to her Savior, as the following extracts from her "diary" will show, which she commenced in 1831.

"Weare, Jan. 1, 1831. The happiest New Year's day that I ever experienced. When I compare the present state of my mind with what it was but one year ago to-day, I am struck with wonder and surprise at the change. Then, my whole aim was to secure to myself that happiness which arose from worldly pursuits..... But through the goodness and mercy of God I hope and trust my soul has, in a measure, been a partaker of that happiness which is of endless duration. And it is for this that I feel to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

Under date of April 3d, of the same year, she writes:—"This day completes my nineteenth year. .... One year ago yesterday, God was pleased to call my attention to the subject of religion; and I have great reason to look back with pleasure on that day as one of the most important of my unprofitable life."

The following extracts from her "diary" will give the reader some idea of the state of her mind and purposes of her heart before and after our marriage. Under date of Jan. 23d, 1837, she writes:—

"I know that my Redeemer lives, and because he lives I shall live also. I know there is nothing that will compare with the love of God in the soul. Yes, I would say, 'Remove all my earthly relations from me—only let me feel that my Redeemer is mine, and I am his, and I will ask no more.'"

Under date of Dec. 3d of this same year, and following our marriage, which was on the 14th of November previous, she writes:—

"Felt an unusual exercise in prayer while engaged in family devotion this morning. Repaired to the house of God, where Jesus was pleased to fill my soul with love for poor sinners."

Again, Dec. 6:—"Enjoyed much in reading God's holy word. Think I find it a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path."

Again, Dec. 31, Sabbath:—"Attended meeting, and enjoyed the season much. My husband spoke from the words, 'Time is short.' He felt the power of the words, it being the last day of the year. But what added more to the solemnity of the occasion, was the death of an aged gentleman within a few rods of the meeting-house. He died during service, and some were called from the meeting to lay him out. Truly, death is in our land, and I know not how soon the mandate will be sealed upon me. God grant that I may be in readiness; that I may have my work done, and well done in the Lord."

At the commencement of a new year she writes:—"Jan. 1st, 1838. The commencement of a new year finds me a resident of Parsonsfield, Me., where I expect to remain a short time. I know not how long."

In this same month, Jan. 16th, she writes:—"Feel this morning that the cause of God has a claim upon me, and it does not become me to be idle when sinners are perishing for the want of information."

Again on the 24th:—"This evening I am alone, as my husband has gone some distance to attend meeting. My prayer is that God would stand by him, and grant him the influence of his Holy Spirit in speaking."

Again, the next day, 25th:—"Enjoyed this day unusually well; but more especially this evening in the prayer meeting did I feel that my peace was made with God; and it is more than my meat and drink to do the will of my Heavenly Father."

The next day, 26th:—"This evening visited at Bro. H——'s. Felt rather unpleasant on account of some misunderstanding with some of the brethren as to a remark made by my husband last evening in the prayer meeting. Think my husband correct in his remark, and hope it will serve to arouse those who have been living at ease in Zion."

On the 27th she writes:—"Attended a church meeting, and united with the church. Felt my heart gladdened at the prospect of union in the church. This evening we have been favored with the call of eight young persons, three of whom were pious, the other five anxious. They were all willing to bow but one, and she was sorry that she did not. We had a weeping, solemn time; and one name, I trust, will be registered in heaven."

Again, on the 28th, in referring to the prayer meeting, she writes:—"Christians were well engaged, and sinners wept; and some felt to acknowledge they were wrong in their application as to the remark made last Thursday evening."

Under date of Feb. 11th (Sabbath), she writes:—"Enjoyed much in secret prayer, especially while praying for my husband."

Again the next day, (12th):—"Felt quite disconcerted at the thought of parting with my dear companion to attend the quarterly meeting. After praying a long time, felt willing to give him up."

Again, on the 19th:—"Feel rather lonely to-day, as my husband has been called away to attend a funeral. Yet I know this is but the commencement of his leaving me, and I awfully fear lest I shall be unwilling to give my consent at all times for his departure. It is not my intention now ever to hinder him when duty calls." (And let me add here, she never did when she was well, so it was consistent for me to go.)

Under date of April 1st (Sabbath), she writes:—"Attended meeting as usual. In the evening, felt desirous of being excused from attending meeting, but could find no reasonable excuse; I went to the meeting, and felt to praise God that I did so."

The last words found in her "diary" are the following:—"O that my heart may be in entire subjection to the will of God." And thus she tried to live.

Twenty-six years ago last November, we were united in marriage; and during this period of more than a quarter of a century which we were permitted to live together, I do not remember of hearing her complain of her lot as a christian, or in any other way as regards the hardships incident to her lot as a minister's wife. If my brethren in the ministry, or others, called on us at a time when we did not have all we could wish to place upon our table for their comfort, my dear wife would always make the best of it, without one word of complaint; always cheerful, and ready to entertain the Lord's servants, as many can bear me witness. Faithfully, and without murmuring, did she stand by me in all my labors and trials as a minister of the gospel of our divine Savior.

Although in 1841, when I first embraced the faith of the immediate coming of Christ, she for a short time thought me deluded, and seemed to feel that our earthly prospects were blighted, yet, even then, she did but gently oppose me. But when she saw the truth herself, with her whole heart she embraced it. In 1842 we were united in the thing, and sold about all of our earthly substance; broke up house-keeping, and spent the time in traveling, and laboring for the salvation of sinners, until the fall of 1844; at which time we expected to see our Savior. But when the time passed, we were left without a home in this world of disappointment, poverty, and distress. But never from that day to the day of her death, did I ever hear my beloved wife utter one word of regret for the course we had taken, or for the sacrifice we had made. But on the other hand, she often expressed herself "happy," to think we had "given all for Christ," and in a very short time we should "possess the kingdom," as our eternal reward.

But oh my heart! O cruel, cruel death! "But you'll be destroyed." And, as it now appears to me, if all the troubles and afflictions of my whole previous life were crowded together into one, it would not compare with this affliction I now suffer in the loss of this one object of my affections, which I loved next to my Savior. But I must not murmur; for my loss is her gain, as she was ready and waiting to go.

INCIDENTS OF HER LIFE.

The following incidents will give the reader some idea of her great help to me, and to the cause of Christ.

In the winter of 1843, while laboring a few weeks in the western part of Massachusetts, I gave a course of lectures in the village of Warwick. In an evening meeting I met with great opposition from a man who tried to turn every thing into ridicule. And so bold and determined was he, that I was obliged to stop speaking—fell upon my knees and prayed. As I rose from praying, my faithful wife struck the hymn—and such was the divine power which attended that singing (wife and I sung alone,) when we closed the hymn the man left his seat, came and took me by the hand, confessed his fault, asked for prayers in his behalf, fell upon his knees with us, begged for mercy, and was converted on the spot. This gave new impulse to the work of God, and a large number were converted before we left the place.

"O turn ye, O turn ye, for why will ye die?"

A few weeks later—about the middle of February—we had to leave Nashua, our place of residence then, and go to the State of Maine, to attend appointments which I had made for seven different towns in the county of Franklin. My first appointment was at New Sharon, to commence on Sunday, the 19th. The hardest snow storm for the winter commenced on Wednesday, the 15th. But notwithstanding this, my ever faithful wife said, "Let us go, husband, I think I can stand it." And so on Thursday morning, (16th) at six o'clock, we left Nashua, with one only child, a daughter, then about five years old. But such was the unusual severity of the storm, the cars could only reach Dover at quite a late hour that evening.

Friday, 17th. The roads were so badly drifted, the cars could not run; and a team of four horses was fitted out, and a few passengers accompanied us to Portland, where we arrived about ten o'clock in the evening. And so bad was the travelling, that a train of cars which left Boston on Wednesday, P. M., did not reach Portland until a few minutes after we did.

On Saturday morning, (18th,) at seven o'clock, the stage was to leave Portland for Wilton, sixty-five miles distant! And notwithstanding the fatigues of the two days previous, the severe cold morning, and the badness of the traveling; yet my persevering and courageous wife said, "I think we can go, husband; let us try it!" And so we did. But at seven o'clock that evening, we were some twelve miles from Wilton; and the roads so dangerous to travel, that the driver said he dare not go any further with his double team. But said if we were disposed to follow him, as he must go with the mail, he would furnish us with a single team,—he would take another, the baggage, and a lady passenger; and we might follow him if we could. And thus, that terrible night, with my wife and child covered with buffalo robes, we drove to Wilton, where we arrived about midnight. When we reached the place, the driver found the lady with him was motionless, and speechless, but not quite lifeless, as she revived from her senseless state in about half an hour after coming into a warm room at the hotel where we stopped.

Sabbath morning, 19th. Was now some fifteen miles from my appointment in New Sharon. And as the roads were still so bad, and the weather so very cold, I said to my dear wife, "Will you not remain here at the hotel, and let me go to my appointment? And as soon as the travelling will admit I will return for you." She replied, "No, husband, I had rather go with you." I then said, "Shall I not stop here with you, and give up the idea of reaching my appointment?" "I think not," said she, "as it will disarrange all your other appointments." Hence I hired a team of the landlord,—left our baggage in his care,—and we reached the place of my appointment at eleven o'clock that forenoon. And none of us were injured by the journey. The Lord was with us. And for seven successive weeks we attended to our work; myself being able to give, on an average, two discourses each day, for the entire seven weeks. And it is now a matter of great comfort to me, that I not only expect to see a great number of precious souls saved in the kingdom of God, as the result of those labors; but with them, and "the saints of the Most High," my beloved, deceased wife.

One more incident I will relate, to show her strong faith in God, that he would sustain us as a family in times of want and affliction. Some few years since, while I was laid by from preaching some time in consequence of ill health, we became rather needy; when I said to her I thought I should try and borrow a little money. But she put me off by saying:

"I would not to-day, husband; we can get along a few days longer."

And thus she put me off, at three or four different times, for more than a week, when I would speak about borrowing money. But at last I said to her, early one morning, "Wife, I must have five dollars to-day; and after breakfast I am going out and try to borrow it." But she replied: "Wait till the mail comes in, husband." I said, "That is reasonable, wife." And so I waited. When the mail came in that day, it brought us a letter, and in it a five dollar bill from our kind friends in H——, who had heard of my sickness. Thank the Lord for such faith, prudence, and economy, as always characterized my devoted wife during the whole time we lived together. Hence, I have lost a great treasure; and in this life I am not expecting it will be made up to me. But,

"O, that bright world to come!"

When shall we be there?

Although much more might be said in favor of the deceased, yet she had her faults. The greatest of which I had to complain, was her too great devotion to her domestic affairs. She was a little too much of a "Martha"—"careful and troubled about many things." She was particular to a fault. Her "needle," "thread," and "thimble;" the "dust," "flies," and "spiders," made my valuable wife a great deal of trouble and labor. Hence it confined her within doors too much for her health, and no doubt shortened her days. This I say that others may profit thereby, while they can.

LAST FEW MONTHS OF HER LIFE.

The nature of her disease was such that her physical sufferings were very great, and especially for the last few weeks and days of her life. As the water accumulated in the lungs, and around the heart, it was with the greatest difficulty that those organs could perform their labor. And as our family physician, of Concord, said to me since her death, if it had not been for the special care which she received, she would not have lived a month after we moved from Concord in October last. It was the only thing which kept her alive for months.

Night and day was I with her, not leaving her to attend a Sabbath meeting for more than six months. For the last few weeks she could not lie down at all; and for nearly two months was about as helpless as a babe. For the last ten or twelve days she was confined to her chairs, as she had five different ones, of different size and form, so as to change her position as much as possible. A part of the time she had to be changed from one chair to another every hour, sometimes much less! But notwithstanding all this, not a word of complaint did she utter; but a calm and heavenly resignation was manifest in all things.

For nearly a week previous to her death, our daughter, Mrs. George, was with us; and one morning, soon after we left the breakfast table, and before we engaged in family devotion, wife spoke and said: "I wish to talk with you all freely; for I feel that I must soon leave you; and I hope you will not mourn and weep for me, for I feel I am ready, and I am willing to go." But while addressing herself to our daughter, telling her that it was her wish that she should have some particular articles of her clothing, the child was so overcome with grief, she cried out, "Don't, mother!" and thus the conversation ceased upon this subject. On Saturday afternoon, Mrs. George returned home, hoping to return to us the first of the week.

On Monday morning, at an early hour, it was evident that my dear companion must soon leave us, and a messenger was dispatched to Concord for our children, fearing that death might deprive them of their mother before they could reach us. But oh, the distress of my heart, when the messenger returned, and brought no one with him but our son-in-law, Mr. George, as daughter Jennie, by over exertion, was taken violently sick on Sabbath morning and could not come.

At first I was afraid to have my son go into the house, for fear his mother would be entirely overcome at the thought of never seeing her daughter again. But as son Hermon entered the room, she took him by the hand, and in a few moments calmly said, "Where is Jennie?" When told that she was sick, and could not come, she, without a tear, or but little apparent emotion, meekly, and in a heavenly, submissive tone of voice, replied, "Well!" and that was all she then said. A short time after this, she reached out her arms, clasped me to her bosom, and then kissed me several times. Then looking towards Mr. George, she said, "I want to kiss Hermon!" After this she kissed her mother, and a sister of hers who was present.

Some little time after this, she very mildly and affectionately said, "I should like to see Jennie!" When I asked her if she had any special word for Jennie, or any other absent friends, she tenderly replied, "Not now." The peculiar manner in which these words were uttered, conveyed to mind what she had said to us before, "MY WORK IS DONE!"

To the last, she appeared to be conscious, although for a short time was unable to articulate so as to be understood. But often during the last day and night of her life, she would exclaim, "How good the Lord is!" The following are among the last words I heard from her lips. While she saw my great anxiety for her life, and my willingness to lift her from one chair to another, if possible to relieve her pain, she would say, "How can you do it, husband! Have some one to help you."

About the last time I ever moistened those dear lips and mouth with a pleasant liquid we had for her, she looked up, and with a smile of gratitude said, "What a favor!" Soon after this she said, "Do not hold me; let me go!" When I saw she must soon go and leave me, I involuntarily exclaimed, "FAREWELL, WIFE, TILL THE MORNING OF THE RESURRECTION!" And so at last she sweetly and calmly fell asleep, without a motion of her head, hand, or foot. A slight gasp, and all was over for this mortal life.

It was about six o'clock in the morning when my dear wife died; and when we came round the domestic altar for family devotion, Mother Eaton (mother of the deceased), who is in her eighty-fifth year, and resides with me, said, "Thomas, cannot you sing a verse or two this morning?" I said, "I don't know but I can, mother; I have been thinking about it." She replied, "I think you can." And so I struck a familiar piece, a great favorite of my deceased companion; and when we came to the words,

"Then shall I raise a morning song,
With all the vast, angelic throng,"

I saw so clearly with an eye of faith my precious wife, clothed in white, in her immortal beauty, singing, and shining like the sun, with the redeemed host, made like the angels to die no more! that I now have such a longing desire for that day to come, as I never had before. Oh,

"How long shall death, the tyrant, reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

"Come, Lord Jesus." O, "come quickly." "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." "And so shall we ever be with the Lord." May the reader and the writer be there.

"Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them."

"Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord."

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right." Amen. T. M. PREBLE.

East Weare, N. H., April 9th, 1864.

ERRATA.—In my closing argument on the Sabbath question, as found in the Crisis of Apr. 26th, p. 22, first col., five lines from the top,—for "Sabbath Manual, No. 2, pp. 8–126," read 111–126.

About mid-way of same column, where it is said, "Christ had told the disciples to leave Jerusalem when they should see it compassed with enemies," for "enemies," read armies. T. M. PREBLE.

Obituaries.

HENRY GLINES.

Died in the Hospital at Richmond, Va., Feb. 27th, 1864, Henry, the oldest son of Mark and Harriet Glines, aged nineteen years and three months.

The subject of this notice was taken prisoner in the bloody charge on Fort Waggoner, on James Island. During most of the time between his capture and death, he suffered the most severe treatment, in starvation and exposure, until his emaciated form sank away in death, to await the summons to judgment.

He leaves an affectionate father and mother, sister and brothers, to sigh over the sufferings and death of their dear son and brother. Among the letters he has written during his absence, they gather evidence of repentance of sin and trust in God. The following letter shows plainly his state of mind:—

"ON MY COUCH, Feb. 23d, 1864,
Hospital No. 22, Ward 2d.

Dearly Beloved Parents, Brothers and Sister:—I am led to believe, by the feelings of my body, that life is not long to be a blessing to me, and I feel it my duty, while the little strength in my being lasts, to let you know the condition of my mind. I feel that many times since I took upon myself the name of Jesus, that I have grieved his holy name; but now I feel that God in his mercy has forgiven all my wanderings, and owns me as his child. Although the thought of dying and being laid in the cold and silent grave so far from the loved ones at home is sad, but oh! how blessed to know that when the trump of God sounds, we shall be raised to praise our Savior on the New Earth. Blest promise in this hour to me. O prepare to meet me there, to praise God through endless time. Good bye, good bye. HENRY."

WM. A. FENN.

ELIZABETH S. BASTON.

Died in East Boston, Mass. April 24th, 1864, Sister Elizabeth S. Baston, wife of Joseph C. Baston, aged fifty years.

For many years Sister Baston has been a lover of Jesus and his coming. The "blessed hope" has sustained her in her long and painful illness. She found it all heart could wish, and the Savior a friend who sticketh closer than a brother. She is now safe from the coming storm, and deep temptations of "the Prince of the power of the air." She is sleeping quietly in Jesus, awaiting his coming to raise the dead, and give them the kingdom. May the whole family there unite to part no more forever.

Funeral was attended by the writer.

MILES GRANT.

ANNA ATKINS.

On Stillwell Prairie, April 13th, 1864, of dropsy, Sister Anna Atkins, aged eighty-two years, nine months, and thirteen days.

For the last thirty-six years of her life she was an acceptable member of the Baptist church, and highly esteemed as a mother in Israel.

THOMAS ATKINS.

Thomas Atkins, her husband, departed this life Nov. 9th, 1863, aged eighty-five years and five months.

The funeral services for both were attended by the writer at the same time, in the Baptist church at Kingsbury. Remarks were made from 1 Cor. 15: 26,—"The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." ELD. B. MCDONALD.

IRA HUNTER.

Died in Springfield, Vernon Co., Wis., March 24th, 1864, Ira T. Hunter, aged fifty-two years.

He trusted the promise made to those that believe
In Christ, the Life-giver,—though dead they shall live;
Their life hid with Jesus, his voice they will hear,
In his likeness rising, immortal appear.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool, April 13th. Queenstown 14th.

Maximilian probably sails for Mexico on the 14th.

The Conference had not yet assembled.

The Garibaldi enthusiasm had not abated. He visited Lord Palmerston for an hour, also Stansfield, who was implicated in the recent conspiracy.

The London Herald says Clarendon's mission to Paris is to restore amicable relations and dispel Napoleon's irritation against England.

The Prussians continued a vigorous bombardment of Duppel. It was reported that the Danish fire was weak. Several batteries had been silenced.

A Flensburg dispatch says the Danes are preparing to evacuate the intrenchments. The Prussians in Jutland had advanced further northward. They drove the Danes out of Horsens after a short engagement.

Garibaldi arrived in London on the 11th inst., and had a splendid reception. The crowd exceeded anything ever witnessed.

The leading statesmen and men of all parties are to meet Garibaldi at an entertainment at the Duke of Sutherland's.

The Danish representatives to the Conference had arrived in London.

There was renewed activity among the Polish insurgents.

The Archduke Maximilian received the Mexican Delegation on the 10th inst. In a speech he said that, as the people of Mexico by an overwhelming majority had confirmed the resolution of the notables, and as France guarantees the Independence of Mexico and the Emperor of Austria consents, he solemnly declared his acceptance of the proposed crown, and pledged himself to govern constitutionally and for the benefit of the people of Mexico.

He claimed the union and the good will of the people and expressed his gratitude to the Emperor of the French, who had brought about a solution of the Mexican question.

The Archduke was confined to his bed by a slight fever on the 11th inst. He goes to Mexico via Rome.

The Emperor of Austria permits the formation of a corps of 600 volunteers and 300 soldiers for Mexico.

THREE DAYS LATER.

The siege of Duppel was steadily progressing. The Conference holds its first meeting in London on the 20th inst. The German Diet sends a Representative.

Garibaldi had a magnificent reception at the Crystal Palace yesterday. A flag of Italy was presented bearing the words "Rome and Venice." Also a sword. The latter from Italians of London.

It is rumored that negotiations are going on for the sale of the steamship Great Eastern to the French Government.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

The Emperor and Empress of Mexico quitted Miramar on the 14th amidst enthusiastic cheers and salutes from the batteries. They were expected at Rome on the 19th, and would set out for Mexico on the day following.

The family agreement between the Emperor of Austria and Maximilian is to be communicated to the Austrian Reichsrath. Maximilian's renunciation for himself and heirs for the right of succession to the Austrian crown is said to be unconditional, and not dependent on the stability of the Mexican Government.

THE DANISH WAR.

The siege of Duppel steadily progresses. The Prussians had connected their intrenchments with a new parallel and without loss. Cannonading goes on day and night.

The Danes announce the blockade of Dantzic and Pillau from the 19th.

Danish ships are reported to be making captures at the mouth of the Elbe.

FIVE DAYS LATER.

The Prussians assaulted and captured Duppel on the 18th. They took 83 cannon and from 2000 to 3000 prisoners. The Prussian loss is stated to be two generals, sixty officers and six hundred privates. The Danes are said to have lost between eighty and one hundred officers and four hundred are reported hors du combat. The victory was received with great rejoicing in Berlin.

It is reported that the Prussians have occupied Alsen, and that the occupation of the whole of Jutland is resolved upon.

The Conference would meet at London on the 20th. It is reaffirmed that England and France have fully agreed, and that a pacific result is probable.

The Emperor and Empress of Mexico left Rome on the 20th for Civita Vecchia to embark for Mexico. They had an audience of the Pope on the 19th, and His Holiness returned the visit. They attended mass at the Vatican before leaving.

The Persian Gulf telegraph has been laid, and throughout 900 miles works magnificently.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, April 25th. On Saturday, Governors Lewis, of Wisconsin, Yates, of Illinois, Stone, of Iowa, Morton, of Indiana, Brough of Ohio, and Blair, of Michigan, tendered the President 100,000 troops to serve one hundred days, to be clothed, armed and equipped, by the United States Government, the men to be raised within the limits of the several North-western States named. The proposition was accepted by the President, and the Secretary of War was subsequently instructed to receive these troops. Four or five of the above named Governors issued their proclamations in this city and sent them forward on Saturday. The first proposition made to the government by the North-western Governors was that the President issue his proclamation for 100,000 six months men, but owing to difficulties that could not be immediately overcome, they agreed to make the proposition mentioned. It is believed by the gentlemen who have tendered this new auxiliary force that they will be able to raise it in twenty-five days. This new army will garrison all the posts and forts on the frontier and in the rear of active operations, thus enabling the veterans now doing post and garrison duty to join our armies in the field.

New York, April 29th. The Times' Washington dispatch says: Up to 11 P. M. to-day nothing of much importance has transpired at the front. The indications are that a collision cannot long be delayed.

The Signal Corps, which has been stationed here all winter, left a day or two ago for the army.

It is thought that Lee will endeavor to bring on a fight without leaving his intrenchments.

A letter received here to-day from Admiral Porter pronounces Gen. Banks' expedition a complete failure. Besides over thirty pieces of artillery, a large quantity of small arms, several hundred wagons and a first-class gunboat (the Eastport), near four thousand prisoners have been lost; also, in addition, the paymaster's safe, containing a million dollars in greenbacks, was captured by the rebels.

Notices.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. GRIFFIN.

Meetings at South Natic.

The Lord willing, I expect to hold a series of meetings at South Natic, Mass., in the School House Hall, commencing Sunday, May 15th, and continuing every evening through the week. Meetings on Sunday as follows: 10 A. M., 1–30 P. M., and 7–30 in the evening. Meetings through the week will commence at 7–30 P. M. Will the brethren and sisters in Dover, Natic, and wherever they may be scattered in that section, come with lamps trimmed and burning, ready to labor for the salvation of sinners, praying in the Holy Ghost that God will raise up a church of faithful believers in that place.

H. K. FLAGG.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Notice.

I will attend the funeral of George W. Jones, May 15th, 1864, at the Advent Chapel in West Alton, N. H., at 10 A. M. Bro. J. G. Smith will be present to take a part in the exercises.

N. GLIDDEN.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, 2 o'clock P. M., and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. SPENCER, President.
C. W. SMITH, Secretary.

Illinois Conference.

There has been a strange fatality attending the time of its announcement. May 17th and May 25th have been given. I wish to make a final correction. It will be ☞ May 25th, and over the Sabbath. Come one, and come all.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

QUESTIONS.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 13th, 1864, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. Come one and all that can.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a conference of Free Sabbath Adventists, organized under the name of "The Church of the First Born," will be held at Portland, Me., commencing Thursday, May 5th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth, whether they see exactly with us or not, are cheerfully invited to attend. Strangers coming into the city will inquire for H. A. Weston, 432 Congress Street. S. C. HANCOCK.

P. S. The Lord willing, I will preach in Westerly, R. I., at the Quarry meeting-house, Sunday, April 24th, also at Central Hall, East Boston, Thursday evening, April 28th, and over the following Sunday. S. C. HANCOCK.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

CHAS. P. DOW.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—ED.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. HITCHCOCK.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. SHELDON.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

Miles Grant .... Sunday, May 8th
J. Couch .... Sunday, May 15th

Searsport, Me., May 15th, and every evening during the following week, and Lord's day, 22d. MILES GRANT.

Lee, N. H. .... Saturday evening, May 7th and Sunday, the 8th.
Lawrence, Mass., Friday evening, May 13th. Perhaps also Saturday and Sunday, if there are no other arrangements. H. L. HASTINGS.

New York City, Room No. 18 Cooper Institute, all day, Sunday, May 8th.
Philadelphia .... Sunday, May 15th
State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill. .... May 25th and through the week. J. V. HIMES.

Worcester, Mass. .... May 8th
Athol, Mass .... May 15th
Ashburnham Depot, Mass .... May 22d
Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's) .... May 29th
Vernon, Vt. .... June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (where Bro. Miller may appoint), June 12th. S. S. BREWER.

Biddeford, Me .... May 8th
Worcester, Mass. .... May 15th
F. H. BURBANK.

East Boston .... Sunday, May 15th
A. W. SIBLEY.

APPOINTMENTS FOR VERNON, VT.

L. Boutell .... Sunday, May 22d
S. S. Brewer .... Sundays, June 15th and 19th

East Stoneham, Me., Saturday evening, May 14th, and over the following Sabbath.
North Norway, Saturday evening, May 21st, and over the Sabbath.
Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore .... June 5th
J. T. JORDAN.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa. .... May 22d
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Holliston, Mass. .... May 8th
A number are expected to go forward in baptism.
South Natic, Mass., (in the School-house Hall), Sunday, May 15th. Also evenings through the week.
Holliston .... Sunday, May 22d
H. K. FLAGG.

North Dana, Mass .... May 8th
Northfield, (at Bro. A. Gay's) .... May 11th
Griswoldville, Mass .... May 12th
Charlemont, Mass., (at Bro. Calvin Hick's) .... May 13th
Savoy, Mass .... May 15th
Dalton, Mass .... May 17th and 18th
Plainfield, Mass., (Bro. J. Healy's) .... May 19th
Plainfield, Mass., (D. Thayer's) .... May 20th
Goshen, Mass .... May 22d
Amherst, Mass .... May 23d
GEO. A. STREETER.

Hartford, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Hall), Sundays, May 22d and 29th.
H. MUNGER.

Danbury, N. H. .... May 8th
Boston, Mass .... May 15th
Worcester, Mass .... May 22d
Grafton Centre, N. H. .... May 29th
J. COUCH.

Northwood Narrows, N. H., Saturday evening, May 7th and Sunday, the 8th. JOHN G. HOOK.

Mantua Station, Portage Co., Ohio .... Sunday, May 15th half past 10 o'clock, A. M. Hope to see a general gathering of the friends of truth in that region.
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, May 22d, at half-past ten A. M.
Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. ONGLEY.

Portsmouth, N. H. .... Sundays, May 8th and 15th
T. M. PREBLE.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. .... May 8th
B. HITCHCOCK.

Sandy Hill, N. Y. .... Sundays, May 15th, 22d, 29th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Lawrenceville, C. E., (where Bro. E. Lawrence may appoint), Sunday, May 8th. PETER H. LAWRENCE.

Haverhill, Mass .... Sunday, May 8th
A. W. SIBLEY.

Holden, Me., (Chapel near Bro. Israel Clewley's), Sunday, May 8th.
Surry, Me., School-house, North Bend, Sunday, May 15th
THOMAS SMITH.

Wallingford, (North Farms) .... Sunday, May 8th
O. D. WOODRUFF.

New Britain, Ct. .... May 8th
Collinsville, Ct. .... May 11th
Southington, Ct. .... May 12th
Plainville, Ct. .... May 13th
Bristol, Ct. .... May 15th
Warehouse Point, Ct. .... May 18th
Scitico, Ct. .... May 19th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block) .... May 22d
J. S. WHITE.

APPOINTMENT FOR AGAWAM.

H. Pratt .... May 8th

Wrightville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
LEWIS ANDREWS.

West Ossipee, (for baptism) .... May 8th
T. W. PIPER.

Tuftonborough, N. H. .... Sunday, May 8th
West Alton, N. H. (funeral) .... Sunday, May 15th
Nottingham, N. H. .... Sunday, May 22d
J. G. SMITH.

Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, May 8th
Bradford, (New Town Hall), N. H., Sunday, May 15th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

East Otis, Mass .... Sunday, May 15th
Cold Spring, Mass .... Sunday, May 29th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Ocean Port, N. J. .... May 8th
J. K. BELLOWS.

Portland, Me .... Sunday, May 8th
Frankfort Mills .... Sunday, May 15th
J. HEMENWAY.

Kendall .... May 8th
Darien .... May 15th
C. F. SWEET.

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house) .... May 8th
R. R. YORK.

Northfield, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
South Windsor, Ct. .... Sunday, May 15th
South Manchester .... evening of the 15th as Bro. H. P. Hart may arrange. C. GOODRICH.

Ore Hill, Warren, N. H .... May 8th
West Plymouth, (Brick school-house) .... May 15th
J. M. SANBORN.

Sandy Brook, near Hitchcockville, Ct., (at Bro. Davis') Sunday, May 15th. LEWIS ANDREWS.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SPRINGFIELD, No. 5 OAK ST.

P. Butler .... May 8th
H. Pratt .... May 15th

North Sutton (where Bro. I. Andrews may appoint), May 8th. F. S. RANSOM.

Montreal, C. E., evening, May 7th, and Sunday, the 8th
East Farnham, at 2 o'clock P. M. .... May 13th
Bolton, C. E., (Sargent School-house), quarterly meeting, May 14th and 15th.
Lake School-house .... May 17th
Peasley Corner .... May 18th
Ward's Corner, in Magog .... May 19th
Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. CHAS. P. DOW.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. PEARL, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. TESTAMENTS. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

LARDNER'S WORKS, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

ROY'S HEBREW DICTIONARY, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW CONCORDANCE, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED PICTORIAL DICTIONARY. Price $7.50,—for $6.50.

LOWTH on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

GRIESBACH'S GREEK TESTAMENT, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

ENGLISH REFERENCE BIBLES, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, 6 vols. sheep (used some), $4.00. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine. $3.00.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., nearly new, $6.50. Ditto, new, $7.00.
Rollin's History, one vol., sheep, and marbled edges, (Harper's ed.), new, $3.00. Ditto, two vols. $3.00.
Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.
Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $3.50.
Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.
Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.
Davidson's Connexion of Sacred and Profane Literature, 3 vols., half cloth, $2.00.
Plutarch's Lives, 1 vol. sheep, $2.00.
Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol. sheep, new, $2.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by EXPRESS.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Newton on the Prophecies, sheep, new, $2.25.
Josephus' complete works, $1.50.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
"The End," by John Cumming, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Threefold Test of Modern Spiritualism, 75 cts.
Buck's Theological Dictionary, sheep, $1.50.
Septuagint (Greek Old Testament), Leipsig edition, half sheep, (not a translation), $2.00.
Hebrew Bible (Old Testament and New), Bagster's ed., $2.00.
Our Lord's Great Prophecy, (by Buck), cloth, $1.50.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
" " Notes by Nairne, 80 cts.
Marsh's Ecclesiastical History, one vol. sheep, $1.00.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $2.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. WOODWARD, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED.—Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted. ☜

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

J. M. Reed, Worden Holloway, Sarah P. Sprague, Thomas Frost, Polly King, Mrs. Henry White, Wm. Greenleaf, H C Anderson, Otis King, Wm. Hurd.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their POST OFFICE and STATE. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

John Sawyer, C. Farrington, T Lane, Stephen C Wilcox, Mrs. D. Killpatrick, Mrs. E. V. Bersey, A. Payson, J Snow, H H Hart, Wm. E Soper, Henry Hillard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman, Esther Ann Pratt, Aaron Bagsley, John Brown.

MARY BOYD wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, MARGARET C. RILEY, what P. O.? SOMEBODY wants his paper changed from OTIS, MASS., to COLD SPRING, MASS. Will he please give us his NAME?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. R. York—You will see the acknowledgment in the No. for April 5th.

A. D. Haddock—The Millennial Harbinger, Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Ella Phelps—Credited to No. 497.

J. H. F. Varney—Can't say when. Some months yet.

John G. Maner—We will send you "Signs" soon as a new edition is printed.

G. W. Matts—Are out of Great Controversy.

Caroline G. Baker—We have credited you the $2.00 that you sent last fall.

C. F. Goodwin—Your letter with remittance was received.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 448.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—J Morrill Jr. 494, E Flanders 457, N W Jones 468, B Perham 460, J M Dalton 467, C H Danforth 473, C R Field 473, R G Whitcomb 414, B F Millard 467, H Phelps 439, A H Kidder 481, T D Knightly 472, J W Hoffman 472, B Bethel 466, G B Burdick 390, Mrs M Gove 472, J. W. Heath 455, J Stockwell Jr 477, S W Howe 472, G E Lawton 472, R. C. Downing 472, S G Hooper 2nd 472, W O Smith 472, E Woodruff 474, I. Nichols 472, Wm. Walker 472, Mrs. A. Varney 461, J Lepard 460, O Davis 455, J Beard 446, J P Blaisdell 468, S. Robbins 473, D. Brooks 474, E. Squires 473, L Chamberlin 473, H. G. Thompson 456, H. Fellows 471, G. Albright 469, C. West 456, D Taylor 450, H A Ellis 473, A M S Bement 468, S A Glazier 473, D Chase 468, J A Pooler 467, Mrs A B Angell 473, M Whitaker 466, M. Bishop 452, J. G. Graham 474, Mrs. M. Bailey 473, Miss A. Bailey 474, A Churchill 473, Mrs M Mills 473, G. Hatfield 473, R. Snow 473, S Hale 442, M H Inman 453.

$2.00 each.—A Little 483, R C JACKMAN 468, A W McDonald 442, C Stone 514, Mrs M J Jones 499, Mrs N Nichols 390, C. B. Mersereau 480, M Stevens 496, I M Aldrich 494, A B Fabrick 498, L K Holt 498, S Brown 471, M K Prescott 450, N. Thrasher 496, C. R. Danks 495, J Linard 494, E. Stratton 500, H. Harrington 497, W H Conley 424, G Wightman 485, A Metzger 499, J D Morris 470, L Andrews 499, R Hawks 507, G L Kelley 490, A Hawks 483, C Burrows [illegible].

50c each.—Mrs C E Hazen [illegible], A. F. Palmer 454, F Boardman 460, H. Sisson 469, Mrs D S Lamprey 460, J Francis 465.

J B Morgan $2.50, 481; J McGowen $2.62, 442; Mrs S Smith $1.05, 473; J R Savage $3.00, 457; L F Dodge $1.00, 463.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

W H Barker $1.00, Mrs J R Kelley 75c, I M Aldrich 30c, O. KING (what P. O.?) 50c, N. Dodge $1.00, J. G. Bauer $1.00, M D Haddock 45c, P W Matts 10c, O Sanders 25c, T M Preble $2.00.

For Bro. Randall Curtiss—Henry Clark, 50 cts.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

N. J. Pribble, W M Caul, C D Trott, C F Roberts, J Nichols, J. M. Rannells, J. R. Kelley, A. D. Haddock, G E Hooper, P W Matts, I K Lombard, O KING (ready to send—what P. O. and State?), H W Dana, W A Egleston, J Anderson, J R Preston, J. D. Brown, W H Barker, R W Wilson, O Saunders, S Dodge.

BY EXPRESS.—W. Johnston.

☞ N. B.—SEVERAL ORDERS ARE NOW WAITING, UNFILLED, as the editions of quite a number of our books are entirely exhausted. We hope in a few weeks to have a new supply. This will account for our receipts of money for books and tracts, and no notice of books sent out.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

A Hawks, A W Sibley, P E Armstrong, L Beeraft, C H Sweet, A Stearns, P W Covey, Jane J Austin, T L Waugh, J L Hersey, W. Greenleaf, J Elkins, A A Lawrence, T M Preble.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Luthera B. Weaver—North Dana, Mass.

H. G. Thompson—Co. A. 24th Reg. V. R. C. 7th St. Barracks, Washington, D. C.

D. T. Taylor—Rouses Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian Mission the past week, as follows:—

H. L. H. and wife, $40.00; A. Adams, $10.00; I. Field, $10.00; I. C. Howe $10.00; I. L. Little, $3.00; Mrs. Green, $5.00; Central Hall Church, East Boston, $3.00; Jas. Freeman Clark, $2.00; George W. Briggs, $1.00; L. T. Cunningham, $1.00; W. Laskey, $1.00; J. S. Potter, $1.00; A friend of Mission, Mrs. Pinkham, East Boston, $1.00; A lady, through Bro. N. N. Whitney, $1.00.

In returning thanks to my dear christian friends for the sympathy they have manifested for the Italian Mission, I would say that, unfortunately, we live in such a time that we are obliged to lose nearly one half of our contributions in exchanging federal money for European currency; for this reason, I have only sufficient means to carry my family to England. I trust, dear brethren, you will assist me to reach my destination. I expect to spend two or three weeks in London, Providence permitting, and all contributions in future which may be sent to Elders J. LITCH, MILES GRANT, or H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass., or to Elder J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich., will be forwarded to me, and acknowledged. Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for the kingdom,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal, in their proper condition, as viewed by the Light of Revelation. [illegible]
2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. [illegible]
3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Woe" ended with the Reign of Terror in France. [illegible]
4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible]
5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible]
6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." [illegible]
7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" [illegible]
8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars. [illegible]
9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.
10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible. [illegible]
11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. [illegible]

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.00. [illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the [illegible]

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF HELEN MARR PREBLE.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in East Weare, N. H., March 29th, 1864, my beloved wife, Helen M. Preble, aged fifty-two years, lacking five days, after a long and distressing illness of dropsy and heart disease.

Her maiden name was Eaton. The place of her birth, and where she lived until we were married, was within about one mile of the place where she died. But while we lived together, we resided, traveled, and labored in several of the States of this Union. The Advent cause has had her strength and influence, without any faltering, for more than twenty-three years of the best part of her life.

In early life, at the age of eighteen, she gave her heart to her Savior, as the following extracts from her "diary" will show, which she commenced in 1831.

"Weare, Jan. 1, 1831. The happiest New Year's day that I ever experienced. When I compare the present state of my mind with what it was but one year ago to-day, I am struck with wonder and surprise at the change. Then, my whole aim was to secure to myself that happiness which arose from worldly pursuits. . . . . But through the goodness and mercy of God I hope and trust my soul has, in a measure, been a partaker of that happiness which is of endless duration. And it is for this that I feel to rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

Under date of April 3d, of the same year, she writes:—"This day completes my nineteenth year. . . . One year ago yesterday, God was pleased to call my attention to the subject of religion; and I have great reason to look back with pleasure on that day as one of the most important of my unprofitable life."

The following extracts from her "diary" will give the reader some idea of the state of her mind and purposes of her heart before and after our marriage. Under date of Jan. 23d, 1837, she writes:—

"I know that my Redeemer lives, and because he lives I shall live also. I know there is nothing that will compare with the love of God in the soul. Yes, I would say, 'Remove all my earthly relations from me—only let me feel that my Redeemer is mine, and I am his, and I will ask no more.'"

Under date of Dec. 3d of this same year, and following our marriage, which was on the 14th of November previous, she writes:—

"Felt an unusual exercise in prayer while engaged in family devotion this morning. Repaired to the house of God, where Jesus was pleased to fill my soul with love for poor sinners."

Again, Dec. 6:—"Enjoyed much in reading God's holy word. Think I find it a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path."

Again, Dec. 31, Sabbath:—"Attended meeting, and enjoyed the season much. My husband spoke from the words, 'Time is short.' He felt the power of the words, it being the last day of the year. But what added more to the solemnity of the occasion, was the death of an aged gentleman within a few rods of the meeting-house. He died during service, and some were called from the meeting to lay him out. Truly, death is in our land, and I know not how soon the mandate will be sealed upon me. God grant that I may be in readiness; that I may have my work done, and well done in the Lord."

At the commencement of a new year she writes:—"Jan. 1st, 1838. The commencement of a new year finds me a resident of Parsonsfield, Me., where I expect to remain a short time. I know not how long."

In this same month, Jan. 16th, she writes:—"Feel this morning that the cause of God has a claim upon me, and it does not become me to be idle when sinners are perishing for the want of information."

Again on the 24th:—"This evening I am alone, as my husband has gone some distance to attend meeting. My prayer is that God would stand by him, and grant him the influence of his Holy Spirit in speaking."

Again, the next day, 25th:—"Enjoyed this day unusually well; but more especially this evening in the prayer meeting did I feel that my peace was made with God; and it is more than my meat and drink to do the will of my Heavenly Father."

The next day, 26th:—"This evening visited at Bro. H——'s. Felt rather unpleasant on account of some misunderstanding with some of the brethren as to a remark made by my husband last evening in the prayer meeting. Think my husband correct in his remark, and hope it will serve to arouse those who have been living at ease in Zion."

On the 27th she writes:—"Attended a church meeting, and united with the church. Felt my heart gladdened at the prospect of union in the church. This evening we have been favored with the call of eight young persons, three of whom were pious, the other five anxious. They were all willing to bow but one, and she was sorry that she did not. We had a weeping, solemn time; and one name, I trust, will be registered in heaven."

Again, on the 28th, in referring to the prayer meeting, she writes:—"Christians were well engaged, and sinners wept; and some felt to acknowledge they were wrong in their application as to the remark made last Thursday evening."

Under date of Feb. 11th (Sabbath), she writes:—"Enjoyed much in secret prayer, especially while praying for my husband."

Again the next day, (12th):—"Felt quite disconcerted at the thought of parting with my dear companion to attend the quarterly meeting. After praying a long time, felt willing to give him up."

Again, on the 19th:—"Feel rather lonely to-day, as my husband has been called away to attend a funeral. Yet I know this is but the commencement of his leaving me, and I awfully fear lest I shall be unwilling to give my consent at all times for his departure. It is not my intention now ever to hinder him when duty calls." (And let me add here, she never did when she was well, so it was consistent for me to go.)

Under date of April 1st (Sabbath), she writes:—"Attended meeting as usual. In the evening, felt desirous of being excused from attending meeting, but could find no reasonable excuse; I went to the meeting, and felt to praise God that I did so."

The last words found in her "diary" are the following:—"O that my heart may be in entire subjection to the will of God." And thus she tried to live.

Twenty-six years ago last November, we were united in marriage; and during this period of more than a quarter of a century which we were permitted to live together, I do not remember of hearing her complain of her lot as a christian, or in any other way as regards the hardships incident to her lot as a minister's wife. If my brethren in the ministry, or others, called on us at a time when we did not have all we could wish to place upon our table for their comfort, my dear wife would always make the best of it, without one word of complaint; always cheerful, and ready to entertain the Lord's servants, as many can bear me witness. Faithfully, and without murmuring, did she stand by me in all my labors and trials as a minister of the gospel of our divine Savior.

Although in 1841, when I first embraced the faith of the immediate coming of Christ, she for a short time thought me deluded, and seemed to feel that our earthly prospects were blighted, yet, even then, she did but gently oppose me. But when she saw the truth herself, with her whole heart she embraced it. In 1842 we were united in the thing, and sold about all of our earthly substance; broke up house-keeping, and spent the time in traveling, and laboring for the salvation of sinners, until the fall of 1844; at which time we expected to see our Savior. But when the time passed, we were left without a home in this world of disappointment, poverty, and distress. But never from that day to the day of her death, did I ever hear my beloved wife utter one word of regret for the course we had taken, or for the sacrifice we had made. But on the other hand, she often expressed herself "happy," to think we had "given all for Christ," and in a very short time we should "possess the kingdom," as our eternal reward.

But oh my loss! O cruel, cruel death! "But you'll be destroyed." And, as it now appears to me, if all the troubles and afflictions of my whole previous life were crowded together into one, it would not compare with this affliction I now suffer in the loss of this one object of my affections, which I loved next to my Savior. But I must not murmur; for my loss is her gain, as she was ready and waiting to go.

INCIDENTS OF HER LIFE.

The following incidents will give the reader some idea of her great help to me, and to the cause of Christ.

In the winter of 1843, while laboring a few weeks in the western part of Massachusetts, I gave a course of lectures in the village of Warwick. In an evening meeting I met with great opposition from a man who tried to turn every thing into ridicule. And so bold and determined was he, that I was obliged to stop speaking—fell upon my knees and prayed. As I rose from praying, my faithful wife struck the hymn—and such was the divine power which attended that singing (wife and I sung alone,) when we closed the hymn the man left his seat, came and took me by the hand, confessed his fault, asked for prayers in his behalf, fell upon his knees with us, begged for mercy, and was converted on the spot. This gave new impulse to the work of God, and a large number were converted before we left the place.

"O turn ye, O turn ye, for why will ye die?"

A few weeks later—about the middle of February—we had to leave Nashua, our place of residence then, and go to the State of Maine, to attend appointments which I had made for seven different towns in the county of Franklin. My first appointment was at New Sharon, to commence on Sunday, the 19th. The hardest snow storm for the winter commenced on Wednesday, the 15th. But notwithstanding this, my ever faithful wife said, "Let us go, husband, I think I can stand it." And so on Thursday morning, (16th) at six o'clock, we left Nashua, with one only child, a daughter, then about five years old. But such was the unusual severity of the storm, the cars could only reach Dover at quite a late hour that evening.

Friday, 17th. The roads were so badly drifted, the cars could not run; and a team of four horses was fitted out, and a few passengers accompanied us to Portland, where we arrived about ten o'clock in the evening. And so bad was the travelling, that a train of cars which left Boston on Wednesday, P. M., did not reach Portland until a few minutes after we did.

On Saturday morning, (18th,) at seven o'clock, the stage was to leave Portland for Wilton, sixty-five miles distant! And notwithstanding the fatigues of the two days previous, the severe cold morning, and the badness of the traveling; yet my persevering and courageous wife said, "I think we can go, husband; let us try it!" And so we did. But at seven o'clock that evening, we were some twelve miles from Wilton; and the roads so dangerous to travel, that the driver said he dare not go any further with his double team. But said if we were disposed to follow him, as he must go with the mail, he would furnish us with a single team,—he would take another, the baggage, and a lady passenger; and we might follow him if we could. And thus, that terrible night, with my wife and child covered with buffalo robes, we drove to Wilton, where we arrived about midnight. When we reached the place, the driver found the lady with him was motionless, and speechless, but not quite lifeless, as she revived from her senseless state in about half an hour after coming into a warm room at the hotel where we stopped.

Sabbath morning, 19th. Was now some fifteen miles from my appointment in New Sharon. And as the roads were still so bad, and the weather so very cold, I said to my dear wife, "Will you not remain here at the hotel, and let me go to my appointment? And as soon as the travelling will admit I will return for you." She replied, "No, husband, I had rather go with you." I then said, "Shall I not stop here with you, and give up the idea of reaching my appointment?" "I think not," said she, "as it will disarrange all your other appointments." Hence I hired a team of the landlord,—left our baggage in his care,—and we reached the place of my appointment at eleven o'clock that forenoon. And none of us were injured by the journey. The Lord was with us. And for seven successive weeks we attended to our work; myself being able to give, on an average, two discourses each day, for the entire seven weeks. And it is now a matter of great comfort to me, that I not only expect to see a great number of precious souls saved in the kingdom of God, as the result of those labors; but with them, and "the saints of the Most High," my beloved, deceased wife.

One more incident I will relate, to show her strong faith in God, that he would sustain us as a family in times of want and affliction. Some few years since, while I was laid by from preaching some time in consequence of ill health, we became rather needy; when I said to her I thought I should try and borrow a little money. But she put me off by saying:

"I would not to-day, husband; we can get along a few days longer."

And thus she put me off, at three or four different times, for more than a week, when I would speak about borrowing money. But at last I said to her, early one morning, "Wife, I must have five dollars to-day; and after breakfast I am going out and try to borrow it." But she replied: "Wait till the mail comes in, husband." I said, "That is reasonable, wife." And so I waited. When the mail came in that day, it brought us a letter, and in it a five dollar bill from our kind friends in H——, who had heard of my sickness. Thank the Lord for such faith, prudence, and economy, as always characterized my devoted wife during the whole time we lived together. Hence, I have lost a great treasure; and in this life I am not expecting it will be made up to me. But,

"O, that bright world to come!"

When shall we be there?

Although much more might be said in favor of the deceased, yet she had her faults. The greatest of which I had to complain, was her too great devotion to her domestic affairs. She was a little too much of a "Martha"—"careful and troubled about many things." She was particular to a fault. Her "needle," "thread," and "thimble;" the "dust," "flies," and "spiders," made my valuable wife a great deal of trouble and labor. Hence it confined her within doors too much for her health, and no doubt shortened her days. This I say that others may profit thereby, while they can.

LAST FEW MONTHS OF HER LIFE.

The nature of her disease was such that her physical sufferings were very great, and especially for the last few weeks and days of her life. As the water accumulated in the lungs, and around the heart, it was with the greatest difficulty that those organs could perform their labor. And as our family physician, of Concord, said to me since her death, if it had not been for the special care which she received, she would not have lived a month after we moved from Concord in October last. It was the only thing which kept her alive for months.

Night and day was I with her, not leaving her to attend a Sabbath meeting for more than six months. For the last few weeks she could not lie down at all; and for nearly two months was about as helpless as a babe. For the last ten or twelve days she was confined to her chairs, as she had five different ones, of different size and form, so as to change her position as much as possible. A part of the time she had to be changed from one chair to another every hour, sometimes much less! But notwithstanding all this, not a word of complaint did she utter; but a calm and heavenly resignation was manifest in all things.

For nearly a week previous to her death, our daughter, Mrs. George, was with us; and one morning, soon after we left the breakfast table, and before we engaged in family devotion, wife spoke and said: "I wish to talk with you all freely; for I feel that I must soon leave you; and I hope you will not mourn and weep for me, for I feel I am ready, and I am willing to go." But while addressing herself to our daughter, telling her that it was her wish that she should have some particular articles of her clothing; the child was so overcome with grief, she cried out, "Don't, mother!" and thus the conversation ceased upon this subject. On Saturday afternoon, Mrs. George returned home, hoping to return to us the first of the week.

On Monday morning, at an early hour, it was evident that my dear companion must soon leave us, and a messenger was dispatched to Concord for our children, fearing that death might deprive them of their mother before they could reach us. But oh, the distress of my heart, when the messenger returned, and brought no one with him but our son-in-law, Mr. George, as daughter Jennie, by over exertion, was taken violently sick on Sabbath morning and could not come.

At first I was afraid to have my son go into the house, for fear his mother would be entirely overcome at the thought of never seeing her daughter again. But as son Hermon entered the room, she took him by the hand, and in a few moments calmly said, "Where is Jennie?" When told that she was sick, and could not come, she, without a tear, or but little apparent emotion, meekly, and in a heavenly, submissive tone of voice, replied, "Well!" and that was all she then said. A short time after this, she reached out her arms, clasped me to her bosom, and then kissed me several times. Then looking towards Mr. George, she said, "I want to kiss Hermon!" After this she kissed her mother, and a sister of hers who was present.

Some little time after this, she very mildly and affectionately said, "I should like to see Jennie!" When I asked her if she had any special word for Jennie, or any other absent friends, she tenderly replied, "Not now." The peculiar manner in which these words were uttered, conveyed to mind what she had said to us before, "MY WORK IS DONE!"

To the last, she appeared to be conscious, although for a short time was unable to articulate so as to be understood. But often during the last day and night of her life, she would exclaim, "How good the Lord is!" The following are among the last words I heard from her lips. While she saw my great anxiety for her life, and my willingness to lift her from one chair to another, if possible to relieve her pain, she would say, "How can you do it, husband! Have some one to help you."

About the last time I ever moistened those dear lips and mouth with a pleasant liquid we had for her, she looked up, and with a smile of gratitude said, "What a favor!" Soon after this she said, "Do not hold me; let me go!" When I saw she must soon go and leave me, I involuntarily exclaimed, "FAREWELL, WIFE, TILL THE MORNING OF THE RESURRECTION!" And so at last she sweetly and calmly fell asleep, without a motion of her head, hand, or foot. A slight gasp, and all was over for this mortal life.

It was about six o'clock in the morning when my dear wife died; and when we came round the domestic altar for family devotion, Mother Eaton (mother of the deceased), who is in her eighty-fifth year, and resides with me, said, "Thomas, cannot you sing a verse or two this morning?" I said, "I don't know but I can, mother; I have been thinking about it." She replied, "I think you can." And so I struck a familiar piece, a great favorite of my deceased companion; and when we came to the words,

'Then shall I raise a morning song,
With all the vast, angelic throng,"

I saw so clearly with an eye of faith my precious wife, clothed in white, in her immortal beauty, singing, and shining like the sun, with the redeemed host, made like the angels to die no more! that I now have such a longing desire for that day to come, as I never had before. Oh,

"How long shall death, the tyrant, reign,
And triumph o'er the just?"

"Come, Lord Jesus." O, "come quickly." "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." "And so shall we ever be with the Lord." May the reader and the writer be there.

"Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them."

"Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord."

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right." Amen. T. M. PREBLE.

East Weare, N. H., April 9th, 1864.

ERRATA.—In my closing argument on the Sabbath question, as found in the Crisis of Apr. 26th, p. 22, first col., five lines from the top,—for "Sabbath Manual, No. 2, pp. 8–126," read 111–126.

About mid-way of same column, where it is said, "Christ had told the disciples to leave Jerusalem when they should see it compassed with enemies," for "enemies," read armies. T. M. PREBLE.

Obituaries.

HENRY GLINES.

Died in the Hospital at Richmond, Va., Feb. 27th, 1864, Henry, the oldest son of Mark and Harriet Glines, aged nineteen years and three months.

The subject of this notice was taken prisoner in the bloody charge on Fort Waggoner, on James Island. During most of the time between his capture and death, he suffered the most severe treatment, in starvation and exposure, until his emaciated form sank away in death, to await the summons to judgment.

He leaves an affectionate father and mother, sister and brothers, to sigh over the sufferings and death of their dear son and brother. Among the letters he has written during his absence, they gather evidence of repentance of sin and trust in God. The following letter shows plainly his state of mind:—

"ON MY COUCH, Feb. 23d, 1864,
Hospital No. 22, Ward 2d.

Dearly Beloved Parents, Brothers and Sister:—I am led to believe, by the feelings of my body, that life is not long to be a blessing to me, and I feel it my duty, while the little strength in my being lasts, to let you know the condition of my mind. I feel that many times since I took upon myself the name of Jesus, that I have grieved his holy name; but now I feel that God in his mercy has forgiven all my wanderings, and owns me as his child. Although the thought of dying and being laid in the cold and silent grave so far from the loved ones at home is sad, but oh! how blessed to know that when the trump of God sounds, we shall be raised to praise our Savior on the New Earth. Blest promise in this hour to me. O prepare to meet me there, to praise God through endless time. Good bye, good bye. HENRY."

WM. A. FENN.

ELIZABETH S. BASTON.

Died in East Boston, Mass., April 24th, 1864, Sister Elizabeth S. Baston, wife of Joseph C. Baston, aged fifty years.

For many years Sister Baston has been a lover of Jesus and his coming. The "blessed hope" has sustained her in her long and painful illness. She found it all heart could wish, and the Savior a friend who sticketh closer than a brother. She is now safe from the coming storm, and deep temptations of "the Prince of the power of the air." She is sleeping quietly in Jesus, awaiting his coming to raise the dead, and give them the kingdom. May the whole family there unite to part no more forever.

Funeral was attended by the writer.

MILES GRANT.

ANNA ATKINS.

On Stillwell Prairie, April 13th, 1864, of dropsy, Sister Anna Atkins, aged eighty-two years, nine months, and thirteen days.

For the last thirty-six years of her life she was an acceptable member of the Baptist church, and highly esteemed as a mother in Israel.

THOMAS ATKINS.

Thomas Atkins, her husband, departed this life Nov. 9th, 1863, aged eighty-five years and five months.

The funeral services for both were attended by the writer at the same time, in the Baptist church at Kingsbury. Remarks were made from 1 Cor. 15: 26,—"The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." ELD. B. McDONALD.

IRA HUNTER.

Died in Springfield, Vernon Co., Wis., March 24th, 1864, Ira T. Hunter, aged fifty-two years.

He trusted the promise made to those that believe
In Christ, the Life-giver,—though dead they shall live;
Their life hid with Jesus, his voice they will hear,
In his likeness rising, immortal appear.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool, April 13th. Queenstown 14th.

Maximilian probably sails for Mexico on the 14th.

The Conference had not yet assembled.

The Garibaldi enthusiasm had not abated. He visited Lord Palmerston for an hour, also Stansfield, who was implicated in the recent conspiracy.

The London Herald says Clarendon's mission to Paris is to restore amicable relations and dispel Napoleon's irritation against England.

The Prussians continued a vigorous bombardment of Duppel. It was reported that the Danish fire was weak. Several batteries had been silenced.

A Flensburg dispatch says the Danes are preparing to evacuate the intrenchments. The Prussians in Jutland had advanced further northward. They drove the Danes out of Horsens after a short engagement.

Garibaldi arrived in London on the 11th inst., and had a splendid reception. The crowd exceeded anything ever witnessed.

The leading statesmen and men of all parties are to meet Garibaldi at an entertainment at the Duke of Sutherland's.

The Danish representatives to the Conference had arrived in London.

There was renewed activity among the Polish insurgents.

The Archduke Maximilian received the Mexican Delegation on the 10th inst. In a speech he said that, as the people of Mexico by an overwhelming majority had confirmed the resolution of the notables, and as France guarantees the Independence of Mexico and the Emperor of Austria consents, he solemnly declared his acceptance of the proposed crown, and pledged himself to govern constitutionally and for the benefit of the people of Mexico.

He claimed the union and the good will of the people and expressed his gratitude to the Emperor of the French, who had brought about a solution of the Mexican question.

The Archduke was confined to his bed by a slight fever on the 11th inst. He goes to Mexico via Rome.

The Emperor of Austria permits the formation of a corps of 600 volunteers and 300 soldiers for Mexico.

THREE DAYS LATER.

The siege of Duppel was steadily progressing. The Conference holds its first meeting in London on the 20th inst. The German Diet sends a Representative.

Garibaldi had a magnificent reception at the Crystal Palace yesterday. A flag of Italy was presented bearing the words "Rome and Venice." Also a sword. The latter from Italians of London.

It is rumored that negotiations are going on for the sale of the steamship Great Eastern to the French Government.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

The Emperor and Empress of Mexico quitted Miramar on the 14th amidst enthusiastic cheers and salutes from the batteries. They were expected at Rome on the 19th, and would set out for Mexico on the day following.

The family agreement between the Emperor of Austria and Maximilian is to be communicated to the Austrian Reichsrath. Maximilian's renunciation for himself and heirs for the right of succession to the Austrian crown is said to be unconditional, and not dependent on the stability of the Mexican Government.

THE DANISH WAR.

The siege of Duppel steadily progresses. The Prussians had connected their intrenchments with a new parallel and without loss. Cannonading goes on day and night.

The Danes announce the blockade of Dantzic and Pillau from the 19th.

Danish ships are reported to be making captures at the mouth of the Elbe.

FIVE DAYS LATER.

The Prussians assaulted and captured Duppel on the 18th. They took 83 cannon and from 2000 to 3000 prisoners. The Prussian loss is stated to be two generals, sixty officers and six hundred privates. The Danes are said to have lost between eighty and one hundred officers and four hundred are reported hors du combat. The victory was received with great rejoicing in Berlin.

It is reported that the Prussians have occupied Alsen, and that the occupation of the whole of Jutland is resolved upon.

The Conference would meet at London on the 20th. It is reaffirmed that England and France have fully agreed, and that a pacific result is probable.

The Emperor and Empress of Mexico left Rome on the 20th for Civita Vecchia to embark for Mexico. They had an audience of the Pope on the 19th, and His Holiness returned the visit. They attended mass at the Vatican before leaving.

The Persian Gulf telegraph has been laid, and throughout 900 miles works magnificently.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, April 25th. On Saturday, Governors Lewis, of Wisconsin, Yates, of Illinois, Stone, of Iowa, Morton, of Indiana, Brough of Ohio, and Blair, of Michigan, tendered the President 100,000 troops to serve one hundred days, to be clothed, armed and equipped, by the United States Government, the men to be raised within the limits of the several North-western States named. The proposition was accepted by the President, and the Secretary of War was subsequently instructed to receive these troops. Four or five of the above named Governors issued their proclamations in this city and sent them forward on Saturday. The first proposition made to the government by the North-western Governors was that the President issue his proclamation for 100,000 six months men, but owing to difficulties that could not be immediately overcome, they agreed to make the proposition mentioned. It is believed by the gentlemen who have tendered this new auxiliary force that they will be able to raise it in twenty-five days. This new army will garrison all the posts and forts on the frontier and in the rear of active operations, thus enabling the veterans now doing post and garrison duty to join our armies in the field.

New York, April 29th. The Times' Washington dispatch says: Up to 11 P. M. to-day nothing of much importance has transpired at the front. The indications are that a collision cannot long be delayed.

The Signal Corps, which has been stationed here all winter, left a day or two ago for the army.

It is thought that Lee will endeavor to bring on a fight without leaving his intrenchments.

A letter received here to-day from Admiral Porter pronounces Gen. Banks' expedition a complete failure. Besides over thirty pieces of artillery, a large quantity of small arms, several hundred wagons and a first-class gunboat (the Eastport), near four thousand prisoners have been lost; also, in addition, the paymaster's safe, containing a million dollars in greenbacks, was captured by the rebels.

Notices.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. GRIFFIN.

Meetings at South Natic.

The Lord willing, I expect to hold a series of meetings at South Natic, Mass., in the School House Hall, commencing Sunday, May 15th, and continuing every evening through the week. Meetings on Sunday as follows: 10 A. M., 1–30 P. M., and 7–30 in the evening. Meetings through the week will commence at 7–30 P. M. Will the brethren and sisters in Dover, Natic, and wherever they may be scattered in that section, come with lamps trimmed and burning, ready to labor for the salvation of sinners, praying in the Holy Ghost that God will raise up a church of faithful believers in that place. H. K. FLAGG.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Notice.

I will attend the funeral of George W. Jones, May 15th, 1864, at the Advent Chapel in West Alton, N. H., at 10 A. M. Bro. J. G. Smith will be present to take a part in the exercises.

N. GLIDDEN.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, 2 o'clock P. M., and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. SPENCER, President.
C. W. SMITH, Secretary.

Illinois Conference.

There has been a strange fatality attending the time of its announcement. May 17th and May 25th have been given. I wish to make a final correction. It will be ☞ May 25th, and over the Sabbath. Come one, and come all.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

QUESTIONS.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 13th, 1864, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. Come one and all that can.

Notice.

The Lord willing, a conference of Free Sabbath Adventists, organized under the name of "The Church of the First Born," will be held at Portland, Me., commencing Thursday, May 5th, and continuing over the Sabbath and first day. All lovers of truth, whether they see exactly with us or not, are cheerfully invited to attend. Strangers coming into the city will inquire for H. A. Weston, 432 Congress Street. S. C. HANCOCK.

P. S. The Lord willing, I will preach in Westerly, R. I., at the Quarry meeting-house, Sunday, April 24th, also at Central Hall, East Boston, Thursday evening, April 28th, and over the following Sunday. S. C. HANCOCK.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

CHAS. P. DOW.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—ED.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. HITCHCOCK.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. SHELDON.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

Miles Grant .... Sunday, May 8th
J. Couch .... Sunday, May 15th

Searsport, Me., May 15th, and every evening during the following week, and Lord's day, 22d.
MILES GRANT.

Lee, N. H. .... Saturday evening, May 7th and Sunday, the 8th.
Lawrence, Mass., Friday evening, May 13th. Perhaps also Saturday and Sunday, if there are no other arrangements. H. L. HASTINGS.

New York City, Room No. 18 Cooper Institute, all day, Sunday, May 8th.
Philadelphia .... Sunday, May 15th
State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill. .... May 25th and through the week. J. V. HIMES.

Worcester, Mass. .... May 8th
Athol, Mass .... May 15th
Ashburnham Depot, Mass .... May 22d
Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's) .... May 29th
Vernon, Vt. .... June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (where Bro. Miller may appoint), June 12th. S. S. BREWER.

Biddeford, Me .... May 8th
Worcester, Mass .... May 15th
F. H. BURBANK.

East Boston .... Sunday, May 15th
A. W. SIBLEY.

APPOINTMENTS FOR VERNON, VT.

L. Boutell .... Sunday, May 22d
S. S. Brewer .... Sundays, June 15th and 19th

East Stoneham, Me., Saturday evening, May 14th, and over the following Sabbath.
North Norway, Saturday evening, May 21st, and over the Sabbath.
Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore .... June 5th
J. T. JORDAN.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa. .... May 22d
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Holliston, Mass. .... May 8th
A number are expected to go forward in baptism.
South Natic, Mass., (in the School-house Hall), Sunday, May 15th. Also evenings through the week.
Holliston .... Sunday, May 22d
H. K. FLAGG.

North Dana, Mass .... May 8th
Northfield, (at Bro. A. Gay's) .... May 11th
Griswoldville, Mass .... May 12th
Charlemont, Mass., (at Bro. Calvin Hick's) .... May 13th
Savoy, Mass .... May 15th
Dalton, Mass .... May 17th and 18th
Plainfield, Mass., (Bro. J. Healy's) .... May 19th
Plainfield, Mass., (D. Thayer's) .... May 20th
Goshen, Mass .... May 22d
Amherst, Mass .... May 23d
GEO. A. STREETER.

Hartford, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Hall), Sundays, May 22d and 29th. H. MUNGER.

Danbury, N. H. .... May 8th
Boston, Mass .... May 15th
Worcester, Mass .... May 22d
Grafton Centre, N. H. .... May 29th
J. COUCH.

Northwood Narrows, N. H., Saturday evening, May 7th and Sunday, the 8th. JOHN G. HOOK.

Mantua Station, Portage Co., Ohio .... Sunday, May 15th, half past 10 o'clock, A. M. Hope to see a general gathering of the friends of truth in that region.
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, May 22d, at half-past ten A. M.
Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. ONGLEY.

Portsmouth, N. H. .... Sundays, May 8th and 15th
T. M. PREBLE.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. .... May 8th
B. HITCHCOCK.

Sandy Hill, N. Y. .... Sundays, May 15th, 22d, 29th
H. P. CARPENTER.

Lawrenceville, C. E., (where Bro. E. Lawrence may appoint), Sunday, May 8th. PEER H. LAWRENCE.

Haverhill, Mass .... Sunday, May 8th
A. W. SIBLEY.

Holden, Me., (Chapel near Bro. Israel Clewley's), Sunday, May 8th.
Surry, Me., School-house, North Bend, Sunday, May 15th
THOMAS SMITH.

Wallingford, (North Farms) .... Sunday, May 8th
O. D. WOODRUFF.

New Britain, Ct. .... May 8th
Collinsville, Ct. .... May 11th
Southington, Ct. .... May 12th
Plainville, Ct. .... May 13th
Bristol, Ct. .... May 15th
Warehouse Point, Ct. .... May 18th
Scitico, Ct. .... May 19th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block) .... May 22d
J. S. WHITE.

APPOINTMENT FOR AGAWAM.

H. Pratt .... May 8th

Wrightville, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
LEWIS ANDREWS.

West Ossipee, (for baptism) .... May 8th
T. W. PIPER.

Tuftonborough, N. H. .... Sunday, May 8th
West Alton, N. H. (funeral) .... Sunday, May 15th
Nottingham, N. H. .... Sunday, May 22d
J. G. SMITH.

Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, May 8th
Bradford, (New Town Hall), N. H., Sunday, May 15th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

East Otis, Mass .... Sunday, May 15th
Cold Spring, Mass .... Sunday, May 29th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Ocean Port, N. J. .... May 8th
J. K. BELLOWS.

Portland, Me .... Sunday, May 8th
Frankfort Mills .... Sunday, May 15th
J. HEMENWAY.

Kendall .... May 8th
Darien .... May 15th
C. F. SWEET.

Richmond, (Reed meeting-house) .... May 8th
R. R. YORK.

Northfield, Ct. .... Sunday, May 8th
South Windsor, Ct. .... Sunday, May 15th
South Manchester .... evening of the 15th
as Bro. H. P. Hart may arrange. C. GOODRICH.

Ore Hill, Warren, N. H .... May 8th
West Plymouth, (Brick school-house) .... May 15th
J. M. SANBORN.

Sandy Brook, near Hitchcockville, Ct., (at Bro. Davis') Sunday, May 15th. LEWIS ANDREWS.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SPRINGFIELD, No. 5 OAK ST.

P. Butler .... May 8th
H. Pratt .... May 15th

North Sutton (where Bro. I. Andrews may appoint), May 8th. F. S. RANSOM.

Montreal, C. E., evening, May 7th, and Sunday, the 8th
East Farnham, at 2 o'clock P. M. .... May 13th
Bolton, C. E., (Sargent School-house), quarterly meeting, May 14th and 15th.
Lake School-house .... May 17th
Peasley Corner .... May 18th
Ward's Corner, in Magog .... May 19th
Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. CHAS. P. DOW.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. PEARL, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. TESTAMENTS. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

LARDNER'S WORKS, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

ROY'S HEBREW DICTIONARY, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW CONCORDANCE, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED PICTORIAL DICTIONARY. Price $7.50,—for $6.50.

LOWTH on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

GRIESBACH'S GREEK TESTAMENT, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

ENGLISH REFERENCE BIBLES, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, 6 vols. sheep (used some), $4.00. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine. $3.00.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., nearly new, $6.50. Ditto, new, $7.00
Rollin's History, one vol., sheep, and marbled edges, (Harper's ed.), new, $3.00. Ditto, two vols. $3.00.
Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $1.00.
Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $3.50.
Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.
Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.
Davidson's Connexion of Sacred and Profane Literature. 3 vols., half cloth, $2.00.
Plutarch's Lives, 1 vol. sheep, $2.00.
Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol. sheep, new, $2.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by EXPRESS.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Newton on the Prophecies, sheep, new, $2.25.
Josephus' complete works, $1.50.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
"The End," by John Cumming, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Threefold Test of Modern Spiritualism, 75 cts.
Buck's Theological Dictionary, sheep, $1.50.
Septuagint (Greek Old Testament), Leipsig edition, half sheep, (not a translation), $2.00.
Hebrew Bible (Old Testament and New), Bagster's ed., $2.00.
Our Lord's Great Prophecy, (by Buck), cloth, $1.50.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 90 cts.
" " Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Marsh's Ecclesiastical History, one vol. sheep, $1.00.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $2.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. WOODWARD, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED.—Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted. ☜

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

J. M. Reed, Worden Holloway, Sarah F. Sprague, Thomas Frost, Polly King, Mrs. Henry White, Wm. Greenleaf, H C Anderson, Otis King, Wm. Hurd.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their POST OFFICE and STATE. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

John Sawyer, C. Farrington, T Lane, Stephen C Wilcox, Mrs. D. Ellison, Mrs. R. V. Barney, A. Parsons, J Snow, H H Hart, Wm. E Soper, Henry Hillard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freemant, Esther Ann Pratt, Aaron Bagley, John Brown.

MARY BOYD wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, MARGARET C. RILEY, what P. O.? SOMEBODY wants his paper changed from OTIS, MASS., to COLD SPRING, MASS. Will he please give us his NAME?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R. R. York—You will see the acknowledgment in the No. for April 5th.
A. D. Haddock—The Millennial Harbinger, Seneca Falls, N. Y.
Ella Phelps—Credited to No. 497.
J. H. F. Varney—Can't say when. Some months yet.
John G. Maner—We will send you "Signs" soon as a new edition is printed.
G. W. Mattis—Are out of Great Controversy.
Caroline G. Baker—We have credited you the $2.00 that you sent last fall.
C. F. Goodwin—Your letter with remittance was received.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 448.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—J Morrill Jr. 494, E Flanders 457, N W Jones 468, B Perham 460, J M Dalton 467, C H Danforth 473, C R Field 473, R G Whitcomb 414, B F Millard 467, H Phelps 439, A H Kidder 481, T D Knightly 472, J W Hoffman 472, B Bethel 466, G B Burdick 396, Mrs M Gove 472, J. W. Heath 455, J Stockwell Jr 477, S W Howe 472, O E Lawton 472, R. C. Downing 472, S G Hooper 2nd 472, W O Smith 472, E Woodruff 474, I. Nichols 472, Wm. Walker 473, Mrs. A. Varney 461, J Lepard 460, O Davis 455, J Beard 446, J P Bleisdell 468, S. Robbins 473, D. Brooks 474, E. Squires 473, L Chamberlin 473, H. G. Thompson 456, H. Fellows 471, G. Albright 469, C. West 456, D Taylor 456, H A Ellis 473, A M S Bement 468, S A Glazier 473, D Chase 468, J A Pooler 467, Mrs A B Angell 473, M Whitaker 466, M. Bishop 452, J. G. Graham 474, Mrs. M. Bailey 473, Miss A. Bailey 474, A Churchill 473, Mrs M Mills 473, G. Hatfield 473, R. Snow 473, S Hale 442, M H Inman 453.

$2.00 each.—A Little 483, R C JACKMAN 468, A W McDonald 442, C Stone 514, Mrs M J Jones 499, Mrs N Nichols 390, C. B. Mersereau 480, M Stevens 498, I M Aldrich 494, A B Fabrick 498, L K Holt 498, S Brown 471, M K Prescott 450, N. Thrasher 496, C. R. Danks 495, J Linard 494, E. Stratton 500, H. Harrington 497, W H Conley 424, G Wightman 485, A Metzger 499, J D Morris 470, L Andrews 499, R Hawks 507, O L Kelley 490, A Hawks 453, C Burrows [illegible].

50c each.—Mrs C E Hasen [illegible], A. F. Palmer 454, F Boardman 460, H. Sisson 469, Mrs D S Lamprey 460, J Francis 465.

J B Morgan $2.50, 481; J McGowen $2.62, 442; Mrs S Smith $1.05, 473; J R Savage $3.00, 457; L F Dodge $1.00, 468.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

W H Barker $1.00, Mrs J R Kelley 75c, I M Aldrich 30c, O. KING (what P. O.?) 50c, N. Dodge $1.00, J. G. Bauer $1.00, M D Haddock 45c, P W Matts 10c, O Sanders 25c, T M Preble $2.00.

For Bro. Randall Curtiss—Henry Clark, 40 cts.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

N. J. Pribble, W M Caul, C D Trott, C F Roberts, J Nichols, J. M. Rannells, J. R. Kelley, A. D. Haddock, G E Hooper, P W Matts, I K Lombard, O KING (ready to send—what P. O. and State?), H W Dann, W A Eggleston, J Anderson, J R Preston, J. D. Brown, W H Barker, R W Wilson, O Saunders, S Dodge.

BY EXPRESS.—W. Johnston.

☞ N. B.—SEVERAL ORDERS ARE NOW WAITING, UNFILLED, as the editions of quite a number of our books are entirely exhausted. We hope in a few weeks to have a new supply. This will account for our receipts of money for books and tracts, and no notice of books sent out.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

A Hawks, A W Sibley, P E Armstrong, L Beeraft, C H Sweet, A Stearns, P W Covey, Jane J Austin, T L Waugh, J L Hersey, W. Greenleaf, J Elkins, A A Lawrence, T M Preble.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Luthera B. Weaver—North Dana, Mass.
H. G. Thompson—Co. A. 24th Reg. V. R. C. 7th St. Barracks, Washington, D. C.
D. T. Taylor—Rouses Point, Clinton Co., N. Y.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian Mission the past week, as follows:—

H. L. H. and wife, $40.00; A. Adams, $10.00; I. Field, $10.00; I. C. Howe $10.00; I. L. Little, $5.00; Mrs. Green, $5.00; Central Hall Church, East Boston, $3.00; Jas. Freeman Clark, $2.00; George W. Briggs, $1.00; L. T. Cunningham, $1.00; W. Laskey, $1.00; J. S. Potter, $1.00. A friend of Mission, Mrs. Pinkham, East Boston, $1.00; A lady, through Bro. N. N. Whitney, $1.00.

In returning thanks to my dear christian friends for the sympathy they have manifested for the Italian Mission, I would say that, unfortunately, we live in such a time that we are obliged to lose nearly one half of our contributions in exchanging federal money for European currency; for this reason, I have only sufficient means to carry my family to England. I trust, dear brethren, you will assist me to reach my destination. I expect to spend two or three weeks in London, Providence permitting, and all contributions in future which may be sent to Elders J. LITCH, MILES GRANT, or H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass., or to Elder J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich., will be forwarded to me, and acknowledged. Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for the kingdom,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. [illegible]
2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. [illegible] Single, by mail, 10 cts.
3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Woe" ended with the Reign of Terror in France. [illegible] Single, by mail, 10 cts.
4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible]
5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible]
6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." [illegible]
7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" [illegible]
8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars. [illegible]
9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.
10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology on Bible. [illegible]
11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised, and enlarged. [illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C F. Hudson. [illegible]
Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]
Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]
The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. [illegible]
Eternal Death in the literal sense [illegible]
The Rich Man and Lazarus. [illegible]
The Rights of Wrong [illegible]
Reviewers Reviewed. [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

LINES.

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith."—1 Cor. 16: 13.

Though sore temptations thicken round,
And all seems dark and drear,
Oh! do not faint thee by the way,
The Morning Star draws near.

'Tis surely glimm'ring even now,
And soon 't will brightly shine
Upon this world of sin and wo
With splendor most divine.

Its brightness (like a sea of fire)
Will purify the earth,
'Twill cleanse it from all wickedness,
And give new Eden birth.

Oh! have the faith that looks beyond
This vale of fear and pain,
To that blest time when Christ, our Lord,
Will come to earth again.

Ah! that will be a joyful day,
When saints together meet
Around His throne, all freed from care,
To worship at His feet.

"Stand fast"! dear brother, keep the faith;
Dear sister, falter not,
Until we reach fair Canaan's land,
And Eden is our lot.

Then we may rest forevermore;
As ages glide along,
We'll roam beneath those verdant bowers,
And sing redemption's song.

Dayville, Killingly, Ct. M. A. Wilbur.

For the World's Crisis.

DID PAUL HOPE FOR THE RESURRECTION OF THE UNJUST?

"But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."—Acts 24: 14, 15.

It is not my purpose at this time to enter upon a full examination of this text, but simply to call attention to one point, viz: did Paul hope for the resurrection of the unjust? I answer, he did. In the twenty-third chapter and sixth verse, he says, "I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee; of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." And in the twenty-sixth chapter and fifth to seventh verses, he says that all the Jews knew "that after the most straightest sect of our religion, I lived a Pharisee." And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers, unto which promise, the twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night, hoped to come; for which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews." "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead." From these two passages compared with the text, we learn that Paul's hope had reference to the resurrection of the dead, not only of the just, but also of the unjust.

But it is contended that the "promise made of God unto the fathers," had reference to blessings only, and not to curses, or threatenings. Let us see. In the first chapter of Luke, commencing at the sixty-seventh verse we read, "And his father, Zacharias, was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, and hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; the oath which he swore to our father Abraham, that he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of our life."

This is, undoubtedly, a prophecy of events yet future, and the promise of being "saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us," and of being delivered out of the hand of our enemies," etc., denotes the final overthrow of all the wicked at the day of judgment. See the promise to Abram, (Gen. 12: 3), "And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee;" also 22: 17, "And thy seed (Christ's) shall possess the gate of his enemies." Thus we see that the promise made of God unto the fathers includes his threatenings to their enemies, as well as blessings to themselves. This is clearly seen in the gospel; for that same good news, which proclaims salvation to the believer also proclaims damnation to the unbeliever. And this same apostle to the Gentiles declares, (Rom. 2: 16), that "God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel." Now although no part of the gospel may be received by the impenitent sinner, as good news, yet it is good news to some; and if not to them, it must be to the believer. If, then, whatever it proclaims is to the believer good news, then it must constitute the believer's hope, whether it consist of promises or threatenings.

"Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" If he has decided that all the finally impenitent shall be condemned and punished, is it not right? Dare any man charge God with doing wrong? If, then, it is right for God to punish the wicked; may we not, as christians, hope for the right to prevail? We answer yes.

Again, when our Lord taught his disciples to pray "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven:" and when John upon the Isle of Patmos prayed so earnestly, "Come, Lord Jesus and come quickly;" this prayer involved all the predicted events which are to transpire as the result of his coming. To pray for the coming of the Lord, therefore, is to pray for the resurrection of the dead, for the coming of the judgment of the great day; that the judgment may set, that the books may be open, that ten thousand times ten thousand may stand before Him; that the dead, small, and great, may stand before God; that he may reward every man according to their works; that he will reward the righteous with everlasting life, and punish the wicked with everlasting destruction; it is to pray that all these things may be dissolved, that the heavens may be on fire, the elements melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works therein be burned up. It is to pray that probationary time may close, and that mercy be no longer offered to the guilty sinner. In short, it is to pray for every thing which God in his infinite wisdom has purposed to bring to pass.

Now if we pray for all these things, it follows that we desire to have them come to pass; and we cannot desire the fulfilment of God's plans and purposes without hoping for it. Hence we conclude that all the promises and threatenings of God, relating to man's future destiny, are embraced in the christian's hope.

The plain, simple language of Paul in the text, declares it to be his hope, and allowed by the Jews, "that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." But some are ready to say, why disturb the poor creatures? let them rest. I reply, the justice of God demands their resurrection and future punishment. There is such a thing as men allowing their sympathies to overrule their better judgment, and that kind of sympathy has ruined many a child, and would, if carried to its fullest extent, arraign Almighty God, before its judgment bar, and condemn Him, because he punishes the wicked at all.

We say, then, if it is right to pray for the destruction of all God's enemies, as David prayed, when he said, "Let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end, but establish thou the just;" or, as when he prayed, "Consume them in thy wrath, consume them, let the wicked be no more;"—we say, if it is right to pray thus, then it is right to desire it; and if it is right to desire it, it is right to hope for it.

In this connection let me call attention to a few passages. First in Luke 18: 1–8, we read, "And he spake to them a parable to this end, that men ought always to pray and not to faint; saying, there was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man; and there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary. And he would not for a while; but afterwards he said within himself, though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me. And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith. And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily."

What is the burden of this prayer? to be avenged of their adversaries. This term avenge is defined by Webster as follows:—"To take satisfaction for an injury, by punishing the injuring party." He further says,—"It may be right to avenge injuries, but never to indulge revenge, which is a spirit of malicious resentment." And defines revenge thus:—"To inflict pain deliberately and maliciously, contrary to the laws of justice and humanity, in return for injuries received; often in old writers, and in the Bible, it means to avenge, i. e., to make just return for crime or injury." It is in this sense, undoubtedly, the prayer is offered by the elect. Let it be observed, that our Lord did not condemn the elect for praying thus, but rather commended them, and promised them that their prayers should be answered, and that speedily.

Again, in Rev. 6: 10, the souls under the altar are represented as crying, "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?" Also in chapter 8: 20, we read, "Rejoice, ye heavens, and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you on her" (mystical Babylon); "and a mighty angel took up a great millstone, and cast it into the midst of the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all."

Once more, 19: 1–3, John says, "And I heard a voice of much people in heaven saying, Alleluia, salvation and honor, and glory and power, unto the Lord our God, for true and righteous are his judgments; for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand; and again they said, Alleluia. And her smoke rose up forever and ever."

From these passages we learn that the vindication of God's justice, in the final overthrow of all his enemies is a subject of prayer, and an object of desire and hope, and will finally be a cause of great rejoicing by the church triumphant. Not a tear of sympathy will be shed over their destruction. No weeping there, but great rejoicing, and an acknowledgment by the whole redeemed family, that God's judgments are true and righteous.

Do you say that the justice of God is vindicated in this life? I deny it. To be brief, I will illustrate this point by the riots which occurred in the city of New York last July. Was the justice of God vindicated, when that poor, innocent woman, with her child in her arms was shot dead in the street, while the leading rioters were allowed to escape from punishment? When they seized that innocent negro, whose only crime was that his face happened to be black, and thrust him headlong into a filthy sewer, and shut the lid upon him, left him to perish, while they were permitted to go unpunished; was that the vindication of God's justice? Or when they robbed and burned the Colored Orphan Asylum, turning out of doors so many helpless children, while they escaped from deserved punishment; was that the vindication of God's justice? What man in his right senses can believe it?

If, then, the justice of God is not vindicated in this life, it must be in a future life. Hence we argue the absolute necessity of a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust. The promises and threatenings of God can never be fulfilled without it. Is not God a God of justice as well as of mercy? Then, when mercy shall have exhausted all the means within its reach for the salvation of the sinner, will it not step aside and allow justice to have its sway in their destruction? We answer, yes. He who says, "Come unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved," also says, "Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord." Again, "He will by no means spare the guilty."

We come to the conclusion, therefore, that God's threatenings of vengeance to the finally impenitent, are so many promises to the righteous that justice and right shall at the last prevail and triumph over the wrong, when God himself shall have a clean universe.

Anson H. Brown.

Rahway, N. J., April 11th, 1864.

ORIGINAL IDENTITY.

Professor C., of one of our flourishing New England Colleges, was an able man, but unfortunately had a hobby, which he rode in season and out of season, much to the annoyance of the students. His was an exceedingly fine spun metaphysical theory, to the effect that the original identity of a substance is never lost by any transmutation or change which may take place in respect to the substance itself.

One lecture evening, after the worthy Professor had expatiated at some length on his favorite topic, an irreverent student asked leave to propose a question; when the following colloquy ensued:

Student. You see this knife which I hold in my hand?

Prof. Certainly.

Student. If I should lose the blade, and have a new one put in its place, would it be the same knife afterwards?

Prof. Most assuredly.

Student. Then, if I should subsequently lose the handle, and get it replaced, would it still be the same knife?

Prof. Certainly.

Student. Then, if some one should find the original blade and handle, and put them together, what knife would that be?

The answer of the Professor is not reported.

For the World's Crisis.

WASTING PEARLS.

"Neither cast ye your pearls before swine."—Matt.

A pearl is counted a precious thing. The gospel is compared to a "pearl of great price." It is proper to offer this gospel to every human creature, yea, to urge it upon them as time and circumstances permit. But there are cases where determined opposition is so evident that it not only seems useless, but in many instances decidedly injurious. For a time the gospel was forbidden to be preached in Asia. Why? Probably the apostle could do much more good elsewhere.

There may be foolish questions started in this day, to which it is not only idle but wicked to reply. When we find men propagating false doctrine under the guise and sanctity of Scripture doctrine, where it is so palpably false as to be in the fair face and eyes of plain Scripture, is it not casting pearls before swine, in the sense of the text, to condescend to argue the question with such?

It is evidently not literal swine of which God speaks, but such as purposely pervert Scripture. It is evident that men who are not willing to give all Scripture its due weight, but quibble and exalt one Scripture, and pervert another at the expense of others, for the sake of establishing some favorite dogma or foolish and wicked doctrine; that they are the class called by the Lord "dogs" and "swine."

Our book declares that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life." Then eternal life in misery, or restoration of the wicked after death, cannot be true.

Our book declares (Acts 24: 15), "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." Who then can believe that there will be no resurrection of the wicked? Miner Cawkins.

Middle Creek, Chase Co., Kan.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTS

On reading the "Tributes" to Shakspeare, on the three hundredth anniversary of his birth.

No slighter am I of that mighty mind
That bore the palm in painting human kind;
Yet doth my judgment greater honor place
On those whose toiling brains improved their race:
No fancies here; their glorious words are true,
Their leader Christ, their "calling" good to do.
On yon bright shores I hear the happy say,
"These men helped us to walk the heavenly way."

Augustus Stearns.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.—No. 6.

We have urged the importance, the duty, of secret prayer. No one can be successful in the christian warfare; no one can be an efficient laborer for Christ, without frequent retirement for prayer. In reading the lives of devoted, successful christians, we find that they prayed much in their closets.

But while this kind of praying is essential, other prayer must not be omitted. Family prayer is important. An altar should be built in every dwelling, on which the morning and evening sacrifice should be offered to the Most High.

Alas! how many families there are where the heads thereof profess to love Christ, yet do daily live in the neglect of family prayer. Not unfrequently have we been the nightly guest, where the husband and wife professed to be looking for the speedy coming of Christ, but no altar was there erected, from whence holy incense ascended morning and evening to God. No reading of the sacred Word—no gathering of the family group—no uplifted hands and hearts in prayer, unless a minister was present to officiate.

What says the Lord by the prophet Jeremiah? "Pour out thy fury upon the heathen that know thee not, and upon the families that call not on thy name."—Jer. 10: 25. They were to share the same curse as the heathen who had no knowledge of the Lord. This is too serious a fault to be lightly regarded. How reasonable that the family should in the morning, before scattering abroad, gather around the hearthstone, unitedly reading some portion of Scripture, and then bow down before God, while praise is offered for the care and blessings of another night and morning, and grace to keep from sin; the influences of the Holy Spirit and divine protection are implored for the day. And when the family unite again in the evening, after the labors of the day are ended, how proper that again the sacrifice of thanksgiving and supplication should be presented upon the altar. Doth not the angel of the Lord encamp around about such a household as this? How any professed christians can arise from their bed, and, after partaking of Heaven's bounty, go forth to their labor without first offering praise and supplication, is more than we can understand; or how they can enjoy the blessings of life through the day, and retire at night without any acknowledgement of them, is also mysterious.

Some, we know, content themselves with a few mental expressions, saying, "God can understand my thoughts just as well, if they are not vocally expressed." But this is a very questionable if not lazy form of praying. Christ might thus have reasoned, and so rested after his weary toil, instead of spending all night in prayer. David need not have arisen from his couch to pray. Daniel might, by thus mentally praying, have escaped the wrath of his enemies, and the lion's den.

Let us heed the injunction of inspiration, by offering the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name. Heb. 13: 15. Instead of the first fruits of the land, and calves of the stall, we should offer the praises of our lips, "for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."

Social prayer, although not expressly commanded, is made clearly apparent by example. Previous to the descent of the Pentecostal baptism, the disciples assembled for united prayer, and the sisters were not excluded from a participation in the exercises; for it says, "These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren."—Acts 1: 14. On another occasion, "when they prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." On the occasion of Peter's imprisonment, "many were gathered together praying," and it was no doubt in answer to their united supplications that he was delivered.

On a certain occasion, Paul and Silas went out of the city of Phillippi to a place by the river's side, where prayer was wont to be made, and there they spoke the word of God to the women which resorted thither. In the 14th chap. of 1 Cor., where the apostle is speaking of the order of social meetings, he refers to prayer in a way that indicates it to have been one of the exercises of devotion. He gives directions how they ought to speak, pray, and sing, so that others might be edified.

There are those who excuse themselves from public prayer on the plea that private prayer alone is enjoined by the Savior. To this we reply in the language of an inspired apostle: "I will that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting." "Everywhere" must include the social meeting. The apostle spoke by divine authority. He imposed it as an obligation that prayer should be offered everywhere, and "for all men"; for kings, and all in authority; but not for them only, but supplications and intercessions must be made for all mankind.

Some argue that we are not justified in praying for sinners, and that we are required to pray for all men simply with reference to our own good, that "we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." We think this is a mistake. The apostle first of all enjoins prayer to be offered for all men. He then specifies kings and those in authority, that we should pray for those who have the control of government, in order that christians may be permitted to lead quiet and peaceable lives.

It is right to pray for the ungodly. We are required to pray for our enemies, who despitefully use us and persecute us. Christ set us the example. He prayed on the cross for his murderers. Stephen when dying prayed for his. How many ungodly children have been converted through the power of a parent's prayers. Many an ungodly youth has been arrested and brought to Christ in answer to prayer. M. D. W.

EUROPE IN 1864.

A. D., one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four will not come to December, the wisest fear, without the beginning, at least, of remarkable changes. The year looms as though it were bringing history along with it—a history of revolutions, and of new social and dynastic conditions, in that continent which is the civilized centre of the world. Are all the signs understood by the public? We think there is need of a wise look-out at the present; there is a cyclone brewing in Europe. There are the elements of an immense conflagration among the nations of Europe, and, what is more serious, the fire is lighted already. At a moment it may break from the narrow bounds within which it burns at present, and may fly in wreaths of blood-red flame across the plains of the Continent. No one can predict when it will thus involve other questions beside that of the Duchies, and where in such a case it might stop. We hope the best from the proposed conference; as hunters in a burning prairie trust to see the conflagration stay where they have cleared away the grass and beaten down the first sparks of fire. But it would be absolutely idle to shut their eyes to the flames alight on one side, and the dry stubble and timber, already parched by its approach, on the other. Europe is the lighted prairie; the war-fire, long feared and expected, has been guiltily kindled in Denmark. It was to be put out in a month by the foolish incendiaries, but it flames and crackles still. Thoughtfully gazing over Europe, statesmen, we repeat, foretell an anxious time this year. The minds of nations, heated incensed, exasperated by delay, are everywhere looking with hope to the signs which fill some of their rulers with dismay. We stand by the threshold of a new era; and twenty great questions, sufficient each of them for a continental war, knock imperiously at the door.

In the complications of the Continent resides its peril; for no simple or single diplomatic remedy can touch the malady of its multiform unrest. Take two powers from the map, and you have exhausted the number of those who can be said to have one end in view, and only one, though of an opposite character. Denmark is animated by self-preservation; she wants to remain Denmark, and will fight so long as she is threatened with being any thing less. The German Diet wants to dismember Denmark, to glorify the Federation, and to add the Duchies to its available force. But then we come to a group of powers whose policy is to themselves a labyrinth, and to peace a despair. Austria and Prussia are in arms in Denmark, to keep the minor States out of it; yet if they disappoint the minor States, there may be a German civil war. They are in Denmark to maintain treaties; yet if they do any thing conceivable except come out again, they have broken treaties. Denmark has just declared she will hear of no "persodal union" scheme; and if her integrity be attacked, the Eastern powers are, ipso facto, at war with the West; yet her "integrity" and the sworn demands of Germany, and the acts of Prussia are incompatible. Why is Prussia in Denmark, then? For territory? Treaties forbid it. For the Diet? Her ally has contradicted it. For Oldenburg? But there is an Augustenburg. Look where we will, these are perplexities. There is no visible way out of this great thicket of affairs, except by the road of such a war as would shake Europe for a year, and settle her for half a century. Observe but the outskirts of this Dano-Germanic quarrel. See how Poland awakes to it, rising with a new and deathless energy of hate against her tyrant. Look how Hungary, Venetia, and Rome gaze towards the seat of war, restless with hope and speculation till it shall spread. Even the Danubian provinces are all alive with the whisper of war; and quiet Galicia has to be kept down with armies and the "state of siege." These things are not the signs of peace; they are the flushes and quick pulses of a fever which must have its way in Europe, or, more fatally, be driven in upon the vitals of humanity—a fever of the old, old character, where nations in passionate effort to be freer, fight for life with the ancient oligarchic poisons in their systems, and get rid of them by blood-letting on a dreadful and generous scale.

Yet the prayer of all who know what a Continental war is must be, "Give peace in our time." The doubt arises, indeed, whether we should not rather supplicate Heaven to "restore it." Peace seems as good as gone, or going; the mad deed of Prussia, which may cost far more to that kingdom than to King William—has struck the flint and steel together. Austria, tremulously desirous for peace rather than war, and for a little war rather than a large one, has foolishly followed Prussia with a shiver of dread: and there is war in Europe. The mischief was done when the first sword was drawn; for if Denmark is to be made to do justice to the Duchies with the sword's point upon her heart, why not try the same plan for Poland upon Russia—for Posen upon Prussia—for Galicia, Hungary, and Venetia upon Austria? So say the angry nationalities; and, in obedience to their logic, an army of 130,000 men, with one of the finest parks of field artillery in the world, is said to be massing on this side of the Mincio; on the other side, even a larger, but less confident, force, is being drawn up along the river; the Quadrilateral is silently filling, and the rumor of Holy Alliance gains upon Europe. This last looks too natural to be hastily rejected; nothing is more natural or more suicidal for the dynasties who have planned it than that Prussia should have Austria for an ally, on condition of defending her non-German provinces; and Russia for an ally, if she will help to put down Poland; Prussia to do as she likes in Denmark, Russia in Warsaw, and Austria in Venice. Should it be so, England will not make her old mistake again. The great constitutional nation will not spend strength in patching up thrones with subsidies, and beggaring England to benefit a Hapsburg or a Hohenzollern. On their heads will fall the tremendous consequences who invoke a war now between the spirits of the peoples and the spirit of the sceptres—between the commons and the courts. Bloody, desperate, and convulsive would be the struggle; but it would be final, and its issue not doubtful for a day.—London paper.

THE CROOKED STICK.

"Christ has a service for all his members," said James Therrall, an old carpenter in a village on Salisbury Plain, to a young christian who complained that she was unworthy to work for the Lord. "Let not one of the members say, 'The Head has no need of me.' I used to think as you do long ago, but he taught me otherwise by a crooked stick.

One day my son went to a sale of timber, and in the lot was a stick (or piece) so twisted and bent, that I spoke sharply to him, saying: 'You have a bad bargain there, lad. That crooked stick will be of no use to any one.'

'It's all timber,' replied my son—not the least vexed by my reproof. 'I paid the same price for it as the rest. Depend upon it, no tree grows for nothing. Wait a bit; don't fret, father; let us keep a look out; there's a place somewhere for it.'

A little time after this, I had a cottage to build, a queer bit of a house it was, and pretty enough when it was finished. There was a corner to turn in it, and not a stick in the yard would fit. I thought of the crooked one and fetched it. Many a hard day's work would have failed to prepare a joist like it. It seemed as if the tree had grown expressly for the purpose. Then, said I, there's a place for the crooked stick after all! Then there's a place for poor James Therrall. Dear Lord, show him the place into which he may fit in building thy heavenly temple. That very day I learned that what God gives me, he gives me for his glory, and poor and unlettered as I was, there was a work for me. There is a work for you. God has something for you to do, and nobody else can do it."

This village carpenter had neither the knowledge of the schoolmen, nor had he taken a degree at college, yet was he a teacher of divine truths, and he was wise in the wisdom of the children of light. Thus the warped tree had preached to him a sermon on true humility, and made him from that day an humble steward of the things of the kingdom. —Family Treasury.

NOT SO.

We have of late had excellent thoughts upon the "wills" and "shalls" of God's word. And equally suggestive to our mind, in contrast, are the "not so's" of man. When Peter saw in vision the net containing the strange variety of animals to a Jew, and was bidden to arise and eat, he promptly replied, "Not so, Lord." God's command, and his views of what was right, did not harmonize. And thus it has ever been in the church. Let any christian glance backward over his experience, and he will be startled with the "not so's." God kindly overruled. On a grand scale has this veto of the divine will been seen; in the progress of the civil war. Jehovah arose as from slumber, to deliver a proscribed, injured race. At almost every step of his providence has the "not so, Lord," met the world awakening progress of his plans.

How many mourners, who have, or will yet thank God for his timely chastisement, bitterly said, while the rod was falling, "not so, Lord." And what a bright, peaceful summit of christian experience is that, when the "not so," rises no more from the loyal spirit—but its habitual, affectionate response to every dispensation of providence is, "Not my will but thine be done."—Congregationalist.

Louis Napoleon. A writer in the Christian Watchman thus sketches the personal appearance of Louis Napoleon:

"The personal appearance of Napoleon III. would puzzle the most accurate observer of physiognomy. The face of the man with the iron mask is not more devoid of expression than is this. One may study it for hours without deriving the slightest satisfaction as to the Emperor's mental characteristics. Those fishy, rayless eyes, the parchment-like cheeks, the stiff, pointed moustache, all suggest a sort of artificial face prepared for the occasion, while the real man, like the priestess of Apollo, lies hidden, and delivers short, oracular responses behind it. He is short in stature, though his body is full the average size. Hence he appears to greater advantage in a sitting posture. Of late years he has grown somewhat corpulent, like the first Napoleon and the other members of his family. His habits at the present day are said to be simple and regular, perhaps necessarily so, if the stories told of his early excesses be true. His appearance on horseback does great credit to his horsemanship, which is generally allowed to be the most skillful in Europe. He is very fond of horses, and has that thorough understanding of their nature which establishes a certain sympathy between that animal and his rider.

Mothers Slaves to their Children.—A silly mother thinks she can make more than women out of her daughters. She toils in the kitchen, and they simper and drawl nonsense in the parlor. She rises with the sun to get their breakfast, while they read the last novel in bed. She toils over the washtub, while they drum on the piano. The earnings of the farm are squandered to put clothes on their backs, and to put them through a fashionable school. They are reared in idleness, and become accomplished babies, utterly ignorant of all that womanly knowledge so creditable to the sex, unfit for anything but to dress finely, talk nonsense, and marry simpletons like themselves. It's of no use, mother, your silly dream will never be realized.

Remedy against Moths.—One ounce of gum camphor and one ounce of powdered red pepper are macerated in eight ounces of strong alcohol for several days, then strained. With this tincture the furs or cloths are sprinkled over and then rolled up in sheets. Instead of the pepper, bitter apples may be used. This remedy is used in Russia under the name of the Chinese tincture for moths.

Grafting Grape Vines.—Grafting grape vines must either be done early, before the sap starts, just as soon as the frost will admit removing the earth, or late in June, when the principal flow of sap is over. It should be done precisely as tree grafting is performed covering both stock and scion with earth, leaving the bud about an inch below the surface of the soil.—Exchange.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

Names for the Try Company.

Moses L. Thompson, Eldridge D. Crouse, | Heriot M. Simpson, Arminda Johnson.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER TO THE YOUNG SOLDIERS OF THE CROSS.

Dear Young Friends, and Followers of the Lord:—I have long wished to write to you, and tell you what a blessed Savior I have found. Although I am young, and far away back in the woods of the west, I have found a Savior, and have had the visits of his grace. It has not been over three months since I set out (determined to find a city that is out of sight), and oh! what a glorious journey it is. I would not exchange what little grace I have received from God's all bountiful hand for worlds like this. Oh! dear reader, are you prepared? Is all upon the altar? Are you ready to meet your God? Have you improved your talent? Have you cleared the skirts of your garments, and are you ready to meet the Master? If not, seek for an entrance in at the "strait gate"; forsake all, and fly to Jesus' arms, while he may be found. Soon the door will be shut and you will be lost. Dear young friends, work while the day lasts, for soon the night will come when no man can work. Meet me in the kingdom, where we shall part no more. I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may hold out faithful.

Your Sr. in hope of a crown when Jesus comes, Filena M. Andrews.

Tuncan Co., Wis.

"STOP HER! STOP HER!

It was a terrible gale, through which the good steamer plowed her path out on the broad Atlantic. The heavy clouds coursed like gray woolens the face of the sky, the great waves rushed and thundered at the vessel, and clutched and struck at her with her fierce hanns, and dashed over her decks the salt spray of their wrath, and rocked her to and fro—the stately steamer, as she struggled onward with the winds and waves leagued together for her death. The dinner was over, a few of the bravest of the passengers—determined to face all danger for the sake of witnessing that sublime spectacle, a storm at sea—were plunging and stumbling their way up the stairs to the deck, when one of these suddenly stood still, every nerve filled with the awful terror of the words which had smote his ear from the lips of the chief officer—that cry which is the most fearful—the most significant of danger and death of any words which can be uttered on board of a ship—

"Stop her! Stop her!" The command rang like a clarion above the hoarse fury of the wind—above the awful tumult of the waves. The captain caught the sound, and the next moment, swift and sudden as lightning, he had rushed past his appalled passengers, his white face only betraying the dread at his heart.

Was an iceberg sailing down upon them—a vast white mountain ready to grind, and crush, and bury the doomed vessel under her cold feet? Had the fair steamer, which had set her face so proudly towards the west, sprung a sudden leak, and must the anxious freight of hearts she carries, go down at last under those hungry waves; and must the eyes that watched and waited for the beloved at home, grow dim with weeping for those who come not?

"Stop her! Stop her!" The swift thoughts—the terrible fears gave new courage to the passenger who was groping his way to the deck, and almost as soon as the captain mounted it, the former was at his side. Their eyes swept the wide, heaving ocean, and on the right they beheld six men struggling and battling for life with those mad waves—six men suddenly swept overboard! In a moment a boat was lowered. It did not seem possible that she could live a moment in that awful sea; but there were plenty of brave hearts on board to risk their lives for the lives of their brothers, and in a moment, manned by stalwart hearts, she put off. Then came the long hope, and fear, and waiting on board of the steamer—the straining of eyes through the storm for the sight of the little boat struggling her way towards the drowning men. At last she was seen returning. The passengers gathered in a breathless crowd to watch her, and count the number of her rescued. There were four in the boat—there had been six overboard!

One old man, his hair snowed white with the winter of his years, pressed forward—his son was among the missing? The old man's face was as white as his son's was, whether it lay unconscious in the boat, or had gone down in the triumphing waves. The old father leaned over and searched the faces in the boat. They were four, but the one for which he sought was not there.

"My boy is lost!" cried the old man, in a voice that made the heart of every passenger stand still, so full was it of human loss and anguish. All alone, now, the old man must make his way to the new, strange country, whither he and his son were going together—whither the brave heart and the strong arm had lured the old and feeble one, in the hope of building up a new fortune; and this was all the tidings he had now to send to the loving mother, who sat waiting and full of tremulous tenderness at home—this was all to the fair, young sister, who had sent out her last farewell on a sob—"Our boy is lost"

Dear children, whose young eyes may be dimmed for pity of the broken-hearted old man, this story is not all of my fancy. I had its principal facts from the lips of the passenger who witnessed that father's anguish over his boy that was, and is not. And I have written it for you here, with this still May afternoon leaning towards the night, with the soft, furrowed clouds folding away the fair of the spring sky.

"Stop her! Stop her!" Never, on board some steamer plowing her path through the storm, may you hear that cry; but oh, on another sea, where have gone down many and princely freights, there will assail you terrible storms of wind and wave!

"Stop her! Stop her!" In the gales of passion, and the storms of life, may your soul learn the meaning and the majesty of that call!

"Stop her! Stop her!" If the breakers are ahead—if the rocks lie before—if the path on which you are going is anywise the path of sin, the way of death!

Be vigilant, be prompt on the broad Atlantic of your life, for there "the winds may arise, the rains beat," and where loss and ruin lie before the path of your fair and stately ship. "Stop her! Stop her!"—Virginia F. Townsend, in Arthur's Magazine.

THE LITTLE OUTCAST.

"Mayn't I stay, ma'am? I'll do anything you give me; cut wood, go for water, and do all your errands."

The troubled eyes of the speaker were filled with tears. It was a lad that stood at the outer door, pleading with a kindly looking woman, who still seemed to doubt the reality of his good intentions.

The cottage stood by itself, on a bleak moor, or what in Scotland would have been called such. The time was near the latter end of September, and a fierce wind rattled the boughs of the only two naked trees near the house, and fled with a shivering sound into the narrow doorway, as if seeking for warmth at the blazing fire within.

Now and then a snow-flake touched with its soft chill the cheek of the listener, or whitened with the angry redness of the poor boy's benumbed hands. The woman was evidently loth to grant the boy's request; and the peculiar look stamped upon his features would have suggested to any mind an idea of depravity far beyond his years. But her woman's heart could not resist the sorrow in those large, but by no means handsome, gray eyes.

"Come in, at any rate, till the good man comes home. There, sit down by the fire: you look perishing with cold;" and she drew a rude chair up to the warmest corner; then suspiciously glancing at the child from the corners of her eyes, she continued setting the table for supper.

Presently came the tramp of heavy shoes, the door was swung open with a quick jerk, and the "good man" presented himself, wearied with labor. A look of intelligence between his wife and himself; he, too, scanned the boy's face with an expression not evincing satisfaction; but nevertheless made him come to the table, and then enjoyed the zest with which he dispatched his supper.

Day after day passed, and yet the boy begged to be kept "only till to-morrow;" so the good people, after due consideration, concluded that so long as he was docile, and worked so heartily, they would retain him.

One day, in the middle of the winter, a peddler, long accustomed to trade at the cottage, made his appearance, and disposed of his goods readily, as if he had been waited for.

"You have a boy out there, splitting wood, I see," he said, pointing to the yard.

"Yes; do you know him?"

"I have seen him," replied the peddler evasively.

"And where? Who is he? What is he?"

"A jail-bird;" and the peddler swung his pack over his shoulder. "That boy, young as he looks, I saw in court myself, and heard his sentence—'Ten months.' He's a hard one; you'd do well to look carefully after him."

O! there was something so horrible in the word "jail." The poor woman trembled as she laid away her purchases; nor could she be easy till she called the boy in, and assured him that she knew the dark part of his history.

Ashamed, distressed, the child hung down his head; his cheeks seemed bursting with the hot blood; his lips quivered, and anguish was painted as vividly upon his forehead as if the words were branded into the flesh.

"Well," he muttered, his whole frame relaxing, as if a burden of guilt or joy had suddenly rolled off, "I may as well go to ruin at onc't: there's no use in my trying to do better: everybody hates and despises me; nobody cares about me: I may as well go to ruin at onc't."

"Tell me," said the woman, who stood off far enough for flight, if that should be necessary, "how came you to go so young to that dreadful place? Where was your mother—where?"

O!" exclaimed the boy, with a burst of grief that was terrible to behold, "O! I hain't no mother! O! I hain't no mother ever since I was a baby. If I'd only had a mother," he continued, his anguish growing more vehement, and the tears gushing out from his strange-looking eyes, "I wouldn't ha' been bound out, and kicked, and cuffed, and laid on to with whips. I wouldn't ha' been saucy, and got knocked down, and run away, and then stole because I got hungry. O! I hain't got no mother; I hain't got no mother; I haven't had no mother since I was a baby."

The strength was all gone from the poor boy, and he sank on his knees, sobbing great choking sobs, and rubbing the hot tears away with his poor knuckles. And did that woman stand there unmoved? Did she coldly bid him pack up, and be off—the jail-bird?

No, no; she had been a mother, and though all her children slept under the cold sod in the church-yard, she was a mother still.

She went up to that poor boy, not to hasten him away, but to lay her fingers kindly, softly on his head; to tell him to look up, and from henceforth find in her a mother. Yes, she even put her arms about the neck of that forsaken, deserted child; she poured from her mother's heart, sweet, womanly words, words of counsel and tenderness.

O how sweet was her sleep that night; how soft her pillow! She had linked a poor suffering heart to hers, by the most silken, the strongest bands of love; she had plucked some thorns from the path of a little, sinning, but striving mortal.

Did the boy leave her?

Never! He is with her still, a vigorous, manly, promising youth. The unfavorable cast of his countenance has given place to an open, pleasing expression, with depth enough to make it an interesting study. His foster-father is dead; his good foster-mother aged and sickly; but she knows no want. The once poor outcast is her only dependence, and nobly does he repay the trust.

Signs.—When a boy is willing to take strong drink, it is a sign he will be a drunkard.

When a boy smokes or chews tobacco, it is a sign that he will soon be guilty of other filthy habits.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year.......$2.00
A single copy, six months.......[illegible]
A single copy, three months.......[illegible]
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......[illegible]

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on a single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State where they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
20 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
30 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
40 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
50 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
100 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) to be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

LINES.

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith."—1 Cor. 16: 13.

Though sore temptations thicken round,
And all seems dark and drear,
Oh! do not faint thee by the way,
The Morning Star draws near.

'Tis surely glimm'ring even now,
And soon 't will brightly shine
Upon this world of sin and wo
With splendor most divine.

Its brightness (like a sea of fire)
Will purify the earth,
'T will cleanse it from all wickedness,
And give new Eden birth.

Oh! have the faith that looks beyond
This vale of fear and pain,
To that blest time when Christ, our Lord,
Will come to earth again.

Ah! that will be a joyful day,
When saints together meet
Around His throne, all freed from care,
To worship at His feet.

"Stand fast"! dear brother, keep the faith;
Dear sister, falter not,
Until we reach fair Canaan's land,
And Eden is our lot.

Then we may rest forevermore;
As ages glide along,
We'll roam beneath those verdant bowers,
And sing redemption's song.

Dayville, Killingly, Ct. M. A. Wilbur.

For the World's Crisis.

DID PAUL HOPE FOR THE RESURRECTION OF THE UNJUST?

"But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets; and have hope toward God which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."—Acts 24: 14, 15.

It is not my purpose at this time to enter upon a full examination of this text, but simply to call attention to one point, viz: did Paul hope for the resurrection of the unjust? I answer, he did. In the twenty-third chapter and sixth verse, he says, "I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee; of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question." And in the twenty-sixth chapter and fifth to seventh verses, he says that all the Jews knew "that after the most straightest sect of our religion, I lived a Pharisee." And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers, unto which promise, the twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night, hoped to come; for which hope's sake, King Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews." "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead." From these two passages compared with the text, we learn that Paul's hope had reference to the resurrection of the dead, not only of the just, but also of the unjust.

But it is contended that the "promise made of God unto the fathers," had reference to blessings only, and not to curses, or threatenings. Let us see. In the first chapter of Luke, commencing at the sixty-seventh verse we read, "And his father, Zacharias, was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, and hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; the oath which he swore to our father Abraham, that he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of our life."

This is, undoubtedly, a prophecy of events yet future, and the promise of being "saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us," and of being delivered out of the hand of our enemies," etc., denotes the final overthrow of all the wicked at the day of judgment. See the promise to Abram, (Gen. 12: 3), "And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee;" also 22: 17, "And thy seed (Christ's) shall possess the gate of his enemies." Thus we see that the promise made of God unto the fathers includes his threatenings to their enemies, as well as blessings to themselves. This is clearly seen in the gospel; for that same good news, which proclaims salvation to the believer also proclaims damnation to the unbeliever. And this same apostle to the Gentiles declares, (Rom. 2: 16), that "God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel." Now although no part of the gospel may be received by the impenitent sinner, as good news, yet it is good news to some; and if not to them, it must be to the believer. If, then, whatever it proclaims is to the believer good news, then it must constitute the believer's hope, whether it consist of promises or threatenings.

"Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" If he has decided that all the finally impenitent shall be condemned and punished, is it not right? Dare any man charge God with doing wrong? If, then, it is right for God to punish the wicked; may we not, as christians, hope for the right to prevail? We answer yes.

Again, when our Lord taught his disciples to pray "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven:" and when John upon the Isle of Patmos prayed so earnestly, "Come, Lord Jesus and come quickly;" this prayer involved all the predicted events which are to transpire as the result of his coming. To pray for the coming of the Lord, therefore, is to pray for the resurrection of the dead, for the coming of the judgment of the great day; that the judgment may set, that the books may be open, that ten thousand times ten thousand may stand before Him; that the dead, small, and great, may stand before God; that he may reward every man according to their works; that he will reward the righteous with everlasting life, and punish the wicked with everlasting destruction; it is to pray that all these things may be dissolved, that the heavens may be on fire, the elements melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works therein be burned up. It is to pray that probationary time may close, and that mercy be no longer offered to the guilty sinner. In short, it is to pray for every thing which God in his infinite wisdom has purposed to bring to pass.

Now if we pray for all these things, it follows that we desire to have them come to pass; and we cannot desire the fulfillment of God's plans and purposes without hoping for it. Hence we conclude that all the promises and threatenings of God, relating to man's future destiny, are embraced in the christian's hope.

The plain, simple language of Paul in the text, declares it to be his hope, and allowed by the Jews, "that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." But some are ready to say, why disturb the poor creatures? let them rest. I reply the justice of God demands their resurrection and future punishment. There is such a thing as men allowing their sympathies to overrule their better judgment, and that kind of sympathy has ruined many a child, and would, if carried to its fullest extent, arraign Almighty God before its judgment bar, and condemn Him, because he punishes the wicked at all.

We say, then, if it is right to pray for the destruction of all God's enemies, as David prayed, when he said, "Let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end, but establish thou the just;" or, as when he prayed, "Consume them in thy wrath, consume them, let the wicked be no more;"—we say, if it is right to pray thus, then it is right to desire it; and if it is right to desire it, it is right to hope for it.

In this connection let me call attention to a few passages. First in Luke 18: 1–8, we read, "And he spake to them a parable to this end, that men ought always to pray and not to faint; saying, there was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man; and there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary. And he would not for a while; but afterwards he said within himself, though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me. And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith. And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily."

What is the burden of this prayer? to be avenged of their adversaries. This term avenge is defined by Webster as follows:—"To take satisfaction for an injury, by punishing the injuring party." He further says,—"It may be right to avenge injuries, but never to indulge revenge, which is a spirit of malicious resentment." And defines revenge thus:—"To inflict pain deliberately and maliciously, contrary to the laws of justice and humanity, in return for injuries received; often in old writers, and in the Bible, it means to avenge, i. e., to make just return for crime or injury." It is in this sense, undoubtedly, the prayer is offered by the elect. Let it be observed, that our Lord did not condemn the elect for praying thus, but rather commended them, and promised them that their prayers should be answered, and that speedily.

Again, in Rev. 6: 10, the souls under the altar are represented as crying, "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?" Also in chapter 8: 20, we read, "Rejoice, ye heavens, and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you on her" (mystical Babylon); "and a mighty angel took up a great millstone, and cast it into the midst of the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all."

Once more, 19: 1–3, John says, "And I heard a voice of much people in heaven saying, Alleluia, salvation and honor, and glory and power, unto the Lord our God, for true and righteous are his judgments; for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand; and again they said, Alleluia. And her smoke rose up forever and ever."

From these passages we learn that the vindication of God's justice, in the final overthrow of all his enemies is a subject of prayer, and an object of desire and hope, and will finally be a cause of great rejoicing by the church triumphant. Not a tear of sympathy will be shed over their destruction. No weeping there, but great rejoicing, and an acknowledgment by the whole redeemed family, that God's judgments are true and righteous.

Do you say that the justice of God is vindicated in this life? I deny it. To be brief, I will illustrate this point by the riots which occurred in the city of New York last July. Was the justice of God vindicated, when that poor, innocent woman, with her child in her arms was shot dead in the street, while the leading rioters were allowed to escape from punishment? When they seized that innocent negro, whose only crime was that his face happened to be black, and thrust him headlong into a filthy sewer, and shut the lid upon him, left him to perish, while they were permitted to go unpunished; was that the vindication of God's justice? Or when they robbed and burned the Colored Orphan Asylum, turning out of doors so many helpless children, while they escaped from deserved punishment; was that the vindication of God's justice? What man in his right senses can believe it?

If, then, the justice of God is not vindicated in this life, it must be in a future life. Hence we argue the absolute necessity of a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust. The promises and threatenings of God can never be fulfilled without it. Is not God a God of justice as well as of mercy? Then, when mercy shall have exhausted all the means within its reach for the salvation of the sinner, will it not step aside and allow justice to have its sway in their destruction? We answer, yes. He who says, "Come unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved," also says, "Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord." Again, "He will by no means spare the guilty."

We come to the conclusion, therefore, that God's threatenings of vengeance to the finally impenitent, are so many promises to the righteous that justice and right shall at the last prevail and triumph over the wrong, when God himself shall have a clean universe.

Anson H. Brown.

Rahway, N. J., April 11th, 1864.

ORIGINAL IDENTITY.

Professor C., of one of our flourishing New England Colleges, was an able man, but unfortunately had a hobby, which he rode in season and out of season, much to the annoyance of the students. His was an exceedingly fine spun metaphysical theory, to the effect that the original identity of a substance is never lost by any transmutation or change which may take place in respect to the substance itself.

One lecture evening, after the worthy Professor had expatiated at some length on his favorite topic, an irreverent student asked leave to propose a question; when the following colloquy ensued:

Student. You see this knife which I hold in my hand?

Prof. Certainly.

Student. If I should lose the blade, and have a new one put in its place, would it be the same knife afterwards?

Prof. Most assuredly.

Student. Then, if I should subsequently lose the handle, and get it replaced, would it still be the same knife?

Prof. Certainly.

Student. Then, if some one should find the original blade and handle, and put them together, what knife would that be?

The answer of the Professor is not reported.

For the World's Crisis.

WASTING PEARLS.

"Neither cast ye your pearls before swine."—Matt.

A pearl is counted a precious thing. The gospel is compared to a "pearl of great price." It is proper to offer this gospel to every human creature, yea, to urge it upon them as time and circumstances permit. But there are cases where determined opposition is so evident that it not only seems useless, but in many instances decidedly injurious. For a time the gospel was forbidden to be preached in Asia. Why? Probably the apostle could do much more good elsewhere.

There may be foolish questions started in this day, to which it is not only idle but wicked to reply. When we find men propagating false doctrine under the guise and sanctity of Scripture doctrine, where it is so palpably false as to be in the fair face and eyes of plain Scripture, is it not casting pearls before swine, in the sense of the text, to condescend to argue the question with such?

It is evidently not literal swine of which God speaks, but such as purposely pervert Scripture. It is evident that men who are not willing to give all Scripture its due weight, but quibble and exalt one Scripture, and pervert another at the expense of others, for the sake of establishing some favorite dogma or foolish and wicked doctrine; that they are the class called by the Lord "dogs" and "swine."

Our book declares that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life." Then eternal life in misery, or restoration of the wicked after death, cannot be true.

Our book declares (Acts 24: 15), "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." Who then can believe that there will be no resurrection of the wicked? Miner Cawkins.

Middle Creek, Chase Co., Kan.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTS

On reading the "Tributes" to Shakspeare, on the three hundredth anniversary of his birth.

No slighter am I of that mighty mind
That bore the palm in painting human kind;
Yet doth my judgment greater honor place
On those whose toiling brains improved their race
No fancies here; their glorious words are true,
Their leader Christ, their "calling" good to do.
On yon bright shores I hear the happy say,
"These men helped us to walk the heavenly way."

Augustus Stearns.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.—No. 6.

We have urged the importance, the duty, of secret prayer. No one can be successful in the christian warfare; no one can be an efficient laborer for Christ, without frequent retirement for prayer. In reading the lives of devoted, successful christians, we find that they prayed much in their closets.

But while this kind of praying is essential, other prayer must not be omitted. Family prayer is important. An altar should be built in every dwelling, on which the morning and evening sacrifice should be offered to the Most High.

Alas! how many families there are where the heads thereof profess to love Christ, yet do daily live in the neglect of family prayer. Not unfrequently have we been the nightly guest, where the husband and wife professed to be looking for the speedy coming of Christ, but no altar was there erected, from whence holy incense ascended morning and evening to God. No reading of the sacred Word—no gathering of the family group—no uplifted hands and hearts in prayer, unless a minister was present to officiate.

What says the Lord by the prophet Jeremiah? "Pour out thy fury upon the heathen that know thee not, and upon the families that call not on thy name."—Jer. 10: 25. They were to share the same curse as the heathen who had no knowledge of the Lord. This is too serious a fault to be lightly regarded. How reasonable that the family should in the morning, before scattering abroad, gather around the hearthstone, unitedly reading some portion of Scripture, and then bow down before God, while praise is offered for the care and blessings of another night and morning, and grace to keep from sin; the influences of the Holy Spirit and divine protection are implored for the day. And when the family unite again in the evening, after the labors of the day are ended, how proper that again the sacrifice of thanksgiving and supplication should be presented upon the altar. Doth not the angel of the Lord encamp around about such a household as this? How any professed christians can arise from their bed, and, after partaking of Heaven's bounty, go forth to their labor without first offering praise and supplication, is more than we can understand; or how they can enjoy the blessings of life through the day, and retire at night without any acknowledgement of them, is also mysterious.

Some, we know, content themselves with a few mental expressions, saying, "God can understand my thoughts just as well, if they are not vocally expressed." But this is a very questionable if not lazy form of praying. Christ might thus have reasoned, and so rested after his weary toil, instead of spending all night in prayer. David need not have arisen from his couch to pray. Daniel might, by thus mentally praying, have escaped the wrath of his enemies, and the lion's den.

Let us heed the injunction of inspiration, by offering the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name. Heb. 13: 15. Instead of the first fruits of the land, and calves of the stall, we should offer the praises of our lips, "for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."

Social prayer, although not expressly commanded, is made clearly apparent by example. Previous to the descent of the Pentecostal baptism, the disciples assembled for united prayer, and the sisters were not excluded from a participation in the exercises; for it says, "These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren."—Acts 1: 14. On another occasion, "when they prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." On the occasion of Peter's imprisonment, "many were gathered together praying," and it was no doubt in answer to their united supplications that he was delivered.

On a certain occasion, Paul and Silas went out of the city of Phillippi to a place by the river's side, where prayer was wont to be made, and there they spoke the word of God to the women which resorted thither. In the 14th chap. of 1 Cor., where the apostle is speaking of the order of social meetings, he refers to prayer in a way that indicates it to have been one of the exercises of devotion. He gives directions how they ought to speak, pray, and sing, so that others might be edified.

There are those who excuse themselves from public prayer on the plea that private prayer alone is enjoined by the Savior. To this we reply in the language of an inspired apostle: "I will that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting." "Everywhere" must include the social meeting. The apostle spoke by divine authority. He imposed it as an obligation that prayer should be offered everywhere, and "for all men"; for kings, and all in authority; but not for them only, but supplications and intercessions must be made for all mankind.

Some argue that we are not justified in praying for sinners, and that we are required to pray for all men simply with reference to our own good, that "we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." We think this is a mistake. The apostle first of all enjoins prayer to be offered for all men. He then specifies kings and those in authority, that we should pray for those who have the control of government, in order that christians may be permitted to lead quiet and peaceable lives.

It is right to pray for the ungodly. We are required to pray for our enemies, who despitefully use us and persecute us. Christ set us the example. He prayed on the cross for his murderers. Stephen when dying prayed for his. How many ungodly children have been converted through the power of a parent's prayers. Many an ungodly youth has been arrested and brought to Christ in answer to prayer. M. D. W.

EUROPE IN 1864.

A. D., one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four will not come to December, the wisest fear, without the beginning, at least, of remarkable changes. The year looms as though it were bringing history along with it—a history of revolutions, and of new social and dynastic conditions, in that continent which is the civilized centre of the world. Are all the signs understood by the public? We think there is need of a wise look-out at the present; there is a cyclone brewing in Europe. There are the elements of an immense conflagration among the nations of Europe, and, what is more serious, the fire is lighted already. At a moment it may break from the narrow bounds within which it burns at present, and may fly in wreaths of blood-red flame across the plains of the Continent. No one can predict when it will thus involve other questions beside that of the Duchies, and where in such a case it might stop. We hope the best from the proposed conference; as hunters in a burning prairie trust to see the conflagration stay where they have cleared away the grass and beaten down the first sparks of fire. But it would be absolutely idle to shut their eyes to the flames alight on one side, and the dry stubble and timber, already parched by its approach, on the other. Europe is the lighted prairie; the war-fire, long feared and expected, has been guiltily kindled in Denmark. It was to be put out in a month by the foolish incendiaries, but it flames and crackles still. Thoughtfully gazing over Europe, statesmen, we repeat, foretell an anxious time this year. The minds of nations, heated incensed, exasperated by delay, are everywhere looking with hope to the signs which fill some of their rulers with dismay. We stand by the threshold of a new era; and twenty great questions, sufficient each of them for a continental war, knock imperiously at the door.

In the complications of the Continent resides its peril; for no simple or single diplomatic remedy can touch the malady of its multiform unrest. Take two powers from the map, and you have exhausted the number of those who can be said to have one end in view, and only one, though of an opposite character. Denmark is animated by self-preservation; she wants to remain Denmark, and will fight so long as she is threatened with being any thing less. The German Diet wants to dismember Denmark, to glorify the Federation, and to add the Duchies to its available force. But then we come to a group of powers whose policy is to themselves a labyrinth, and to peace a despair. Austria and Prussia are in arms in Denmark, to keep the minor States out of it; yet if they disappoint the minor States, there may be a German civil war. They are in Denmark to maintain treaties; yet if they do any thing conceivable except come out again, they have broken treaties. Denmark has just declared she will hear of no "persodal union" scheme; and if her integrity be attacked, the Eastern powers are, ipso facto, at war with the West; yet her "integrity" and the sworn demands of Germany, and the acts of Prussia are incompatible. Why is Prussia in Denmark, then? For territory? Treaties forbid it. For the Diet? Her ally has contradicted it. For Oldenburg? But there is an Augustenburg. Look where we will, these are perplexities. There is no visible way out of this great thicket of affairs, except by the road of such a war as would shake Europe for a year, and settle her for half a century. Observe but the outskirts of this Dano-Germanic quarrel. See how Poland awakes to it, rising with a new and deathless energy of hate against her tyrant. Look how Hungary, Venetia, and Rome gaze towards the seat of war, restless with hope and speculation till it shall spread. Even the Danubian provinces are all alive with the whisper of war; and quiet Galicia has to be kept down with armies and the "state of siege." These things are not the signs of peace; they are the flushes and quick pulses of a fever which must have its way in Europe, or, more fatally, be driven in upon the vitals of humanity—a fever of the old, old character, where nations in passionate effort to be freer, fight for life with the ancient oligarchic poisons in their systems, and get rid of them by blood-letting on a dreadful and generous scale.

Yet the prayer of all who know what a Continental war is must be, "Give peace in our time." The doubt arises, indeed, whether we should not rather supplicate Heaven to "restore it." Peace seems as good as gone, or going; the mad deed of Prussia, which may cost far more to that kingdom than to King William—has struck the flint and steel together. Austria, tremulously desirous for peace rather than war, and for a little war rather than a large one, has foolishly followed Prussia with a shiver of dread; and there is war in Europe. The mischief was done when the first sword was drawn; for if Denmark is to be made to do justice to the Duchies with the sword's point upon her heart, why not try the same plan for Poland upon Russia—for Posen upon Prussia—for Galicia, Hungary, and Venetia upon Austria? So say the angry nationalities; and, in obedience to their logic, an army of 130,000 men, with one of the finest parks of field artillery in the world, is said to be massing on this side of the Mincio; on the other side, even a larger, but less confident, force, is being drawn up along the river; the Quadrilateral is silently filling, and the rumor of Holy Alliance gains upon Europe. This last looks too natural to be hastily rejected; nothing is more natural or more suicidal for the dynasties who have planned it than that Prussia should have Austria for an ally, on condition of defending her non-German provinces; and Russia for an ally, if she will help to put down Poland; Prussia to do as she likes in Denmark, Russia in Warsaw, and Austria in Venice. Should it be so, England will not make her old mistake again. The great constitutional nation will not spend strength in patching up thrones with subsidies, and beggaring England to benefit a Hapsburg or a Hohenzollern. On their heads will fall the tremendous consequences who invoke a war now between the spirits of the peoples and the spirit of the sceptres—between the commons and the courts. Bloody, desperate, and convulsive would be the struggle; but it would be final, and its issue not doubtful for a day.—London paper.

THE CROOKED STICK.

"Christ has a service for all his members," said James Therrall, an old carpenter in a village on Salisbury Plain, to a young christian who complained that she was unworthy to work for the Lord. "Let not one of the members say, 'The Head has no need of me.' I used to think as you do long ago, but he taught me otherwise by a crooked stick.

One day my son went to a sale of timber, and in the lot was a stick (or piece) so twisted and bent, that I spoke sharply to him, saying: 'You have a bad bargain there, lad. That crooked stick will be of no use to any one.'

'It's all timber,' replied my son—not the least vexed by my reproof. 'I paid the same price for it as the rest. Depend upon it, no tree grows for nothing. Wait a bit; don't fret, father; let us keep a look out; there's a place somewhere for it.'

A little time after this, I had a cottage to build, a queer bit of a house it was, and pretty enough when it was finished. There was a corner to turn in it, and not a stick in the yard would fit. I thought of the crooked one and fetched it. Many a hard day's work would have failed to prepare a joist like it. It seemed as if the tree had grown expressly for the purpose. Then, said I, there's a place for the crooked stick after all! Then there's a place for poor James Therrall. Dear Lord, show him the place into which he may fit in building thy heavenly temple. That very day I learned that what God gives me, he gives me for his glory, and poor and unlettered as I was, there was a work for me. There is a work for you. God has something for you to do, and nobody else can do it."

This village carpenter had neither the knowledge of the schoolmen, nor had he taken a degree at college, yet was he a teacher of divine truths, and he was wise in the wisdom of the children of light. Thus the warped tree had preached to him a sermon on true humility, and made him from that day an humble steward of the things of the kingdom.—Family Treasury.

NOT SO.

We have of late had excellent thoughts upon the "wills" and "shalls" of God's word. And equally suggestive to our mind, in contrast, are the "not so's" of man. When Peter saw in vision the net containing the strange variety of animals to a Jew, and was bidden to arise and eat, he promptly replied, "Not so, Lord." God's command, and his views of what was right, did not harmonize. And thus it has ever been in the church. Let any christian glance backward over his experience, and he will be startled with the "not so's." God kindly overruled. On a grand scale has this veto of the divine will been seen; in the progress of the civil war. Jehovah arose as from slumber, to deliver a proscribed, injured race. At almost every step of his providence has the "not so, Lord," met the world awakening progress of his plans.

How many mourners, who have, or will yet thank God for his timely chastisement, bitterly said, while the rod was falling, "not so, Lord." And what a bright, peaceful summit of christian experience is that, when the "not so," rises no more from the loyal spirit—but its habitual, affectionate response to every dispensation of providence is, "Not my will but thine be done.'"—Congregationalist.

Louis Napoleon. A writer in the Christian Watchman thus sketches the personal appearance of Louis Napoleon:

"The personal appearance of Napoleon III. would puzzle the most accurate observer of physiognomy. The face of the man with the iron mask is not more devoid of expression than is this. One may study it for hours without deriving the slightest satisfaction as to the Emperor's mental characteristics. Those fishy, rayless eyes, the parchment-like cheeks, the stiff, pointed moustache, all suggest a sort of artificial face prepared for the occasion, while the real man, like the priestess of Apollo, lies hidden, and delivers short, oracular responses behind it. He is short in stature, though his body is full the average size. Hence he appears to greater advantage in a sitting posture. Of late years he has grown somewhat corpulent, like the first Napoleon and the other members of his family. His habits at the present day are said to be simple and regular, perhaps necessarily so, if the stories told of his early excesses be true. His appearance on horseback does great credit to his horsemanship, which is generally allowed to be the most skillful in Europe. He is very fond of horses, and has that thorough understanding of their nature which establishes a certain sympathy between that animal and his rider.

Mothers Slaves to their Children.—A silly mother thinks she can make more than women out of her daughters. She toils in the kitchen, and they simper and drawl nonsense in the parlor. She rises with the sun to get their breakfast, while they read the last novel in bed. She toils over the washtub, while they drum on the piano. The earnings of the farm are squandered to put clothes on their backs, and to put them through a fashionable school. They are reared in idleness, and become accomplished babies, utterly ignorant of all that womanly knowledge so creditable to the sex, unfit for anything but to dress finely, talk nonsense, and marry simpletons like themselves. It's of no use, mother, your silly dream will never be realized.

Remedy against Moths.—One ounce of gum camphor and one ounce of powdered red pepper are macerated in eight ounces of strong alcohol for several days, then strained. With this tincture the furs or cloths are sprinkled over and then rolled up in sheets. Instead of the pepper, bitter apples may be used. This remedy is used in Russia under the name of the Chinese tincture for moths.

Grafting Grape Vines.—Grafting grape vines must either be done early, before the sap starts, just as soon as the frost will admit removing the earth, or late in June, when the principal flow of sap is over. It should be done precisely as tree grafting is performed covering both stock and scion with earth, leaving the bud about an inch below the surface of the soil.—Exchange.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

Names for the Try Company.

Moses L. Thompson, Eldridge D. Crouse, Heriot M. Simpson, Arminda Johnson.

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER TO THE YOUNG SOLDIERS OF THE CROSS.

Dear Young Friends, and Followers of the Lord:—I have long wished to write to you, and tell you what a blessed Savior I have found. Although I am young, and far away back in the woods of the west, I have found a Savior, and have had the visits of his grace. It has not been over three months since I set out (determined to find a city that is out of sight), and oh! what a glorious journey it is. I would not exchange what little grace I have received from God's all bountiful hand for worlds like this. Oh! dear reader, are you prepared? Is all upon the altar? Are you ready to meet your God? Have you improved your talent? Have you cleared the skirts of your garments, and are you ready to meet the Master? If not, seek for an entrance in at the "strait gate"; forsake all, and fly to Jesus' arms, while he may be found. Soon the door will be shut and you will be lost. Dear young friends, work while the day lasts, for soon the night will come when no man can work. Meet me in the kingdom, where we shall part no more. I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may hold out faithful.

Your Sr. in hope of a crown when Jesus comes, Filena M. Andrews.

Tuncan Co., Wis.

"STOP HER! STOP HER!"

It was a terrible gale, through which the good steamer plowed her path out on the broad Atlantic. The heavy clouds coursed like gray woolens the face of the sky, the great waves rushed and thundered at the vessel, and clutched and struck at her with her fierce hanns, and dashed over her decks the salt spray of their wrath, and rocked her to and fro—the stately steamer, as she struggled onward with the winds and waves leagued together for her death. The dinner was over, a few of the bravest of the passengers—determined to face all danger for the sake of witnessing that sublime spectacle, a storm at sea—were plunging and stumbling their way up the stairs to the deck, when one of these suddenly stood still, every nerve filled with the awful terror of the words which had smote his ear from the lips of the chief officer—that cry which is the most fearful—the most significant of danger and death of any words which can be uttered on board of a ship—

"Stop her! Stop her!" The command rang like a clarion above the hoarse fury of the wind—above the awful tumult of the waves. The captain caught the sound, and the next moment, swift and sudden as lightning, he had rushed past his appalled passengers, his white face only betraying the dread at his heart.

Was an iceberg sailing down upon them—a vast white mountain ready to grind, and crush, and bury the doomed vessel under her cold feet? Had the fair steamer, which had set her face so proudly towards the west, sprung a sudden leak, and must the anxious freight of hearts she carries, go down at last under those hungry waves; and must the eyes that watched and waited for the beloved at home, grow dim with weeping for those who come not?

"Stop her! Stop her!" The swift thoughts—the terrible fears gave new courage to the passenger who was groping his way to the deck, and almost as soon as the captain mounted it, the former was at his side. Their eyes swept the wide, heaving ocean, and on the right they beheld six men struggling and battling for life with those mad waves—six men suddenly swept overboard! In a moment a boat was lowered. It did not seem possible that she could live a moment in that awful sea; but there were plenty of brave hearts on board to risk their lives for the lives of their brothers, and in a moment, manned by stalwart hearts, she put off. Then came the long hope, and fear, and waiting on board of the steamer—the straining of eyes through the storm for the sight of the little boat struggling her way towards the drowning men. At last she was seen returning. The passengers gathered in a breathless crowd to watch her, and count the number of her rescued. There were four in the boat—there had been six overboard!

One old man, his hair snowed white with the winter of his years, pressed forward—his son was among the missing? The old man's face was as white as his son's was, whether it lay unconscious in the boat, or had gone down in the triumphing waves. The old father leaned over and searched the faces in the boat. They were four, but the one for which he sought was not there.

"My boy is lost!" cried the old man, in a voice that made the heart of every passenger stand still, so full was it of human loss and anguish. All alone, now, the old man must make his way to the new, strange country, whither he and his son were going together—whither the brave heart and the strong arm had lured the old and feeble one, in the hope of building up a new fortune; and this was all the tidings he had now to send to the loving mother, who sat waiting and full of tremulous tenderness at home—this was all to the fair, young sister, who had sent out her last farewell on a sob—"Our boy is lost"

Dear children, whose young eyes may be dimmed for pity of the broken-hearted old man, this story is not all of my fancy. I had its principal facts from the lips of the passenger who witnessed that father's anguish over his boy that was, and is not. And I have written it for you here, with this still May afternoon leaning towards the night, with the soft, furrowed clouds folding away the fair of the spring sky.

"Stop her! Stop her!" Never, on board some steamer plowing her path through the storm, may you hear that cry; but oh, on another sea, where have gone down many and princely freights, there will assail you terrible storms of wind and wave!

"Stop her! Stop her!" In the gales of passion, and the storms of life, may your soul learn the meaning and the majesty of that call!

"Stop her! Stop her!" If the breakers are ahead—if the rocks lie before—if the path on which you are going is anywise the path of sin, the way of death!

Be vigilant, be prompt on the broad Atlantic of your life, for there "the winds may arise, the rains beat," and where loss and ruin lie before the path of your fair and stately ship. "Stop her! Stop her!"—Virginia F. Townsend, in Arthur's Magazine.

THE LITTLE OUTCAST.

"Mayn't I stay, ma'am? I'll do anything you give me; cut wood, go for water, and do all your errands."

The troubled eyes of the speaker were filled with tears. It was a lad that stood at the outer door, pleading with a kindly looking woman, who still seemed to doubt the reality of his good intentions.

The cottage stood by itself, on a bleak moor, or what in Scotland would have been called such. The time was near the latter end of September, and a fierce wind rattled the boughs of the only two naked trees near the house, and fled with a shivering sound into the narrow doorway, as if seeking for warmth at the blazing fire within.

Now and then a snow-flake touched with its soft chill the cheek of the listener, or whitened with the angry redness of the poor boy's benumbed hands. The woman was evidently loth to grant the boy's request; and the peculiar look stamped upon his features would have suggested to any mind an idea of depravity far beyond his years. But her woman's heart could not resist the sorrow in those large, but by no means handsome, gray eyes.

"Come in, at any rate, till the good man comes home. There, sit down by the fire: you look perishing with cold;" and she drew a rude chair up to the warmest corner; then suspiciously glancing at the child from the corners of her eyes, she continued setting the table for supper.

Presently came the tramp of heavy shoes, the door was swung open with a quick jerk, and the "good man" presented himself, wearied with labor. A look of intelligence between his wife and himself; he, too, scanned the boy's face with an expression not evincing satisfaction; but nevertheless made him come to the table, and then enjoyed the zest with which he dispatched his supper.

Day after day passed, and yet the boy begged to be kept "only till to-morrow;" so the good people, after due consideration, concluded that so long as he was docile, and worked so heartily, they would retain him.

One day, in the middle of the winter, a peddler, long accustomed to trade at the cottage, made his appearance, and disposed of his goods readily, as if he had been waited for.

"You have a boy out there, splitting wood, I see," he said, pointing to the yard.

"Yes; do you know him?"

"I have seen him," replied the peddler, evasively.

"And where? Who is he? What is he?"

"A jail-bird;" and the peddler swung his pack over his shoulder. "That boy, young as he looks, I saw in court myself, and heard his sentence—'Ten months.' He's a hard one; you'd do well to look carefully after him."

O! there was something so horrible in the word "jail." The poor woman trembled as she laid away her purchases; nor could she be easy till she called the boy in, and assured him that she knew the dark part of his history.

Ashamed, distressed, the child hung down his head; his cheeks seemed bursting with the hot blood; his lips quivered, and anguish was painted as vividly upon his forehead as the words were branded into the flesh.

"Well," he muttered, his whole frame relaxing, as if a burden of guilt or joy had suddenly rolled off, "I may as well go to ruin at onc't: there's no use in my trying to do better: everybody hates and despises me; nobody cares about me: I may as well go to ruin at onc't."

"Tell me," said the woman, who stood off far enough for flight, if that should be necessary, "how came you to go so young to that dreadful place? Where was your mother—where?"

O!" exclaimed the boy, with a burst of grief that was terrible to behold, "O! I hain't no mother! O! I hain't no mother ever since I was a baby. If I'd only had a mother," he continued, his anguish growing more vehement, and the tears gushing out from his strange-looking eyes, "I wouldn't ha' been bound out, and kicked, and cuffed, and laid on to with whips. I wouldn't ha' been saucy, and got knocked down, and run away, and then stole because I got hungry. O! I hain't got no mother; I hain't got no mother; I haven't had no mother since I was a baby."

The strength was all gone from the poor boy, and he sank on his knees, sobbing great choking sobs, and rubbing the hot tears away with his poor knuckles. And did that woman stand there unmoved? Did she coldly bid him pack up, and be off—the jail-bird?

No, no; she had been a mother, and though all her children slept under the cold sod in the church-yard, she was a mother still.

She went up to that poor boy, not to hasten him away, but to lay her fingers kindly, softly on his head; to tell him to look up, and from henceforth find in her a mother. Yes, she even put her arms about the neck of that forsaken, deserted child; she poured from her mother's heart, sweet, womanly words, words of counsel and tenderness.

O how sweet was her sleep that night; how soft her pillow! She had linked a poor suffering heart to hers, by the most silken, the strongest bands of love; she had plucked some thorns from the path of a little, sinning, but striving mortal.

Did the boy leave her?

Never! He is with her still, a vigorous, manly, promising youth. The unfavorable cast of his countenance has given place to an open, pleasing expression, with depth enough to make it an interesting study. His foster-father is dead; his good foster-mother aged and sickly; but she knows no want. The once poor outcast is her only dependence, and nobly does he repay the trust.

Signs.—When a boy is willing to take strong drink, it is a sign he will be a drunkard.

When a boy smokes or chews tobacco, it is a sign that he will soon be guilty of other filthy habits.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.40
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER, DEVOTED TO The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 449. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 10, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 8.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

DEDICATORY.

S. R. W.

Sister, Jesus hears thy groans,
Listens to thy midnight moans,
Marks the bitter tears you shed,
Languishing upon thy bed.

Jesus sends his Spirit forth,
Comforting his saints on earth;
And the Spirit brings to view
Glorious things reserved for you.

Far beyond the bounds of time
Faith discerns a healthful clime,
Where the weary pilgrims go
To escape this world of woe.

There the eye no more shall weep,
Nor our friends in death e'er sleep;
There shall be no care or pain,
For the Lord of Life shall reign.

They shall come from sea and shore,
Parted friends, to part no more;
Songs of triumph they shall sing
In the presence of their King.

Over there, my sister dear,
You shall with the saved appear,
No more suffer hours of pain,
Never shed a tear again.

Courage, sister, we'll be there,
And a crown of glory wear;
See! the city is in view,
There is lasting rest for you.

MARIA MATHEWS WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION

Held at Stanbridge, C. E., Feb. 10th to Feb. 13th, 1863, between ELDER MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, and REV. DENNIS CHAPIN, Universalist Missionary of the District of Bedford, C. E.

WRITTEN BY C. P. DOW.

Friday afternoon. Prayer by Elder C. P. Dow.

ELDER GRANT'S FOURTH AND LAST SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—This discussion will soon be closed; this is the last speech. You have listened with attention and manifest interest to what has been said. I cannot do more than give a brief notice to a few points made by my friend in his last speech; and, indeed, that is hardly necessary, as no new points were presented. Of the promise, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," also the passage that speaks of the "righteous blood being required of that generation," nothing new need to be said; we therefore refer you to what we have already said on those texts, as no new ideas have been advanced. My friend still contends that Christ came the second time in the first century; that all prophecy was fulfilled there, and God's kingdom set up. How it is possible for any person to think so, I cannot conceive. I think I have fully and fairly replied to all that has been presented by my friend having the least appearance of argument in favor of his position; while I am compelled to think that he has failed to meet and overthrow my arguments and positions. He has assumed positions which he has not been able to maintain. He has assumed that the signs of Matt. 24, Mark 13, and Luke 21, were fulfilled before Jerusalem's destruction, and that Christ came and his kingdom was set up there and then. But what evidence has he offered? Has he showed how and when each sign was fulfilled? Nothing of the kind, though repeatedly asked to do so. Why? Because he could not; this must have been the only reason.

If Christ came in the first century, none of the church knew it; no inspired writer recorded the fact. If the signs were fulfilled, no record was made of their fulfillment; and whoever claims they did appear, builds upon mere assumption, not on facts. We have built on facts.

We come now to recapitulate our argument, and give you a brief synopsis of positions taken and proofs offered, to sustain the affirmative of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the future personal coming of Christ?"

Our last speech was a summary of argument sustaining the affirmative of the last part of the question discussed, relative to the probability of his second advent taking "place in the nineteenth century." After appropriate remarks showing the importance of the subject, and claiming that all the Scriptures were upon one side of our question, all harmonious in their teaching, I then laid down and sustained the following proposition:—

1. "All the prophecies relating to the first Advent were literally fulfilled." This I proved, and my friend admitted in his first speech; and yet he says in the same speech, "Prophecy is never literal," or literally fulfilled. Hence I concluded,

2. That all the prophecies relating to the second Advent will be as literally fulfilled as were those relating to the first. We then inquired, What is declared in the Scriptures concerning the second advent? and read Heb. 9:28;—"So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the SECOND TIME, without sin, unto salvation." Here a second coming of Christ is declared. A second implies a first. The first was literal, as facts attest; the second advent will be as literal. And as there can be no coming between the first and second, so no spiritual coming of Christ has taken place.

I next showed by many arguments that he did not come at the destruction of Jerusalem. This point was fully argued, and all the scriptures considered and explained that are usually quoted to give support to such a position. We cannot repeat our arguments here, but will now present a synopsis of our positive proof on the affirmative of the first part of the question. And to commence I showed,

1. HE is to come LITERALLY. Proof, Acts 1:11;—"Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This SAME Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in LIKE MANNER as ye have seen him go into heaven." No language could be plainer. This has not taken place in the past; if so, where are the witnesses? He will come as literally as he went away. Other texts were quoted.

2. HE shall come "in flaming fire." 2 Thess. 1:7, 8;—"And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus SHALL be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire." This scripture has not been literally fulfilled in the past, therefore it will be in the future. Hence it sustains our position.

3. HE shall come with ten thousand of HIS SAINTS. Jude, 14th v.;—"And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the LORD cometh with ten thousand of HIS SAINTS." No event in the past or present fulfills this scripture, hence it sustains the affirmative.

4. HE shall "come with the clouds of heaven." Rev. 1:7;—"Behold HE cometh with clouds." Matt. 24:30;—"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall SEE the Son of man coming IN THE CLOUDS OF HEAVEN with power and great glory." Titus came from Rome on the ground. But Jesus will "come with the clouds of heaven."

5. HE shall come with all the holy angels. Matt. 25:31;—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him." Were all the holy angels in the Roman army? Absurd! MOST absurd!!

6. HE shall come with the great GOD. Titus 2:13;—"Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God AND our Savior Jesus Christ." Did "the great God" come with Titus? Was the slaughter at Jerusalem the BLESSED HOPE of the apostle?

7. The kingdom of God shall THEN come. Luke 21:31;—"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Other texts prove this point. This event is future.

8. His appearing will be UNIVERSAL. Rev. 1:7;—"Behold, HE cometh with clouds; and EVERY EYE shall SEE him, and they also which pierced him; and ALL KINDREDS of the earth shall wail because of him." Matt. 25:31, 32;—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered ALL NATIONS; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats." Did every eye SEE him at the destruction of Jerusalem? Did any eye see him then? Were all nations gathered there?

9. HE shall come upon the wicked UNAWARES. 1 Thess. 5:2;—"For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh AS A THIEF in the night; for when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh." Matt. 24:38, 39;—"For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away: so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." But the wicked Jews knew that the Romans were coming. They were not crying peace and safety, but divided and in awful alarm. Christ did not come then and there.

10. HE shall come "with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God." 1 Thess. 4:16;—"For the Lord HIMSELF (not TITUS, not his SPIRIT) shall descend from heaven with a shout (with commandment), with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." The clarion of war was NOT the trump of God, for that will awaken the dead to life.

11. The DEAD shall be raised at his coming. 1 Thess. 4:16;—"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and THE DEAD in Christ shall rise first." 1 Cor. 15:52;—"The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised." No resurrection of the dead took place at the destruction of Jerusalem, but a large number were slain.

12. The saints shall all be gathered to Christ. 2 Thess. 2:1;—"Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him." This will take place at his coming. Again. Mark 13:26, 27;—"And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. And then shall he send his angels, and shall GATHER TOGETHER his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of earth to the uttermost part of heaven." The saints were not gathered to Titus, but scattered. This gathering is plainly a future event.

13th. The bodies of the saints shall then be changed, and be made like unto Christ. Phil. 3:20, 21. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." 1 John 3:2. "We KNOW that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." 1 Cor. 15:51, 52. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." No such thing happened at Jerusalem's destruction. This resurrection and change will literally occur, in the future, AT the personal coming of the Lord Jesus Christ.

14th. The SAINTS shall appear with CHRIST in GLORY. Col. 3:4. "WHEN Christ, who is our life, shall appear, THEN shall ye also appear with him in GLORY." Did apostles or saints appear with Titus in his glory? Nay. They fled to the mountains for safety. When this takes place, ALL will know it. No need then to say, "Lo here, or Lo there." Lo Christ has come here spiritually, or Lo he came there, at Jerusalem's destruction, as some are now saying.

15th. The saints shall ADMIRE the Lord when he appears. 2 Thess. 1:10. "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be ADMIRED in all them that believe." What believer ADMIRED Titus? They ran from him. No event that took place then will fulfill or FILL FULL this prediction or picture, which remains to be accomplished.

16th. It will be a day of consolation to ALL believers. 1 Peter 4:13. "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with EXCEEDING JOY." 2 Peter 1:13. "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the GRACE that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 4:18. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." No comfort in the thought of Jerusalem's destruction. It made many homeless wanderers. But Christ comes to save and bless.

17th. The saints shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. 1 Thess. 4:17. "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." How foolish to claim the fulfillment of such predictions at the destruction of Jerusalem?

18th. They shall receive a crown of righteousness and glory. 2 Tim. 4:8. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Peter 5:4. "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." Did Paul receive a crown of righteousness at the advent of Titus? He died several years before that event. But he is sure to receive one at the day of Christ's appearing. Paul's crown is yet in reserve for him.

19th. The kingdom shall be inherited by the saints then, and not before. Matt. 25:31–34. "WHEN the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, COME, ye blessed of my Father, INHERIT the KINGDOM prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Were all nations gathered at the destruction of Jerusalem? Did the saints then inherit the promised kingdom, when scattered to be persecuted? How are these and similar questions to be answered? I should answer them in the negative, but my friend must answer them affirmatively. Why have the sacrament of the Lord's Supper if Christ came in the first century? 1 Cor. 11:26. "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death TILL HE COME." If my friend is correct, this ordinance should not have been observed since Jerusalem's destruction. Yet I presume Universalists observe this sacrament. I presume my friend does so. But why should he? It is not proper for him, if he is correct in the position he has maintained in this discussion.

On examination, we find no point can be clearer than that Christ is yet to come personally, visibly, in great glory, attended by his angels, to gather his elect, and ransom his own from the power of death, bring up from hades' dark, dark gloom his own, clothe all his saints with shining robes of immortality, and give them the kingdom under the whole heaven. "Blessed hope!" What a solace for our sorrows, what a balm for our wounds, what a cordial for our fears! And who shall take this hope from us? Shall aught move us away from this, the hope of the gospel? This hope the apostles and early christians cherished. 1 Thess. 1:9, 10. "For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from dumb idols to serve the living and true God and TO WAIT FOR HIS SON FROM HEAVEN, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." How long were they taught to WAIT? Acts 3:21. "Whom the heaven must receive UNTIL the times of RESTITUTION of all things, which God hath SPOKEN by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Then, HOW WILL HE COME? Acts 1:11. "Which also said, ye men of Gallilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? THIS SAME JESUS, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so COME in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

What chance is there for mistake here? The Scriptures of truth shed abundant and clear light upon this subject, shewing Christ's second coming to be personal, and future, while not one iota of proof that he has thus come can be found. I think the unprejudiced and candid of my audience are convinced of this. Therefore in conclusion we say, that the affirmative of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the future, personal, coming of Christ," is as clearly sustained, as that Christ is our Savior. And also that part of our question relating to the nearness of that advent is abundantly sustained, only a small part of the evidence of which I have had time to present. The proof on the affirmative is not exhausted.

I am grateful for the respectful and candid attention that has been given by the audiences that have listened to this discussion, which is now ended, with the hope that you may be led to "know the truth; and that the truth may make you free," and you and I at last be brought to the everlasting kingdom. (Time ex.)

For the World's Crisis.

THE TWILIGHT HOUR.

Oh, give me the twilight hour to weep
For friends who are distant afar,
When through the deep blue sky doth peep
The rays of the evening star.

Oh, give me the twilight hour to love,
When earth gently sinks to repose;
'Tis then the thoughts turn to things above,
And the heart with pure love o'erflows.

Oh, give me the twilight hour for prayer,
'Tis then solemn thoughts arise,
And angels are listening in the still air
To waft the words to the skies.

Yes, give me the twilight hour for prayer,
When the moon looks forth from on high,
And the solemn silence of the air
Tells me that I must die.

D. F. NEWTON.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TWO ABRAHAMIC COVENANTS.

For a few years past much has been said about the Abrahamic covenant. Some assume or take for granted that the two main promises, or covenants, as they are often called, made to Abraham in Gen. 12:3, 7, are in reality but one, or that both combined imply the true gospel: in other words, that the promise of Canaan to Abraham's natural seed, in ver. 7, implies an essential part of the gospel "preached to Abraham," just as much as that in ver. 3, the substance of which is, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This I shall call the first promise to Abraham. The second, ver. 7 (and first for land), reads—"Unto thy seed will I give this land"—Canaan. These promises are repeated several times, and differently worded, but the substance is contained in these two sentences. See Gen. 13:14; 15:18; 17:4, 5, 8–19; 21:12, 22:18.

The christian world have generally been agreed that the first of these promises contained, or implied, the gospel of salvation, or life through Christ, as Gal. 3:8 refers to it; while the second only implied temporal blessings to Abraham and his natural seed,—such as the land of Canaan,—prosperity, and a numerous fleshly seed. As to spiritual good, Rom. 3:2 says the "chief" one was, that "unto them were committed the oracles of God." But we see that their having the means of obtaining life did not give it to all of them; while Rom. 4:16 tells a promise to Abraham, which is "sure to all the seed," and this is a distinct one, and contained in Gen. 12:3, as I will show by and by. Some make the second promise as much an essential part of the gospel of life as the first. To be plain, I will repeat. It is said—The promise to Abraham, of Canaan, and a literal, everlasting kingdom on that territory, makes up a part of the gospel, and is as essential to be believed, to obtain life, as to believe in "Christ and him crucified"; and we must be immersed in such belief, or not have eternal life.

The first of these promises to Abraham would be obscure, and some like the one in Eden, that "the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head," were it not made plain in the New Testament. Paul, in Gal. 3:16, shows the two promises—"He saith not unto seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." But surely the promise of Canaan was to "many," and so was another promise. But what were the blessings implied in these two promises, are the main points to settle. I have briefly stated them, but will enlarge on the first. In this eternal life—"justification unto life"—righteousness, and cleansing from sin, are included. See all these blessings clearly set forth in Rom. 5:16–21. These blessings come by "Jesus Christ our Lord," the "one seed." By this "Abraham became heir of the world," and "father of us all," Jew and Gentile. Rom. 4:13–16. By the second promise he only became heir of Canaan, and father of a numerous natural seed.

The "kingdom under the whole heaven," which believers are to possess, is shown to be endless, by various texts; but the terms "forever" and "everlasting," though applied to the possession of Canaan by the Jews, do not settle it to be endless, as these terms are used two hundred and forty times in a limited sense, as I have proved in my tract on forever and everlasting. These terms are applied to Aaron's priesthood, and to circumcision, etc., yet they have ended. See my tract.

I will suppose a case, to make my ideas plain, if possible, to prepossessed minds.—See a guilty man in prison, condemned to death; what would he want and ask for first, in a petition to his king? Would it be a good farm? No, but for life, to have his character restored, if possible. Of course, if life is given, he will have some place to live; and if poor, and the king promises him a farm, and tells where it shall be, this is a new and secondary promise. This was our state, and God in mercy devised a plan by Christ's death to restore our character, and so give us life eternal. This is the reason why Paul generally used justification and righteousness as synonymous with eternal life. This was the gospel preached to Abraham in this first covenant, Gal. 3:8;—"The Scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." This fully proves the two promises and their two distinct meanings.

We should be thankful that God has added to the promises of life and righteousness that of a good farm, but it is one "under the whole heaven," and not alone the little garden spot of Canaan. The Jews who become "Christ's by faith," may have this garden as their part of the "new earth"; and Jerusalem may be the seat of government; but this is another question from that of life eternal, and different from the promise that "the meek shall inherit the earth." We should remember, too, that the "middle wall" is "broken down," and that ALL believers "make one new man." Eph. 2:13, to the end.

An eminent writer on these covenants says: "One was national; the other does not regard any nation more than another. One was typical; the other antitypical. One could only secure the enjoyment of Canaan; the other secures the heavenly inheritance; one was temporal; the other eternal. One could not bestow justification, or eternal life; this the other was specially instituted to do." (See Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge. Article, Covenant. A work all ministers should have as a reference book, to see most doctrines settled by comparing Bible with Bible.) See Heb. 8:6–13.

I often hear Acts 7:5 quoted to prove that Abraham did not possess Canaan, and therefore he must hereafter. Such should notice that Gen. 12:7, and 15:18, give it only to his seed. The different wording of the promise is made plain by the idea, that he got the title but not the possession, as is common in land affairs. As he is "heir of the world," he will have all he needs of Canaan when resurrected.

I will refer to a few more passages, so that those who wish to investigate can save time in so doing. Gal. 3:29;—"If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise." Heirs of what, and by what promise? The Bible says, "an heir" of life, and by the first promise made to Abraham, through Christ the "one seed." (See 2 Tim. 1:1.) "according to the promise of life, which is in Christ Jesus" (1 John 2:25; Jas. 1, 12; Titus 3:7); "That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of life"—not "the hope" of land (1 Pet. 3:7), "being heirs together of the grace of life." Believers are said to inherit life. Gal. 3:18 compared with verse 21; [illegible] 19:29; Mark 10:17. Again, the hope of the Jews was a resurrection, which is the same as a hope of life. Acts 26:6–8; 24:15–20; 23:6. This must suffice as a tithe of such texts.

Many believe the Jews are yet to possess Canaan for a thousand years after Christ comes, some in the flesh, and some resurrected; but such a belief, right or wrong, alters not the point I am arguing, which is, that Christ by his blood "bought" and "redeemed" believers, and not land. See 1 Cor. 7:23; 1 Pet. 1:8. The earth is to be redeemed, or restored, but God's power is only needed for this, as it has not sinned; but the blood of Jesus was needed to redeem us from death and sin; and it seems strange to me that the great and "precious promises" of God's word should be mostly applied to Canaan, a mere speck of inanimate earth, when one life, in God's view, is worth more than many worlds. His word could make them, but the blood of his beloved Son could alone save sinful man from blank oblivion.

If but two sons had been born of Abraham, and he and they had possessed no land or kingdom, and Christ had been born of Jacob, the true gospel would have been just what it now is—good news of "eternal life," and a happy one somewhere. If the Bible had revealed that Jupiter, thirteen hundred times larger than the earth, or, heaven, as most believe, was to be our final home, the "glad tidings" would still be—"Christ became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Heb. 5:9; Acts 13:32 and 38; 39.

As to a faith to fit us for baptism, I will only ask—Where in God's book do we find any other faith required than the one confessed by the eunuch—"I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God"? Acts 8:27.

But the second step taken to establish this theory is, in coming to the New Testament and trying to prove, or rather assuming, that the terms "kingdom," "kingdom of God" and "of heaven," always have one meaning; thus confounding the different senses in which these terms are used, something as the covenants made with Abraham are confounded. But this part I must leave for another article.

Buffalo, N. Y. JACOB BLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

THE LAST CALL.

BRO. GRANT:—Through your valuable paper I would like to say a few words to its numerous readers. While reading a political paper, my eye rested on a paragraph headed, "The Last call;" in which the men are urged to engage in this terrible war.

Brethren, the Savior is giving us the last call. O let us heed it. His warning, his entreating, his threatening, has sounded in our ears, and now he is making his "last call." Brethren, will you heed it? My heart responds, I will. Brothers and sisters, who are in the christian warfare, do you sometimes feel as though you should faint by the way? If so let the promises of God cheer you. Remember he says, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Does your hope seem long deferred? God has spoken, and it shall be realized. Does it seem as though your trials were greater than you could bear? You "have not yet resisted unto blood striving against sin." Do you sometimes think the price too great? You have eternal happiness and life to lose or gain. Weak one, be of good cheer, for He that is for you is greater "than he that is in the world."

Sinner, there is a God to whom you must give an account. There is a judgment, at which you must appear. There is eternal life and eternal death, one of which you must choose. There are the pleasures of the saved, and the anguish of the lost, and it is for you to take which you will. Dear sinner, choose wisely; choose quickly; for it is "the last call."

Backsliders, you who sounded the alarm to a wicked world, and proclaimed this glorious truth, "Behold the bridegroom cometh." Where are you to-day? Why have you laid down your watch? Why are your harps hung upon the willow? Why have you turned from your first love? O awake to righteousness, that you may shine in the kingdom. Think how this glorious truth once thrilled you with the joys that were unspeakable. Think of the sweet communion you once shared with God's waiting ones. Think of the privations you have suffered, cheerfully suffered for eternal life, and then ask yourself if all this has been in vain? Backslider, what has caused your love to grow cold? Was it the pleasures of this world? They are fleeting. Was it its honors? They are as a bauble. Was it the deceitfulness of riches? What if wealth you have accumulated in a lifetime may be swept away in a moment, and you be thrown upon God's bounty, and be compelled to pray to him for daily bread. Will it then, think you, be more pleasant to think you have forsaken him, and scorned his offers of mercy? Look about you, backslider, I beseech you, and if it be one or all of these things, pray God to remove them. Have you concluded that you were then following cunningly devised fables? Sinners heard you declare your faith in those days, when you sang God's praise, and now they are looking to you. What will you tell them? that you were right? if so, why do you not still serve God, and prepare yourself, and help others to be as pillars in the temple of the living God? Many of you, I have heard with streaming eyes, and heart overflowing, tell of your faith and love in God, and your hope in his speedy coming, when I was a small child; and when I grew old enough to partake of those joys, and learn to prize that faith, there has been sorrow mixed with my joy; sorrow that so many have given up their hope. O backslider, will you be like the foolish virgin? If not, now is the time to trim your lamps and see that they are brightly burning.

Dear ones, my heart pleads with God for you. O, when the terrible wrath of God is poured out on the wicked, I want you sheltered beneath the wings of God's love. After the wail of the lost is borne away on the air, and peace is given from heaven, I want you to be one who shall sing amid the bowers of Eden. I wish to partake with you of the tree of life. I desire to drink with you of the water of life. With you I wish to roam over the plains of paradise, and gather the sweet flowers that will bloom on those immortal shores. That God may bring us into his fold in peace, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

Mannsville, N. Y. D. L. CLARK.

LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

Make the most of thy position,
Grasp the brightest and the best;
This, the present, is thy mission,
This thy work, thy life, thy zest.

Promptly banish all displeasure,
Try and realize thy gain;
See thy soul expand, and measure,
If thou canst, its highest plane.

And remember God is near thee,
Is thy everlasting friend,
With eternal life to cheer thee,
In progression without end.

—J. M. Blanchard.

For the World's Crisis.

"THOSE THAT SEEK ME EARLY, SHALL FIND ME."

It is the desire of every intelligent parent, that his children become early instructed in useful knowledge; no pains, no expense are allowed to prevent the accomplishment of this object. And if the child become a proficient in the sciences, or even any branch of them, he is often regarded as a prodigy; the pride, the boast, the idol of the family. Inspired with ambition, and inflated with pride, he feels impatient for the day, when he shall become wise—a prominent member of community. And, had we no promise from the oracles of God, extending beyond the limits of threescore years and ten, such might be the hight of mortal ambition; but how insignificant is all secular wisdom, compared with that which cometh from above, being "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

How important that the young be early taught to discern between temporal wisdom and that which is able to make them wise unto salvation. Many, varied and loud, are the calls of God to the young; it is his essential wisdom, his inspired word, that says to them, "Those that seek me early, shall find me." Prov. 8:17. This wisdom is to be sought after. "Seek, and ye shall find."—Luke 11:9. "Seek the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near."

Let the young be admonished by these and similar Scriptures, that God has pledged his own glorious perfections through Christ, for the salvation of every soul that earnestly and truly seeks him. But, my young friends, if, like Felix to Paul, you continue to say, "Go thy way for this time," there will come a day when God's Spirit shall take its final flight; when the door of mercy shall be forever closed, and your portion appointed with hypocrites and unbelievers. In view of the abounding wickedness of these last degenerate days, how should our solicitude be awakened for the safety of the children and youth, growing up under almost every influence, militant to the pure religion of Jesus.

How are their moral capacities for ultimate good neglected! How is the responsibility affecting their relation to all within their influence, set aside, while the intellect alone is made the subject of persevering culture.

Now we are not to believe in an overwhelming and general outburst of divine power for the salvation of the young, at this late and evil hour of probation's day, for such a belief is not warranted by Scripture; but the servant of God is not to relax his efforts to restrain and reclaim, for this is the labor of love to which he is called—herein is the hope of Israel, that the parent teach his child by every inducement, to seek early the way of wisdom, the path of peace; to secure a hiding-place from the gathering storm, a rest in the glorious kingdom of God.

Parents, you are individually responsible, and the question is, Will you admonish and persuade your children to build upon the foundation of God, which standeth sure? Then those, to whom you are related by the most endearing ties, may gladly sing:—

"Compared with Christ, in all beside
No comeliness I see;
The one thing needful, dearest Lord,
Is to be one with thee."

E. Stoneham, Me. W. A. MANNING.

HOW GRACE CHANGES A MAN.

All changes, truly, are not from bad to good, or good to better. They may be from good to bad, or from bad to worse. Moisture dims the polished blade, and turns its bright steel into dull, red rust; fire changes the sparkling diamond into black coal and gray ashes; disease makes loveliness loathsome, and death converts the living form into a mass of foul corruption. But the peculiarity of grace is this, that like heaven it changes whatever is applied to it into its own nature. For as leaven turns meal into leaven, so divine grace imparts a gracious character to the heart; and this is what I call its assimilating element. Yet let there be no mistake. While the grace of God changes all who are brought in conversion under its influence, it does not impart any new power or passion, but works by giving to those who already have a holy bent; by impressing on them a heavenly character. For example, grace did not make David a poet, or Paul an orator, or John a man of warm affections, or Peter a man of strong impulses and ardent zeal. They were born such.

The grace of God changes no more the natural features of the mind than it does those of the body—as the negro said, it gave him a white heart, but it left him still, to use the language of another, the image of God carved in ebony. Be the meal into which that woman hides the leaven meal of wheat, or meal of barley, it will come from her hands, from the process of leavening, from her fiery oven, cakes of the same grain. For it is not the substance but the character of the meal that is changed. Even so with the effect of grace. It did not give even John his warm affections; but it fixed them on his beloved Master—sanctifying his love. It did not give Dorcas a woman's heart, her tender sympathy with suffering; but it associated charity with piety, and made her a holy philanthropist. It did not give Paul his genius, his resistless logic, and noble oratory, but it consecrated them to the cause of Christ—touching his lips as with a live coal from the altar, it made him such a master of holy eloquence that he swayed the multitude at his will, humbled the pride of kings, and compelled his very judges to tremble. It did not give David a poet's fire and a poet's lyre; but it strung his heart with chords from heaven, and tuned all its strings to the service of religion and the high praises of God. So grace ever works! It assimilates a man to the character of God. It does not change the mental, but stamps it with the divine image; and so assimilates all who have received Christ to the nature of Christ. Unless we have the same mind, more or less developed in us that was in him, the Bible declares that we are none of his.—Dr. Thomas Guthrie.

For the World's Crisis.

REMARKABLE CASE.

All who have had an opportunity of reading the life of the pious Wm. Bramwell, will doubtless recollect the circumstance of the blind boy being healed. The correspondent of a Methodist paper recently travelling in England writes thus:—

"We have since accepted an invitation to visit Harrowgate, where we had the pleasure of spending an hour with Thomas Greensmith, Esq., of whom, in Mr. Sigston's memoir of Bramwell, the following account is given: 'William Greensmith, son of Thomas Greensmith, Watnale, near Nottingham, when about nine years of age, was severely afflicted with scrofulous humors in his eyes, so that he was unable to bear the light even with bandages. Mr. Bramwell was then in the Nottingham circuit, and went in his regular turn to preach at Mr. Greensmith's house. On one of these occasions he remained all night, and previous to his departure the next morning, when his horse was brought to the door, he asked where the boy with sore eyes was. Mrs. Greensmith replied that he was in a dark room. He was called out and stood near Mr. B., who put his hand on the boy's head, and looked upward as in the act of prayer. He then went out, leaving the child, who, as if conscious of some change, pulled off the bandages, looked through the window and asked if Mr. Bramwell was gone. On perceiving that his eyes were healed, all the family were astonished.'

Mr. Wm. Greensmith, whose eyes were thus miraculously restored in answer to the prayer of faith, is now about seventy years of age, and to look upon him one might say, 'His eye is not dim, nor his natural force abated.' I asked him if he could remember the occurrence of Mr. Bramwell's placing his hand upon his head when in the act of supplication. 'O yes! as distinctly as though it were the business of yesterday,' said he."—Com. by A. Ross.

☞ If you would rise in the world, you must not stop to kick at every cur who barks at you as you pass along.

E. H. GORDON

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 449. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 10, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 8.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

DEDICATORY.

S. R. W.

Sister, Jesus hears thy groans,
Listens to thy midnight moans,
Marks the bitter tears you shed,
Languishing upon thy bed.

Jesus sends his Spirit forth,
Comforting his saints on earth;
And the Spirit brings to view
Glorious things reserved for you.

Far beyond the bounds of time
Faith discerns a healthful clime,
Where the weary pilgrims go
To escape this world of woe.

There the eye no more shall weep,
Nor our friends in death e'er sleep;
There shall be no care or pain,
For the Lord of Life shall reign.

They shall come from sea and shore,
Parted friends, to part no more;
Songs of triumph they shall sing
In the presence of their King.

Over there, my sister dear,
You shall with the saved appear,
No more suffer hours of pain,
Never shed a tear again.

Courage, sister, we'll be there,
And a crown of glory wear;
See! the city is in view,
There is lasting rest for you.

MARIA MATHEWS WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass.

REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION

Held at Stanbridge, C. E., Feb. 10th to Feb. 13th, 1863, between ELDER MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, and REV. DENNIS CHAPIN, Universalist Missionary of the District of Bedford, C. E.

WRITTEN BY C. P. DOW.

Friday afternoon. Prayer by Elder C. P. Dow.

ELDER GRANT'S FOURTH AND LAST SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—This discussion will soon be closed; this is the last speech. You have listened with attention and manifest interest to what has been said. I cannot do more than give a brief notice to a few points made by my friend in his last speech; and, indeed, that is hardly necessary, as no new points were presented. Of the promise, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," also the passage that speaks of the "righteous blood being required of that generation," nothing new need to be said; we therefore refer you to what we have already said on those texts, as no new ideas have been advanced. My friend still contends that Christ came the second time in the first century; that all prophecy was fulfilled there, and God's kingdom set up. How it is possible for any person to think so, I cannot conceive. I think I have fully and fairly replied to all that has been presented by my friend having the least appearance of argument in favor of his position; while I am compelled to think that he has failed to meet and overthrow my arguments and positions. He has assumed positions which he has not been able to maintain. He has assumed that the signs of Matt. 24, Mark 13, and Luke 21, were fulfilled before Jerusalem's destruction, and that Christ came and his kingdom was set up there and then. But what evidence has he offered? Has he showed how and when each sign was fulfilled? Nothing of the kind, though repeatedly asked to do so. Why? Because he could not; this must have been the only reason.

If Christ came in the first century, none of the church knew it; no inspired writer recorded the fact. If the signs were fulfilled, no record was made of their fulfillment; and whoever claims they did appear, builds upon mere assumption, not on facts. We have built on facts.

We come now to recapitulate our argument, and give you a brief synopsis of positions taken and proofs offered, to sustain the affirmative of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the future personal coming of Christ?"

Our last speech was a summary of argument sustaining the affirmative of the last part of the question discussed, relative to the probability of his second advent taking "place in the nineteenth century." After appropriate remarks showing the importance of the subject, and claiming that all the Scriptures were upon one side of our question, all harmonious in their teaching, I then laid down and sustained the following proposition:—

1. "All the prophecies relating to the first Advent were literally fulfilled." This I proved, and my friend admitted in his first speech; and yet he says in the same speech, "Prophecy is never literal," or literally fulfilled. Hence I concluded,

2. That all the prophecies relating to the second Advent will be as literally fulfilled as were those relating to the first. We then inquired, What is declared in the Scriptures concerning the second advent? and read Heb. 9: 28;—"So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the SECOND TIME, without sin, unto salvation." Here a second coming of Christ is declared. A second implies a first. The first was literal, as facts attest; the second advent will be as literal. And as there can be no coming between the first and second, so no spiritual coming of Christ has taken place.

I next showed by many arguments that he did not come at the destruction of Jerusalem. This point was fully argued, and all the scriptures considered and explained that are usually quoted to give support to such a position. We cannot repeat our arguments here, but will now present a synopsis of our positive proof on the affirmative of the first part of the question. And to commence I showed,

1. HE is to come LITERALLY. Proof, Acts 1: 11;—"Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This SAME Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in LIKE MANNER as ye have seen him go into heaven." No language could be plainer. This has not taken place in the past; if so, where are the witnesses? He will come as literally as he went away. Other texts were quoted.

2. HE shall come "in flaming fire." 2 Thess. 1: 7, 8;—"And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus SHALL be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire." This scripture has not been literally fulfilled in the past, therefore it will be in the future. Hence it sustains our position.

3. HE shall come with ten thousand of HIS SAINTS. Jude, 14th v.;—"And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the LORD cometh with ten thousand of HIS SAINTS." No event in the past or present fulfills this scripture, hence it sustains the affirmative.

4. HE shall "come with the clouds of heaven." Rev. 1: 7;—"Behold HE cometh with clouds." Matt. 24: 30;—"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall SEE the Son of man coming IN THE CLOUDS OF HEAVEN with power and great glory." Titus came from Rome on the ground. But Jesus will "come with the clouds of heaven."

5. HE shall come with all the holy angels. Matt. 25: 31;—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him." Were all the holy angels in the Roman army? Absurd! MOST absurd!!

6. HE shall come with the great GOD. Titus 2: 13;—"Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God AND our Savior Jesus Christ." Did "the great God" come with Titus? Was the slaughter at Jerusalem the BLESSED HOPE of the apostle?

7. The kingdom of God shall THEN come. Luke 21: 31;—"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Other texts prove this point. This event is future.

8. His appearing will be UNIVERSAL. Rev. 1: 7;—"Behold, HE cometh with clouds; and EVERY EYE shall SEE him, and they also which pierced him; and ALL KINDREDS of the earth shall wail because of him." Matt. 25: 31, 32;—"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered ALL NATIONS; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats." Did every eye SEE him at the destruction of Jerusalem? Did any eye see him then? Were all nations gathered there?

9. HE shall come upon the wicked UNAWARES. 1 Thess. 5: 2;—"For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh AS A THIEF in the night; for when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh." Matt. 24: 38, 39;—"For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away: so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." But the wicked Jews knew that the Romans were coming. They were not crying peace and safety, but divided and in awful alarm. Christ did not come then and there.

10. HE shall come "with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God." 1 Thess. 4: 16;—"For the Lord HIMSELF (not TITUS, not his SPIRIT) shall descend from heaven with a shout (with commandment), with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." The clarion of war was NOT the trump of God, for that will awaken the dead to life.

11. The DEAD shall be raised at his coming. 1 Thess. 4: 16;—"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and THE DEAD in Christ shall rise first." 1 Cor. 15: 52;—"The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised." No resurrection of the dead took place at the destruction of Jerusalem, but a large number were slain.

12. The saints shall all be gathered to Christ. 2 Thess. 2: 1;—"Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him." This will take place at his coming. Again. Mark 13: 26, 27;—"And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. And then shall he send his angels, and shall GATHER TOGETHER his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of earth to the uttermost part of heaven." The saints were not gathered to Titus, but scattered. This gathering is plainly a future event.

13th. The bodies of the saints shall then be changed, and be made like unto Christ. Phil. 3: 20, 21. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." 1 John 3: 2. "We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." No such thing happened at Jerusalem's destruction. This resurrection and change will literally occur, in the future, AT the personal coming of the Lord Jesus Christ.

14th. The SAINTS shall appear with CHRIST in GLORY. Col. 3: 4. "WHEN Christ, who is our life, shall appear, THEN shall ye also appear with him in GLORY." Did apostles or saints appear with Titus in his glory? Nay. They fled to the mountains for safety. When this takes place, ALL will know it. No need then to say, "Lo here, or, Lo there." Lo Christ has come here spiritually, or Lo he came there, at Jerusalem's destruction, as some are now saying.

15th. The saints shall ADMIRE the Lord when he appears. 2 Thess. 1: 10. "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be ADMIRED in all them that believe." What believer ADMIRED Titus? They ran from him. No event that took place then will fulfill or FILL FULL this prediction or picture, which remains to be accomplished.

16th. It will be a day of consolation to ALL believers. 1 Peter 4: 13. "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with EXCEEDING JOY." 2 Peter 1: 13. "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the GRACE that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 4: 18. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." No comfort in the thought of Jerusalem's destruction. It made many homeless wanderers. But Christ comes to save and bless.

17th. The saints shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. 1 Thess. 4: 17. "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." How foolish to claim the fulfillment of such predictions at the destruction of Jerusalem?

18th. They shall receive a crown of righteousness and glory. 2 Tim. 4: 8. "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Peter 5: 4. "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." Did Paul receive a crown of righteousness at the advent of Titus? He died several years before that event. But he is sure to receive one at the day of Christ's appearing. Paul's crown is yet in reserve for him.

19th. The kingdom shall be inherited by the saints then, and not before. Matt. 25: 31–34. "WHEN the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, COME, ye blessed of my Father, INHERIT the KINGDOM prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Were all nations gathered at the destruction of Jerusalem? Did the saints then inherit the promised kingdom, when scattered to be persecuted? How are these and similar questions to be answered? I should answer them in the negative, but my friend must answer them affirmatively. Why have the sacrament of the Lord's Supper if Christ came in the first century? 1 Cor. 11: 26. "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death TILL HE COME." If my friend is correct, this ordinance should not have been observed since Jerusalem's destruction. Yet I presume Universalists observe this sacrament. I presume my friend does so. But why should he? It is not proper for him, if he is correct in the position he has maintained in this discussion.

On examination, we find no point can be clearer than that Christ is yet to come personally, visibly, in great glory, attended by his angels, to gather his elect, and ransom his own from the power of death, bring up from hades' dark, dark gloom his own, clothe all his saints with shining robes of immortality, and give them the kingdom under the whole heaven. "Blessed hope!" What a solace for our sorrows, what a balm for our wounds, what a cordial for our fears! And who shall take this hope from us? Shall aught move us away from this, the hope of the gospel? This hope the apostles and early christians cherished. 1 Thess. 1: 9, 10. "For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from dumb idols to serve the living and true God and TO WAIT FOR HIS SON FROM HEAVEN, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come." How long were they taught to WAIT? Acts 3: 21. "Whom the heaven must receive UNTIL the times of RESTITUTION of all things, which God hath SPOKEN by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Then, HOW WILL HE COME? Acts 1: 11. "Which also said, ye men of Gallilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? THIS SAME JESUS, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so COME in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

What chance is there for mistake here? The Scriptures of truth shed abundant and clear light upon this subject, shewing Christ's second coming to be personal, and future, while not one iota of proof that he has thus come can be found. I think the unprejudiced and candid of my audience are convinced of this. Therefore in conclusion we say, that the affirmative of the question, "Do the Scriptures teach the future, personal, coming of Christ," is as clearly sustained, as that Christ is our Savior. And also that part of our question relating to the nearness of that advent is abundantly sustained, only a small part of the evidence of which I have had time to present. The proof on the affirmative is not exhausted.

I am grateful for the respectful and candid attention that has been given by the audiences that have listened to this discussion, which is now ended, with the hope that you may be led to "know the truth; and that the truth may make you free," and you and I at last be brought to the everlasting kingdom. (Time ex.)

For the World's Crisis.

THE TWILIGHT HOUR.

Oh, give me the twilight hour to weep
  For friends who are distant afar,
When through the deep blue sky doth peep
  The rays of the evening star.

Oh, give me the twilight hour to love,
  When earth gently sinks to repose;
'Tis then the thoughts turn to things above,
  And the heart with pure love o'erflows.

Oh, give me the twilight hour for prayer,
  'Tis then solemn thoughts arise,
And angels are listening in the still air
  To waft the words to the skies.

Yes, give me the twilight hour for prayer,
  When the moon looks forth from on high,
And the solemn silence of the air
  Tells me that I must die.

D. P. NEWTON.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TWO ABRAHAMIC COVENANTS.

For a few years past much has been said about the Abrahamic covenant. Some assume or take for granted that the two main promises, or covenants, as they are often called, made to Abraham in Gen. 12: 3, 7, are in reality but one, or that both combined imply the true gospel: in other words, that the promise of Canaan to Abraham's natural seed, in ver. 7, implies an essential part of the gospel "preached to Abraham," just as much as that in ver. 3, the substance of which is, "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This I shall call the first promise to Abraham. The second, ver. 7 (and first for land), reads—"Unto thy seed will I give this land" —Canaan. These promises are repeated several times, and differently worded, but the substance is contained in these two sentences. See Gen. 13: 14; 15: 18; 17: 5, 8–19; 21: 12; 22: 18.

The christian world have generally been agreed that the first of these promises contained, or implied, the gospel of salvation, or life through Christ, as Gal. 3: 8 refers to it; while the second only implied temporal blessings to Abraham and his natural seed,—such as the land of Canaan,—prosperity, and a numerous fleshly seed. As to spiritual good, Rom. 3: 2 says the "chief" one was, that "unto them were committed the oracles of God." But we see that their having the means of obtaining life did not give it to all of them; while Rom. 4: 16 tells a promise to Abraham, which is "sure to all the seed," and this is a distinct one, and contained in Gen. 12: 3, as I will show by and by. Some make the second promise as much an essential part of the gospel of life as the first. To be plain, I will repeat. It is said—The promise to Abraham, of Canaan, and a literal, everlasting kingdom on that territory, makes up a part of the gospel, and is as essential to be believed, to obtain life, as to believe in "Christ and him crucified"; and we must be immersed in such belief, or not have eternal life.

The first of these promises to Abraham would be obscure, and some like the one in Eden, that "the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head," were it not made plain in the New Testament. Paul, in Gal. 3: 16, shows the two promises—"He saith not unto seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." But surely the promise of Canaan was to "many," and so was another promise. But what were the blessings implied in these two promises, are the main points to settle. I have briefly stated them, but will enlarge on the first. In this eternal life—"justification unto life"—righteousness, and cleansing from sin, are included. See all these blessings clearly set forth in Rom. 5: 16–21. These blessings come by "Jesus Christ our Lord," the "one seed." By this "Abraham became heir of the world," and "father of us all," Jew and Gentile. Rom. 4: 13–16. By the second promise he only became heir of Canaan, and father of a numerous natural seed.

The "kingdom under the whole heaven," which believers are to possess, is shown to be endless, by various texts; but the terms "forever" and "everlasting," though applied to the possession of Canaan by the Jews, do not settle it to be endless, as these terms are used two hundred and forty times in a limited sense, as I have proved in my tract on forever and everlasting. These terms are applied to Aaron's priesthood, and to circumcision, etc., yet they have ended. See my tract.

I will suppose a case, to make my ideas plain, if possible, to prepossessed minds.—See a guilty man in prison, condemned to death; what would he want and ask for first, in a petition to his king? Would it be a good farm? No, but for life, to have his character restored, if possible. Of course, if life is given, he will have some place to live; and if poor, and the king promises him a farm, and tells where it shall be, this is a new and secondary promise. This was our state, and God in mercy devised a plan by Christ's death to restore our character, and so give us life eternal. This is the reason why Paul generally used justification and righteousness as synonymous with eternal life. This was the gospel preached to Abraham in this first covenant, Gal. 3: 8;—"The Scriptures, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." This fully proves the two promises and their two distinct meanings.

We should be thankful that God has added to the promises of life and righteousness that of a good farm, but it is one "under the whole heaven," and not alone the little garden spot of Canaan. The Jews who become "Christ's by faith," may have this garden as their part of the "new earth"; and Jerusalem may be the seat of government; but this is another question from that of life eternal, and different from the promise that "the meek shall inherit the earth." We should remember, too, that the "middle wall" is "broken down," and that ALL believers "make one new man." Eph. 2: 13, to the end.

An eminent writer on these covenants says: "One was national; the other does not regard any nation more than another. One was typical; the other antitypical. One could only secure the enjoyment of Canaan; the other secures the heavenly inheritance; one was temporal; the other eternal. One could not bestow justification, or eternal life; this the other was specially instituted to do." (See Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge. Article, Covenant. A work all ministers should have as a reference book, to see most doctrines settled by comparing Bible with Bible.) See Heb. 8: 6–13.

I often hear Acts 7: 5 quoted to prove that Abraham did not possess Canaan, and therefore he must hereafter. Such should notice that Gen. 12: 7, and 15: 18, give it only to his seed. The different wording of the promise is made plain by the idea, that he got the title but not the possession, as is common in land affairs. As he is "heir of the world," he will have all he needs of Canaan when resurrected.

I will refer to a few more passages, so that those who wish to investigate can save time in so doing. Gal. 3: 29;—"If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise." Heirs of what, and by what promise? The Bible says, "an heir" of life, and by the first promise made to Abraham, through Christ the "one seed," (See 2 Tim. 1: 1,) "according to the promise of life, which is in Christ Jesus" (1 John 2: 25; Jas. 1, 12; Titus 3: 7); "That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of life"—not "the hope" of land (1 Pet. 3: 7), "being heirs together of the grace of life." Believers are said to inherit life. Gal. 3: 18 compared with verse 21; [illegible] 19: 29; Mark 10: 17. Again, the hope of the fathers was a resurrection, which is the same as a hope of life. Acts 26: 6–8; 24: 15–20; 23: 6. This must suffice as a tithe of such texts.

Many believe the Jews are yet to possess Canaan for a thousand years after Christ comes, some in the flesh, and some resurrected; but such a belief, right or wrong, alters not the point I am arguing, which is, that Christ by his blood "bought" and "redeemed" believers, and not land. See 1 Cor. 7: 23; 1 Pet. 1: 8. The earth is to be redeemed, or restored, but God's power is only needed for this, as it has not sinned; but the blood of Jesus was needed to redeem us from death and sin; and it seems strange to me that the great and "precious promises" of God's word should be mostly applied to Canaan, a mere speck of inanimate earth, when one life, in God's view, is worth more than many worlds. His word could make them, but the blood of his beloved Son could alone save sinful man from blank oblivion.

If but two sons had been born of Abraham, and he and they had possessed no land or kingdom, and Christ had been born of Jacob, the true gospel would have been just what it now is—good news of "eternal life," and a happy one somewhere. If the Bible had revealed that Jupiter, thirteen hundred times larger than the earth, or, heaven, as most believe, was to be our final home, the "glad tidings" would still be—"Christ became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Heb. 5: 9; Acts 13: 32 and 38: 39.

As to a faith to fit us for baptism, I will only ask—Where in God's book do we find any other faith required than the one confessed by the eunuch—"I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God"? Acts 8: 27.

But the second step taken to establish this theory is, in coming to the New Testament and trying to prove, or rather assuming, that the terms "kingdom," "kingdom of God" and "of heaven," always have one meaning; thus confounding the different senses in which these terms are used, something as the covenants made with Abraham are confounded. But this part I must leave for another article.

Buffalo, N. Y. JACOB BLAIN.

For the World's Crisis.

THE LAST CALL.

BRO. GRANT:—Through your valuable paper I would like to say a few words to its numerous readers. While reading a political paper, my eye rested on a paragraph headed, "The Last call;" in which the men are urged to engage in this terrible war.

Brethren, the Savior is giving us the last call. O let us heed it. His warning, his entreating, his threatening, has sounded in our ears, and now he is making his "last call." Brethren, will you heed it? My heart responds, I will. Brothers and sisters, who are in the christian warfare, do you sometimes feel as though you should faint by the way? If so let the promises of God cheer you. Remember he says, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Does your hope seem long deferred? God has spoken, and it shall be realized. Does it seem as though your trials were greater than you could bear? You "have not yet resisted unto blood striving against sin." Do you sometimes think the price too great? You have eternal happiness and life to lose or gain. Weak one, be of good cheer, for He that is for you is greater "than he that is in the world."

Sinner, there is a God to whom you must give an account. There is a judgment, at which you must appear. There is eternal life and eternal death, one of which you must choose. There are the pleasures of the saved, and the anguish of the lost, and it is for you to take which you will. Dear sinner, choose wisely; choose quickly; for it is "the last call."

Backsliders, you who sounded the alarm to a wicked world, and proclaimed this glorious truth, "Behold the bridegroom cometh." Where are you to-day? Why have you laid down your watch? Why are your harps hung upon the willow? Why have you turned from your first love? O awake to righteousness, that you may shine in the kingdom. Think how this glorious truth once thrilled you with the joys that were unspeakable. Think of the sweet communion you once shared with God's waiting ones. Think of the privations you have suffered, cheerfully suffered for eternal life, and then ask yourself if all this has been in vain? Backslider, what has caused your love to grow cold? Was it the pleasures of this world? They are fleeting. Was it its honors? They are as a bauble. Was it the deceitfulness of riches? What if wealth you have accumulated in a lifetime may be swept away in a moment, and you be thrown upon God's bounty, and be compelled to pray to him for daily bread. Will it then, think you, be more pleasant to think you have forsaken him, and scorned his offers of mercy? Look about you, backslider, I beseech you, and if it be one or all of these things, pray God to remove them. Have you concluded that you were then following cunningly devised fables? Sinners heard you declare your faith in those days, when you sang God's praise, and now they are looking to you. What will you tell them? that you were right? if so, why do you not still serve God, and prepare yourself, and help others to be as pillars in the temple of the living God? Many of you, I have heard with streaming eyes, and heart overflowing, tell of your faith and love in God, and your hope in his speedy coming, when I was a small child; and when I grew old enough to partake of those joys, and learn to prize that faith, there has been sorrow mixed with my joy; sorrow that so many have given up their hope. O backslider, will you be like the foolish virgin? If not, now is the time to trim your lamps and see that they are brightly burning.

Dear ones, my heart pleads with God for you. O, when the terrible wrath of God is poured out on the wicked, I want you sheltered beneath the wings of God's love. After the wail of the lost is borne away on the air, and peace is given from heaven, I want you to be one who shall sing amid the bowers of Eden. I wish to partake with you of the tree of life. I desire to drink with you of the water of life. With you I wish to roam over the plains of paradise, and gather the sweet flowers that will bloom on those immortal shores. That God may bring us into his fold in peace, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

Mannsville, N. Y. D. L. CLARK.

LOOK ON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

Make the most of thy position,
  Grasp the brightest and the best;
This, the present, is thy mission,
  This thy work, thy life, thy zest.

Promptly banish all displeasure,
  Try and realize thy gain;
See thy soul expand, and measure,
  If thou canst, its highest plane.

And remember God is near thee,
  Is thy everlasting friend,
With eternal life to cheer thee,
  In progression without end.

—J. M. Blanchard.

For the World's Crisis.

"THOSE THAT SEEK ME EARLY, SHALL FIND ME."

It is the desire of every intelligent parent, that his children become early instructed in useful knowledge; no pains, no expense are allowed to prevent the accomplishment of this object. And if the child become a proficient in the sciences, or even any branch of them, he is often regarded as a prodigy; the pride, the boast, the idol of the family. Inspired with ambition, and inflated with pride, he feels impatient for the day, when he shall become wise—a prominent member of community. And, had we no promise from the oracles of God, extending beyond the limits of threescore years and ten, such might be the hight of mortal ambition; but how insignificant is all secular wisdom, compared with that which cometh from above, being "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

How important that the young be early taught to discern between temporal wisdom and that which is able to make them wise unto salvation. Many, varied and loud, are the calls of God to the young; it is his essential wisdom, his inspired word, that says to them, "Those that seek me early, shall find me." Prov. 8: 17. This wisdom is to be sought after. "Seek, and ye shall find."—Luke 11: 9. "Seek the Lord while he may be found; call ye upon him while he is near."

Let the young be admonished by these and similar Scriptures, that God has pledged his own glorious perfections through Christ, for the salvation of every soul that earnestly and truly seeks him. But, my young friends, if, like Felix to Paul, you continue to say, "Go thy way for this time," there will come a day when God's Spirit shall take its final flight; when the door of mercy shall be forever closed, and your portion appointed with hypocrites and unbelievers. In view of the abounding wickedness of these last degenerate days, how should our solicitude be awakened for the safety of the children and youth, growing up under almost every influence, militant to the pure religion of Jesus.

How are their moral capacities for ultimate good neglected! How is the responsibility affecting their relation to all within their influence, set aside, while the intellect alone is made the subject of persevering culture.

Now we are not to believe in an overwhelming and general outburst of divine power for the salvation of the young, at this late and evil hour of probation's day, for such a belief is not warranted by Scripture; but the servant of God is not to relax his efforts to restrain and reclaim, for this is the labor of love to which he is called—herein is the hope of Israel, that the parent teach his child by every inducement, to seek early the way of wisdom, the path of peace; to secure a hiding-place from the gathering storm, a rest in the glorious kingdom of God.

Parents, you are individually responsible, and the question is, Will you admonish and persuade your children to build upon the foundation of God, which standeth sure? Then those, to whom you are related by the most endearing ties, may gladly sing:—

"Compared with Christ, in all beside
  No comeliness I see;
The one thing needful, dearest Lord,
  Is to be one with thee."

E. Stoneham, Me. W. A. MANNING.

HOW GRACE CHANGES A MAN.

All changes, truly, are not from bad to good, or good to better. They may be from good to bad, or from bad to worse. Moisture dims the polished blade, and turns its bright steel into dull, red rust; fire changes the sparkling diamond into black coal and gray ashes; disease makes loveliness loathsome, and death converts the living form into a mass of foul corruption. But the peculiarity of grace is this, that like heaven it changes whatever is applied to it into its own nature. For as leaven turns meal into leaven, so divine grace imparts a gracious character to the heart; and this is what I call its assimilating element. Yet let there be no mistake. While the grace of God changes all who are brought in conversion under its influence, it does not impart any new power or passion, but works by giving to those who already have a holy bent; by impressing on them a heavenly character. For example, grace did not make David a poet, or Paul an orator, or John a man of warm affections, or Peter a man of strong impulses and ardent zeal. They were born such.

The grace of God changes no more the natural features of the mind than it does those of the body—as the negro said, it gave him a white heart, but it left him still, to use the language of another, the image of God carved in ebony. Be the meal into which that woman hides the leaven meal of wheat, or meal of barley, it will come from her hands, from the process of leavening, from her fiery oven, cakes of the same grain. For it is not the substance but the character of the meal that is changed. Even so with the effect of grace. It did not give even John his warm affections; but it fixed them on his beloved Master—sanctifying his love. It did not give Dorcas a woman's heart, her tender sympathy with suffering; but it associated charity with piety, and made her a holy philanthropist. It did not give Paul his genius, his resistless logic, and noble oratory, but it consecrated them to the cause of Christ—touching his lips as with a live coal from the altar, it made him such a master of holy eloquence that he swayed the multitude at his will, humbled the pride of kings, and compelled his very judges to tremble. It did not give David a poet's fire and a poet's lyre; but it strung his heart with chords from heaven, and tuned all its strings to the service of religion and the high praises of God. So grace ever works! It assimilates a man to the character of God. It does not change the mental, but stamps it with the divine image; and so assimilates all who have received Christ to the nature of Christ. Unless we have the same mind, more or less developed in us that was in him, the Bible declares that we are none of his.—Dr. Thomas Guthrie.

For the World's Crisis.

REMARKABLE CASE.

All who have had an opportunity of reading the life of the pious Wm. Bramwell, will doubtless recollect the circumstance of the blind boy being healed. The correspondent of a Methodist paper recently traveling in England writes thus:—

"We have since accepted an invitation to visit Harrowgate, where we had the pleasure of spending an hour with Thomas Greensmith, Esq., of whom, in Mr. Sigston's memoir of Bramwell, the following account is given: 'William Greensmith, son of Thomas Greensmith, Watnale, near Nottingham, when about nine years of age, was severely afflicted with scrofulous humors in his eyes, so that he was unable to bear the light even with bandages. Mr. Bramwell was then in the Nottingham circuit, and went in his regular turn to preach at Mr. Greensmith's house. On one of these occasions he remained all night, and previous to his departure the next morning, when his horse was brought to the door, he asked where the boy with sore eyes was. Mrs. Greensmith replied that he was in a dark room. He was called out and stood near Mr. B., who put his hand on the boy's head, and looked upward as in the act of prayer. He then went out, leaving the child, who, as if conscious of some change, pulled off the bandages, looked through the window and asked if Mr. Bramwell was gone. On perceiving that his eyes were healed, all the family were astonished.'

Mr. Wm. Greensmith, whose eyes were thus miraculously restored in answer to the prayer of faith, is now about seventy years of age, and to look upon him one might say, 'His eye is not dim, nor his natural force abated.' I asked him if he could remember the occurrence of Mr. Bramwell's placing his hand upon his head when in the act of supplication. 'O yes! as distinctly as though it were the business of yesterday,' said he."—Com. by A. Ross.

☞ If you would rise in the world, you must not stop to kick at every cur who barks at you as you pass along.

For the World's Crisis.

A MISTAKE.

It is a mistake to suppose that Isaiah 2: 4, and Micah 4: 3, are ever to have a literal fulfillment in having "swords" beaten into "ploughshares," and "spears into pruning-hooks," etc. A careful examination will show clearly that these portions of prophecy are at this very time having their literal fulfillment. Will the reader once more carefully examine Isa. 2: 3–5, and Micah 4: 2–5, with the context?

That what may be called "the last days," in a general sense, commenced with the gospel dispensation, I believe to be true. But the "last days" mentioned in Isa. 2, and Micah 4, must be the very latest of the last, as Isaiah tells us what the Lord will do with the wicked in those days, and Micah tells us what he will do with the righteous at the same time. Isaiah says, "The loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day."—Isa. 2: 17.

If any one will carefully compare the verses 19–21 of this chapter with Rev. 6: 14–17, he will find that the events spoken of refer to "the great day of his wrath." By examining Micah 4: 6–8, we find that "in that day" the Lord "will gather her that is driven out," etc., and he will "reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever." And it is said, "Even the first dominion" shall come again, and "the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem."

Now for a critical examination of Isa. 2: 3–5, and Micah 4: 2–5, and we shall find that what is there recorded is merely a prophecy to show us what "many people" shall say in the last days.

We all know that for the last fifty years, and especially for the last twenty-five years, the popular ministry have been crying "peace and safety," declaring that the time was just at hand when "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." But while one class of people have been saying these things, another class have been doing exactly the reverse of this, as the Lord said they would, as recorded by the prophet Joel:—

"Proclaim this among the Gentiles; Prepare war, wake up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near; let them come up: beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong. Assemble yourselves, and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together round about: thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord."—3: 9–11.

If any one doubts the position I have taken in regard to Isa. 2: 3–5, and Micah 4: 2–5, being what many people shall merely say in the last days, he can determine it by noticing that, after it is said, "Many people shall go and say, Come ye," etc., the first and second person plural are used throughout the entire paragraph, as "ye," "us," "we," and "our"; and all connected with the copulative conjunction, which shows that reference is had to conversation which takes place with the parties present.

I know we find in Micah 4, and the closing part of the fourth verse, it is said, "For the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it"; but when we notice the fifth verse, we find it reads, "For all people will walk every one in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever." And thus, by the continued use of the plural pronouns "we" and "our," in this verse, it proves that it is nothing more than a continuation of what "many nations shall come and say." Therefore they say what is false, when they say the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken as having any other fulfillment than in the sayings of the people. For the Lord only said it as revealing to the prophet what the many nations would say in the last days.

Let us now consider a few examples where the Lord has spoken to us in the same way as in these instances we have just considered. "Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Lord; and he delighteth in them"! Mal. 2: 17.

O, horrid blasphemy! says one. Well, hold a moment, and I will give you a little more. "It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts." "The proud (are) happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered"! Mal. 3: 14, 15.

O, this is too bad! says one. And so I say. But when critically examined, we shall find the Lord said these things, just in the same way that he said what is recorded in Isa. 2: 3–5, and Micah 4: 2–5. For in Mal. 2: 17, it is said:—"Ye have wearied the Lord with your words. Yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Lord," etc. And in the third chapter, and verses fourteen and fifteen, it is said, "Ye have said, It is vain to serve God," etc. Take heed what ye hear!

Peter speaks of a certain class that would "wrest" or pervert the "Scriptures unto their own destruction." And the very next thing which he says is:—"Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory, both now and for ever. Amen."—2 Pet. 3: 17, 18.

O, ye saints of the Most High, we are in the "last days," surely, and if we "hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end," we shall soon be made partakers of Christ, "who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Then, as the prophet Daniel says, "Thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book."

Let us remember that those only are to be delivered whose names shall be found written in the book." Not those who may have had their names written therein at some time previous will be sure of salvation; for we read of certain ones who will not overcome; and of such it is written, "I will blot out his name out of the book of life." And it could not be blotted out if it had never been there.

Let us constantly bear in mind that we are passing through the perils of the last days; and a very striking characteristic of the devil's children is, they will "wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." But on the other hand, a beautiful characteristic of the children of God is, their path is "as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." How safe such a path to walk in, in these times of general darkness. How shall we know that we are in the light, in this illuminated path? "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1: 17. By thy Spirit, O Lord, lead us. Amen. T. M. Preble.

East Weare, N. H.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, May 10, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

☞ Our appointment at Searsport, Me., for May 15th and onward is deferred for the present.

SEND YOUR NAME.

Those who send us communications, and do not let us know their names, must not expect to see their articles in the paper. Please remember this. Let us not be ashamed of our own names.

THE TRY COMPANY.

We are glad to see the names coming in for the PLEDGE of the Try Company. That is right. Form good habits when young, and you will live longer, be more useful and happy. Let us have a large addition of names to the pledge. Come, dear youth, do not hesitate. Join the noble army of those who are resolved not to be conquered by tea, coffee, or a tobacco-box. Save the money and buy some good books, or use it to send some tracts to the poor. What do you say? We imagine we hear many voices speaking, and with a hearty good will say, "We will do it, and here are our names. We will not be ashamed to do right." Welcome, welcome to our cheerful company. We hail your coming with joy. Be firm now, and let none laugh you out of well-doing. May the Lord help you to be good, and be ready for his coming.

THE WAR.

No bright spot yet appears in the terrible war clouds that hang over our nation; but on the contrary, they are assuming a denser blackness; not only in America, but all over the world. Men are becoming discouraged. Those who have cried "peace and safety," stand appalled at the signs of the times. Their prophecies have all failed. The popular lecturers before the various literary societies in our cities and villages, who have spoken of the golden age about to be ushered in, stand aghast at the world's prospective. While they have proposed, the Lord has disposed of things quite differently from what their beautiful essays promised. The best that can be said of them is, we think, that they are "blind leaders of the blind."

We may well cry in earnest, "Come, Lord Jesus,"—"come quickly." Till he appears, we can look for no better times than the present. Let us trust in him, and wait patiently for his coming. Praise the Lord, we are almost home.

"VOICE OF THE WEST."

We are pleased with the "Voice of the West, edited and published by Bro. J. V. Himes, at Buchanan, Mich. It is a healthy paper;—we mean a paper that is exerting a healthy influence. Bro. Himes is in earnest about his Master's work, trying to awaken men and women to prepare for the coming kingdom. He is enjoying good health, and loves to spend his strength in spreading the glad tidings that Jesus is coming soon to rouse the dead, and end the christian's long night of weeping.

SEWING MACHINES.

As there is a great variety of sewing machines in the market, and almost every manufacturer is claiming that his invention is the best, it becomes quite a perplexing question to settle, which is really the best among the many, all things considered. After considerable inquiry and some experience, we do not hesitate to give our preference for Wheeler and Wilson's.

EXTRAVAGANCE.

The extravagance of the people at the North, at the present time, is without a parallel. One would think, judging from their lavish expenditures for costly merchandise, that our country was in the highest possible degree of prosperity, with a large surplus in her treasury. Pride and fashion were never so conspicuous since America was settled, as at the present hour, and they are still increasing. So it was in Sodom, when Lot left it.

When speaking of the extravagance in one of our cities, a writer says:—

"A man builds a marble stable on the rear of his lot, at a cost of eighty thousand dollars, and fits up a private theatre over it. Another pays eight thousand dollars for a pair of horses to drive on the road for his pleasure; and many give from fifteen hundred to three thousand dollars for the same object. Another provides a dinner for a dozen friends —rejecting the old superstition of the unlucky thirteenth—and this simple dinner costs one thousand dollars.

A children's party is given, in an up-town house, where every child is clad entirely in dresses imported from Paris. An American citizen purchases a house for over one hundred thousand dollars, and tears it down, to rebuild upon its site one yet more costly."

"What shall be the end of these things?" The progress is great; but to what result? Is it towards eternal life, or eternal death? Salvation, or destruction? The answer is easily given. The time has come, when all who wish to be saved must come out from the world, and be separate. "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not the friendship of the world is at enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God."—James 4: 4. Let us be wise, heed the instruction, and keep "pure in heart."

WAR PREACHING.

A Methodist minister writes us as follows:

"I can't endure war preaching, war singing, war praying, any longer." He also says, —"As I understand it, the Second Advent church requires christian character only as a test of membership. For a long time past I have seriously thought of changing my church relation; but have been prevented from doing so from the fact that I could not subscribe to all the dogmas of any church. But if I am correct above, that the only requisite is a sound christian character for admission to the Advent church, then my mind is settled at once; there shall be my home."

We find many who are becoming tired of "war preaching," "singing" and "praying." Even the unconverted are disgusted with it. They say they hear enough about war during the week, without listening to it from the pulpit on the Sabbath.

We never heard of a war sermon that produced any good effects; but have known of much evil caused by such preaching. We hope our Bro. in the M. E. church will have courage to stand up boldly for the right and leave the consequences with the Lord. Now is the time for living christians to speak out boldly against the sins of the age, not seeking to save a good name among the enemies of the Lord.

We would say in addition to the foregoing, that this Bro. is a firm believer, as he expresses it, in "the blessed coming of Jesus." His eyes are open to the "signs of the times." May he be willing to follow the Lord in all things, and meet the saints at the marriage of the Lamb.

MATT. 25: 26.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please give an exposition of Matt. 25: 46? Does the original teach temporary or eternal punishment?

Yours in hope of eternal life,

GEO. E. COLSON.

In answer to the foregoing, we would say, the word rendered "eternal," aionion, denoting the duration of the future life of the righteous, is the same one in the original that is rendered "everlasting" in the same verse, and used to represent the duration of the punishment of the wicked. If the latter is limited, we think the promised life must be also.

This verse does not specify what the punishment shall be, but gives us its duration. It is eternal. Other scriptures tell us positively that the punishment is death.

As the punishment is death, the question arises, when does it begin? Certainly not till life is extinct. Then how long will it continue? As long as they remain dead. Suppose a man is condemned to be deprived of life for one month; how long would his punishment last? Every one would answer, for one month. Suppose he remains dead twelve months, how long would his punishment be? One year long. If he should remain dead ten times as long, then his punishment would continue ten years. Suppose after he dies "the second death," he should remain dead eternally, what would be the duration of his punishment? We leave the candid to answer.

SCHEMES OF NAPOLEON.

The world is now pretty well convinced that Napoleon is playing no boy's game with the governments of this world. His are not movements made in a careless manner, but with a definite object in view; and all things seem to be favoring its accomplishment. It is no less than an effort to get the control of the political and ecclesiastical power of this planet. We think he is Satan's chief instrument to accomplish such a result. It is well known that he is a consulter of familiar spirits. Every thing antichristian appears to be drifting under his influence. He already stands on a dizzy height, and when he falls it is to be into perdition.

The following from the Vienna Presse is an interesting item of news:—

"The Mexican monarchy is intended not only to react against the Anglo-Saxon race and the democratic ideas of Northern America, but also against American Protestantism. Hence the immense enthusiasm with which the clerical party of both hemispheres has welcomed the advent of Maximilian I.

By the erection of this throne Napoleon III. has rendered an immense service to the church, and this service is so highly appreciated by the court of Rome that important concessions have been made therefor to the French Government.

In view of the advantages that the court of Rome anticipates from Mexico, it has appeared necessary to have itself represented there by a personality, decided and energetic. The Pope has therefore chosen (in accordance with the advice of Antonelli) as Nuncio to Mexico, the Minister of War of Rome—Monsignor de Morode—who on this occasion will be made a Cardinal. As Morode was not on good terms with the French, it is thought, too, that his distant appointment will be satisfactory to the court of the Tuileries.

But a greater concession made to France will be the speedy elevatian at the approaching consistory of the Abbe Lucien Bonaparte, long a resident of Rome and the camerıere of the Pope, to the rank of Cardinal.

The Prince Lucian would then be eligible to the Papacy, and if on the death of Pius IX. can thus await the end of his days in peace. If a Bonaparte mounts the Pontifical throne, the Papacy and its temporal possessions are safe. We must say we are now witnessing very extraordinary things. An Austrian Archduke ascends the throne erected by a French Emperor, and the Emperor of Mexico becomes, by the force of circumstances, the mediator between the Tuileries and the Vatican."

PROGRESS OF THE AGE.

The following account of affairs in Springfield, Mass., shows some signs of the progress of this age. Notwithstanding the rapid increase of crime, in all forms, there are some teachers so blind as to tell the people that the world is actually growing better. If it were so, the Bible would not be true, for that declares it will grow "worse and worse:"—

"Springfield is no worse than other cities of its size, but the growth here of intemperance, and the licentiousness and debauchery always attending it, is absolutely appalling. Only a year or two ago it was a very rare thing to see a drunken man in our streets. Now you may meet staggering men at any time of the day, and the shocking sight of a drunken woman is not uncommon. Three or four years ago the drinking saloons sought concealment, and their customers went for their drams slyly and by stealth. Now the business is as open and bold as any honest traffic, and men do not consider it a disgrace to be found drinking at a bar. Indeed, so far gone are we in demoralization on this subject, that young men of fair standing in the community think it rather reputable than otherwise to boast that they were 'on a drunk' upon such a night and incapable of business the next day, and the young man who declines a drink is considered singular and puritanical. To increase the temptations to this excess, there are drinking clubs, in which young men, who would not be seen in a dram shop take their first lessons in convivial intoxication, and are put on an easy and quick road to street drunkenness and the gutter. Already the terrible evils attending this vice are beginning to show themselves. No woman can go unattended into the streets in the evening without exposure to insults from half drunken men and boys, and almost every night the howlings of drunken men on Main street make one think the inmates of some mad house have been turned loose upon us. But these outward signs of the great evil are nothing to the misery which it causes daily in hundreds of our households, and if things go on from bad to worse a few years longer, there will be a path of social and moral desolation through this community as marked and frightful as that left by a tornado. The bereavement and loss caused by our share in the war will be too small for notice compared with the more fearful ruin wrought among us by intemperance. This is no rhetorical exaggeration—would that it were—but every man with his eyes open can see that free drinking is rapidly bringing us to a condition full of the most terrible public and private calamities."

ANOTHER STORM GATHERING.

The people are becoming more and more weary of all restraint. They wish to do just as they please; and if they cannot, they are ready to head a revolutionary party. And when party feeling is as strong as at the present time, with a continued increase from year to year, what can we expect but "perilous times?" Every thing seems to be preparing for a general break up in chaotic confusion.

Says the Times New York correspondent:—

"Nothing but a success on the part of Grant will preserve the peace of the North; and in this city of New York there are elements of disorder and discontent, smoldering under a very thin cover of seeming tranquility, which may at any time burst forth into a devasting conflagration. The next outbreak in this city will not be a riot but an insurrection—not a mob of thieves and rowdies, but an organized multitude, under definite leadership, for a definite object."

For the World's Crisis.

THE POPULAR CLERGY OF OUR DAY.

NUMBER THREE.

"From whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence even of your lusts that war in your members?"

This, reader, is the language of James, acknowledged throughout Christendom to have been a disciple of Him who was called the Prince of Peace. For eighteen hundred years it has been used by those who profess to be treading in the pathway clearly defined by Christ when here on earth. And the clergy of our day will quote it o'er, and yet at the same time are among the first in the whole Union to support wars and fightings. All through the length and breadth of our land temples are scattered in which ministers profess to preach a gospel of forgiveness to millions of beings who profess to believe in that gospel, and at the same time they are robbing their own children, binding millions of their own countrymen in slavery, and butchering their own neighbors by hundreds to wrest the soil from them, as did the white man when he came to this country and was hospitably fed by the red men of the wilderness.

Nothing can be more disgustingly ridiculous than the high profession of this nation compared with its practices. I do not wonder there are infidels among us, but am surprised there are not more. Nothing can be more destructive to human life than the teachings of the clergy of our day. Witness. They say God commanded men to multiply and replenish the earth, and in the very same discourse they tell us that after man had multiplied in obedience to that command, Christ snatches the children out of his Father's hand away from the evil to come. Is it at all surprising that many scoff at christianity, and laugh at the Bible, when they behold the profession and practice of modern christians—"the popular clergy of our day"—who pretend to preach the gospel of peace, invoke an infernal being in the name of Christ to prosper their armies, and enable them to mow down their fellow men on the field of battle? and the members of the churches are the first to feed with delight on published accounts of slaughtered thousands; and while they profess to pray for all men, they give thanks to a deity of carnage for their success in human slaughter. The same guns that were fired in lamentation at the death of one who was lauded as a patriot and christian, now boom forth their joy at the murder of thousands.

How strange and incongruous is this! It is no wonder that the heathen are dumb-founded at the teachings of the missionaries sent among them. How strange! Christians professing to believe that transgressors who die in their sins are doomed to wail eternally in hell, can cast their votes to send forth armies to sweep those transgressors into hell in winrows; and all to obtain land to which they have no right, or the fancied honor of a nation that has waded for nearly ninety years through the blood of murdered Indians.

It is said by some, jubilees are held in hell. If so, what howls of fiendish delight must ring around the red-hot walls of that fabulous, foaming pit! What bonfires must be kindled up among the fresh arrivals of souls sent down by thousands in Christian America! What joy must irradiate the countenances of the infernals as they are told how the President, by the power vested in him by wise rulers of this Christian nation, has called for 50,000, then 75,000, and so on, to go forth and reap a harvest of souls to be cast into eternal burnings! But I forbear, lest our purgatory become too hot even for the lovers of flames.

Let every man examine himself, and see how far he is concerned in this business, remembering that all who support this government of murder, man-stealing, robbery, oppression and injustice, are participators in her crime.

Query. If one Bible will save five hundred heathen from endless misery, how many Bibles must the nation need to save it from purgatory? Will some of the "popular clergy" inform us, and how long it will take to christianize it in the progression it is now making?

J. L. HERSEY.

Tuftonboro, Mass.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to May 3d, $1005.77

Henry Hart pd.	2.00
L. Irish pd.	.50
E. B. Russell pd.	.20
J. H. Downing pd.	.50
J. H. F. Varney pd.	.50
A. W. Sibley pd.	.50
P. C. R. pd.	.50
Miss C. Prince pd.	1.00
S. H. Rice pd.	.25
Mary Sears pd.	.25
Jas. M. Weston pd.	2.00
Mrs. W. B. Johnson pd.	.25
A friend pd.	1.00
Ella A. Durgin pd.	.20
John Field pd.	1.00
Ira Grinnell pd.	1.00
J. Anderson pd.	2.00
Mrs. R. H. Agan pd.	2.00
E. A. Bickford pd.	.50
Mrs. F. P. Smith pd.	.25
E. Waters pd.	.25
Sr. S. Manning pd.	1.00
I. Andrew pd.	2.00
J. T. Howland	2.00

For the World's Crisis.

SOCIAL HYMNS—Original and Selected.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Price 10 cents single, $1.00 per dozen, $6.00 per hundred. Containing 64 pages, and 83 choice hymns; paper covers; just the thing needed for social meetings, campmeetings, protracted meetings, family worship, and also in the church. It is cheap. It is portable. A preacher can carry Hymn books enough to supply a whole congregation, and if he loses some of them, it costs but little to replace them. They will sell rapidly, no doubt; will interfere with no other book, and will supply the lack of others till a better one can be obtained. The poetry and sentiment are solemn and devotional, and some choice hymns are now published for the first time. The publisher has long felt the need of such a book, while holding meetings about the country, and this will, it is hoped, answer the present purpose. Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price. Copies for examination sent to preachers FREE. Address orders to the publisher, H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

May 3d, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Now is the time to get new subscribers for the "Young Pilgrim." Many of the Sunday Schools which suspend during the cold winter months will now re-organize, and other schools which have gone through the winter will receive new recruits as the warm season comes on. Thousands who do not now take the Young Pilgrim may be induced to do so by a little effort. It has prospered finely,—far beyond our expectations. It is now to be published twice each month. This will please all the little ones who now read it, and will be a greater inducement to others to subscribe for it.

The new "S. S. Question Book" is soon to appear. This will add a new interest to our schools. We know not how excellent it will be, but expect it will be a valuable book, as it has been got up by Bro. H. F. Carpenter, who has an interest in the little folks, and knows what they need, and what the Bible furnishes for them. Five thousand copies of this book should be sold and used in our schools. Let us sow the good seed of the kingdom.

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE DAY STAR."

We would say to our many inquiring brethren and sisters, that we hope to get the first number of our paper out in May, or early in June. It will be issued monthly for the first quarter, after that, if the Lord opens the way, we may publish it semi-monthly, or weekly. We purpose, at present, to publish two thousand copies of the first number. It will contain our views on the ending of the great prophetic periods, our present relations towards the governments of earth, with our letter of our alien resolution to the State Legislature of Pennsylvania, and their action thereon;—getting rid of the mark of the beast, and his protection, by deeding the wilderness of Celesta, and improvements, to Almighty God; also what we understand by the sealing of the first fruits, with numerous letters from the scattered pilgrims; together with our salutatory, and circumstances under which we are placed.

We will publish all scriptural objections that may arise in the minds of our brethren against our views, and our course of action; and if we cannot remove the stumbling blocks, in a spirit of meekness, and demonstrate our course by the approval of God, we will honestly admit we are self-deceived. Our faith is not simply theoretical, but acted out; and must speedily be demonstrated to be either right or wrong. We have no party spirit to build up. We believe the time has come when God calls upon his people to prove him, (see Mal. 3: 11), and we mean to do it. Any lovers of our Lord's appearing, who desire a paper issued on the auspices of an active faith, without price, will be considered subscribers, by paying the postage, which is but three cents per quarter, if prepaid.

P. E. ARMSTRONG, ED.

Celesta, Sullivan Co., Pa., April 26th, 1864.

SPEAK OFTEN ONE TO ANOTHER.

It is recorded as a prophetic history, "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another." This declaration discloses both the duty of christians, and their true temper when in the high exercise of godliness. But this, like many other religious duties, is often neglected by the professed disciples of Jesus. Still when duly discharged it is a source of very high enjoyment. By neglecting to converse with one another, christians of the same church often become alienated in their mutual feelings, jealous of each other, and disposed to feel that they are undervalued by their brethren and sisters; cold and inactive in Christ's service, and disheartened in their efforts to grow in grace and save souls. One of the greatest evils, except immorality, in a church, is that members do not know each other as christians. As men of the world and members of civil society, and in relation to secular business, they may be well acquainted, while they are almost entire strangers as christians. Hence they do not enter into each other's sorrows and joys, and are consequently of most destitute of those endearing sympathies that should bind together closely the members of Christ's family.

If the members of a church would be faithful to visit each other for christian conversation and improvement, they would soon perceive their mutual benefit to be very great. Their love to each other would abound, their christian graces thrive; if they had become backslidden, they would be revived; if they had neglected to warn sinners, they would awake to a faithful discharge of this duty; the clouds of darkness would disappear, and the sunshine of joy, and hope, and spiritual courage, break forth upon their souls; and their growth in grace, their spiritual enjoyment and usefulness would be vastly increased.

Rochester Observer.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. Anderson.

BRO. GRANT:—It was but a few weeks ago that I was made acquainted by your old friend, Geo. Sprague, formerly of Vermont, but now of this city, with the fact that there was such a person as you, such a paper as the Crisis, or such a society as the Christian Publication Society. And although this may not be very complimentary to my character for literary research, yet such is the fact. When, however, you reflect that like the hinder wheel of a wagon, which always follows in the track of the forewheel, so the minds of ministers are imbued with the theology of their denomination, and they follow in the theological track of their order, and even the papers and periodicals which they receive scarcely deign to notice such a heterodox society as yours. I say when you consider this, you will make some allowance for my benightedness.

Now it has occurred through some means or other, that I have read Whately's Future State, all of Hudson's works, and Dobney on Future Punishment, and have abopted the opinions contained therein; and besides, for twenty years, have been a firm believer in "That blessed hope" of "the glorious appearing of the great God, our Savior Jesus Christ;" and although not a materialist, yet I may claim some affinity with you.

For years, the ministers of this city have met every Monday morning for the discussion of some doctrinal or theological subject. The one we have been discussing for about six weeks is "the immortality of the human soul." All argued on the affirmative except another brother with myself, and both of us argued from the genesis of man, from the absence in the sacred Scriptures of any expressions which, even by implication, predicate the immortality of men as a race; from the fact that immortal life is only offered and secured to the sinner through Christ; and lastly, from the terms, death, second death, perish, lost, destruction, etc., applied to the final destiny of the unbeliever, that therefore his doom can only be annihilation,—I can with all candor say, that although the numbers are with our opponents, yet the argument is with us.

Your brother, J. ANDERSON.

Detroit, Mich.

From Bro. L. C. McKinstry.

BRO. GRANT:—The people are stirred up about your coming here, and the doctrines we hold. The brethren do not keep their light hid under a bushel, but "let it so shine that others see their good works. Tracts are being distributed continually, and special efforts are made to send some such as "Soul," "Spirit," "What is Man?" "Immortality through Christ alone," "Ghostology," etc., to the ministers and other prominent men, and they of course find it necessary to thunder out their maledictions from the pulpits, though they seldom attempt an answering argument.

Sometimes attempts are made at ridicule, which is used in defense of a poor cause for want of something better. For instance, not long since a meeting was held in one of the churches here in behalf of the Sunday School of that church. One of the Sunday School teachers owns a magic lantern, which is sometimes brought out for the purpose of exhibiting Bible scenes and others, what some of "others" are you will know, when I tell you that on the evening I speak of, the audience was treated to a group of persons, one which was intended to represent Bro. Grant, when suddenly there was a change, and the heads of beasts were substituted for the human heads. Some excitement was caused when one of the members of the church, called a very good man, arose and told the children that if they would keep quiet he would tell them what the picture meant. He said, "That is the picture of a very bad man, who came to Montreal and taught the people that men were no more than beasts." Some of their better members were disgusted by the operation.

So you see we receive encouraging notices, but we are not at all discouraged. Our meetings are held every Lord's day in the hall at 28 Craig Street, and there is a disposition on the part of some to hear and treasure up the truth. Bro. Dow is expected to be with us May 8th, and onward for a few evenings, and June 9th, you are expected, and we hope to keep the truth before the people.

I do not need to ask you to pray for us, for I know you do. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Montreal, C. W.

From J. A. Pooler.

BRO. GRANT:—My first acquaintance with you was some six or seven years ago, when in the "Town Hall," Rutland, Vt., you planted the standard of truth. It was then and there my heart first received, in all its beauty and glory, the "gospel of the kingdom." Since then the Advent faith has been my chief joy;" though circumstances have seemed to conspire against me, and drive me away from all my kindred and brethren of "like precious faith," and keep me in exile all these long years; still my trust has been in my heavenly Father. He has been faithful to his promises, and has never left me nor forsaken me. Though alone, with no Advent brethren, no pure gospel preached, no vital pity manifesting itself, still, I try to "keep the faith," and "watch" for the Master. The Crisis is a great comfort to me in all the trials of my pilgrimage. It is like the clusters of Eschol, fragrant and beautiful with the glories of the promised land.

May God bless you in the noble work in which you are engaged. The light must shine. I send you a notice of a "big gun" our opposers have recently been forging. Dr. C., D. D., is one of the strongest men in the Methodist denomination. It rejoices me to see that though we are few in numbers, they consider us formidable. Hence they "are waking up the mighty men," and preparing for the conflict. Let it come. God's eternal word will stand, though heavens fall. Whatever may come, dear brother, trust in God. In all probability I shall never see you in the flesh, or grasp your hand, or hear your voice; but I hope to meet you very soon, with all that look, and sigh, and pray for the speedy coming of our Savior and our eternal King.

Your brother in Christ,

Vinton Station, O. JOHN A. POOLER.

From Bro. G. D. Hardegg.

BRO. GRANT:—Having in mind to visit America, sooner or later, in order to concert with the believers of prophecy there, I think it fit to seek formally for intelligence by writing, that I may come without delay to business in personal meeting.

The Adventists seem to be of the opinion, as those seen by the Crisis of 1st and 8th of March, that the two witnesses, Rev. 11, are the Old and New Testaments. In the German Temple we have the following idea of the progression of the events:

The secret of God, Rev. 10., must be accomplished in our days. This will be performed by the efforts of the believers, principally of the two witnesses, who are men according to the text. Their place of action is Jerusalem. These being slain, or killed by the beast will be gathered at Armageddon in Palestine, and destroyed by the personal appearing of the Lord Jesus. Upon this follows the first resurrection, the millennium and fulfillment of the prophecy of Ezekiel respecting the temple, the capital, and the holy land.

This contemplation we propose to the Adventists, as a basis of intelligence with the German temple. For the information of the readers of the Crisis I add, that the German temple has existed since 1861, as an organized congregation, with a leading committee, a bishop, elders, and evangelists; the whole about three thousand souls. Their organ is called the German Watch-tower. Our "confession of faith" I sent about three months ago. Yours in Christ, G. D. HARDEGG.

Kirschenhardthof, in Wurttemberg, Germany, April 4th, 1864.

From Bro. A. G. Shockey.

BRO. GRANT:—According to my order, the Crisis has, for about three weeks, quit coming to me. A man cannot always know the inconvenience of being without an article, until he has lost it. This is the very condition I am in with respect to the Crisis. As I am without it, I now feel the need of it. It is all the preacher I have. The many valuable articles it contains are not lost for a trifle. As I said in my previous letter, its correspondents are strangers to me. I should like it better, if it were otherwise. But I like it anyhow. Now if you are willing to trust me for the two dollars during the year, let the Crisis come. I want it. I trust I can spare the money before the year closes. Yours in hope of immortality at the coming of the Lord Jesus, ALBERT G. SHOCKEY.

Waveland, Ind.

[We send it gladly.—ED.]

BRO. W. NICHOLS, North Searsport, Me., writes:—

"I wish you to bring a small pocket Bible for Mr. L——, who has been a Spiritualist medium, but last Saturday evening, at a lyceum on the question, "Man is immortal," told them he had been a Spiritualist medium, and had believed it, and thought the Bible taught it, but on examining the Bible had utterly failed to find any proof of it; but on the other hand, he had found abundance of proof that man was mortal, and that there was no life after this present life, except through the resurrection of the dead. He told them that, as he was a sinner, they might tell him that he could not understand the Bible; but he must differ with them; that he read that Jesus said he came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance; and he was satisfied that sinner as he was, it was made for him to understand.

He told them that whatever he might say, on that question, was the sentiment of his heart. He then made a very able defense on the negative. Mr. L. is a young man, twenty-five to thirty years of age, one of our best school teachers, of more than common ability, and with practice would make a very effective and fine speaker. I hope and pray he will yet get converted.

BRO. GEO. WIGHTMAN, Plainfield, Ill., writes:—

"I have heard a few lectures by Bro. Smith, of Oswego, who spoke in our neighborhood a few times two years ago. I am a member of the Baptist church here, am of course opposed in my views. Our minister last summer told me he had rather take the views of the Infidel, than mine. In speaking on the destruction of the sinner this spring, after laboring in our district in a revival some two weeks, where some twenty professed conversion, I laboring with him as best I could, in my poor way, he was constrained to apologize, and say that he had been examining that view, and would say that, I holding that view, had as much reason, and as many incentives to labor for the spread of the gospel as others had. I do wish that those that have lately believed here might be instructed in the whole truth; but the truth is unpopular, and few seek after it. I will try and do my duty, so that the skirts of my garments may be clear of the blood of the lost at the coming of my Savior."

BRO. C. D. WOODRUFF, Southington, Ct., writes:—

"There is considerable interest in Wallingford. Yesterday I was there, and some eight or ten arose for prayers, and one man, who has formerly been a member of the Baptist church, arose among the number. He gave in a testimony that was good. One young man arose and expressed a desire to lead a different life, and meet us in the kingdom with all the redeemed. Others expressed similar desires, and the work is going on."

SR. C. E. HAZEN, Lord's Bridge, Conn., writes:—

"I accidentally met with a copy of your paper a few days since,—The World's Crisis, —and being somewhat interested in it, I propose subscribing for three months. The second advent of Christ is a matter that I have never seriously considered. I am a member of the Congregational church, do not think it wisdom to be carried about by every wind of doctrine; yet I am "open to conviction," and willing to receive the truth. I believe in the millennium, but am not fully persuaded that a personal reign of Christ is to be at that time."

BRO. J. ANDERSON, Detroit, Mich., writes: "Truth, in this world, has had ever a hard battle to fight; but she will be victorious at last. Strange though it be, yet it is true, that the ministers of religion have generally been foremost in opposing any truth which seemed to conflict with what they call orthodoxy. They judge of any doctrine outside of their theological circle, not by how it accords with the Bible, but how it accords with their creed. On the subject of the future destiny of man, the ministers of this State, generally, are under a theological cloud, and how dense this is, you can easily imagine. Yet there is a glimmering of light in some directions; and I myself can 'see through a glass darkly.' How much reason have we to cry as did the Psalmist, 'O send out thy light and thy truth.' I mean to disseminate your tracts among our ministers generally.

With prayer for much success in your labors, and with fraternal greetings, I am your brother," etc.

Obituaries.

DAVID TENNEY.

Died in South Reading, Mass., of heart disease, March 7th, 1864, Bro. David Tenney, aged eighty years, three months and thirteen days.

Bro. Tenney was born in York, Me., where he lived until twenty-one years of age, when he came to South Reading, where he lived until his death. At the age of twenty he gave his heart to the Lord, and united himself with the Christian Baptists, with whom he remained as a bright and useful member until 1843, when he united with the Advent Church of South Reading. In the fall of 1842, at the Salem campmeeting, he embraced the truth of Christ's speedy coming, and came out a firm and decided advocate of the gospel of Christ's kingdom, embracing the literal resurrection of the dead, the promises of God made to Abraham and his seed, the immortality of the saints at the first resurrection, and the final destruction of all God's enemies in the second death.

In 1812, he joined himself with a class of soldiers known as "minute men." He immediately procured all the necessary equipments, including every thing, even to blankets, and such medicines as he or his friends might need, in case they were called into service. These were all rolled up together and placed at the head of his bed, ready at the first note of alarm to appear in his uniform, armed and equipped for the defense of his country. This was characteristic of the man in his christian life. Without a moment's warning, he is suddenly prostrated with a fatal disease. Friends gathered around, but he asked none to pray that life might be spared him, or that the terrors of death might be banished; but without hesitation, exclaims, "This is my last sickness." "My peace is made with God." "The sleep of death will soon bring sweet peace to my soul." During his sickness, of only one week, he would often exclaim to those coming to see him, "I'm almost home."

For the last twenty years of his life, at least, he has been a strong advocate of peace. Always zealous in the service of Christ, punctual at meeting, fervent and instant in prayer, always exhorting the children of God to live a pure, holy, and devoted life; and when told that he was dying, and was asked if he had any word to leave, his reply was, —"No, except to my children," (who stood around him,) and then says;—"As my last words, if my example is worthy of imitation, remember it when I am gone." Thus dies one, who not only professed, but lived in the service of God sixty years, fifty-nine of which were spent in South Reading. He leaves a companion, children, and many friends, who, together with the church of South Reading, deeply feel and mourn his loss. There was preaching at the funeral service from the words of Christ in John 14: 1–3, embracing the sleep and resurrection of the dead, together with the coming of Christ to gather his saints unto his kingdom.

H. K. FLAGG.

EMMA I. JENNESS.

Died at Alton, N. H., March 28th, 1864, at the residence of her brother-in-law, Allen Varney, Emma I. Jenness, wife of Wm. Jenness, of Rochester, N. H., aged thirty-one years.

Thus another home is darkened. A husband, a father, brothers, and an only sister, and other friends, feel truly a cloud is over them. She who ever brought sunshine with her presence, has gone out from them to return no more. She was baptized eight years since by Eld. J. Spinney, since which time she has been in sympathy with the truth. Through all her sickness and suffering she earnestly wished to live for the sake of dear ones around her, but never once expressed a fear for the future. She was a home-loving, peace-making, good and virtuous woman. one of the choice ones of earth, possessing a warmth of affection rarely equalled.

Not far in the future the life-giving cry will be made, "Come forth." Then will mountains and islands, hills and vales, all the beautiful and bright spots of earth, with its dens and caves, and darkest recesses, and the sea too, give up their dead, and our loved and lost be restored.

"Not in stillness and sadness again shall we meet,
Not marble and wan is the face we shall greet,
But her dark eyes will beam with the brightness of old,
And her countenance shine with pleasures untold.
No more wasting of form, no more sinking away;
How these dark hours will fade in the joys of that day."

We carried Emma to the home of her childhood, and left her among the green hills she loved so well. The friends of early days met and assisted us, freely offering their sympathy and tears. We also thank the friends at Alton, who, although the deceased was a stranger among them, kindly offered aid and sympathy in hours of affliction.

Funeral sermon by Eld. Joseph Spinney. Text, Heb. 6: 19.

WM. W. GREEN.

Fell asleep in Green Garden, Will Co., Ill., March 3d, 1864, after a short but severe illness, Bro. Wm. Wallace Green, aged twenty-five years.

Bro. Wallace was one of those rare ones, whom to know is to love. He leaves an affectionate companion and two little ones to mourn his loss. The love and affection which bound the dear family together, of which Wallace was the staff, is rarely to be met with in these days, in the which the apostle says, "men shall be without natural affection." The love and care which he manifested for his parents, even after he had a family of his own to care for, won for him the esteem of those who knew him.

When the glorious truth of "no life out of Christ" was proclaimed in his hearing, his investigating mind quickly perceived its beauty, and its importance, in its bearing upon the present and future condition of the human family, and with joy he received the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, in which we hope soon to greet him again. The Crisis was chosen as his religious paper, and he was a firm believer of the truths it advocates. The evidences which he has left, that he was accepted of God, are not limited to the last hours of suffering through which he passed; but, like a golden chain, span the whole period of his christian experience. May the Father of the fatherless, and the widow's Judge, comfort this deeply afflicted family. Words of comfort were administered to the mourning ones by Elder N. Johnson, from Rom. 8: 18.

C. W. SMITH.

SOPHIA P. STRONG.

Also, March 31st, 1864, Sophia P., wife of James M. Strong, aged thirty-seven years.

She embraced Christ in early years, and went as far as baptism, and shrunk at the cross, and lived rather in a backslidden state until the death of the little boy, when there was a sudden change in all her ways, and she met death with composure; bade us all good-by, separately, and fell asleep in Jesus until the resurrection morn; when, if faithful, I hope to meet them beyond the reach of sickness, sorrow, pain, or death.

Funeral services of both by Bro. Jonathan Ashley, of the Christian order. First text from Job 19: 21; second from 2 Kings 20: 1.

JAMES M. STRONG.

WM. WILSON.

Died in Albany, N. Y., April 26th, Bro. William C. Wilson, aged forty-four years.

Bro. Wilson embraced the doctrine of the speedy coming of the Savior more than twenty years ago, and has shared the joys, sorrows and disappointments of those looking for his return. He was attacked about a year ago with a lingering disease, of which he died. He leaves a devoted and faithful wife and children to mourn his loss. May the God of the widow and fatherless protect and comfort them. The church here deeply feel his loss, as there is no one to fill his place. The thought seems too painful to endure that we no more, in this life, shall join with him in songs of praise, or listen to his earnest exhortations and instructions concerning the kingdom of God. A few hours before his death, being sensible that his end was near, he sent for a few of his friends to give some directions about his affairs. He seemed joyful, and confident of his acceptance in Christ, and more like one ready to start on a short journey than one just to close his eyes on all earthly things. He was confident that, in a very little while, he would awake in the likeness of his Savior; and we long for the time when the groaning creation shall be delivered into the glorious liberty of the sons of God, and instead of sorrow and pain have songs and everlasting joy.

WM. NICHOLS.

FREEMAN O. RING.

Death has visited the house of Bro. Henry M. and Sr. Sarah Ring, of Yarmouth, Me., and torn from their fond embrace their dear son, Freeman O. Ring, who after a few days of extreme illness, fell asleep, April 16th, aged fourteen years, three months.

Freeman was ever a kind and obedient son, and during his sickness gave good evidence that he loved Jesus, and knew by experience the joys of the "great salvation." His end was peaceful, and the deeply afflicted parents are comforted by the blessed hope that "soon he will awake to greet them in their "own Eden home." May the Lord sustain the bereaved ones, and help us all to be ready for the "Evergreen shore." R. R. YORK.

CHAS. S. LIBBY.

Died in Newark, Vt., Charles S. Libby, aged forty years.

Bro. Libby had been a believer in the speedy coming of Christ for a number of years; although, like too many others, he had not publicly confessed with his mouth what he believed in his heart. He had just bought a farm in Newark, where he lived only one week. He was brought to Tuftonborough, N. H., where he sleeps by the side of his first wife. He leaves a wife and children to mourn. May God bless them. By his request, the writer endeavored to comfort the friends from Rev. 14: 13.

T. W. PIPER.

EDWIN MILLER.

Died at North Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 23d, of congestion of the lungs, Edwin, only son of Joseph and Lois Miller, aged five months and twenty-four days.

Words of comfort were given to the bereaved parents and friends by Bro. C. W. Low, from Jer. 31: 15–17. We hope the loss sustained by the parents may be the means of bringing them nearer than ever to God and his blessed word for comfort, and they at last be permitted to meet their little one in the morning of the resurrection.

J. T. ONGLEY.

CHARLOTTE HERN.

Died in Freedom, N. H., Nov. 17th, 1863, Charlotte Hern, aged thirty-one years.

Our dear sister fell asleep in Jesus with a firm hope of soon being raised with God's dear saints, to die no more. She leaves a husband who deeply mourns the loss of an affectionate wife; also a large circle of relatives and acquaintances mourn the loss of one they loved; but with the blest assurance that she will be raised immortal at the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. L. J. L.

ANDREW J. STRONG.

Died in Hartford, Vt., Dec. 11th, 1853, of membraneous croup, after a painful illness of two days, Andrew James, only son of James M. and Sophia P. Strong, aged six years, five months and nine days.

Andrew was a good boy, and beloved by all who knew him; of a mild disposition, quick to learn and was far before many of riper years; but the enemy death has him in his iron grasp, and will hold him till the archangel's trump shall call the sleeping saints to arise, when he will bloom in immortal vigor in the kingdom of God.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool April 23d, Queenstown 24th.

Garibaldi quitted London the 22d, and proceeded to the residence of the Dowager Duchess Sutherland near Maidenhead, where he would remain in retirement for a few days, embarking for Caprera on the 26th inst. He breakfasted with a party of Americans at the United States Consul's on the 2d, and expressed himself warmly in favor of the United States in their struggle with slave power. He said he would go there at once and tender his services if they were needed, but he was glad to learn that they were not.

The Danish news is confined to additional details of the fall of Duppel. Nothing new had transpired. There has been no movement of importance since the King of Prussia visited the troops engaged at Duppel. Other continental news unimportant.

A letter from Rome mentions that all the jewels and the gold crown of the statue of the Virgin, in the church of Santo Rocco, at Rome, have been stolen.

THREE DAYS LATER.

The Alabama put into Cape Town for coal supplies March 20. Semmes destroyed during his Indian sea cruise seven ships. He reckons the damage to the Federals at five millions.

DENMARK. All is quiet.

Garibaldi arrived at Plymouth on the 26th ult.

MAXIMILIAN AND THE AUSTRIAN THRONE.—It is stated that, after much negotiation, the resolve of the Emperor of Austria to exclude the Archduke Maximilian from the imperial succession has been modified to the effect that if at any time within six years the Emperor of Mexico shall determine to abdicate, and to return to his own country, it shall then be lawful to entertain the question of his reinstatement as an Austrian Archduke. This is much short of the Archduke's desires, but he has consented to accept it as the best provision attainable under the circumstances. In the meanwhile he gives up his share of the family heritage, alleged to be of the valve of $10,000,000, but retains his Archducal appendage of $60,000 per annum. He is to be allowed to recruit a legion of 6000 men from the Austrian army, with a reserved right of resuming, at the end of six years, their present rank in Austria. The Archduke—now the Mexican Emperor—is thirty-two years of age, and his wife twenty-four.

MARRIED.

In Bowdoinham, Me., May 8th, by R. R. York, Mr. JAMES R. HOPKINS, of Litchfield, to Miss ELMIRA F. SMALL, of Bowdoinham.

In Livermore, Me., by Eld. D. M. Hanscomb, Mr. CHANDLER DENNENO, of Livermore, to Miss MARY R. CHICKERING, of Hartford.

In Richmond, Me., by H. D. Reed, Mr. CHARLES H. TROTT, of Richmond, and Miss SUSAN V. CRAWFORD, of Gardiner, Me.

DOMESTIC.

BLOODY TIMES.—The late news from the seat of war tells us of very earnest and terrible fighting. Many thousands have been slain and wounded. The conflict between the North and the South is becoming more awful than ever. We may well pray earnestly to the Lord, "Let thy kingdom come."

Washington, May 2nd. The Richmond papers of the 20th ult. contain the following:—

Wilmington, N. C., April 29th. A fire occurred last night on the west side of the river, which consumed the offices of the Wilmington and Manchester Railroad, thirty-four freight cars of the Georgia Central Road and every building south of the depot, including the Confederate cotton press, Berry's marine railway and all the cotton stored west of the ferry, about 6,000 bales.

SECOND DISPATCH.—At the fire this morning about 4,400 bales of cotton, twenty-five freight cars, the railroad, the rosin and oil works, cotton press, Berry's ship-yard, etc., were burned; loss estimated at $5,000,000. The Confederate government lose $1,000,000. The balance falls on individuals. There was an insurance of about one million.

The Examiner of the 29th has the following:—

We have again rumors of an impending battle on the Georgia and Tennessee lines. The opinion in that part of the Confederacy appears to be that the enemy is to make a grand effort of the campaign in this quarter; but while there is much stronger evidence that the effort is to be made in the direction of Richmond, it must be recollected that this theory, by no means excludes the probability that so important issue is to be tried in Northern Georgia. The enemy has an army there which is formidable in numbers and discipline. It possesses one great advantage, however, which the enemy has not in Virginia—the impregnable fortifications of Chattanooga upon which to fall back in case of disaster. The state of preparation of the Federal army in front of Gen. Johnston, the removal of a great body of troops from Knoxville and Cleveland to Chattanooga, and the facility with which reinforcements can be thrown from Tennessee and Kentucky, warn us that we need not be surprised at any time to hear that an earnest attempt is being made to break our lines at Dalton, and that a grand battle is going on.

Washington, May 3rd. The Richmond Enquirer of the 30th says a company has been organized with a capital of ten millions of dollars, of which $1,500,000 have been paid. It declines disclosing the object of the enterprise, but says the company aspires to grand results. It will have a fleet at least, and there is now every prospect of success.

Fortress Monroe, May 3rd. Passengers from North Carolina report that Washington, N. C., was laid in ashes by straggling soldiers and marines at the time of its evacuation. All the stores that could not be carried off were destroyed. The city was mainly owned by Union people. Loss several millions.

The pitiful screams of men, women, and children for protection from the rebel bayonets as the steamers left the docks were heart-rending. The indignation against Gen. Butler is very bitter in North Carolina, and a delegation of the leading men was to visit Washington to ask his removal.

The rebel rams have decided to make an attack on our gunboats without waiting assistance from their army.

New York, May 9. The Tribune's Washington dispatch says twelve trains of wounded are on the way from the front. The hospitals are ready for their reception.

A report from rebel sources says Lee has been wounded. He is in full retreat, and Gen. Grant is in hot pursuit.

Thursday the army sustained successfully a fierce attack from the bulk of Lee's army.

Friday we attacked and drove them some distance, took all their severely wounded and won an indecisive victory.

On Saturday there was no fighting and Lee is believed to be retiring.

The first man killed in the campaign was Chas. Wilson, Co. I, 18th Mass. Regt. Col. Joseph Hayes, of the same regiment, was wounded slightly.

The Times' Washington dispatch says the latest news received from the army is up to 7 o'clock yesterday evening, at which General Grant fully maintained his position.

Lee's first onset was made upon our left, but failing, he then fell upon the centre, and finally upon our right, where the hardest contest took place. Here the rebels charged upon our lines twice, but were repulsed each time with some loss.

Gen. Seymour's division of Hancock's corps was badly cut up. Generals Wadsworth and Bartlett were badly wounded, the former having been knocked off his horse by a spent minie ball.

The rebels were reported retreating yesterday morning. The number of wounded is reported at 10,000, the killed at 2000. The loss of the enemy exceeds this. They left the dead and disabled on the field in our hands.

The ambulance corps with its admirable organization is working up to its full capacity, carrying the wounded to Rappahannock Station. Sixteen trains of cars, dispatched from Alexandria to-day will receive them. Several car loads of ice were also sent down for the comfort of the wounded. The Sanitary and Christian commissions are in the field with a full force, and with plentiful supplies and everything necessary for the wounded. The Government has hospital accommodations here for 30,000.

On Friday the attack was renewed by Longstreet on the right while the rebel troops under A. P. Hill were handled in like manner against the left of Gen. Grant's army, composed of Hancock's corps.

The contre was also engaged in repelling these assaults of the enemy. The fight continued with hardly any intermission for two days, but yesterday morning Lee, having failed completely in his object, withdrew from the engagement, leaving our Army of the Potomac in possession of the ground and of a large number of wounded and killed rebels.

The result is regarded at the War Department as a decided success of Gen. Grant, which, if followed up, will give him a complete victory.

Gen. Grant's loss in the two great battles is estimated by the Medical Directors at 8000. The loss of the rebels is supposed to be greater.

New York, May 9. The World's Washington dispatch says: —The city has been in great excitement to-day over the battles in Virginia. The papers have issued innumerable "Extras," but furnish no details of either Thursday's or Friday's battles, but are mainly confirmatory of all the intelligence hitherto received from the front, to the effect that Friday's battle was a decided success for Gen. Grant. and that Lee during Friday night fell back toward Spottsylvania Court House.

The demand made here for supplies demonstrates that our army must be about to advance again.

Saturday was mainly devoted to taking care of the wounded and burying the dead.

Advices believed to be trustworthy, represent that Gen. Butler had cut off all the railroad communication south of Richmond.

Our wounded thus far are estimated at 12,000, and there are several thousand wounded rebels in our hands.

Washington, May 9. Information has been received to-night that the rebel ram in Albermarle Sound has been attacked and sunk by the United States steamer Sassacus.

There is no foundation for the report that the rebels are evacuating Richmond, or that Petersburg is evacuated.

Louisville, May 9. An officer from the front reports that Gen. Thomas occupied Dalton yesterday.

Items.

☞ The tomb of Voltaire was recently examined and found to be empty, and no one knows where lie the remains of the Prophet of the French Revolution.

☞ The Russians have been celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the entrance of the Russian army into Paris, and the Parisians are greatly incensed.

☞ Gambling houses are so abundent in Hartford, Ct., that the papers are full of remonstrances against their longer continuance.

☞ It is reported that forty-five students of Williams College have made a public profession of religion.

☞ A very magnificent mansion is about to be built in Paris by Baron Rothschild. It will cost nearly four millions of francs.

☞ Henry Clay's widow died recently, aged eighty-three.

☞ Brigham Young hast just taken a new wife—his sixty-first.

☞ There are eighteen Protestant newspapers published in Paris.

☞ Russia gets $20,000,000 of gold a year from the Ural Mountains.

☞ There are estimated to be about seven millions of Jews in the world.

☞ There are 5,000,000 Spiritualists in the States.

Notices.

Notice.

I am requested to say, for the brethren in Springfield, that they have hired a hall in Goodrich's block, a little south of the Depot, where they will hold meetings every Sabbath. This is for a free Second Advent meeting, where the whole church have a chance to work out what God works in, whether it is speaking, praying, crying or shouting. They intend to contend for the liberty of the gospel as well as the letter.

The first meeting, May 1st, was a blessed one. God set his seal of approbation to it by giving us all a blessing. Some ten good warm exhortations after preaching in the forenoon, and eight in the afternoon. Others praised the Lord aloud. It seemed like an Advent meeting in '43. The singing went off on a high key, without a fiddle to hinder it. After meeting, the brethren stopped and chose three of their number to act as servants of the rest, not officers over them:—Brn. Thos. R. Weaver, Levi Allen, and Ethan Allen. They request me to say to the preachers, who may pass through Springfield, to correspond with Bro. Thos. R. Weaver. I feel that this is a providential door opened for those who wish to go where there is freedom of spirit. HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Northern N. Y. Christian Association will be held at Wilcox' Corners, twelve miles northeast of Mannsville, Jefferson Co., to commence Friday evening, May 27th, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, Brn. and Srs., one and all, let us rally to this meeting. Let us make this the most interesting meeting ever enjoyed in this region of country. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Mannsville, and conveyance will be in readiness to carry them to the meeting. Inquire for Milton R. Miles, or Benoni Stetson. It is expected that Eld. G. F. Sweet will be present to help preach the word. C. B. TURNER.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, 2 o'clock P. M., and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. SPENCER, President.
C. W. SMITH, Secretary.

Illinois Conference.

There has been a strange fatality attending the time of its announcement. May 17th and May 25th have been given. I wish to make a final correction. It will be ☞ May 25th, and over the Sabbath. Come one, and come all.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

QUESTIONS.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscions existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a peronal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 13th, 1864, and contiuue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. Come one and all that can.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. GRIFFIN.

Meetings at South Natic.

The Lord willing, I expect to hold a series of meetings at South Natic, Mass., in the School House Hall, commencing Sunday, May 15th, and continuing every evening through the week. Meetings on Sunday as follows: 10 A. M., 1–30 P. M., and 7–30 in the evening. Meetings through the week will commence at 7–30 P. M. Will the brethren and sisters in Dover, Natic, and wherever they may be scattered in that section, come with lamps trimmed and burning, ready to labor for the salvation of sinners, praying in the Holy Ghost that God will raise up a church of faithful believers in that place. H. K. FLAGG.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Three Days Meeting.

We will begin a three days meeting at the "Ikey school-house," in Greenfield, Sauk Co., Wis., on the 20th of May, 1864. Hope Brn. Turner, Bassford, Shears and Barnes will be present to preach the word. W. SHELDON.

P. S.—Bro. Cook of Dubuque is hereby informed that a combination of causes has conspired to defer my visit to that city indefinitely. Bro. Graves of Henrietta, the same. (Bro. T. will soon visit H.) To Bro. and Sr. R., of Sparta, the same. W. S.

Notice.

The Lord willing, our next quarterly meeting will be held in the city of Winona, in the county of Winona, Minn., to begin June 8th, and continue over the next first day of the week. Elder J. V. Himes will be there to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in the several sister churches are invited to attend, as ample provision will be made to accommodate the brethren from a distance. The Lord grant us a good time. In behalf of the brethren, PHILIP RAMER.

Prepare for Camp.

The Fourth Annual Camp and Grove meeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence (D. V.,) June 26th, and continue over July 4th. Full particulars will will be given soon. Will churches that can be represented at that meeting intimate the same to me, as it may assist in obtaining a reduction of fare? Come, all that are good and that seek good.

H. F. CARPENTER, Poultney, Vt.

Notice.

I. C. Wellcome & Co., now have a good assortment of English Bibles, books, tracts, and hymn books for sale, at the regular prices. As the new hymn book is not to be published at present, we have contracted with Bro. Himes for the "Christian Lyre," so that we can supply those who want them in Maine at wholesale and retail. Prices according to the quantities wanted. Sent by mail or express. Address I. C. WELCOME & Co., Yarmouth, Me.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

CHAS. P. DOW.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—ED.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. HITCHCOCK.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. SHELDON.

Notice.

I will attend the funeral of George W. Jones May 15th, 1864, at the Advent Chapel in West Alton, N. H., at 10 A. M. Bro. J. G. Smith will be present to take a part in the exercises.

N. GIDDINGS.

Notice.

If any one owes me any money, and wants to pay it about these days, it will help me about paying some big bills for a lot of paper, printing, bookbinding, &c., &c. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

J. Couch.......Sunday, May 15th

Kennebunkport, Me.......Saturday evening, May 14th and over the following Lord's day.
Concord, N. H.......May 22d
Worcester, Mass.......May 29th
Southampton, Long Island, N. Y., at the yearly meeting of the Shinnecock Indians.......June 5th
Montreal, C. E., June 9th to 19th inclusive.
MILES GRANT.

Lower Gilmanton, N. H., Saturday evening and Sunday, May 14th and 15th.
Danbury, N. H., Saturday evening, May 21st, at A. C. Knowlton's, and Sunday, May 22d, in the Town Hall.
JOHN G. HOOK.

West Deerfield, N. H.......Sunday, May 15th
East Canaan, N. H.......Sunday, May 29th
A. SIMPSON.

River Point, R. I.......Sunday, May 15th
WM. FENN.

West Martinsburgh.......Sunday, May 15th
Harrisburgh.......Tuesday evening, May 17th
Copenhagen.......Sunday, May 22d
Barnes' Corners.......Tuesday evening, May 24th
Wilcox' Corners.......Friday evening, May 27th
C. B. TURNER.

East Hartland, Ct., May 25th, and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, the 29th.
Goshen, Mass.......Sunday, June 5th
C. GOODRICH.

New Hartford, (Garret school-house), Sunday, May 15th
Prospect, (at Bro. Mix').......Sunday, May 29th
S. WOODRUFF.

Bath, Me., (City Hall), with Bro. Jas. A. Libbey, May 15th.
Yarmouth, Me.......May 22d
Richmond Corner, (Meeting-house), with Bro. H. D. Reed, May 29th. R. R. YORK.

Bradford, Me., (School-house near Mr. Strauts, or where the brethren may think best), Thursday eve, May 12th
Surry, Me., School-house, North Bend, Sunday, May 15th
East Atkinson, Me., (Turner's Corner), Sunday, May 22d.
Medford, Me., (Cold Brook School-house), Sunday, May 29th. THOMAS SMITH.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SPRINGFIELD, No. 5 OAK ST.

H. Pratt.......May 15th
B. Spaulding.......Sunday, May 22d
P. S. Butler.......Sunday, May 29th

APPOINTMENTS FOR AGAWAM, MASS.

P. S. Butler.......Sunday, May 22d
H. Pratt.......Sunday, June 5th

Goshen.......Sunday, May 29th
H. PRATT.

Farmington, N. H., at Bro. Horn's school-house, Saturday evening, May 14th; and at Jones' school-house Sunday, May 15th.
Epping Corner, (where Bro. J. R. Colbath may appoint), Saturday evening, May 21st, and Sunday, 22d.
New Durham Corner, Saturday evening, May 28th, and Sunday, 29th. JOSEPH PINKHAM.

Lawrence, Mass., Friday evening, May 13th. Also Saturday the 14th, and Sunday the 15th.
H. L. HASTINGS.

Philadelphia.......Sunday, May 15th
State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill.......May 25th and through the week. J. V. HIMES.

South Natic, Mass., (in the School-house Hall), Sunday, May 15th. Also evenings through the week.
Holliston.......Sunday, May 22d
H. K. FLAGG.

Savoy, Mass.......May 15th
Dalton, Mass.......May 17th and 18th
Plainfield, Mass., (Bro. J. Healy's).......May 19th
Plainfield, Mass., (D. Thayer's).......May 20th
Goshen, Mass.......May 22d
Amherst, Mass.......May 23d
GEO. A. STREETER.

APPOINTMENTS FOR VERNON, VT.

L. Boutell.......Sunday, May 22d
S. S. Brewer.......Sundays, June 15th and 19th

East Stoneham, Me., Saturday evening, May 14th, and over the following Sabbath.
North Norway, Saturday evening, May 21st, and over the Sabbath.
Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore.......June 5th
J. T. JORDAN.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.......May 22d
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Worcester, Mass.......May 15th
F. H. BURBANK.

East Boston.......Sunday, May 15th
A. W. SIBLEY.

Athol, Mass.......May 15th
Ashburnham Depot, Mass.......May 22d
Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's).......May 29th
Vernon, Vt.......June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (Centerville school-house)......June 12th
S. S. BREWER.

Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Hall) Sundays, May 15th and 29th. H. MUNGER.

Boston, Mass.......May 15th
Worcester, Mass.......May 22d
Grafton Centre, N. H.......May 29th
J. COUCH.

South Windsor, Ct.......Sunday, May 15th
South Manchester.......evening of the 15th as Bro. H. P. Hart may arrange. C. GOODRICH.

Darien.......May 15th
C. F. SWEET.

Frankfort Mills.......Sunday, May 15th
J. HEMENWAY.

Bradford, (New Town Hall), N. H., Sunday, May 15th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

East Otis, Mass.......Sunday, May 15th
Cold Spring, Mass.......Sunday, May 29th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

West Alton, N. H. (funeral).......Sunday, May 15th
Nottingham, N. H.......Sunday, May 22d
J. G. SMITH.

Bristol, Ct.......May 15th
Warehouse Point, Ct.......May 18th
Scitico, Ct.......May 19th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block).......May 22d
J. S. WHITE.

Mantua Station, Portage Co., Ohio.......Sunday, May 15th half past 10 o'clock, A. M. Hope to see a general gathering of the friends of truth in that region.
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, May 22d, at half-past ten A. M.
Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. ONGLEY.

Portsmouth, N. H.......Sunday, May 15th
T. M. PREBLE.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.......Sundays, May 15th, 22d, 29th
H. F. CARPENTER.

West Plymouth, (Brick school-house).......May 15th
J. M. SANBORN.

Sandy Brook, near Hitchcockville, Ct., (at Bro. Davis') Sunday, May 15th. LEWIS ANDREWS.

Bolton, C. E., (Sargent School-house), quarterly meeting, May 14th and 15th.
Lake School-house.......May 17th
Pearly Corner.......May 18th
Ward's Corner, in Magog.......May 19th
Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and longer if desired. CHAS. P. DOW.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted. ☜

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

J. M. Reed, Weeden Holloway, Sarah P. Sprague, Thomas Frost, Polly King, Mrs. Henry White, Wm. Greenleaf, H C Anderson, Otis King, Wm. Hurd. C. R. Edmunds, J. W. Barnell, J. Sampson.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their POST OFFICE and STATE. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

John Sawyer, C. Farrington, T Lane, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. E. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E Soper, Henry Hillard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman, Esther Ann Pratt, Aaron Bagaley, John Brown.

MARY BOYD wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, MARGARET C. RILEY, what P. O.? SOMEBODY wants his paper changed from OTIS, Mass., to COLD SPRING, Mass. Will he please give us his NAME?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Thos. Caswell—Will find the $1.00 acknowledged in No. 444.

Wm. Baker—The money was received, and you were credited to No. 487.

J R Worthing—We have credited D Parmeter $2.00, to No. 468.

Edson Orton—We do not find the name of Mrs B Orton, No. Greenwich, N. Y., on our books. Should it not be Renel N Orton?

J D Williams—The money was received.

Mrs A K Warren—The money was credited to you.

R. C. Railsback—We have credited the amount you sent.

Eld S A Chaplin—Received. See No. 445.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 449.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—L. Irish 473, Mrs. T. Harrington 488, L. Mann 473, H Mann 473, J F Sawtell 442, M Card 473, G D Ghamberlin 473, J. Godfrey 473, M P Torrey 473, F C Torrey 479, E J Leavitt 473, G. B. Haskell 468, D Ward 460, W J Tuite 459, Mrs W Eaton 458, M I Pease 468, M Wise 468, C. McDuffee 473, M. Lock 473, L M Borden 473, L Wheeler 473, R Curtis 457, G W Sprague 453, R. Clay 473, L. J. Dickenson 473, H P Thompson 473, H Bunker 473, H Crane 474, W P Lincoln 445, J Powell 474, M. A. Lapham 474, S Sarle 474, W. Hulet 474, O. Stickney 474, A Hawks 474, W. E. White 474, Miss A Rhoades 474, Miss C Parks 474

$2.00 each.—N Littlefield 522, Alf. Smith 488, D Smith 490, G. Sprigg 499, M. Docaray 498, M A Tisdale 439, J. Woodford 446, J. Prince 446. W. Davis 460, Mrs. J. Stratton 485, W H Wildey 482, L Francisco 501, G Farmer 499, Mrs. S. M. Northy 499, J. De Armond 499, I. Grinnell 486, W Burdick 500, A Mosher 500, J A Sidell 500.

50c each.—O. S. Streeter 460, Mrs. A. Brooks 460, B. French 460, Mrs L A Nichols 460, Mrs F P Smith 466, O Perry 462, Dr S Dinsmore 461, F Darrow 461.

E. Wolcott $15.00, 462; N. Hoyt $3.00, 464; H Hart $3.00, 499; M M Day $3.00, 533; H N Allen $1.50, 468; J M Weston $3.00, 449, G. Stockwell $1.50, 446; M L Clark $9.00, 442; J Anderson $3 00, 525; R Van Arter $1.50, 481; Mrs S H Flanders $1.10, 475; S Parsons 75c, 457; W Morrell $2.20, 505.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

A. J. Labree 25c, G. O. Allen $4.00, S H Rice 50c, A. Raymond 72c, J D Graham 22c, J Watkins 12c, H Barden $3.25, I Dimmick 13c, J. M. Brenneman 28c, E P Beach $1.00, G. Douglass 50c, R. F. Rowell $1.10, W. Leaf 50c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

E B Russell, A J Labree, A Owen, G W Young, S H Rice, Mrs. L. O. Rogers, Mrs. J B Johnson, Mrs. L A Nichols, E Scott, A Raymond, I Dimmick, J M Brenneman, H Barden, W Leaf, J D Graham, S C Wilcox.

BY EXPRESS.—D. O. Hopkins, T. M. Preble, A. H. Brown.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

I K Lombard 2, Ella, D L Clark, M H Inman, Geo A Streeter, M Mathews Weaver, A M Bement, D Wheeler, L C McKinstry, J C Rice, R Noble, E. B. B. G. R. S., J. S. White, B. Spaulding, S. Hale, M. S. Horne, E. L. Marsh, J. G. Hook, C. W. Sargent, H L Bradley, D F Newton.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Walter Pratt—Boston, Mass.

B Spaulding—Springfield, Mass., for a few weeks. Brethren wishing my labors will please address me there.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian Mission the past week, as follows:—

A friend of Missions, L. B., $10 00; Sarah S Pierce, $5.00, L. Foster, $3.00; J. H Lamson, $1.50; Gabriel Knight, $1.00, Mrs Isaac Bell, $1.00; C Greene, M. D., $1.00; M Bradley, 50c; G W Higgins 50c.

☞ All contributions in future which may be sent to Elders J. LITCH, MILES GRANT, or H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass., or to Elder J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich., will be forwarded to me, and acknowledged. Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for the kingdom,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

FOR BRO. RANDALL CURTICE.—Geo. W. Smith, $1; Eld S. A. C., $1; A brother, $5, Daniel L. Smith $1; A. Pease, $1, George Keneston, 50 cts; H. Derbon 50 cts; Hannah Leighton, 50 cts; I. Damman, 50 cts; N. F. Nason, 50 cts.

☞ A. W. J., Holden, Mass., $1.00, by the hand of H. L. H. W. PRATT.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. PEARL, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75, ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. TESTAMENTS. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

LARDNER'S WORKS, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

ROY'S HEBREW DICTIONARY, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW CONCORDANCE, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED PICTORIAL DICtionary. Price $7.50,—for $6.50.

LOWTH on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

GRIESBACH'S GREEK TESTAMENT, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

ENGLISH REFERENCE BIBLES, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine, $3.00.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., nearly new, $6.50. Ditto, new, $7.00
Rollin's History, one vol., sheep, and marbled edges, (Harper's ed.), new, $3.00. Ditto, two vols. $3.00.
Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.
Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $4.00.
Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.
Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.
Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol. sheep, new, $2.00.
Bower's History of the Popes, 3 vols., sheep, nearly new.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by EXPRESS.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Newton on the Prophecies, sheep, new, $2.25.
Josephus' complete works, $1.50.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Septuagint (Greek Old Testament), Leipzig edition, half sheep, (not a translation), $2.00.
Hebrew Bible (Old Testament and New), Bagster's ed., $2.00.
Our Lord's Great Prophecy, (by Buck), cloth, $1.50.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
[illegible] Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $2.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. WOODWARD, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jas. T. Curry. [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents single, [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruakh and pneuma [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of leading Scriptural statements [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 32 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible]

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 32 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, by H. Grattan Guinness; [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," [illegible] 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality of the soul, or of the rule, or of the lost. By C. F. Hudson. [illegible] 24 pages.

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. 28 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. 24 pages.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Medo Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—[illegible]

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood, [illegible]

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Woe" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, [illegible]

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible]

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible]

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." [illegible]

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and of the end of the World?" [illegible]

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars; [illegible]

9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.

10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; [illegible]

11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised and enlarged. Price 6 cts. [illegible]

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for [illegible] Be sure to write your name, Post Office, County, and State in a plain manner.

H. L. HASTINGS' PUBLICATIONS.

Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Third edition. Enlarged. [illegible] pages. Cloth, extra, $1.50. Paper, 75c.

[illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor. Edited and revised by H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress, and end. [illegible]

[illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, [illegible]

[illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

COME!

Now Jesus standeth pleading,
Why wilt thou thus delay?
How fast the hours are speeding,
Soon closed will be thy day!

Soon ended thy probation,
Soon Christ will cease to pray;
Oh! haste to seek salvation,
Call on the Lord to-day.

Eternal life is for thee;
Why calmly lay it down,
So coolly choose death's winding sheet
To an immortal crown?

On, onward hastes the judgment;
Oh! sinner, don't delay;
Fly quickly to the Savior;
Oh! kneel this hour and pray.

ELLA.

For the World's Crisis.

HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

YOU PROFESS IT; DO YOU LIVE IT?

"Teach me to walk as thou didst walk
When a weary pilgrim here."

You profess holiness, do you live holiness? Here lies the test. You tell us you are holy, enjoy the blessing of perfect love; do you practice holiness, live it out? Do you exhibit the fruits of holiness in your family, in your daily and hourly deportment? Is your temper sweet, modest, submissive, Christ-like? Is your walk and conversation such as becometh this high and holy calling? Do they bear a living witness to the fact? Do your friends and companions see "holiness to the Lord" beaming forth brightly in every look, every smile, every word, every moving muscle? Do your little ones see this, your husbands, your wives, your neighbors? Do you exhibit the fruits of the inner life in training your children for the Lord, in the way they should go? How is it also in your dietetic habits, your dress, your furniture, your outgoes and incomes?—in all your business transactions? Does the world take knowledge of your holiness, in providing things honest in the sight of all men? Do you owe any man any thing but love? Are you strictly temperate in eating, drinking, sleeping? in the use of all God's gifts? Is your conversation chaste, meek, modest, benevolent, heavenly? Do you exhibit the fruits of holiness in regard to the poor, the sick, the afflicted, the oppressed? Do you, as Christ commands, remember those in bonds, as bound with them? Are you always ready to open your lips, "defend the poor and fatherless," do justice to the afflicted and needy, rid them out of the hand of the wicked, seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widows? Do you every where bear testimony against novel readings and novel puffings, intemperance in the use of strong drink and tobacco in every form, the sin of oppression, the spirit of caste, the pride of aristocracy, and every secret abomination? These are test questions, standing out in bold relief, and cannot be lightly passed over, especially by those who profess the higher walks. The eye of God is upon us, the eyes of angels, of the just made perfect, the world's eagle eye also, and its gainsayings. It is one thing to profess sanctification, and quite another thing to live sanctification; our walk must accord with our profession. God expects it, demands it, angels, the world, justly. Holiness, to be holiness, must be Bible holiness, complete, perfectly symmetrical, God-like, Christ-like. "Every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as he is pure." What saith God to Abraham? "Walk before me, and be thou perfect." Christ, on the mount commanded the disciples to be perfect. Paul to the Corinthians says: "Be perfect, be of one mind, live in peace." "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

Peter, also, says, 1: 15; "As he who hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation, because it is written: Be ye holy, for I am holy." "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth, for ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God." "Be blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world."

"Abstain from all appearance of evil, and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly." Friends of this high and holy calling, is this Bible holiness your holiness? Are you walking thus circumspectly, keeping a conscience void of offense toward God and man always? Can you testify to these facts, modestly, meekly, humbly, God-fearingly? Bless the Lord, praise him for it.

Your light shall break forth as the morning, the Lord will keep you as the apple of the eye, guide you continually, satisfy your soul in drouth, make fat your bones, and you shall be like a watered garden, and "like a spring of water, whose waters fail not."

Nothing so mars the peace of Jerusalem, hinders the onward progress of this blessed Bible doctrine of "holiness to the Lord," as the inconsistent walk of those professing to enjoy it. Christ is wounded, deeply wounded. By whom? "What are these wounds in thy hands?" Then he shall answer: "Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." Zach. 13: 6.

"Let us therefore," says Paul, "as many as be perfect, be thus minded. . . . Whereunto we have attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing. Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them who walk so as ye have us for an ensample; for many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ."

"'Tis not a cause of small import
A holy life demands,
But what might fill an angel's heart,
And fill the Savior's hands."

The Bible teaches us that true religion is love to God and love to man, and that there can be no true love to God where there is not love to man. "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

"Who is my brother? 'Tis not merely he
Who hung upon the same loved mother's breast;
But every one, whoever he may be,
On whom the image of a man's impress'd."

We do not expect more from those professing entire purity of motive, a holy, sanctified life, than from those making no pretensions to this superlative grace. We look for consistency in the every-day walk and conversation—a spirit of meek, modest, lamb-like humility—a benevolence, disinterested, exalted, Christ-like—that looks not merely on its own things, but also on the things of others; a cheerful, smiling, complacent, yielding to the rights of others, where duty calls. We expect a meek, modest retiring self-renunciation, gospel-like, in those testifying publicly the assurance of faith, great peace of mind, joy unspeakable.

We may be eloquent, loud in our professions, speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and after all be "as sounding brass, or tinkling cymbal!" How grievously disappointed are we when we see in those making high pretensions to a sanctified heart, the very reverse of what they profess, in their spirit, conversation and general deportment! Nothing so surely and speedily brings this blessed doctrine into disrepute as the inconsistencies of those professing to enjoy it. When the disciples put the question to Christ, "Who is greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" what the reply? Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, "Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

"Let us, to perfect love restored,
Thy image here retrieve,
And in the knowledge of our Lord,
The life of angels live."

D. F. NEWTON.

For the World's Crisis.

A FEW QUESTIONS FOR ADVENT PEOPLE TO SOLVE.

1. Is it right to work so hard through the week, that when the prayer meeting comes, or a preacher, you heave a sigh and say, I am so tired, I cannot go to meeting? Do you not help pull down the prayer meeting, grow barren, and become a stumbling-block to others?

2. Is it right to say, my horse is so lame that I cannot use it, so must stay away from meeting, when you can use it to work on the team, or go to ride and visit every day from Monday morn until Saturday eve?

3. Is it right to have your affections set on things of this world, and cannot find time to pray in your family, or at prayer meetings have not any thing to say, but sit and sleep (unless some one should touch your favorite hobby)?

4. Is it right to be laying plans for the future in such a manner that you give a lie to your profession, and thus cause younger ones in the faith to stumble by your making such crooked paths? Do you not think it would be better to make straight paths for your feet, and thus help the weak ones, and be an honor to the cause yourself?

5. Is it right for people professing to be pilgrims and strangers on this earth (and are bold to declare it), to walk and talk in such a manner that citizens of this world would not once think that you are a foreigner and stranger, and that this world is not your home?

6. Are we not commanded to be pilgrims here, as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were? Are we not urged to set our affections on things above, and not on things on the earth?

7. Are we not required to mortify our members which are upon the earth?

8. Should we not put off concerning the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt, and put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness?

9. If we live after the flesh, shall we not die? But if we live after the Spirit, shall we not live?

10. If we are led by the Spirit, are we not the sons of God?

I have asked these few questions relative to the character of professors as I view them from the stand-point of christianity, hoping that all will raise the inquiry, Is it I? Thy Bro., striving to follow the principles and doctrine of Christ. GEO. A. STREETER.

No. Dana, April, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.---No. 7.

"Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss."

This is the great secret of unavailing prayer. Multitudes offer words of prayer without ever realizing a definite answer. They ask amiss. To ask aright, is to receive. Never was a prayer lost, never a petition unheeded, when offered in strict accordance with the divine rules. We are not left in ignorance of these. God has not only caused to be recorded some of the hindrances to prevailing prayer, but he has also taught us how to pray successfully. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me," says David. He does not say if I commit iniquity, but if I regard it, if I love, if I cherish sin in the heart, though it may have no outward expression, the Lord will not hear me pray. Thus we see while the outward character may appear correct to the view of men, there may be an inward iniquity, seen only by that eye which looketh on the heart, understood only by Him who knoweth our thoughts afar off, which effectually cuts off from that soul the divine consolations derived through the medium of prayer.

The high priest could not enter within the vail, into the Holy of Holies, until first purified by the water and blood; then robed in priestly garments, prepared by divine direction, and having upon his forehead a fillet bearing the inscription—"Holiness to the Lord." The consecration, purification, new raiment, and sacred badge, were all essential qualifications for the holy office for such near approaches unto God as were permitted to the high priest. If these purifications were essential for him who officiated in the earthly tabernacle, how much more need of those being first consecrated, cleansed, clothed with the robes of righteousness, and impressed with the insignia of holiness, who are to have access to God by that "new and living way" which hath been opened by the blood of Jesus within the vail, even into heaven itself. "Ye are a royal priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices," says the apostle Peter.

The body of the Jewish priest was first washed with water, then he was sprinkled with blood. The apostle Paul refers to this when he says, "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Here the essential prerequisites of access to God are briefly yet definitely stated.

First. A "true heart." The false heart cannot enter within the vail. It must be an honest, upright, sincere heart before God.

Second. "In full assurance of faith." Not a faltering faith, not merely assured faith, but in full assurance, an entire, complete assurance of faith, unmixed with doubt. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." "He that cometh to God must believe." There must be an implicit trust in Christ as our sacrifice for sin and Mediator with the Father. We must believe fully the record, given of his ability, power, and readiness to receive, justify, sanctify, and preserve unblameable those who come unto God by him.

Faith is the condition on which all the promises are made available. "Believe that ye receive, and ye shall have."

Third. "Our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience." Under the Jewish economy, the blood of slain beasts "could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience"; it appertained only "to the purifying of the flesh"; but "the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God," is able to "purge the conscience from dead works to serve the living God."

There are those who teach that conscience, even in the heart of the unrenewed man, is a safe guide; if that is obeyed, all will be right. It may be, if an enlightened, educated conscience has always been heeded, the individual would have been led in the way of righteousness; but few there be who are thus illuminated and educated by divine truth; and where can one be found who has never sinned against his conscience? The god of this world blinds the minds of those who believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel should shine into their hearts; hence their conscience is darkened in its perceptions, and many in consequence judge falsely, putting darkness for light, and light for darkness; bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter; calling those things harmless which God condemns, and good they call evil. The apostle therefore presents as an essential prerequisite of access to God by the new and living way, that the heart be sprinkled from an evil conscience.

Fourth. Our "bodies washed with pure water." We have teachers who assert that first our bodies should be washed, and then the heart will be purified from its sins, making baptism above all. But not such is the order of the inspired word. The baptism is to follow, not precede, the inward work of purification. First the blood, then the water. First the inward renewing, and then the outward cleansing. First be crucified with Christ, then buried with him by baptism.

"Praying in the Holy Ghost." "We know not what to pray for as we ought, but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us, with groanings which cannot be uttered"; he "maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." The necessity of help from the Spirit is here explicitly taught. Without its aid to our infirmities, without its intercessions combined with those of our Advocate before the throne, we cannot offer effectual prayer. Let us then seek to be filled with the Holy Ghost. M. D. W.

For the World's Crisis.

RESURRECTION OF RIGHTEOUS AND WICKED.

"Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."—JOHN 5: 28, 29.

Now mark—all that are in the graves are to hear His voice. Read the twenty-fifth verse of the same chapter and see that all that hear shall live. Now do you not see that the "all" in the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth verses refer to both classes—good and bad? Let God's word be true if we do find ourselves mistaken. If all are to hear his voice, and all are to live that do hear, and the "all" that hear are both the righteous and the wicked, then that settles the question forever, and it ought not to be raised again.

Jesus says his word is true, and I believe it. If the above is to be disputed, then pray tell me how we are to learn any thing by reading the Bible? Let us be careful not to add to or take from the word of the Lord. It is forever settled in my mind, that what Jesus has spoken must and will come to pass. The all important question with us ought to be, are we living unspotted from the world?

Brethren, let us be careful that no "root of bitterness" springs up among us and thereby we be defiled, but let us try and build one another up, and not be found pulling each other down. The Master would have us united in love. O for that charity that suffereth long and is kind! Let us be found with the Spirit of Christ; without it we are none of his. D. COGSWELL.

Dansville, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

PIONEERING.—No. 3.

March 3rd. Went to a neighborhood some twelve miles from home, where I have been called many times for the past two years. Preached five sermons, received fifty cents. Did not remain longer, as the small pox was near, and it was much against the meeting, but the time was not lost. I got one subscriber for the Crisis and Pilgrim. On Sunday a man arose and asked a few questions, which served to bring out a few more truths. Some of the important ones were, "If God was not going to anninilate the earth, why would he a part of his noblest works, i. e., man?" I showed him the difference between annihilation and destruction, and then asked him what he would do with them? He said they would live in suffering, as long as the saints. He wanted to know what the soul was. I told him, then asked what he thought it was. "Why, it is a part of the Deity himself." Then I answered that God would torment a part of himself. He concluded not to ask any more questions then. I offered a premium of five hundred dollars if any one would find immortal soul, deathless soul, never-dying soul, or deathless spirit, in the Bible. He requested me to write them down, so I did, but I have learned since he concluded he was too fast. But this gave a blessed victory to the truth.

March 7th. Started for the quarterly meeting at Floyd. It was raining, and roads bad. Preached the first night on the way. Arrived late at Bro. Hough's, and went the rest of the way with him. We got within ten miles of his appointment, found a stream very high, turned round and backed in till the water was over the hind wheels, so that we found it not safe till it went down a little. We went back to the first house. Although this man was a professor of religion, and had us pray for him, we had to pay our bill for lodging, but we lost not the opportunity to preach to the family. The result was, the word got out, and a man came and wanted us to preach on our return. Bro. Hough did so, and baptized him and his wife, and one or two others will obey soon. So much water is of some use some time.

March 11th. Arrived at Floyd in time for meeting. Had a pleasant session, and some good was done. So we wait patiently for the fruit and reward. The brethren did not forget my wants in temporal things, and this was not the first time. They are prospering.

March 15th. Took passage with Bro. Ensign for New Hartford, to hold a meeting near there in Grunda county, intending only to stay two or three days, and then take the cars for my appointment at Earlville; but the second night three candidates came forward for baptism, and it was duty to remain. Preached seven sermons, baptized six; nine united with the church; three or four are to be baptized soon.

March 21st. After I preached I rode some six miles, rested and slept two hours, arose at three o'clock, rode seven miles before sunrise, and took Nahum's chariots. Arrived home before sun down, much fatigued. The brethren here felt the worth of my labors. May God bless them.

March 25th. Bro. Hough went to Hopkinton and preached. Gave out word for me the next night. Sunday morning Bro. Gard and I went up to the Presbyterian church. Put my chart under my coat, and while they were singing the last hymn went to the preacher and asked the privilege to announce my lecture on the prophecies. He inquired who I was, and then replied that he was utterly opposed to the whole concern, and said I should not disturb his hearers. I asked him if I could go out on the ground and there tell them. He said yes. So I thanked him kindly for this privilege. We went to the door, and as they came out we spread the chart, and I said that the fifth universal monarchy would be the kingdom of God, and that I would lecture on that, etc., etc., at Warner's Hall. By this I gained a good congregation.

Monday, 28th. Came to Manchester to meet Bro. Hough. His buggy broke down, and so did not arrive. He arrived at Edd's Grove to his next appointment, but finding him quite exhausted, I preached again in his place. Here he has four to baptize. Our winter's work is about done.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Left Portsmouth, April 6th, to attend the conference at Boston. Met with a goodly number of the faithful in Christ who had gathered from the east, west, north, and south, to worship God. After dinner repaired to the Lowell Street chapel, and found a glorious gathering ready to wait upon the Lord. The preaching was good, the prayer and conference meetings spiritual; and we could truly say, Lord, it is good for us to be here.

Saturday, 9th, duty called me to Springfield, to fulfill an appointment there, and reluctantly I parted with the dear brethren and sisters, feeling with the poet to say,

"Thy smiles are so divinely sweet,
We are loth to leave the place."

A few hours' ride brought me to Springfield. I soon made my way to the house of a brother, and was cordially greeted by him and his pleasant family. Here I found a son and two daughters had given their hearts to the Lord since I was there in November, and it was pleasant to gather around the family altar and hear parents and children call upon the name of the Lord. Praise the Lord for gathering in the children.

Sunday morning, April 10th. Although stormy, we made our way to Bro. Morgan's, the place of our meeting. A goodly number gathered together. The Lord was there to bless his children, and also to aid me in preaching the word. In the evening it rained hard outside, and a heavenly shower fell in the house. Melting mercy came. Saints were made to rejoice and the sinner's heart was touched. One backslider was reclaimed from his wanderings, and seven arose for prayers who never knew their God. Not one was left behind in that meeting, but perfect victory was gained. To God be all the glory. On my return to Springfield I expect to find those seven young men and women happy in the Lord, for I pledged my word I would pray for them, and God has promised to hear and answer the prayers of faith, and the work will and must be done.

Tuesday evening attended a Methodist prayer meeting, where a good brother presided as class-leader. A humble gathering, and God was there by his uniting spirit. Saints were quickened, love and harmony prevailed, and one arose for prayers.

Wednesday morning, April 13th. In company with Bro. and Sr. Otis left Springfield for Albany. The journey would have been very pleasant indeed had I not found that sickness was coming upon my weary frame, but I tried to look to Father for strength to endure to the end of my journey, and remembering my promise to pray for my youthful friends and the seekers after Christ, I found work enough to do, and finally found myself in the city of Albany for the first time. A few moments' walk brought us to the house of Bro. Allen, where we were kindly received. Bro. and Sr. Otis leave for home, and I am left a sick stranger in a strange land; but my Lord had promised he would never leave me. I felt him near, friends were kind, and at midnight I found relief. Gave thanks to God and fell asleep.

Thursday evening, at seven o'clock, was able to leave the friends in Albany, thanking them for their kindness. Took the steamer St. Johns, bound for New York city, one hundred and fifty miles down the Hudson River. Bro. Allen gave me an introduction to a New York brother on the boat, whom I was happy to meet. The scenery must have been delightful in the daytime, but it being night, little could be seen. About sunrise I find myself walking on great Broadway, in the city of New York. But few were out at so early an hour and I had an opportunity to view the stately buildings, the largest I had ever seen. As I passed Barnum's Museum, I saw the paintings of the great man and woman, and also the dwarfs. Nature says, I should like to go in there and see the big and little folks; but grace says no; and, methinks grace will gain the ascendency. As I passed the Astor House, I thought riches did not save people from dying; but there is a land where people will never die. I will make for that country. We pass on to the Eighth Avenue cars. I step in, bid my kind conductor good bye, thanking him for his kindness, and in a short time I find the dwelling of Bro. and Sr. Howland, where I am to remain until my Lord shall bid me go. Bro. Howland had gone to the boat to meet me, but getting in earlier than usual, he missed me. I find Bro. Curry in good spirits, all ready to labor for the salvation of sinners. I am pleased with the city, what little I have seen. My health is improving, and one Sunday's labors tell me I can work in this city as well as in any other; and there is a plenty of work to do. Lord, help me. ABIGAIL MUSSEY.

FACTS WORTH REMEMBERING.

HOW TO CHOOSE A COW.

There is always some risk in buying a cow, of whose previous character and history we know nothing, for there are no infallible signs of excellence. A rough, scrawny, coarse, ill-shapen cow is often a noble milker. Yet there are a few points generally agreed upon by experienced farmers, which it is well to consider before purchasing. A small boned head and light horns are better than large. Long legs make too wide a gap betwixt udder and milk pail, and long-legged cows are seldom quiet feeders, but wander about too much. A slender rather than a thick neck, a straight back, wide ribs and broad brisket, are to be sought for. The body of the cow should be large in proportion to head, neck and legs, though not excessively large; and the hind quarters if large out of proportion, indicate good milking qualities. Medium sized cows, all things considered, prove the best milkers for the amount of feed they consume. The color of the hair has probably nothing to do with the milking qualities, and good looks should be regarded but little in purchasing dairy animals. As to the color of the skin, a bright yellow, approaching that of gold coins, creamy color within the ears—this and good rich milk are very apt to go together; and withal a soft, flexible hide, loose over the ribs and rump, is also to be sought. The udder should be large, soft, and full of veins, which ramify over it, with full-sized milk veins stretching forward along the belly, and the teats be large and not crowded together. Test the cow's disposition and inquire about it. Irritable and nervous cows are unpleasant to handle, and almost always scanty milkers. Something can be ascertained from the looks and motions. Large, mild eyes, easy, quiet motions when driven, and gentleness when handled, indicate good nature. What the butchers term "good handling" is an important quality in a milch cow, for it indicates not only good milking properties, but easy fattening, when service in the dairy is over.—Am. Agriculturist.

HINTS TO FARMERS.

Tomatoes make excellent preserves.

Toads are the best protection of cabbage against lice.

Plants, when drooping, are revived by a few grains of camphor.

Pears are generally improved by grafting on the mountain ash.

Sulphur is valuable in preserving grapes from insects.

Lard never spoils in hot weather, if it is cooked in frying it out.

In feeding with corn, sixty pounds ground goes as far as one hundred pounds in the kernel.

Corn meal should never be ground very fine. It injures the richness of it.

Turnips of small size have double the nutritious matter that large ones have.

Rutabaga is the only root that increases in nutritious qualities as it increases in size.

Sweet olive oil is a certain cure for the bite of a rattlesnake. Apply it internally and externally.

Rats and other vermin are kept away from grain by a sprinkling of garlic when packing the sheaves.

Money if skillfully expended in drying land by draining and otherwise, will be returned with simple interest.

To cure scratches on a horse, wash the legs with soap suds and then with beef brine. Two applications will cure in the worst cases.

Timber cut in the spring and exposed to the weather with the bark on, decays much sooner than if cut in the fall.

Experiments show apples to be equal to potatoes to improve cows, and decidedly preferable for feeding cattle.

ABOUT WHITEWASHING.

The time for cleaning and fixing up has come, and one of the most important items is whitewashing. We often wonder that people do not do more at this. How much neater and more cheerful a whole place looks, if a few hours are spent in whitening the fences, the out-houses, the cellars. It changes the whole appearance of the homestead. Whitewashing a cellar with lime not only makes it lighter and neater, but more healthful also. For cellars, a simple mixture of fresh slacked lime is best. For house rooms, the common "Paris White," to be bought cheaply, is very good. We take for each 2 lbs. of whiting an ounce of the best white or transparent glue, cover it with cold water over night, and in the morning simmer it carefully without scorching until dissolved. The Paris White is then put in hot water, and the dissolved glue stirred in, with hot water enough to fit it for applying to the walls and ceilings. This makes a very fine white, so firm that it will not rub off at all. When common fresh-slacked lime is used, some recommend adding to each two and a half gallons (a pailfull), two table-spoonsfull of salt and half a pint of boiled linseed oil, stirred in well while the mixture is hot. This is recommended for out-door and in-door work.

For an out-door whitewash we have used the following with much satisfaction: Take a tub, put in a peck of lime and plenty of water to slack it. When hot with slacking, stir in thoroughly about half a pound of tallow or other grease, and mix it in well. Then add hot water enough for use. The compound will withstand rain for years.

SURFACE MANURING.

Mr. Bright, of Philadelphia, in a letter to the Gardener's Monthly, puts forth the following: "Manure chiefly upon the surface. Do not waste your manures by mixing them deeply with the soil. Plant shallow. Keep roots of all trees, plants and vines, as near the surface as possible. There are weighty reasons for the position assumed in the last sentence, which I have not space now to enumerate. I say again plant shallow. Let your soil be deep and dry, but plant near the surface. To farmers I would say, manure the surface as much as possible. Top-dress your grass, after mowing in July or August, under a burning sun; top-dress in the fall, before and during the autumn rains; manure the surface while snow is on the ground, while the March winds blow, and while the April rains fall. Manure your grass, instead of your corn and wheat, broadcast, at any time when you have manure and leisure, and I will guarantee that you will be abundantly satisfied with the result.

To fruit-growers I would say, do not fill your soil with manure before you plant trees, grape vines, etc. Plant in good natural soil, and manure from the surface, spring and fall, liberally and properly, and I will guarantee you success far greater than if you plant in holes and trenches filled with manure, as the custom is. Surface manuring and mulching are the true doctrines. I am sure of it."—Prairie Farmer.

HOW TO OUTWIT THE MOTH.

Be careful that there are no moths in the furs when put away, and it will be impossible for them to get in if the necessary care is taken. Most of our insects are hardy, caring little for wind and weather, and will never "die of aromatic pain." We once packed some small skins in the centre of a cask of tobacco leaves and stems, but the miller went there, deposited her eggs and the furs were ruined. This shows that they are not at all delicate and care nothing for tobacco. Expensive cedar closets are frequently constructed with the idea that the rather pleasant odor of the cedar is sufficiently disagreeable to the moth to keep her away from articles of clothing deposited there. This is a mistake. The strongest instinct prompts the miller to seek the means of perpetuating its kind, and no trifling impediment will prevent it. But the preservation of furs, or articles of clothing is perfectly simple, cheap and easy. Shake them well and tie them up in a cotton or linen bag, so that the miller cannot possibly enter, and the articles will not be injured, though the bag is hung in a wood-house or garret. This is cheaper than to build cedar closets, and better than to fill the bed clothes and garments with the sickening odor of camphor, tobacco, or any other drug.—Germantown Telegraph.

SCALDED CREAM.

Strain the milk into tin pans, (those holding eight or ten quarts are the most convenient), and let it stand ten or twelve hours. Then carefully place it on the stove, or, to prevent the milk from burning, in a pot of boiling water, until it is scalding hot, but not made to boil. Carefully carry it back to the dairy or milk room, and let it stand ten or twelve hours longer, skim it, and you will have cream equal to any in Cornwall. This process is generally used in Devonshire, in dairies of six or eight cows, and the cream finds a ready market in London at the same price as butter.—Amer. Agriculturist.

WHITE VARNISH.—Take one ounce of pure Venice turpentine; mix well with two ounces of pure spirits of turpentine; warm in a large bottle. In another bottle put four ounces of best fir balsam (it must be pure,) with two ounces of 95 per cent alcohol; shake each bottle well frequently for six hours or more, then mix both preparations in the large bottle. The whole should stand several days before using, in a warm place.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

FRESH AIR.—Without it we perish.

Everything that hath life and breath requires a pure, fresh, healthful atmosphere. The animal and vegetable creation—the beasts of the field, the fowls of the air, the fishes of the sea, the insect tribes, plants and flowers, trees and shrubbery—all would wither, fade and die without this invigorating, purifying element.

Above all, man needs it; God saw this from the beginning, and filled the universe with it. It is free and abundant as the ocean of waters. And still we ignorantly and sinfully deprive ourselves of this precious gift of heaven! Look at that minister in the sacred desk—his stupid, drowsy hearers on their seats. Do they know they are committing suicide?

Impure air, especially in our crowded houses, is killing to soul and body!

A want of pure, fresh air, is the cause of more sleeping in church than any other thing. Every breath expired from the lungs is loaded with carbonic acid gas, which, when inhaled into the lungs, has a stupefying effect upon the system, and tends to make one drowsy. No air should ever be breathed twice. It is very injurious to health, to say nothing of the filthiness of the act.

Pure air is as necessary to health of body and mind as food is, and yet how few of our public places of resort are supplied with it! Our churches, school-houses, steamboats, cars and omnibuses, are all so many places of suffocation and sources of disease. Everywhere we inhale poison and death. We are compelled to breathe the same air over again and again, and every moment it contains more poison, more carbonic gas, and less of the vital or life principle—oxygen and electricity.

Think of the deleteriousness of breathing over and over again the breaths of hundreds of persons, many of whom have diseased lungs and maladies of various kinds, and cast out from the lungs at every breath, and from the skin in insensible perspiration, disease engendering emanations!

Says an eminent writer of the medical faculty:—"Satan, among other things, robs us of the very air we breathe, to lure us to the pit. Our hearing the word of life, maturing, digesting and profiting depends greatly on a healthy system—a pure, sweet, invigorating air.

Respiration is the last act of digestion. This act oxydizes and decarbonizes the blood. The want of fresh and pure air is among the prominent causes of mortality. It is a fact that half of the race die before the age of twenty-one. The church, school-room and dormitory are changed into abodes of death. Fresh air is shut out, and foul air, the fell minister of death, kept in. When will due attention be paid to the subject of thorough ventilation in constructing buildings?

"There is reason to believe that more cases of dangerous and fatal disease are gradually engendered annually by the habit of sleeping in small unventilated rooms, than have occurred from a cholera atmosphere during any year since it made its appearance in this country. Very many persons sleep in eight-by-ten rooms. There are multitudes in the city of New York who sleep with closed doors and windows, in rooms which do not contain a thousand cubic feet of space, and that thousand feet is to last all night, at least eight hours, except such scanty supplies as may be obtained of any fresh air that may insinuate itself through little crevices by door or window, not an eighth of an inch in thickness.

"But when it is known that, in many cases, a man and wife and infant sleep habitually in thousand-feet rooms, it is no marvel that multitudes perish prematurely in cities; no wonder that infant children will away like flowers without water, and that five thousand of them are to die in the city of New York alone during the hundred days which shall include the fifteenth of July, eighteen hundred and sixty! Another fact is suggestive, that among the fifty thousand persons who sleep nightly in the lodging-houses of London, expressly arranged on the improved principles of space and ventilation, it has been proven that not one single case of fever has been engendered in two years! Let every intelligent reader improve the teachings of this article without an hour's delay.

"Are you fond of coughs, colds, dyspepsia and rheums,
Of headaches, of fevers, and chills?
Of bitters, hot drops, and fumes?
And bleeding, and blisters, and pills?
Then shut yourselves up like a monk in his cave,
Till nature grows weary and sad,
And imagine yourself on the brink of the grave,
Where nothing is cheerful and glad."

D. F. NEWTON.

EXERCISE.—Walking is the best possible exercise. Habituate yourself to walk very far. The Europeans value themselves on having subdued the horse to the use of man, but I doubt whether we have not lost more than we have gained by the use of this animal. No one thing has occasioned so much degeneracy of the human body. An Indian goes on foot nearly as far in a day, for a long journey, as a white man does on his horse, and he will tire the best horse. A little walk of half an hour in the morning, when you first rise, is advisable. It shakes off sleep, and produces other good effects in the animal economy.

TEMPERANCE—WHAT IS IT?

We rejoice to know that, here and there, the leaders in the Temperance Reformation are coming to adopt the "Platform" on which we have stood for more than a dozen years, and that the more reflecting portion of them are gradually approaching the physiological basis—the only basis on which the cause can ever be prosecuted to a successful termination. Under the caption at the head of this article the editor of the Fulton (N. Y) Patriot and Gazette remarks:—

There are a great many indefinite notions about temperance. Some suppose it to mean entire abstinence from intoxicating spirit; some think a moderate use of such spirit to be temperance; one man, at least,—Dr. Trall,—thinks that any beverage except pure water is inadmissible. We shall not attempt to give a complete definition of temperance, but will remark that any labor in this cause which aims at less than perfect purity of the physical system will be, if not in vain, at least inadequate to the necessity of the case.

We hear of temperance hotels, where spirituous beverage cannot be obtained. And their landlords, it is said, smirk wonderfully of their virtue. Within a few months it has been our fortune to stop at one of these institutions. There was no whiskey, no rum, no brandy, no beer. There was an imposing temperance motto over the office. And yet in the same office there was thousand of dollars' worth of cigars,—made of a plant that is largely compounded of one of the most insidious and deadly poisons that afflicts, debauches, enervates and defiles our race. And on the table of this same hotel there were various preparations of unclean beast, the best specimens of which are always diseased. The hog stood forth in power! Tobacco and hog, but no whiskey! Better have had the trio, for the last might in some measure have neutralized the others.

The use of tobacco is the worst intemperance that prevails to-day; and it is the worse, because it is tolerated as rather a virtue when alcohol is omitted. And yet tobacco is doing more to deteriorate our people, to cover the land with want, and to degrade men by paralyzing the intellectual faculties, than spiritous liquors have ever done. There is scarcely a limit to its use. The fumes of the cigar, the pipe and the infernal meerschaum, pervade the atmosphere, not only in the bar-room, the hotel sitting-room, the saloon, the smoking car,—that paragon of a nuisance,—but one cannot walk the street without being assailed by the villainous odor; and one can hardly step without soiling his boots in tobacco spittle. Two thirds of the breaths exhaled are so saturated with tobacco as to be more disgusting than carrion; and there is scarcely a person whose breath is thus poisoned that has thought or courtesy enough to keep his exhalations from the lungs of his neighbor. But there is no utility in expatiating on this evil. It "smells to heaven" of vileness and slow but relentless death.

Then there is pork. In condemning it we know we assail the prejudices of many, and offend the ignorance of others. But the best teachers on the subject of health utterly condemn its use. It is gross and corrupting. There are marks of disease in all swine, and in those most highly fattened disease is most conspicuous. We have been surprised and enlightened by the fact that many farmers who annually take to market large quantities of pork, use but little in their families, convinced by experience that it is not wholesome for them. Doubtless there is too much flesh-food used by our people; but the ox and the sheep are not naturally unclean creatures, as the hog is. The hog, like the buzzard, is a natural scavenger. Let him fill his office, and in the end be converted into oil light and lubrication, and his grosser material into soap grease.

Banish tobacco, pork and filth, and then, if there be occasion, fight whiskey; but, in our opinion, when the others are thoroughly disposed of, whiskey will be in poor demand, and will not be so formidable a monster as it is now.

We will indicate the difficulties in the way of temperance by a recent incident. We asked a vehement temperance man why he did not abandon the filthy practice of chewing tobacco. His reply was that it was natural for every man to use some sort of stimulant. We presume he did not realize, in that remark, that he unsaid more than he ever said for temperance.

FEEDING INFANTS.

Professor Rolleston, of Oxford, has been proving by a series of experiments, that the usual custom of feeding infants with starchy food, such as arrow-root, sago, tapioca, and corn-starch, is very pernicious, and that the infantine stomach is unable to digest the compounds made from these substances. He contends that the only real nutriment is the milk, sugar, eggs, etc., which are used in combination with the starchy preparations. Consequently, in the effort to digest the unnessary portions of the food, the stomach becomes weakened and digestion seriously impaired, while the body is weakened. These conclusions of a scientific man are worth heeding. There are sickly and weak infants enough crying for light, more light concerning the best methods for the development of their physical natures. The fearful mortalities in our cities surely is a finger pointing directly to ignorance and mismanagement somewhere, which it is the duty of science and philanthropy to heed.—Herald of Progress.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.60
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER, DEVOTED TO The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CRISIS BOX, BOSTON, MASS.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 450. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 17, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 9.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

TO L. A.—A MEMORIAL.

Standing amid life's rugged ways,
Far down the vista of the years
I look on scenes of other days,
And see thee through a mist of tears.

And yet, beyond the tears that fall
Unbidden, as I think of thee,
Our friendship was unclouded all,
And calmer than a summer sea.

Though years have passed since last we met—
Thou sought a home afar from me—
Yet memory never can forget
The happy hours I've passed with thee.

Thy heart was strong, thy years were few—
Ah! little did I think thine eyes
Would never more behold the blue
That's painted on thy native skies.

Ah! little was I thinking when
Thou bid'st our wave-washed shores adieu,
I ne'er should hear thy voice again
Until the earth shall bloom anew.

Thinking upon thee, cold and dead,
My eyes are blind with tears of pain;
The very clouds above my head
Deep-bordered with a fringe of rain;

The wild winds that go mourning by,
The dirge that riseth from the sea,
The lonely sea-bird's wailing cry,
Are sad, as if they mourned for thee.

We soon shall stand amid the Spring—
Ah, me! the brightness and the bloom;
O, tell me, what hast thou to bring
Hearts that have one more silent room?

O! may thy hours pass swiftly by,
And bring to earth that glorious day,
When shall be heard no bitter cry,
And all her tears be wiped away.

MRS. CHAS. A. KNOWLES.

Peace Dale, R. I.

For the World's Crisis.

IMMANUEL.

That the above name is applicable to our Savior is evident from the general testimony of the Scriptures. Paul writes that the ministry of reconciliation consists in this: "To wit, that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." 2 Cor. 5: 12. Therefore, as "God was in Christ," the name, Immanuel, is not only applicable, but requires to be applied to him to denote the divine manifestation in him. Accordingly, this name is applied to him in Matthew's gospel (chap. 1: 23,) when speaking of his being conceived and born of the virgin Mary. But this testimony of Matthew is objected to, because he testifies that the prophecy of Isaiah (chap. 7: 14) was literally fulfilled in the birth of Christ Jesus. This is objected to by those who think they have a more correct understanding of this prophecy than the one who penned the account in Matthew; because they infer that it was to have been fulfilled in the days of Ahaz, several hundred years before the birth of Christ. And yet they do not pretend that it was literally fulfilled even then, for they have no record of any such conception. To be sure Isaiah's wife conceived about that time, but then that proves that she was a married woman, instead of a virgin. And she had a son, and called his name, not Immanuel, but Mahershalal-hash-bar. Their inference is drawn so forcibly that its reaction draws them into a difficulty from which they cannot extricate themselves.

They infer that the prophecy was a sign to Ahaz, and that it could not have been a sign to him unless he had lived until it was fulfilled. But they overlook the fact that the sign was of a complex character, and included the [illegible] of the two kings who were warring against Ahaz, so that if the one part was fulfilled, it would be a standing sign that the other would be. It seems that Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, had taken counsel together against Ahaz, saying, "Let us go up against Judah, and vex it, and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst thereof, even the son of Tabeal," verse 6. To inform Ahaz that the design should never come to pass, Isaiah said, "Thus saith the Lord God, it shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass. For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within three score and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people. And the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son. If ye will not believe surely ye shall not be established." Verses 7–9.

In proof of the prediction here made we read thus: "Moreover the Lord spake again unto Ahaz, saying, Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ask it either in the depth, or in the heighth above. But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord. And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David; is it a small thing to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign. Behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land which thou abhorrest shall be forsaken by both her kings." Verses 14–16.

Not only is the birth of the virgin's child here predicted, but also the death of those two kings. And as their death took place very soon afterwards, it would be a standing proof to Ahaz that the other part of the sign would likewise be fulfilled in as literal a manner. So it would have been not only a sign to Ahaz, but to the house of David in future time, until it was wholly fulfilled in the birth of Jesus by the virgin Mary, and from thence forward forever. For the sign was given as a pledge that the design of those two kings to rob the tribe of Judah of their kingly rights should not come to pass.

But the birth of a child by some young, married woman, or an old one, in the days of Ahaz, would be no proof that the design of those two kings might not be carried into effect by their successors. It would be no proof, because it would be difficult to decide where, or of what female, he was to be born, and afterwards, whether any child born in his day would be said to have been born of a virgin. Besides, the expression—"Butter and honey shall he eat," indicates a state of peace when such articles would be abundant, which state of peace would be condusive of a sooner developement of the child's power to refuse the evil, and choose the good. But what evidence have we that any such child was born, under such circumstances, in the days of Ahaz? It cannot be in this statement—"Before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken by both her kings;" for that might have been fulfilled long before the child was born.

But, it must be conceded, the passage admits of a little chance for an inference, by which a great logical blunder may be committed, by those who are fond of grand and lofty tumbling. While on the other hand, there are two ways by which the inference may be met; first, because in prophecy things that are not, are sometimes spoken of as though they were—"unto us a child is born"—so the child might have been spoken of as though he were—"before the child shall know;" and that is, before the time required ordinarily for the child to know this, the land should be forsaken of both her kings. And then again, the term "child" might have been put for children in general; that is, before children who were born at the time the prophecy was uttered, should know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, those two kings were to become extinct. But there is something more said by Isaiah in continuation. He said to Ahaz:—

"The Lord shall bring upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon thy father's house, days that have not come, from the day that Ephraim departed from Judah; even the king of Assyria. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly that the is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria; . . . . and it shall come to pass that in that day, that a man shall nourish a young cow and two sheep; and it shall come to pass, for the abundance of milk that they shall give, that he shall eat butter; for butter and honey shall every one eat that is left in the land."

The wars between Judah and Israel, by which that land was devastated, were brought to an end by the subjugation of both peoples by the king of Assyria. And thus the house of Ahaz became tributary, finally, to the king of Assyria, and became incorporated into that kingdom; which was finally conquered by the Medo-Persian kingdom, and that by the Grecian, and that by the Roman. So that upon the house of Ahaz and his people, there came days such as had not come, "from the day Ephraim departed frou Judah."

So as it was to be in that day, or days, when the child was to "eat butter and honey," and as that day did not come till long after the death of Ahaz, we have no right to assume that the child called Immanuel was born until after the days of Ahaz. And so there is no evidence to show that Matthew was incorrect in declaring that the prophecy of Isaiah was fulfilled in the birth of Jesus, the son of Mary and Son of God.

WILLIAM HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

"WALK IN LOVE."

Some professing christians seem to forget this text; perhaps they have never learned it, and they "walk" in hatred, or coldness, or indifference, just as much as though it was not in the Bible. But it is there. It is short, containing only three words, and in them have the whole gospel of Jesus. For, says John, "He that loveth is born of God." It is a peculiar sort of love, and the directions about it are very simple and plain, to wit: "Walk in" it, or "walk together in" it;—for that is the force of the text. How can two "walk together except they be agreed?" Not by any means, and the agreement is "love"; and "walking" in it is keeping in it together, each and all being principally influenced by it.

There is the love of the world, but it is unlike christian love, for "if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Neither is it in him if he loves like the world. The world loves on the principle of the preferences of taste or refinement. Its loves are selfish and fickle, so that they depend for their development and support on fortunate natural circumstances, and if those circumstances are wanting, the love is wanting; and as they are likely to change, the love is likely to go with them. So that the poet truthfully said—

"The friends that in our sunshine live,
When winter comes are flown."

The love spoken of as christian love is dependent on circumstances, but not natural ones. The simple circumstance is conversion to God, and even then it may change; but when in the heart, its nature and effects are quite different. Its field is a large one, and in this short article I cannot go over it all. I simply wish to call the attention of the readers of the Crisis to a few negative facts with reference to it.

It is not like the love of the world, or natural love, regulated by natural tastes. That love is captious. This love avoids captiousness. It has no notions, no caste, no exclusiveness, except it be confined to God's people, and even then in but one of its characteristics. It has two, the reciprocal, and the diffusive. In the former it has some semblance to that of the world, but in the latter is peculiar to itself; so that being confined to no narrow bounds, it expresses itself in the language of the poet Wesley:—

"Oh! that the world would taste and see
The riches of his grace;
The arms of love that compass me
Would all mankind embrace."

So that narrow-minded bigots and creedists cannot well have it. It is a great leveler, knowing no limited boundary, but including all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all. God has no respect of persons, and loves all his saints alike. But some of those who profess to be in his "arms of love" have a different idea; they love themselves quite as well as they do any one; they are anxious to have every thing done to please themselves; and in the church, instead of being humble and loving, they are selfish and dictatorial. They are fastidious. The diffusive character of christian love, in fact the very feature that makes it "christian," they have forgotten. They are not satisfied with this preaching, or that; they want something smart. They are not willing to be simple in faith and good works, really enjoying religion; so they put themselves in the place of critics, and dictate how this preaching shall be done, and how that. One thinks in a certain way, and another the opposite way; and they forget that Father's plan is to give each his portion in due season, and he will send by whom he will, and so arranges the work of the gospel as that each one may give some crumbs of the bread of life to the other.

When christians walk in love, the great object of all is to make each brother and sister amount to as much in the service of God as possible. There is no exclusiveness, but the great motto is—Let us not judge one another any more, but in honor preferring one another, that we may be helpers to each other's joy.

I have sometimes in my pilgrim journey been more tried and afflicted by my brethren than by the world, on that very account; and I have from the fulness of their hearts received from many a mighty comfort.

When christians "walk in love," the church prospers. Some seem to think that prosperity is the certain result of having a smart preacher, and everything else in a smart way; when the truth is, there is the greatest prosperity with the humble, unpretending ones, whether they are "smart" or not; for God will give the sweet peace, the holy communion, to those who

"In expectation sweet,
. . . wait, and sing, and pray";

who are bound together in the "bundle of love," and who care more to be meek and holy in all their intercourse with each other. They may be anxious that all should hear the truth, and, Bible in hand, urge it upon their consideration; but they will not get out of the "little humble way," and like the popular churches in their desire strive to get numbers at the expense of humility.

In all these perilous times, there is need of the loving spirit of the early christians, whose popularity was to hold meetings in the caves of the earth, and who were glad to hear the comforting truth from whomsoever the message came.

Those who are looking for the Lord have special reason to be loving and sympathetic toward the household of faith, because as the trials increase and the dangers accumulate, they will need more and more the encouragement of the brethren and the sustaining grace of God. The time is coming, brethren; it is with us now; but it is yet to be more true than now, when nothing but the love of God and the brethren will be of value. All else is and in a more marked manner yet will still be worthless.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Montreal, C. E.

For the World's Crisis.

COMING OF CHRIST.

"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

Well may the coming of Christ be longed for by his people. For their sake he came into the world, suffered, died, rose, ascended; and for their sake it is that he will return. For their sake he will come and gather his people unto himself, that where he is there we may be also.

O glorious Bridegroom! thy departure was not upon divorce. Thou didst not leave us with a purpose to return no more. We have his promise, "I will come again." Fellow christian, what should we do if Christ were not to return? What a condition are we in! O think of it! In the midst of wolves, in a generation of vipers, sinning, suffering, groaning, dying. What a death-struck world is this! What a paradise lost! What an unfathomable grave-yard do we daily inhabit!

And think you Christ will leave his groaning ones here in this state forever? O no! that would be like our dealings with Christ, but not like his with us. He that came to suffer will come to triumph. He has purchased, and he will possess.

Herein is seen the patience of the saints. They have forsaken the world and present things for the name and sake of Christ. They are hated for his sake. They prefer him to all. And will he not come and reward them? He will come and he will not tarry.

What a day will that be when we shall be loosed from prison, when we are delivered, when we are saved! He will not come to be spit upon, or to be buffeted by a godless world. He will come King of kings, and Lord of lords.

O careless world! then shall ye see the glory of Him whom ye have pierced, and whom ye have despised; of whom you have said, We will not have this man for our ruler. Then shall your hearts yearn to be acknowledged friends of the glorious King, whose dominion shall be from the river to the ends of the earth. He will not come to Jerusalem on an ass, but in the clouds, on the wings of the morning; attended not with hosannahs of dying men, but with loud acclamations of glorious melody from the hearts and tongues of immortal hosts and redeemed ones. Then shall ye witness the truth—"Blessed are all they that wait for him." Then shall commence the morning of inconceivable wonders, the mighty hour that staggers partial faith. Now, now is come the hour for the fulfillment of his word: "All that asleep shall awake"! Then shall these scattered bones and dust become a man. Then shall I open mine eyes to behold the wonders of eternity. Then shall I see as I am seen, and know as I am known; yea, I shall know the certainty of everlasting truth.

Now then will I triumph in the eternal God, in all his promises, and continually pray, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly; and receive from the Spirit the joyful sound—Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus.

Your brother in sorrow, D. WHEELER.

East Cambridge, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

LINES IN AN ALBUM.

What shall I ask for thee, my friend?
Days free from care and full of bliss?
Nay, for till time's last storm shall end,
This world grants not a boon like this.

What shall I ask? for wealth and gold,
For pomp and glory sought and gained?
Nay, for these things seem vain when told
To hearts bowed down and spirits pained.

What shall I ask? for thornless flowers,
Scattered along thine earthly way?
Nay, till you reach bright Eden's bowers,
Shall you escape the desert's sway.

I ask for thee a steadfast heart,
A soul untroubled and secure,
A faith unshrinking zeal to impart,
A spirit noble to endure.

I ask for thee a steady aim,
A mind by fear nor favor swayed,
Devoid of earthly pride and shame,
In peace on God's own mercy stayed.

I ask for thee a Savior's love,
Coming to cheer each gloomy hour,
Which, even when heaven and earth shall move,
Shall hold thee safely by its power.

I ask for thee, when toils are o'er,
A rest eternal, sacred, sure,
A home, when time shall be no more,
Where friendship ever shall endure.

H. L. H.

PREACHING FOR THE MASSES.

BY REV. GEORGE SHEPARD, D. D.

Is there any way to make our preaching more effectual on the masses—make it strike and do good beyond the customary limit or range of its efficacy? It is alleged, from a highly authoritative source, in a recent book on the christian ministry, that the preachers of this day are at fault—keeping too much to a refined and intellectual type of discourse—having too constantly in mind an elite or elect class of hearers. I do not undertake to pronounce on the statements of this book, any further than to say, that they deserve the serious consideration of the ministry.

I suggest here, that there are three cardinal qualities which, as it seems to me, would give our preaching a far greater effectiveness in the old, beaten field, and which especially would carry it over into new fields, and make it more signally a power there. Preaching viewed, first, as promulging, or declaring; secondly, as self-evidencing; thirdly, as dispensing. If we examine carefully the earliest preachers of the church—the apostles especially—we shall find unquestionably that they were remarkable, were characterized, by these three qualities or features: promulging, self-evidencing, and dispensing—these the cardinal qualities of their preaching.

Let us now turn to these as elements of power in setting forth to men—new classes of men—the gospel message. We first view preaching as proclaiming, promulging, declaring, and consider the condition of power so far as lying in this quality. The first christian preachers were prominently promulgers. The very name preacher (kerux) indicated this. The preacher, a herald—preaching then, a species of heralding; a trumpet-tone and service; a concrete embodiment and setting forth of knowledge and doctrine; a seizing and greatening certain primary and essential facts, giving them an unqualified and unmistakable outstand and prominence—somehow making them obtrusive and adhesive to the men in hearing. So did Paul, the great apostle, and the greatest of preachers. Evidently two master ideas successively had possession and ruled in him; first, was the old, fomenting, Jewish idea; then, this regenerated, and baptized into the christian idea—the seat, ever after, of infinitely purer and intenser ardors; not now the bondage of law, under the pharisaic interpretation, but the largeness, freeness, and opulence of faith, as the justifying principle or condition. We may be surprised at Paul's confined range, as indicated in that announcement he so emphatically makes—"For I am determined not to know any thing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." But we are not to conclude that this species of limitation, recognized by the apostle, operated to cramp or enfeeble his action—rather the opposite. For we find all down the past that the great achievers by speech and deed have been more commonly of a like limitation—a very few things on their part to say or do, but those few overwhelmingly put.

There is one quality which preaching thus viewed as announcing, promulging, secures, namely: That it is ever clearly positive in its character. Of necessity, it must be strongly positive—a projecting into bold relief of the great essentials in fact and doctrine. This must be done, in order that the minds that are to receive them, may, in some tolerable proportion to the whole, succeed in receiving them, really take them in, apprehend them, and not mistake concerning them. It is remarkable how difficult it is to secure a clear lodgment, in the minds of the people, of the most simple, rudimental truths, in morals, government, or religion. Take repentance, for instance. How many hear repentance preached through life, and at the end but imperfectly know what it is; so that, if their salvation turned upon their having the right intellectual idea, they would not be saved.

Take, also, the war matters now so sadly in progress. How utterly perverse are the views and judgments of multitudes at home and abroad; and this, for the want of the one central, cardinal idea—that it is a rebellion we are contending with. Our foes and their friends are REBELS. How exceedingly difficult to gain admission for this idea—even this, which, if admitted, sets all else in the judgments right. How all but impossible has it been to gain a place for it amongst those of our fatherland. True, it is the passions that cloud and hinder, and this same holds everywhere on all vital subjects, especially religion. Hence, the propriety and necessity that the preaching deal in very clear statements; not thin, or fine, or equivocal; not the truth split into hairs; but endued with substance, and built into the concrete; and continue thus to do; and, if possible, succeed in getting a few leading right ideas at once clearly into the head, and profoundly in the heart.

It follows, almost without an inference, that the kind of preaching we are considering—preaching with the obtrusive and implanting intent—not only does not ask for the refinements of rhetoric, the mere esthetics, but instinctively dismisses them. The very aim and tone of this kind, necessitate plainness. And then the great precursor in this line has struck for us the key. He has given us the pattern, who, in carrying through his resolve—"not to know any thing among the people save Jesus Christ and him crucified"—fell, as he tells us, upon the simplicities of language, abjured the high wrought, the artistic, or what he calls, as given in our tongue, "the excellencies of speech." He appears before us as one evidently burdened, and greatly hesitating, on account of the disadvantageous, the homely, the enfeebling, lying in his case. And yet, when he came to the work, he did it manfully; he did it mightily, inasmuch as his preaching was not with the "enticing words of man's wisdom," but with the opposite in style, and therefore with demonstration and power.

It is worthy of note how often the men with the defects have the most signally wrought and swept on to the large results. As in the case of this apostle, whom we hear groaning in his conscious meanness, at the same time the world and heaven were ringing with the fame of his deeds. While sinking himself out of sight, principalities and powers, the most hostile and audacious, were giving way before him. And it was done in his case "by the foolishness of preaching;" and also in the case of most who have come after him in any like efficiency—it was "by the foolishness of preaching." Who has not found himself springing to the rescue of this phrase of Paul's using, ready to show that it does not mean foolish preaching? For one, I have been somewhat shaken on that point; and, from later observations, am about ready to confess that it does, sometimes at least, mean foolish preaching. One thing is certain, that to us of the rules and the forms, it is foolish preaching. There is no linking of a process; or backing of an argument; or felicity of figure or phrase. Only this: the great things of God are boldly given; done with a rough depicting, a vehement downrightness, a persistent affirming. The people are told that it is so, just as it is here written in the book. "The eternal all with you is at stake. See the rage and swelter of the devouring fire. Behold the Lamb of God. Now is the time. Escape for your life." And the rugged and steaming words take hold; and men in crowds that never heard before, hear now; and the weakness and the foolishness strangely become to them a power of redemption—this, when it is about certain that the far abler man, by the more authentic modes, and by a speech replete with all the selectest qualities, never would have reached them.—Independent.

For the World's Crisis.

"WHO SHALL STAND?"—Mal. 3: 2.

Often have we all thought of that searching question, and no doubt received benefit every time we considered its import, as well as its chronology—"when HE APPEARETH. The answer is plain; all we need to do is to examine ourselves, and prove whether we are RIGHT now, i. e., always right, in the present tense. Paul, Peter, and John, of the apostles, agree with Malachi (3: 16) as to the character of those who will stand before HIM in judgment. Malachi declares it is those "who feared the Lord," and John tells us in verse four of his first epistle, that he writes "these things" that our "joy may be full." On reading "these things," we find "If we walk in the light . . . . we have fellowship, ... and the blood of JESUS . . . cleanseth us from sin." And again, "hereby WE KNOW that we love him, if we keep his commandments;" and whoso keepeth HIS word, in him verily is the love of God perfected; hereby—we KNOW that we are in him." So when we speak of abiding in Christ, the vine, we know how to prove ourselves there. In fact, all of John's epistle tends to show us how firmly we can rest assured of eternal life. If we are truly abiding in the vine, shall we have any fears of being cast off at the left hand when he appeareth?

Here let me say, I know of nothing so comforting to a weak, doubting soul, as this first epistle of the beloved disciple. Peter's testimony is that if we "do these things, we shall never fall," while Paul declares, "There is therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus," agreeing fully with John's statement, "there is no fear in love; perfect love casteth out all fear." Being thus blessed, we have confidence when HE shall appear, and shall "not be ashamed before him at his coming."—John 2: 28.

"Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord." There is a "know so" to this faith, wholly unlike that of a class of Infidels in Lowell, who have been considering this question, "Who and what is God?" One of the rules of the discussion being that no participant should quote or be influenced by any authority whatever except his own mind. Every one expressed his views freely, yet no conclusion could be reached. Thank God, we can all be established in the faith once delivered to the saints, (i. e., delivered only ONCE,—as that was sufficient. If it could be shown that it was delivered TWICE, then a doubt might be raised as to which of the two would be the ONE FAITH we were to follow.) Now, having this full assurance of faith, our joy will be complete, and although God's judgments may fall with telling effect upon the wicked, yet like Habakkuk will we rejoice in the Lord, and joy in the God of our salvation.

Brethren, heed Paul's exhortation; "Be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as YE KNOW that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Yours, believing the judgment to be very near at hand, C. W. SARGENT.

East Concord, N. H.

N. B. As the season is nearing when camp, grove, and tent meetings can be held, I would endorse Sr. Willard's article on "Wilbraham" (in Crisis of April 26th), as being applicable to many, if not all, such meetings. Begin to prepare for them now. Let business be so arranged as to have ample time to go, and go prepared to benefit others who may be in need of your help. Do not go like a cold-hearted and worldly professor, who, on being asked by a sinner to pray for him, (on a certain occasion, when he felt the need of a Savior,) was obliged to pray for himself first before he could pray for the poor sinner.

C. W. S.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.—No. 8.

Dear reader, in conclusion suffer a word of exhortation. We have cited your attention to a few of the many illustrations abounding in the Scriptures of the power of prayer—prayer offered by those of like passions with us—by those who were encompassed with infirmity, and far from perfect in all their acts. We have done this for your encouragement. God is just as willing to hear and answer your prayers as he was theirs.

And if under the less effulgent light of the old dispensation, with far less helps to faith than are now afforded, with a more limited knowledge of the power and love of God than is now made known, the saints were enabled so fully to prevail in prayer, how much more ought christians now to daily exult in the assurance of answers from heaven.

The Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world, had not then been slain; the High Priest, who ever liveth to make intercession for those who come unto God by him, and is able to save to the uttermost all who thus come, had not then ascended on high as our Advocate; the vast treasury of grace, sufficient for every want, adapted to every emergency, was not then opened; the exceeding great and precious promises, by which we are made partakers of the divine nature, were not then given; the Comforter had not then come; the Holy Ghost had not then been poured forth in its fulness for the consolation, guide, instructor, illuminator, reprover, sanctifier, intercessor, witness and pledge of future life and glory to the church. All these rich gifts pertain to the New Covenant.

Then God had not manifested himself fully as a God of love. He revealed himself in flame, in the lightning's flash, the thunder's roar, the earthquake, the destroying hail, the blasting mildew, the dreadful plague. He sent forth prophets, not laden with messages of mercy so much as messages of woe. They came with denunciations for sin, and predictions of coming wrath.

But to us God hath spoken by his Son. He comes not as a messenger of woe, but as an angel of love. No lightning's flash, no thunder's peal, mark the opening of the New Era, as at Sinai. The music of the heavenly throng greets the ear, while angel voices announce the glad news of a Savior's birth. God now reveals his love and good will to suffering humanity through the life and teachings of his beloved Son. He shows them the path of immortality—the way of holiness. He invites them to the Father's arms. He receiveth sinners and eateth with them. He searcheth for the lost sheep. He wins the prodigal back. He heals the sick. He opens blind eyes, unstops deaf ears, and causeth the lame man to leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb to sing. How he sympathizes with the suffering, weeps with the bereaved, succors the destitute! Consider his gentle, loving, merciful character, and then remember HE is the one who says, "He that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." He is the one who says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." He is the one who says, "I will pray the Father for you." He is the one who has assured us that "whatsoever ye ask of the Father in my name, I will do it for you." He is the one who says, "Ask, and receive, that your joy may be full." He is the one who ever liveth to make intercession for you, when you come to the Father in his name. Can you come to him? Can you not believe his blessed promises? Can you not rely on his blood for pardon and purity; on his name for acceptance with God; on his intercessions for success in prayer? Can you not cast all your burdens on this kind Friend?

He was a perfect representation of the Eternal Mind. All the love, all the pity, all the tenderness exhibited by him, first had their embodiment in the Father. He came not to reconcile God to the world, but the world to God. He came to convince us of a Father's love to his sinful children. God so loved the world as to give his only begotten Son to die for its salvation. If he freely gave Heaven's richest boon, how much more will he with him freely give us all things! He gave the greatest; will he withhold the less?

By the character of Christ, the promises of Christ, the intercession of Christ, we have every encouragement to pray in faith, nothing doubting. Let us not only know, but also believe the love the Father hath to us, and believing commit ourselves unreservedly to him for protection from evil, asking confidingly for every needed grace, walking with him in sweet fellowship. He would have us exhibit to the world the fair robes with which he clothes us, the precious ornaments with which he adorns us, the luxuries with which he feeds us, the abundant joys he bestows upon us, that others may thereby be won to his home and heart.

May the Lord stir us up to pray more believingly—more fervently—more effectually, that we may be made more joyful in his house of prayer. May the cold, unfeeling, formal, stereotyped prayer be exchanged for the simple, earnest, heartfelt, trusting supplication, mixed with praise, which honors God, and brings strength, and power, and purity, and love, y[illegible] every heavenly grace in abundant fulness to our own souls.

To aid in this work, take your pens, my brother and sister, and sketch some incident from your own experience of the efficacy of prayer. We need experience. We have much theory, let us have a weekly portion of simple heart experience for the nourishment of our spiritual nature.

M. D. W.

For the World's Crisis.

RELIGION.—WHAT IS IT?

Most that profess it seem to mistake its true nature. Some suppose it to be a certain kind or amount of feeling, and they do not claim to have religion if destitute of the same. If this varies they lay it often to temptation or to some trial, and do not have any more religion until they get this again; and it is often a cause of great trial and discouragement to them because their enjoyment is so limited; and the greater part of their time is taken up in hoping for better days, but this they do not look for unless there should be a revival, as they term it. On such occasions they seem to wake up a little; but their enjoyment is limited to the revival excitement, and dies away with it. They are always in hot water or cold, and their conduct is much like that of the world, more or less, according to circumstances. Sometimes hearing a good sermon will produce this feeling; this they call enjoying religion a little. It seems to be quite a mystery why they have so little good feeling. Shall I solve the mystery?

What is religion? It is purely obedience to God, and nothing else; and the enjoyment of religion is just in proportion to our obedience. All the feelings that we may have that we call religion are only of human kind, unless they spring from obedience. Good conduct will produce good feelings. If we have but little enjoyment it is because we are disobedient. If we want permanent enjoyment we must be continually obedient.

O that all who are looking for the coming of Christ would show that they are sanctified through the truth by continual obedience to God!

H. L. BRADLEY.

Bristol, Ct.

For the World's Crisis.

DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

We read in John, first chapter, "In the beginning was the word, (the word of God,) and the word was with God (for he spoke it) and the word was God. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made." How was this? He spake, and it was done. God spoke the word, and the divine influence, or Holy Spirit, obeying the command caused Christ to be created. Matt. 1: 18; Luke 1: 35; John 1: 14.

We see by this that the second Adam, or Christ, was created in something such a manner as the first Adam. The first Adam was created in innocence. So was the second. But the first was tempted before the Holy Spirit had come upon him, and the second, even Christ, after. See Luke 3: 22; 4: 2; Matt. 1: 16; 4: 1; Mark 1: 10–13.

In this we see the works of God contrasted in a beautiful manner, and we stop and ponder for a moment with enraptured delight. It was Christ who was tempted in every point like as we are, but without sinning. He bore the cross and endured the shame for you and me. He ascended to the right hand of the Father, and is there making intercessions for us. He soon will come as King of kings and Lord of Lords. Are you prepared to meet him? May God prepare us to meet him in peace, and hear his welcome voice saying, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

HERBERT H. BROWN.

Rochester, N. Y.

☞ Whosoever and whatsoever are two precious words often used in the mouth of Christ. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." (Rev. 22: 17.) "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do." (John 14: 13.) "Whosoever" is on the outside of the gate, and lets in all who choose. "Whatsoever" is on the inside, and gives those who enter the free range of all the region and treasury of grace. "Whosoever" makes salvation free; "whatsoever" makes it full.

☞ Begin your web, and God will supply you with thread.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 450. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 17, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 9.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR, H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN, SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

TO L. A.—A MEMORIAL.

Standing amid life's rugged ways,
Far down the vista of the years
I look on scenes of other days,
And see thee through a mist of tears.

And yet, beyond the tears that fall
Unbidden, as I think of thee,
Our friendship was unclouded all,
And calmer than a summer sea.

Though years have passed since last we met—
Thou sought a home afar from me—
Yet memory never can forget
The happy hours I've passed with thee.

Thy heart was strong, thy years were few—
Ah! little did I think thine eyes
Would never more behold the blue
That's painted on thy native skies.

Ah! little was I thinking when
Thou bid'st our wave-washed shores adieu,
I ne'er should hear thy voice again
Until the earth shall bloom anew.

Thinking upon thee, cold and dead,
My eyes are blind with tears of pain;
The very clouds above my head
Deep-bordered with a fringe of rain;

The wild winds that go mourning by,
The dirge that riseth from the sea,
The lonely sea-bird's wailing cry,
Are sad, as if they mourned for thee.

We soon shall stand amid the Spring—
Ah, me! the brightness and the bloom;
O, tell me, what hast thou to bring
Hearts that have one more silent room?

O! may thy hours pass swiftly by,
And bring to earth that glorious day,
When shall be heard no bitter cry,
And all her tears be wiped away.

MRS. CHAS. A. KNOWLES.

Peace Dale, R. I.

For the World's Crisis.

IMMANUEL.

That the above name is applicable to our Savior is evident from the general testimony of the Scriptures. Paul writes that the ministry of reconciliation consists in this: "To wit, that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." 2 Cor. 5: 12. Therefore, as "God was in Christ," the name, Immanuel, is not only applicable, but requires to be applied to him to denote the divine manifestation in him. Accordingly, this name is applied to him in Matthew's gospel (chap. 1: 23,) when speaking of his being conceived and born of the virgin Mary. But this testimony of Matthew is objected to, because he testifies that the prophecy of Isaiah (chap. 7: 14) was literally fulfilled in the birth of Christ Jesus. This is objected to by those who think they have a more correct understanding of this prophecy than the one who penned the account in Matthew; because they infer that it was to have been fulfilled in the days of Ahaz, several hundred years before the birth of Christ. And yet they do not pretend that it was literally fulfilled even then, for they have no record of any such conception. To be sure Isaiah's wife conceived about that time, but then that proves that she was a married woman, instead of a virgin. And she had a son, and called his name, not Immanuel, but Mahershalal-hash-bar. Their inference is drawn so forcibly that its reaction draws them into a difficulty from which they cannot extricate themselves.

They infer that the prophecy was a sign to Ahaz, and that it could not have been a sign to him unless he had lived until it was fulfilled. But they overlook the fact that the sign was of a complex character, and included the [illegible] of the two kings who were warring against Ahaz, so that if the one part was fulfilled, it would be a standing sign that the other would be. It seems that Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, had taken counsel together against Ahaz, saying, "Let us go up against Judah, and vex it, and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst thereof, even the son of Tabeal," verse 6. To inform Ahaz that the design should never come to pass, Isaiah said, "Thus saith the Lord God, it shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass. For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within three score and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people. And the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son. If ye will not believe surely ye shall not be established." Verses 7–9.

In proof of the prediction here made we read thus: "Moreover the Lord spake again unto Ahaz, saying, Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ask it either in the depth, or in the heighth above. But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord. And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David; is it a small thing to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign. Behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land which thou abhorrest shall be forsaken by both her kings." Verses 14–16.

Not only is the birth of the virgin's child here predicted, but also the death of those two kings. And, as their death took place very soon afterwards, it would be a standing proof to Ahaz that the other part of the sign would likewise be fulfilled in as literal a manner. So it would have been not only a sign to Ahaz, but to the house of David in future time, until it was wholly fulfilled in the birth of Jesus by the virgin Mary, and from thence forward forever. For the sign was given as a pledge that the design of those two kings to rob the tribe of Judah of their kingly rights should not come to pass.

But the birth of a child by some young, married woman, or an old one, in the days of Ahaz, would be no proof that the design of those two kings might not be carried into effect by their successors. It would be no proof, because it would be difficult to decide where, or of what female, he was to be born, and afterwards, whether any child born in his day would be said to have been born of a virgin. Besides, the expression—"Butter and honey shall he eat," indicates a state of peace when such articles would be abundant, which state of peace would be condusive of a sooner developement of the child's power to refuse the evil, and choose the good. But what evidence have we that any such child was born, under such circumstances, in the days of Ahaz? It cannot be in this statement—"Before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken by both her kings;" for that might have been fulfilled long before the child was born.

But, it must be conceded, the passage admits of a little chance for an inference, by which a great logical blunder may be committed, by those who are fond of grand and lofty tumbling. While on the other hand, there are two ways by which the inference may be met; first, because in prophecy things that are not, are sometimes spoken of as though they were—"unto us a child is born"—so the child might have been spoken of as though he were—"before the child shall know;" and that is, before the time required ordinarily for the child to know this, the land should be forsaken of both her kings. And then again, the term "child" might have been put for children in general; that is, before children who were born at the time the prophecy was uttered, should know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, those two kings were to become extinct. But there is something more said by Isaiah in continuation. He said to Ahaz:—

"The Lord shall bring upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon thy father's house, days that have not come, from the day that Ephraim departed from Judah; even the king of Assyria. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly that the is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria; . . . . and it shall come to pass that in that day, that a man shall nourish a young cow and two sheep; and it shall come to pass, for the abundance of milk that they shall give, that he shall eat butter; for butter and honey shall every one eat that is left in the land."

The wars between Judah and Israel, by which that land was devastated, were brought to an end by the subjugation of both peoples by the king of Assyria. And thus the house of Ahaz became tributary, finally, to the king of Assyria, and became incorporated into that kingdom; which was finally conquered by the Medo-Persian kingdom, and that by the Grecian, and that by the Roman. So that upon the house of Ahaz and his people, there came days such as had not come, "from the day Ephraim departed frou Judah."

So as it was to be in that day, or days, when the child was to "eat butter and honey," and as that day did not come till long after the death of Ahaz, we have no right to assume that the child called Immanuel was born until after the days of Ahaz. And so there is no evidence to show that Matthew was incorrect in declaring that the prophecy of Isaiah was fulfilled in the birth of Jesus, the son of Mary and Son of God.

WILLIAM HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

"WALK IN LOVE."

Some professing christians seem to forget this text; perhaps they have never learned it, and they "walk" in hatred, or coldness, or indifference, just as much as though it was not in the Bible. But it is there. It is short, containing only three words, and in them have the whole gospel of Jesus. For, says John, "He that loveth is born of God." It is a peculiar sort of love, and the directions about it are very simple and plain, to wit: "Walk in" it, or "walk together in" it;—for that is the force of the text. How can two "walk together except they be agreed?" Not by any means, and the agreement is "love"; and "walking" in it is keeping in it together, each and all being principally influenced by it.

There is the love of the world, but it is unlike christian love, for "if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Neither is it in him if he loves like the world. The world loves on the principle of the preferences of taste or refinement. Its loves are selfish and fickle, so that they depend for their development and support on fortunate natural circumstances, and if those circumstances are wanting, the love is wanting; and as they are likely to change, the love is likely to go with them. So that the poet truthfully said—

"The friends that in our sunshine live,
When winter comes are flown."

The love spoken of as christian love is dependent on circumstances, but not natural ones. The simple circumstance is conversion to God, and even then it may change; but when in the heart, its nature and effects are quite different. Its field is a large one, and in this short article I cannot go over it all. I simply wish to call the attention of the readers of the Crisis to a few negative facts with reference to it.

It is not like the love of the world, or natural love, regulated by natural tastes. That love is captious. This love avoids captiousness. It has no notions, no caste, no [illegible], except it be confined to God's people, and even then in but one of its characteristics. It has two, the reciprocal, and the diffusive. In the former it has some semblance to that of the world, but in the latter is peculiar to itself; so that being confined to no narrow bounds, it expresses itself in the language of the poet Wesley:—

"Oh! that the world would taste and see
The riches of his grace;
The arms of love that compass me
Would all mankind embrace."

So that narrow-minded bigots and creedists cannot well have it. It is a great leveler, knowing no limited boundary, but including all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all. God has no respect of persons, and loves all his saints alike. But some of those who profess to be in his "arms of love" have a different idea; they love themselves quite as well as they do any one; they are anxious to have every thing done to please themselves; and in the church, instead of being humble and loving, they are selfish and dictatorial. They are fastidious. The diffusive character of christian love, in fact the very feature that makes it "christian," they have forgotten. They are not satisfied with this preaching, or that; they want something smart. They are not willing to be simple in faith and good works, really enjoying religion; so they put themselves in the place of critics, and dictate how this preaching shall be done, and how that. One thinks in a certain way, and another the opposite way; and they forget that Father's plan is to give each his portion in due season, and he will send by whom he will, and so arranges the work of the gospel as that each one may give some crumbs of the bread of life to the other.

When christians walk in love, the great object of all is to make each brother and sister amount to as much in the service of God as possible. There is no exclusiveness, but the great motto is—Let us not judge one another any more, but in honor preferring one another, that we may be helpers to each other's joy.

I have sometimes in my pilgrim journey been more tried and afflicted by my brethren than by the world, on that very account; and I have from the fulness of their hearts received from many a mighty comfort.

When christians "walk in love," the church prospers. Some seem to think that prosperity is the certain result of having a smart preacher, and everything else in a smart way; when the truth is, there is the greatest prosperity with the humble, unpretending ones, whether they are "smart" or not; for God will give the sweet peace, the holy communion, to those who

"In expectation sweet,
. . . wait, and sing, and pray";

who are bound together in the "bundle of love," and who care more to be meek and holy in all their intercourse with each other. They may be anxious that all should hear the truth, and, Bible in hand, urge it upon their consideration; but they will not get out of the "little humble way," and like the popular churches in their desire strive to get numbers at the expense of humility.

In all these perilous times, there is need of the loving spirit of the early christians, whose popularity was to hold meetings in the caves of the earth, and who were glad to hear the comforting truth from whomsoever the message came.

Those who are looking for the Lord have special reason to be loving and sympathetic toward the household of faith, because as the trials increase and the dangers accumulate, they will need more and more the encouragement of the brethren and the sustaining grace of God. The time is coming, brethren; it is with us now; but it is yet to be more true than now, when nothing but the love of God and the brethren will be of value. All else is and in a more marked manner yet will still be worthless.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

Montreal, C. E.

For the World's Crisis.

COMING OF CHRIST.

"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

Well may the coming of Christ be longed for by his people. For their sake he came into the world, suffered, died, rose, ascended; and for their sake it is that he will return. For their sake he will come and gather his people unto himself, that where he is there we may be also.

O glorious Bridegroom! thy departure was not upon divorce. Thou didst not leave us with a purpose to return no more. We have his promise, "I will come again." Fellow christian, what should we do if Christ were not to return? What a condition are we in! O think of it! In the midst of wolves, in a generation of vipers, sinning, suffering, groaning, dying. What a death-struck world is this! What a paradise lost! What an unfathomable grave-yard do we daily inhabit!

And think you Christ will leave his groaning ones here in this state forever? O no! that would be like our dealings with Christ, but not like his with us. He that came to suffer will come to triumph. He has purchased, and he will possess.

Herein is seen the patience of the saints. They have forsaken the world and present things for the name and sake of Christ. They are hated for his sake. They prefer him to all. And will he not come and reward them? He will come and he will not tarry.

What a day will that be when we shall be loosed from prison, when we are delivered, when we are saved! He will not come to be spit upon, or to be buffeted by a godless world. He will come King of kings, and Lord of lords.

O careless world! then shall ye see the glory of Him whom ye have pierced, and whom ye have despised; of whom you have said, We will not have this man for our ruler. Then shall your hearts yearn to be acknowledged friends of the glorious King, whose dominion shall be from the river to the ends of the earth. He will not come to Jerusalem on an ass, but in the clouds, on the wings of the morning; attended not with hosannahs of dying men, but with loud acclamations of glorious melody from the hearts and tongues of immortal hosts and redeemed ones. Then shall ye witness the truth—"Blessed are all they that wait for him." Then shall commence the morning of inconceivable wonders, the mighty hour that staggers partial faith. Now, now is come the hour for the fulfillment of his word: "All that sleep shall awake"! Then shall these scattered bones and dust become a man. Then shall I open mine eyes to behold the wonders of eternity. Then shall I see as I am seen, and know as I am known; yea, I shall know the certainty of everlasting truth.

Now then will I triumph in the eternal God, in all his promises, and continually pray, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly; and receive from the Spirit the joyful sound—Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus.

Your brother in sorrow, D. WHEELER.

East Cambridge, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

LINES IN AN ALBUM.

What shall I ask for thee, my friend?
Days free from care and full of bliss?
Nay, for till time's last storm shall end,
This world grants not a boon like this.

What shall I ask? for wealth and gold,
For pomp and glory sought and gained?
Nay, for these things seem vain when told
To hearts bowed down and spirits pained.

What shall I ask? for thornless flowers,
Scattered along thine earthly way?
Nay, till you reach bright Eden's bowers,
Shall you escape the desert's sway.

I ask for thee a steadfast heart,
A soul untroubled and secure,
A faith unshrinking zeal to impart,
A spirit noble to endure.

I ask for thee a steady aim,
A mind by fear nor favor swayed,
Devoid of earthly pride and shame,
In peace on God's own mercy stayed.

I ask for thee a Savior's love,
Coming to cheer each gloomy hour,
Which, even when heaven and earth shall move,
Shall hold thee safely by its power.

I ask for thee, when toils are o'er,
A rest eternal, sacred, sure,
A home, when time shall be no more,
Where friendship ever shall endure.

H. L. H.

PREACHING FOR THE MASSES.

BY REV. GEORGE SHEPARD, D. D.

Is there any way to make our preaching more effectual on the masses—make it strike and do good beyond the customary limit or range of its efficacy? It is alleged, from a highly authoritative source, in a recent book on the christian ministry, that the preachers of this day are at fault—keeping too much to a refined and intellectual type of discourse—having too constantly in mind an elite or elect class of hearers. I do not undertake to pronounce on the statements of this book, any further than to say, that they deserve the serious consideration of the ministry.

I suggest here, that there are three cardinal qualities which, as it seems to me, would give our preaching a far greater effectiveness in the old, beaten field, and which especially would carry it over into new fields, and make it more signally a power there. Preaching viewed, first, as promulging, or declaring; secondly, as self-evidencing; thirdly, as dispensing. If we examine carefully the earliest preachers of the church—the apostles especially—we shall find unquestionably that they were remarkable, were characterized, by these three qualities or features: promulging, self-evidencing, and dispensing—these the cardinal qualities of their preaching.

Let us now turn to these as elements of power in setting forth to men—new classes of men—the gospel message. We first view preaching as proclaiming, promulging, declaring, and consider the condition of power so far as lying in this quality. The first christian preachers were prominently promulgers. The very name preacher (kerux) indicated this. The preacher, a herald—preaching then, a species of heralding; a trumpet-tone and service; a concrete embodiment and setting forth of knowledge and doctrine; a seizing and greatening certain primary and essential facts, giving them an unqualified and unmistakable outstand and prominence—somehow making them obtrusive and adhesive to the men in hearing. So did Paul, the great apostle, and the greatest of preachers. Evidently two master ideas successively had possession and ruled in him; first, was the old, fomenting, Jewish idea; then, this regenerated, and baptized into the christian idea—the seat, ever after, of infinitely purer and intenser ardors; not now the bondage of law, under the pharisaic interpretation, but the largeness, freeness, and opulence of faith, as the justifying principle or condition. We may be surprised at Paul's confined range, as indicated in that announcement he so emphatically makes—"For I am determined not to know any thing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." But we are not to conclude that this species of limitation, recognized by the apostle, operated to cramp or enfeeble his action—rather the opposite. For we find all down the past that the great achievers by speech and deed have been more commonly of a like limitation—a very few things on their part to say or do, but those few overwhelmingly put.

There is one quality which preaching thus viewed as announcing, promulging, secures, namely: That it is ever clearly positive in its character. Of necessity, it must be strongly positive—a projecting into bold relief of the great essentials in fact and doctrine. This must be done, in order that the minds that [illegible] them, really take them in, apprehend them, and not mistake concerning them. It is remarkable how difficult it is to secure a clear lodgment, in the minds of the people, of the most simple, rudimental truths, in morals, government, or religion. Take repentance, for instance. How many hear repentance preached through life, and at the end but imperfectly know what it is; so that, if their salvation turned upon their having the right intellectual idea, they would not be saved.

Take, also, the war matters now so sadly in progress. How utterly perverse are the views and judgments of multitudes at home and abroad; and this, for the want of the one central, cardinal idea—that it is a rebellion we are contending with. Our foes and their friends are REBELS. How exceedingly difficult to gain admission for this idea—even this, which, if admitted, sets all else in the judgments right. How all but impossible has it been to gain a place for it amongst those of our fatherland. True, it is the passions that cloud and hinder, and this same holds everywhere on all vital subjects, especially religion. Hence, the propriety and necessity that the preaching deal in very clear statements; not thin, or fine, or equivocal; not the truth split into hairs; but endued with substance, and built into the concrete; and continue thus to do; and, if possible, succeed in getting a few leading right ideas at once clearly into the head, and profoundly in the heart.

It follows, almost without an inference, that the kind of preaching we are considering—preaching with the obtrusive and implanting intent—not only does not ask for the refinements of rhetoric, the mere esthetics, but instinctively dismisses them. The very aim and tone of this kind, necessitate plainness. And then the great precursor in this line has struck for us the key. He has given us the pattern, who, in carrying through his resolve—"not to know any thing among the people save Jesus Christ and him crucified"—fell, as he tells us, upon the simplicities of language, abjured the high wrought, the artistic, or what he calls, as given in our tongue, "the excellencies of speech." He appears before us as one evidently burdened, and greatly hesitating, on account of the disadvantageous, the homely, the enfeebling, lying in his case. And yet, when he came to the work, he did it manfully; he did it mightily, inasmuch as his preaching was not with the "enticing words of man's wisdom," but with the opposite in style, and therefore with demonstration and power.

It is worthy of note how often the men with the defects have the most signally wrought and swept on to the large results. As in the case of this apostle, whom we hear groaning in his conscious meanness, at the same time the world and heaven were ringing with the fame of his deeds. While sinking himself out of sight, principalities and powers, the most hostile and audacious, were giving way before him. And it was done in his case "by the foolishness of preaching;" and also in the case of most who have come after him in any like efficiency—it was "by the foolishness of preaching." Who has not found himself springing to the rescue of this phrase of Paul's using, ready to show that it does not mean foolish preaching? For one, I have been somewhat shaken on that point; and, from later observations, am about ready to confess that it does, sometimes at least, mean foolish preaching. One thing is certain, that to us of the rules and the forms, it is foolish preaching. There is no linking of a process; or backing of an argument; or felicity of figure or phrase. Only this: the great things of God are boldly given; done with a rough depicting, a vehement downrightness, a persistent affirming. The people are told that it is so, just as it is here written in the book. "The eternal all with you is at stake. See the rage and swelter of the devouring fire. Behold the Lamb of God. Now is the time. Escape for your life." And the rugged and steaming words take hold; and men in crowds that never heard before, hear now; and the weakness and the foolishness strangely become to them a power of redemption—this, when it is about certain that the far abler man, by the more authentic modes, and by a speech replete with all the selectest qualities, never would have reached them.—Independent.

For the World's Crisis.

"WHO SHALL STAND?"—Mal. 3: 2.

Often have we all thought of that searching question, and no doubt received benefit every time we considered its import, as well as its chronology—"when HE APPEARETH. The answer is plain; all we need to do is to examine ourselves, and prove whether we are RIGHT now, i. e., always right, in the present tense. Paul, Peter, and John, of the apostles, agree with Malachi (3: 16) as to the character of those who will stand before HIM in judgment. Malachi declares it is those "who feared the Lord," and John tells us in verse four of his first epistle, that he writes "these things" that our "joy may be full." On reading "these things," we find "If we walk in the light . . . . we have fellowship, ... and the blood of JESUS . . . cleanseth us from sin." And again, "hereby WE KNOW that we love him, if we keep his commandments;" and whoso keepeth HIS word, in him verily is the love of God perfected; hereby—we KNOW that we are in him." So when we speak of abiding in Christ, the vine, we know how to prove ourselves there. In fact, all of John's epistle tends to show us how firmly we can rest assured of eternal life. If we are truly abiding in the vine, shall we have any fears of being cast off at the left hand when he appeareth?

Here let me say, I know of nothing so comforting to a weak, doubting soul, as this first epistle of the beloved disciple. Peter's testimony is that if we "do these things, we shall never fall," while Paul declares, "There is therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus," agreeing fully with John's statement, "there is no fear in love; perfect love casteth out all fear." Being thus blessed, we have confidence when HE shall appear, and shall "not be ashamed before him at his coming."—John 2: 28.

"Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord." There is a "know so" to this faith, wholly unlike that of a class of Infidels in Lowell, who have been considering this question, "Who and what is God?" One of the rules of the discussion being that no participant should quote or be influenced by any authority whatever except his own mind. Every one expressed his views freely, yet no conclusion could be reached. Thank God, we can all be established in the faith once delivered to the saints, (i. e., delivered only ONCE,—as that was sufficient. If it could be shown that it was delivered TWICE, then a doubt might be raised as to which of the two would be the ONE FAITH we were to follow.) Now, having this full assurance of faith, our joy will be complete, and although God's judgments may fall with telling effect upon the wicked, yet like Habakkuk will we rejoice in the Lord, and joy in the God of our salvation.

Brethren, heed Paul's exhortation; "Be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as YE KNOW that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Yours, believing the judgment to be very near at hand, C. W. SARGENT.

East Concord, N. H.

N. B. As the season is nearing when camp, grove, and tent meetings can be held, I would endorse Sr. Willard's article on "Wilbraham" (in Crisis of April 26th), as being applicable to many, if not all, such meetings. Begin to prepare for them now. Let business be so arranged as to have ample time to go, and go prepared to benefit others who may be in need of your help. Do not go like a cold-hearted and worldly professor, who, on being asked by a sinner to pray for him, (on a certain occasion, when he felt the need of a Savior,) was obliged to pray for himself first before he could pray for the poor sinner.

C. W. S.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.—No. 8.

Dear reader, in conclusion suffer a word of exhortation. We have cited your attention to a few of the many illustrations abounding in the Scriptures of the power of prayer—prayer offered by those of like passions with us—by those who were encompassed with infirmity, and far from perfect in all their acts. We have done this for your encouragement. God is just as willing to hear and answer your prayers as he was theirs.

And if under the less effulgent light of the old dispensation, with far less helps to faith than are now afforded, with a more limited knowledge of the power and love of God than is now made known, the saints were enabled so fully to prevail in prayer, how much more ought christians now to daily exult in the assurance of answers from heaven.

The Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world, had not then been slain; the High Priest, who ever liveth to make intercession for those who come unto God by him, and is able to save to the uttermost all who thus come, had not then ascended on high as our Advocate; the vast treasury of grace, sufficient for every want, adapted to every emergency, was not then opened; the exceeding great and precious promises, by which we are made partakers of the divine nature, were not then given; the Comforter had not then come; the Holy Ghost had not then been poured forth in its fulness for the consolation, guide, instructor, illuminator, reprover, sanctifier, intercessor, witness and pledge of future life and glory to the church. All these rich gifts pertain to the New Covenant.

Then God had not manifested himself fully as a God of love. He revealed himself in flame, in the lightning's flash, the thunder's roar, the earthquake, the destroying hail, the blasting mildew, the dreadful plague. He sent forth prophets, not laden with messages of mercy so much as messages of woe. They came with denunciations for sin, and predictions of coming wrath.

But to us God hath spoken by his Son. He comes not as a messenger of woe, but as an angel of love. No lightning's flash, no thunder's peal, mark the opening of the New Era, as at Sinai. The music of the heavenly throng greets the ear, while angel voices announce the glad news of a Savior's birth. God now reveals his love and good will to suffering humanity through the life and teachings of his beloved Son. He shows them the path of immortality—the way of holiness. He invites them to the Father's arms. He receiveth sinners and eateth with them. He searcheth for the lost sheep. He wins the prodigal back. He heals the sick. He opens blind eyes, unstops deaf ears, and causeth the lame man to leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb to sing. How he sympathizes with the suffering, weeps with the bereaved, succors the destitute! Consider his gentle, loving, merciful character, and then remember HE is the one who says, "He that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." He is the one who says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." He is the one who says, "I will pray the Father for you." He is the one who has assured us that "whatsoever ye ask of the Father in my name, I will do it for you." He is the one who says, "Ask, and receive, that your joy may be full." He is the one who ever liveth to make intercession for you, when you come to the Father in his name. Can you come to him? Can you not believe his blessed promises? Can you not rely on his blood for pardon and purity; on his name for acceptance with God; on his intercessions for success in prayer? Can you not cast all your burdens on this kind Friend?

He was a perfect representation of the Eternal Mind. All the love, all the pity, all the tenderness exhibited by him, first had their embodiment in the Father. He came not to reconcile God to the world, but the world to God. He came to convince us of a Father's love to his sinful children. God so loved the world as to give his only begotten Son to die for its salvation. If he freely gave Heaven's richest boon, how much more will he with him freely give us all things! He gave the greatest; will he withhold the less?

By the character of Christ, the promises of Christ, the intercession of Christ, we have every encouragement to pray in faith, nothing doubting. Let us not only know, but also believe the love the Father hath to us, and believing commit ourselves unreservedly to him for protection from evil, asking confidingly for every needed grace, walking with him in sweet fellowship. He would have us exhibit to the world the fair robes with which he clothes us, the precious ornaments with which he adorns us, the luxuries with which he feeds us, the abundant joys he bestows upon us, that others may thereby be won to his home and heart.

May the Lord stir us up to pray more believingly—more fervently—more effectually, that we may be made more joyful in his house of prayer. May the cold, unfeeling, formal, stereotyped prayer be exchanged for the simple, earnest, heartfelt, trusting supplication, mixed with praise, which honors God, and brings strength, and power, and purity, and love, yea every heavenly grace in abundant fulness to our own souls.

To aid in this work, take your pens, my brother and sister, and sketch some incident from your own experience of the efficacy of prayer. We need experience. We have much theory, let us have a weekly portion of simple heart experience for the nourishment of our spiritual nature.

M. D. W.

For the World's Crisis.

RELIGION.—WHAT IS IT?

Most that profess it seem to mistake its true nature. Some suppose it to be a certain kind or amount of feeling, and they do not claim to have religion if destitute of the same. If this varies they lay it often to temptation or to some trial, and do not have any more religion until they get this again; and it is often a cause of great trial and discouragement to them because their enjoyment is so limited; and the greater part of their time is taken up in hoping for better days, but this they do not look for unless there should be a revival, as they term it. On such occasions they seem to wake up a little; but their enjoyment is limited to the revival excitement, and dies away with it. They are always in hot water or cold, and their conduct is much like that of the world, more or less, according to circumstances. Sometimes hearing a good sermon will produce this feeling; this they call enjoying religion a little. It seems to be quite a mystery why they have so little good feeling. Shall I solve the mystery?

What is religion? It is purely obedience to God, and nothing else; and the enjoyment of religion is just in proportion to our obedience. All the feelings that we may have that we call religion are only of human kind, unless they spring from obedience. Good conduct will produce good feelings. If we have but little enjoyment it is because we are disobedient. If we want permanent enjoyment we must be continually obedient.

O that all who are looking for the coming of Christ would show that they are sanctified through the truth by continual obedience to God!

H. L. BRADLEY.

Bristol, Ct.

For the World's Crisis.

DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

We read in John, first chapter, "In the beginning was the word, (the word of God,) and the word was with God (for he spoke it) and the word was God. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made." How was this? He spake, and it was done. God spoke the word, and the divine influence, or Holy Spirit, obeying the command caused Christ to be created. Matt. 1: 18; Luke 1: 35; John 1: 14.

We see by this that the second Adam, or Christ, was created in something such a manner as the first Adam. The first Adam was created in innocence. So was the second. But the first was tempted before the Holy Spirit had come upon him, and the second, even Christ, after. See Luke 3: 22; 4: 2; Matt. 1: 16; 4: 1; Mark 1: 10–13.

In this we see the works of God contrasted in a beautiful manner, and we stop and ponder for a moment with enraptured delight. It was Christ who was tempted in every point like as we are, but without sinning. He bore the cross and endured the shame for you and me. He ascended to the right hand of the Father, and is there making intercessions for us. He soon will come as King of kings and Lord of Lords. Are you prepared to meet him? May God prepare us to meet him in peace, and hear his welcome voice saying, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

HERBERT H. BROWN.

Rochester, N. Y.

☞ Whosoever and whatsoever are two precious words often used in the mouth of Christ. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." (Rev. 22: 17.) "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do." (John 14: 13.) "Whosoever" is on the outside of the gate, and lets in all who choose. "Whatsoever" is on the inside, and gives those who enter the free range of all the region and treasury of grace. "Whosoever" makes salvation free; "whatsoever" makes it full.

☞ Begin your web, and God will supply you with thread.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE NORTHERN OHIO CONFERENCE.

At a meeting of the church of Christ, held in Norwalk, O., Jan. 24th, 1864, Bro. P. Alling was called to the chair, and Bro. S. Boss appointed Secretary.

The object of the meeting was stated to be to take into consideration the propriety of holding a general conference of all the churches of all Northern Ohio, and to enter into some arrangement for unity in action for the furtherance of the cause of Christ, and the spread of divine truth. On motion of Bro. S. F. Rogers, it was resolved that a conference be held at Norwalk, and the Chair appointed the following brethren a committee of arrangement: P. B. Hoyt, S. F. Rogers, S Boss, R. Seymoure and D. C. Jefferson. After singing and prayer the meeting adjourned. The committee having taken the subject into consideration, called the conference to be held from the 15th to the 20th of March inclusive, and invited Bro. and Sr. Mansfield to be present and minister in word and doctrine.

By the blessing of Divine Providence, the conference commenced Tuesday evening Mar. 15th, 1864, and on Saturday P. M., Mar. 19th, a meeting was called for the transaction of business. Bro. D. R. Mansfield was appointed Chairman, and P. B. Hoyt Secretary, when the committee of arrangements presented the following resolution:—

Resolved, That we recommend to this meeting the propriety of organizing ourselves into a conference for unity of action in the cause of truth and of God. Whereupon the following Constitution was recommended and unanimously adopted:—

CONSTITUTION.

Art. 1st. This organization shall be called the Northern Ohio Advent Christian Conference.

Art. 2nd. The object of this conference shall be to promote Scriptural piety, harmony, co-operation and efficiency in publishing the Scriptures of truth, and especially that prophetic Scripture that relates to the soon coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Art. 3rd. This conference shall be composed of preachers, and churches represented, and delegates of all churches who may wish to act with this conference; visiting brethren being made eligible to a sitting by a vote of the conference, each church having power to send two delegates, and churches of forty members or more may send three delegates.

Art. 4th. The officers of this conference shall consist of a President, Vice President, and Secretary, who shall be elected by ballot, and likewise be ex-officio members of the Board, and continue in office until others are elected or appointed.

Art. 5th. The order of the conference shall be to meet annually, at such time and place as shall have been previously provided by the conference, hear an opening address, and after organizing and receiving the names of members, shall proceed—

1st. To hear the reports and letters from churches in order, as the President shall call; when it is desired that it be stated definitely their number, how often they have preaching, whether they have a Sunday School, and, if so, how large; each church being requested to send a letter stating its condition, etc.

2nd. Examine the character and standing of the ministers.

3rd. Hear the report of the Board.

4th. Appoint a Business Committee to devise and present business for the action of the conference, by whom all business shall be arranged previous to going before the conference, after said committee is appointed; the conference taking such action and adopting such ways and means as shall seem most wise for the promotion of divine truth.

5th. Elect by ballot a Board of Directors and such other committees as they shall think necessary,—all meetings of the conference opening and closing by prayer or the benediction.

Art. 6th. This conference shall have no legislative power over churches,—shall be only advisory to them. Each member of the conference shall be entitled to an impartial hearing, but no member shall have authority to speak upon any point more than three times without permission from the President; and all preachers of this conference shall be held amenable to the conference for their moral conduct, and the conference may withdraw fellowship from any they may deem unworthy of the same.

Art. 7th. The conference shall elect by ballot four brethren, who, with the President, Vice President and Secretary, shall compose the Board of Directors, whose duty it shall be to have charge of all funds raised by the conference, ascertain the wants as to preaching, employ evangelists, appoint camp and protracted meetings, etc., of the respective churches of this conference, and as far as possible provide for such wants; call the conference when not otherwise called, and transact such other business as the conference may deem wise; at all times being subject to the direction of the conference, and shall faithfully report whatever they do to the next conference.

Art. 8th. This polity may be revised or amended by vote of two-thirds of all the members present at any regularly appointed conference, except this article 8th.

Whereupon the following brethren were elected officers for the ensuing year:—J. B. Knapp, Pres.; R. Seymour, Vice Pres.; P. B. Hoyt, Sec.; S. F. Rogers, Treas. Board of Directors:—P. Alling, S. Boss, C. Tuttle, Eld. J. T. Ongley.

The following resolutions were then unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, That we cordially invite the co-operation of all the brethren and churches of Northern and Middle Ohio, in the work of saving our fellow men, and in spreading the glorious news of the soon coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the establishment of his everlasting kingdom.

Resolved, That inasmuch as our kind and beneficent heavenly Father has in much mercy given the hearing ear of the people to the dispensation of his truth by Bro. and Sister Mansfield, and believing it to be the indication of Divine Providence, we therefore most cordially invite Bro. and Sr. Mansfield to come and labor with us in word and doctrine, and under the blessing of God will render them the needful support.

Resolved, That a copy of the proceedings of this conference be forwarded to the "Voice of the West" for publication.

Adjourned to the call of the conference committee.

J. D. KNAPP, Pres.
P. B. HOYT, Sec.

ALL EQUAL HERE.—It is related of the Duke of Wellington, that once when he remained to take the sacrament at his parish church, a very poor old man had gone up the opposite aisle, and reaching the communion table, knelt down close by the side of the duke. Some one—a pew owner probably—came and touched the poor man on the shoulder, and whispered to him to move further away, or to rise and wait until the duke had received the bread and wine. But the eagle eye and the quick ear of the great commander caught the meaning of that touch and that whisper. He clasped the old man's hand and in a reverential undertone, but most distinctly, said,—"Do not move; we are all equal here."

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Tuesday, May 17, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,
MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

RESULTS OF THE LYNN DISCUSSION.

We are pleased to learn that the discussion at Lynn, with Eld. Moses Hull, has resulted in much good; and that some twenty Spiritualists have concluded to follow the seducing spirits no further; and that some have decided to be christians, and become disciples of the blessed Savior. It is very seldom that a Spiritualist can be persuaded to turn away from the infatuating, bewitching delusion of Spiritualism, after he has once yielded to it. It is truly, as the apostle expresses it, a "strong delusion." Those under its influence are in perils like the man in the current just above the Niagara, when he has ventured in his boat beyond his power to return to the shore; he must have help or soon plunge over the cataract.

The only help for those who have yielded to the "seducing spirits" is to renounce them entirely, embrace the Bible and its Author, consenting to let Christ be their teacher and guide.

SIMPLICITY OF THE BIBLE.

"The Bible was written for the people—the mass; and if God had not intended the word of faith to be understood in a common-sense way, he would have prefaced the Bible with a dictionary, and have explained the nature of believing; but as there is no such explanation given, we infer that we are to understand it just as it is understood in ordinary language among men."—Ladies Repository.

The foregoing commends itself to all the candid. Would that all might look thus upon the Bible. Much confusion and many fables would be removed from the minds of the people. The spiritual interpretations throw the whole Bible into a mass of jargon, that only serves to make the study of the Scriptures distasteful and unprofitable. In this way the enemy of all righteousness keeps the mass of the people in darkness.

How clearly developed is the sign of the last days, mentioned by Paul,—"They will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

WASTING GOODS.

The present generation, especially in our country, is becoming extravagant to an alarming degree. Bankruptcy must inevitably follow. Instead of being more economical, in consequence of the immense expense of the war, the people are wasting more money on costly merchandise and pleasure parties than ever before witnessed. The highest priced goods find a greater number of purchasers than at any other period in the history of our nation. Truly, these are strange times. Candid people may well say, "to what are we coming?"

The following is from the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post:—

AN EARNEST WORD OF WARNING.

"There is an impression abroad among the people, which we have already commented upon, that as greenbacks are so plenty, and every one is feeling so prosperous, it is perfectly right and proper for every one to spend as freely as he likes. There is no sort of conscientious feeling in regard to the duty of economy. The expenditures for luxuries are unexampled even in the history of our wasteful people. Every one, except those dependent on regular salaries, is extravagant to the last degree. The jewelers and the dealers in expensive goods assure us that there never was such a demand for the most costly wares.

Diamonds, pearls, watches and ornaments, bronzes and carpets, silks and satins, expensive furniture and paintings, wines and costly dinner-ware, are continually sold, and are ornamenting our wealthy houses. Then, in the classes of more moderate means, similar habits on a smaller scale everywhere prevail. The wives and daughters of shopkeepers and upper mechanics, of teachers and preachers, of country lawyers and doctors still buy their silks, and carpets, and pianos, as if they were as well off as they ever were.

The nation does not seem to recognize that it is in war, or that its habits of economy have anything to do with its ability to pay the public debt. Some one else seems to be spending for the war, while we spend for foreign luxuries. 'Money is plenty, and why should not we have the benefit of it!' 'The Government may be in debt, and we have plenty of means.' Such is the universal thought on this matter, if not the expression of it, and it is full time that the press and the pulpit should expose its fallacy, and teach some of the first principles of political economy."

A CRASH COMING.

Speculation seems to have run wild. Honesty is far in the back ground, and finds but little standing room among business men at the present time. They have lost confidence in each other, and each is watching an opportunity to fleece his neighbor. Such a state of things must inevitably result in a terrible financial "crash." We see no possible way to avoid it. Let us see that our trust is in the Lord, and not in man.

The following from a New York correspondent of the Boston Journal, gives a glimpse of things in that great city:—

CRAZY SPECULATIONS IN NEW YORK.

"Not since the war broke out, have shrewd men been so much at their wits' end as now. Speculation is rampant, and men are fairly mad with the gambling mania. But there are unfledged speculators who have yet to learn how treacherous and uncertain the sea is on which they have launched their all. Men of capital are standing aloof from the madness of the hour. They confidentially predict a crash that will be more sweeping than anything New York has known this century. A gentleman of large means called upon one of our largest and most successful brokers this week, told him he had $100,000 to invest, and said to him, 'what would you advise me to do?' 'Go and ask that man,' said the broker, 'he knows as much about it as I do.' Such is the general feeling among shrewd and experienced capitalists. The speculations in real estate the past year have been astonishing. Prices have reached a figure that it is impossible for them to maintain. A broker in this city, 1836, hired a house on Fifth Avenue, and took a lease at $3,000; and that was considered a high price for it. In January last he underlet the house at the rate of $5000 a year, semi-annually in advance. He is now travelling in Europe on the gain. A house that was sold last November for $30,000, was sold in February for $50,000, and the owner if grumbling over the loss of $10,000 on the sale, as he has since found a man who would have given him $60,000 for it. Men have been sold out of house and home by asking what they supposed to be an exorbitant price for their property, and finding themselves suddenly taken up. One man offered a house that cost him $16,000 for $15,000. His offer was immediately taken. When the papers were drawn they were made out to a third party, to whom the second party had sold it at an advance of $10,000.

An ex-mayor of the city, who lived in an elegant residence, in sumptuous style, was visited one day by two ladies, who asked permission to look at his house, stating that the house next door was for sale, but the occupants would not allow them to view it. His Honor courteously informed them that the houses in that block were exactly alike, and they might examine his house as fully as they pleased. On leaving, one of the ladies said to him, 'I suppose you would not sell your house?' 'Oh, yes,' said His Honor, 'I would sell anything but my wife and children.' That afternoon he received a note from a leading real estate house, asking him if he would sell his house, and at what price. He offered it at $30,000. The offer was taken at once. The papers were passed and the money paid that night. The next day it was sold for $40,500. Two or three things in this transaction made His Honor a little unquiet. He had to abandon his luxurious and comfortable home instantly. He was literally turned into the street. Somebody made $10,500 out of him. Getting a fashionable residence at any price was out of the question. Nothing remained for him but the overcrowded Fifth Avenue Hotel. He is now with his family in the attic story waiting for something to turn up.

Such a state of things cannot abide. Our shrewdest financiers are looking out for a crash. Our leading merchants confess that they do not know how to buy or sell. Many of them are curtailing their business, for like experienced mariners, they read a storm in the sky, where, to an unpracticed eye, nothing but fair weather is seen. But the inexperienced men of small capital and professional men, are rushing into the opening vortex, whose pathway is strewn with gold."

"A REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT."

The above is the heading of a long and able article by William Howitt, published in the Herald of Progress. Dec. 19th, 1863. The article relates more particularly to Spiritualism in France. When speaking in general terms of its progress, he quotes as follows from the "Plain guide to Spiritualism," by Uriah Clark:—

"There are now in the United States, Mr. Clark tells us, 500 public mediums who receive visitors; more than 50,000 more private ones; 500 books and pamphlets have been published on the subject, and many of them immensely circulated. There are 500 public speakers and lecturers on it, and more than 1,000 occasional ones. There are nearly 2,000 places for public circles, conferences, or lectures, and in many places flourishing Sunday-schools. The believers—the decisive believers—number about 2,000,000, while the nominal ones are nearly 5,000,000. In the eastern continent the number may be reckoned at 1,000,000. The whole number now on the globe, supposed to recognize the fact of spiritual intercourse, cannot fall short of 20,000,000. The whole population of the globe is 1,000,000,000, only 50,000,000 of whom are professing christians, and not more than 5,000,000 regarded as genuine; according to orthodoxy thus leaving 995,000,000 of immortal souls with no certain hope of salvation." But Mr. Clark goes on:

"These startling statistics must be met. They reveal the mighty work which some new dispensation is called on to accomplish, and the matchless mission which Spiritualism has already accomplished within the brief space of fifteen years. This gospel has become an immense fact with its million of witnesses. It is not a creed or theory based alone on the traditions and evidences of the past, like the dominant theologies of Christendom, but based on visible and accredited phenomena now manifest everywhere in our midst. From the mines of modern El Dorado to the bleak coasts of Greenland; from the rock of old Plymouth to the shores of Oregon; from the ice wrapped peaks of Lapland to the jungles of the Orient Indies; from the exile realms of Siberia to the southern promontory of the Ethiopian continent; wherever progress has carried the intelligence of civilization—there these spiritual phenomena, which have become household realities in our midst, have broken the lethargy of Materialism, and opened visions of the super-mundane universe. And these phenomena, without any collusion on the part of those who are used as mediums, are concurring in demonstrating the agency of some power and intelligence other than that belonging to the sphere of material causation, and referable only to spiritual beings capable of manifesting themselves to man on the normal plane of earth. It is behind the time to contend that these manifestations are not a reality. Neither magic or art, magnetism or electricity, psychology or theology can account for them. Thousands of intelligent witnesses have investigated, and their testimony is before the world, with an array of strength never equalled in behalf of any other system of science, philosophy, or religion. Neither astronomy, geology, nor phrenology, for more than a quarter of a century, had as many advocates as Spiritualism has now, after only fifteen years since its lowly advent; and it may be doubted whether christianity, in a century from the birth of Christ, numbered as many as the Spiritualists of to-day."

Mr. Howitt then says:—

"But Mr. Clark does not state the case of Spiritualism in its fullness; he does not display its gigantic bulk as it is. So far from Spiritualism numbering twenty millions of votaries only, it numbers the majority of the population of the globe. All the Eastern nations are, and have been Spiritualists, from time immemorial. The Syrian, the Indian, the Persian, and Chinese swarming populations, are Spiritualists to a man. Buddhists and Brahminists, followers of Mahomet or Laotse—all are Spiritualists. They are not twenty millions, but hundreds of millions; they are the great majority of the population of the globe, be they of whatever creed they may."

It is a well known fact "that heathen nations," to whom Mr. Howitt has just referred, are worshipers of demons, or in other words, consulters of "familiar spirits," as mentioned in the Bible. These "seducing spirits" gained their confidence several centuries before the first advent of Christ; and by means of the immortality of the soul, have prepared the way to lead some away "from the faith" "once delivered to the saints." We are now witnessing the last great effort of Satan to get entire control over the people on our planet.

Mr. Howitt further remarks:—

"France, quick, shrewd, and observant, has to a great extent become Spiritualist. Its catholic portion, its great majority, is Spiritualist by its predominant faith. That church, all over France, has its miracles continually recurring. But amongst its acute literary and scientific men, numbers have broken the trammels of infidelity prevailing in that class, and avowed themselves Spiritualists. Numbers of these have boldly come forward, and justified their faith by their works. France has its 'Society of Spiritualists.' France sees at the head of both society and State, its Imperial Family bearing open testimony to the reality of Spiritualism. France has a numerous body of distinguished men, who have written able and learned works on the subject, and it has several journals in its advocacy in Paris, those especially edited by Messrs. Pierart and Kardec. The names of Count Szapary, Baron de Guldenstubbe, Mirville, Cahagnet, Buret, Auguez, Caudemberg, Reynaud, Berruyer, Meray, Matthieu, Delaage, Goupil, Lacordaire, Louisy, Du Potet, Lausanne, Alexis, etc., etc., are to us familiar by their works on this great topic. . . .

But, in spite of all opposition, Spiritualism in France, as all over the Continent, has stridden on calm, majestic, and invincible. In Germany, and Holland, and Belgium, it has produced a large number of works of the most philosophic character, to which I hope, ere long, to draw attention. In Switzerland it has awakened great numbers, and produced a distinct literature there. It has found able supporters in such men as Dr. Roessinger, the Ragazzis, Bort, Bret, Mistral, Amman, etc. In Italy, and especially at Palermo, in Sicily, the attempts of the priests to put it down have occasioned great commotion. In Spain itself it has gone to such a length that the Church has made a bonfire of its books. In Spain, as into every remotest corner of Europe, the creeping pestilence of Materialism had found its way; but it is a striking demonstration of God's good providence, that wherever that soul-destroying poison had traveled, God has sent the spiritual remedy after it, even into Spain, where bigotry and infidelity divide the clergy between them.

Many towns at present have societies composed chiefly of the members of the bench, the bar, the magistracy, and the functionaries. . . . Spiritual societies now abound in Spain, Russia, Austria and Poland.

But the most remarkable fact is the dimution of mere physical phenomena, in consequence of more spiritual communications. The spirits themselves say that the period of curiosity has passed there; the people are now in the second period, that of philosophy, and that ere long the third will commence—the application of Spiritualism to the reform of humanity. . . . It is evident that, one day, the spiritual idea will be the universal faith."

THINGS IN WASHINGTON.

The following from the Washington Star, (D. C.) is a report of a discourse by Rev. Mr. Baxter, an Episcopal minister. We are pleased to learn that he has had a hearing at the Capitol, and in the church, (Dr. Gurley's) where the President generally attends:—

"THE PROPHECIES AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES.—A discourse on this subject ws given in Dr. Gurley's church Sunday evening, by Rev. Mr. Baxter. The speaker stated that more than a hundred able expositors had shown in their works that the prophetical periods pointed to the present time, as the epoch of the three and a half years great tribulation, and the battle of Amageddon, and coming of Christ, and commencement of the millennium. The dates of 6,000 years from the creation of Adam, and 2,500 years of the Jubilee of Jubilees, and 2,300 years (Dan. 8: 14), and 1,335 years (Dan. 12: 12), and 1,260 years of the church's oppression by Antichrist (Rev. 12: 6), were understood to terminate about 1866–73, and therefore the millennium of 1,000 years (Rev. 20) was expected to commence soon after that era. But first of all there must be the three and a half years great resurrection and time of trouble, 'such as never was from the beginning of the world; no, nor ever shall be; and except those days were shortened no flesh should be saved,' not a single person left surviving, (Dan. 12: 1; Matt. 24: 21; Rev. 16: 18.) The world was rapidly hastening to this appalling crisis. All the signs of the times were admonitory of this. The gospel was being widely preached for a witness, (Matt. 24: 14.) The Jews were beginning to go back to Palestine, (Ezek. 38; Rev. 16: 12,) owing to the drying up of the Euphrates or exhaustion of the Turkish Empire, and the unclean, frog-like spirits of infidelity—revolution and superstition—were gathering all nations to the war of Amageddon, under the sixth vial.

It was, however, expected that seven years before the millennium, a seven years' covenant would be made between the last great Antichrist and the Jews, in order to restore numbers of them to Palestine, where they would rebuild their temple and offer their sacrifices, and in the final seven years, Antichrist would go up with a large army to Jerusalem, and slay those of the Jews who would not worship him or his image, and commence his massacre of christians throughout the whole world, during the final three and a half years, (Dan. 12: 25; 11: 7; Rev. 11: 2, 3; 13: 5), until at last he perishes at Amageddon, at Christ's descent. It was predicted forty years ago by the Revs. Mr. Faber, Gauntlett, Irving, etc., that there would arise a French Emperor, a representative of the Napoleon dynasty—the last head of the Roman Empire (Rev. 12: 3) to act the part of this personal Antichrist, somewhere about or soon after 1865; and many students of prophecy believe that the French Emperor is to be revealed in that character. It is observable that his name contains 666 in three languages, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, which has probably never been the case with any other man, (Rev. 13: 18).

The speaker concluded by exhorting the unconverted, in view of the impending judgments of God, to repent of their sins and lead a new life, and fervently pray for salvation to the Lord Jesus Christ, who has died on the cross for our transgressions, and who offers forgiveness to all that seek for it."

For the World's Crisis.

THE ALABASTER BOX.

Yes, my sister, pour on the ointment. Let men chide, even good men; pour on the ointment till the whole house is filled with the sweet odor. Pour on the ointment. No head so worthy as that of Jesus, to receive your treasure. Pour on the ointment. Let men call it a waste, even good men; yea, even his own "disciples" also; pour on the ointment, and then drop at his feet and bathe them with your tears, and wipe them with the hairs of your head. Pour on the ointment; leave none in the box to be wasted upon a less worthy head. Pour on the ointment, my sister, pour on the ointment. Glory to God!

Keep right on about the work Jesus has called you to do, and leave it to him to answer for you. He hears these chidings, and he will speak for you in due time if you turn not aside from your work. Pour all your treasures upon his head, or lay them at his feet, and look to him alone for commendation; for from him alone will you receive it. As long as we can hear his voice amid the murmurings and general out-cry against us, saying, Let her alone; why trouble ye the woman? she hath done us a good office; let us breast the storm. More is He that is for us than all they that can be against us.

As long as we can hear an inspired apostle say, Help those women who labored with me in the gospel, let us go on and labor in the gospel or anywhere else that Jesus bids us labor with mouth, or pen, or both, or neither, just as he calls us to do, and thus break our alabaster boxes of very precious ointment and pour them on his head. Pour on the ointment, my sisters, pour on the ointment.

Pray for me, the most unworthy one that ever broke a box of ointment on my Savior's head, that I may still pour on the ointment.

Your sister in the tribulation incident to the way.
E. S. WILLARD.
Hammonton, N. J.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to May 10th, $1117.62
T. E. Greene pd.	.25
A friend pd.	.25
Maria Johnson pd.	.60
Friends in Honeoye, N. Y. pd.	3.25
Geo. W. Smith pd.	.50
D. Bump pd.	.25
M. A. F. pd.	.10
Mrs. E. A. Duncan pd.	.25
J. Myers pd.	1.35
Mary Bunnell pd.	.25
A widow and daughter pd.	.50
H. B. Eaton pd.	1.00
A. Palmer pd.	1.00
N. Thompson pd.	.25
Flora S. Davis pd.	.35
New Bedford pd.	5.00
Geo. S. Runnels pd.	1.00

THE TRACT FUND.

BRO. GRANT:—Believing the tract cause to be an excellent way to send the great truths abroad in our land, that sinners may be converted and saved from eternal destruction, enclosed please find five dollars more for the benefit of the C. P. S.; and my prayer and desire is that some poor sinner may be awakened by this means to see his danger and flee to the ark of safety. We are many members, but all of one body, if we be in Christ. The eye cannot say, I have no need of the ear; neither the ear of the eye; neither can the hands say, I have no need of the feet; neither the foot of the hands; but all are members of one body working harmoniously together for the good of each and all. Then we are not all eyes, or all ears; neither are we all prophets, preachers, or exhorters, or teachers. I possess none of these last gifts, but I can labor with my hands, the Lord giving me strength; then I can give of my earnings as the Lord prospereth me to the great cause of his truth. Your brother, expecting eternal life when the Nobleman returns,

Piqua. WM. C. KEVE.

BRO. GRANT:—As I see by the list of the money received that one half of the proposed amount is already paid in, I purpose to send in my mite to add in raising the remaining thousand also; and I have no doubt if we one and all as stewards over our Lord's money honor all of his drafts made upon us by the the influence of his Spirit, for even a very small portion of what he has entrusted to our care, and at once, it will not be long before the required sum will be paid in, and God's faithful stewards whom he has put over the matter may have their hearts gladdened and their arms upheld, while they are nobly fighting the battles of the Lord; and may it in no small degree be to the discomfiture of the hosts of sin and error who are arrayed against the Lord's truth. May God richly give you of his Spirit.

What shall I say of the Crisis? I have not the language to express my gratitude to our Father that he has put into the mind of his servants to give to his children so rich a weekly feast of good things, and to his otherwise famishing people throughout the land. To his name be all the glory. I have resolved to do all I can as the Lord prospers me.

Your unworthy brother in Christ,
Keeseville, N. Y. JAMES M. WESTON.

ELD. GRANT:—Seeing a call in my weekly visitor, the Crisis, for the readers of the Crisis to pay twenty-five cents for the Tract Fund, I willingly respond. Although poor in this world's goods, yet I have saved fifty cents for this purpose; twenty-five cents by not going to hear the Baker family sing, and twenty-five cents by not going to a church gambling party, held for the purpose of procuring an organ for the Baptist church in this place. I hope it may be the means of saving at least one soul from death. I also wish to renew my subscription for the Crisis. I cannot get along without it. HIRAM DEYO.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel it to be a privilege to be enrolled in such a company of self-sacrificing christians and in such a work; and although the result of their work may not be known here, it will be hereafter.

Providence, R. I. W. A. MUNROE.

For the World's Crisis.

A FEW WORDS.

On the 15th of February I wrote my "new programme" or proposals for issuing Books, cheaper than ever before. A month after it appeared in the World's Crisis, March 15th, 1864. I had waited long for others to undertake the work of issuing books, and had waited too long, as it will cost me, through the delay, two hundred and fifty dollars more in cash to make the books I wish to make, besides probably as much more in government taxes, all of which I should have saved if I had not conferred with flesh and blood, but had gone on as usual doing the work that needed to be done. However, in that "New Programme" I offered books at rates low beyond all precedent.

The result of these offers was to bring in the space of about two months orders from about six or eight persons for about fifty dollars' worth of books. And this measures the interest felt among the people on the subject of circulating sound, healthy literature on the coming and kingdom of the Lord.

A few days ago I mentioned in the Crisis that if persons would take hold of the matter they could have books like "Signs of the Times"—of the size now selling in bookstores for $1.25, or more,—at 50 cts., and in paper covers at 25 cts. I had offered them at these rates to those who would take $10 worth at a time by express. So, straightway, A. B., and C. begin to send me in their 50 cts., or 25 cts., and expect me to send them single copies of dollar books, post paid, at half price. Shall I do it? Probably I shall.

I have just bought about nine hundred dollars' worth of paper, which I hope to pay for by and by. I expect to print it up in books and circulate them; and if folks that believe the Lord is coming so soon will not buy them and distribute them, I shall proceed to scatter them myself.

As the readers of the Crisis care so little about the enterprise, I shall not waste time to give terms or titles at present, and I shall not consider the terms offered as good, to any who have not accepted the offers already.

The prices of bookbinding are nearly twice as high as they were eight months ago; but books are called for, and must be issued to meet the demand. I am in for the work again, and trust that I have learned, in the hundreds of dollars lost by this delay, not to wait for societies or brethren to do the work that needs to be done in this judgment age.

As I contemplate leaving Boston soon, I should be glad to hear from any brethren who may know of a comfortable location where myself and family can find a habitation away from the noise and tumult of city life, and recruit our health. H. L. HASTINGS.

Boston, Mass., May 9th, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

PRAYER.

"The effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much."

BRO. GRANT:—I send you a few lines for the Crisis, at the earnest request of one of God's little ones, Sr. Ann H. Doolittle, residing at or near North Haven. She has been restored from deafness, which long prevented her from enjoying the full benefit of social gatherings in hearing the testimony of others. She feels it is in answer to prayer that she now realizes this special deliverance, and that it is both her privilege and duty to publish it, as good tidings, for the benefit and in the way of encouraging the prayer and spirit of faith among the brotherhood. I think she made her case known at the Plainville camp-meeting. (Some may remember about it.) She feels so grateful, would love to have all the little flock rejoice with her, and give God the glory. Likewise her voice has come again, so she can sing.

She is truly a pilgrim, declaring the things which show plainly she seeks a country by sin undefiled, the spirit of which has become her chief joy. Also she put a dollar into my hand, wishing to contribute a little for the support and furtherance of the Tract Fund, for she feels her heart is interested in every good word and work; and though she feels it is but a mite, it may help a little to speak a word in season to some poor souls now perishing for lack of the "true bread."

Your Sister in Christ, E. B. B.
Hartford, Ct.

For the World's Crisis.

THE POPULAR CLERGY OF OUR DAY.

NUMBER FOUR.

Politics are of such a nature that if the professed followers of Christ do not meddle with them they will not become polluted. Any one who will take a retrospective glance at the past can but see the havoc and desolation they have caused in the religious world. By their influence brother has been arrayed against brother, and the house divided against itself. They have engendered bitter envyings and strife, and degraded the christian character. The dabbling of the self-styled shepherds of the flock has almost destroyed their influence for good, while it has opened the floodgates of evil of which this nation is reaping its full measure. While the church professes to believe that human governments are ordained of God, she is striving by sinful means to place them in the hands of the intemperate, the licentious, the oppressor, and the infidel. "What concord hath Christ with Belial? or he that believeth with an infidel?"

There is neither precept nor example in the New Testament to justify such a course. When the laws were unjust, oppressive and corrupt, subjecting the early christians to persecutions and even death itself, they did not seek to overthrow the rulers by meeting in political councils and being harangued as at this day by the minister for the purpose of exciting their passions, and grasping the musket and rushing to the battle-field; but when the Spirit of God called them, they went out boldly and proclaimed the great principles of peace and good will to man, regardless of the sufferings that might follow.

But how changed the scene! Now, ministers turn politicians, and the aid of the ballot box is sought, and the power of legislative bodies courted to aid the cause they advocate. Those who have taken this course to suppress sin have mistaken the nature and object of the gospel—are indirectly charging it with incompetency, and are seeking aid from the very power which the gospel is designed to overthrow. Hence there is and must of necessity be a mighty reformation in the churches of our day.

The church can never attain that influence it once had. Men are suspicious of the clergy. They preach one thing and practice another. Many of them have a questionable character for morality, and members of the church are cognizant of the facts; yet they are allowed to preach, and to be looked up to as patterns of piety. Hence many of the people who were accustomed to go regularly to church stay at home, and spend the day in rambling in the fields, fishing, gaming, and in other amusements. O! may the people of America, especially the clergy, see their danger, and fly for refuge to Him whom they profess to worship. As they are now situated, their house rests upon the sand. They live as the world does. Popular, read fine flowery sermons, get every body who dies in the church off to heaven; destroy the force of a literal resurrection, and all passes off nicely.

The popular clergy of our day desire not to see the light; hence they are joined to their idols, and will perish as blind guides, as watchmen who are set upon the walls and fail to decry the coming danger. And why? Because they will not watch; and God's mercy cannot always last. A guilty world, a sinful church, must be destroyed.

The true watchmen are sounding the alarm. They see the sword coming, and they proclaim it to a sinful world. Their skirts will be clear. This world is listening to its last warnings. Soon all will be over, and Christ will leave his mediatorial seat. O! ye hireling, purse-proud priests, awake! look around you. Mercy lingers. Fly! oh, fly! and all will be well, here and hereafter. J. L. HERSEY.

A CORRECTION.—There is an error in my argument on the Sabbath question, which I wish to correct. It is found in the Crisis of March 1st, page 94, near the close, where it is said that the phrase, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," originated with Christ. This is not so, as the same is found in Lev. 19: 18. T. M. PREBLE.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. G. Hook.

BRO. GRANT:—I thought it good to drop a few lines for the Crisis, that through it may speak to its thousands of readers; and I trust it will have tens of thousands, ere long, to welcome its weekly visits. I esteem it next to the precious Bible, and believe it to be far the best paper published.

I was about to say, to the dear people of God, be not discouraged; in due time you will reap, if you faint not. Warn the wicked of his way; tell him it leads to death. Say to him God delighteth not in his death, but rather that he would turn from his way and live. Plead with them, brethren and sisters, as doth the Almighty, and say, "Turn ye, turn ye, from your evil way, for why will ye die?" We must be in earnest, and live near God ourselves; be separate from sin and the fashion of this world. Let the sinner and dead professor see that we who are looking for Christ's coming kingdom cannot be proud, vain, and fashionable, like those of the world, but have come out and are separate, having our conversation in heaven, or on heavenly things; and like those referred to by the apostle in Heb. eleventh chapter, confessing that we are pilgrims and strangers on the earth. Let all understand that we are in earnest about the heavenly country, where the people of God, of all ages and countries, will evermore dwell. I long for a home in that happy, pure, and peaceful clime.

Yes, pilgrims, we must live and act unlike the children of this world. So we may like the ancients declare plainly that we seek a better country, and that God will not be ashamed to be called our God. God must be ashamed to be called the God or Father of the mass of professors of religion in our day. They are so proud, and vain, so worldly minded, lovers of pleasure, of earthly governments, war, gold, farms, and merchandise; gay company, popular doctrines, though without foundation in the Holy Writ, mere inventions of men, and doctrines, of devils, that are now flooding the whole land; while many who style themselves the children of God have left God and the Bible, and gone unlawfully after familiar spirits. See Leviticus 19: 31; and 20: 6, 7, 27; also Deut. 18: 9–12.

Turn to your Bibles and read the above quotations. You will see that God prohibited his people from consulting those who had familiar spirits, and the penalty was death to all that disobeyed this command. 1 Chron. 10: 13, 14; 1 Sam. 28: 3. If, then, under the law, God was ashamed to own such as his people that followed other gods, spirits, or commands, and were destitute of his Spirit, and obeyed not his voice, but punished with death the transgressor,—will not those who are now doing the same be worthy of sorer punishment? Says the apostle, "The things that were done aforetime are ensamples to us, on whom the ends of the world are come." Then warn all to walk in the truth, to be led by the Spirit, not spirits, but the Spirit of the living God, who raised up Jesus from the dead; for God's Spirit and word agree, and we must have both in order to be sanctified wholly.

God's Word and Spirit are to us in this time of danger and peril like the chart and compass to the weather-beaten mariner. Hold fast that thou hast. Never give up the Bible and Holy Spirit for spirits of men or devils, or for their revelations.

Brethren in the ministry, preach the word. Be plain in your speech. Be understood, on this subject, but speak the truth in love, yea, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Be not bitter and denunciatory, but mild, gentle to all. Let men and women see that you are not at war with them, but with error and sin; that you are warring against principalities and the powers of darkness, and spiritual wickedness; and though they may be in the dark, and hold views contrary to the Bible, and are tenacious for them, as you are for the truth, do not abuse them, but have your hearts full of love to God and man, and show them the difference between the children of God and the world. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." As we wanted time to examine certain doctrines before we could endorse them, so be merciful to others, and manifest that charity that suffers long and is kind. Never rail at any one, and in all things "whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do even so to them." "But let all things be done in love, and be at peace among yourselves," is the language of the Word of God.

Let your words be seasoned with the Spirit. Let them be pure and chosen, realizing we must give an account for every vain or idle word in the day of judgment, and that solemn day is very near. Preach Christ in the pulput and out of the pulpit. Be the same in character in every place. Let us ever have Jesus in view, and follow, not dishonor, him or his gospel.

Dear pilgrims, stand fast in the gospel.

Be no more entangled with folly and pride,
But hearken to Jesus, and keep near his side.

JOHN G. HOOK.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

BRO. GRANT:—May grace, mercy, and peace, be multiplied to you and your coworkers, and all who love Jesus Christ and his glorious appearing. I have been on the Mount, not Mount Zion, nor Pisgah, but Mount Wilbraham, where the tribes of the Lord go up to worship and keep the Feast of the Tabernacles. My whole soul was filled with animation and joy, by calling to mind what the saints had enjoyed there in their holy convocations in years past. Although I have never been at any of the meetings at this place, yet have heard by the way of the World's Crisis of the blessed seasons, of the praying and laboring spirit, of the brotherly love and kindness, of the christian sympathy and affection, where there was no jargon, no strife, no divisions nor contentions, no hardness or evil speaking, but peace, love, and heavenly zeal through all their actions ran. I remembered the letter of Sr. Willard about preparing for Wilbraham camp-meeting, and, with Bro. Butter by my side, I knelt down in that consecrated desk and poured out my soul in prayer to God, that he would bless his people in that consecrated spot on the return of the yearly meeting; and to me it was much like Moses on Pisgah's top. By faith I viewed the promised land, and with all my heart could pray, Let thy kingdom come. Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly, and fill the earth with thy glory. Amen.

Here let me acknowledge the bundle of tracts sent from your office, probably from the Christian Publication Society, although I am not informed. And also a bundle of second-hand World's Crisis marked "J. C. Day."

Many thanks to the donors. They have shown their love and interest for the cause, and have filled my heart with gratitude, and my hands with something which will introduce me into every family as a religious man, as a servant of God, and a servant of the church, and will with the Lord's blessing open the eyes of the understanding to behold wondrous things in God's book, and thus lead them to prepare for the glorious kingdom.

If any desire to go and do likewise, they may send by express to Springfield, Mass., where I shall probably get them, as I propose to be in that region for the present, and Springfield will be my post-office address for a few weeks to come. I find plenty of work to do, and I love to do it.

One word to brethren who are in the vicinity of Springfield. If you wish me to come and labor with you in my way, send a letter to Springfield, and with the Lord's help I will come.

Let me say to brethren generally, strive for union, brotherly love, and harmony. Shun strife, division, contention, debate, and the spirit of hardness. Then will God bless you, and you will look forth "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible (to your enemies) as an army with banners."

Yours, B. SPAULDING.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

BRO. GRANT:—I send you a letter that I received since our last quarterly meeting, as a part of the fruit of that meeting, and tracts we there gave away; also some verses composed and sung on the occasion of Bro. Preston's reception into the church, thinking they will be of some interest to the lovers of truth.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

FLOYD, IOWA, March 28th, 1864.

Eld. Peter S. W. Deyo:—Dear Bro:—Permit me, if you please, to address you a few lines. Myself and family are enjoying good health and a degree of prosperity. We now reside in Floyd, which change in local position was the cause of some suspicion on the part of the United Brethren; and when they found that I was investigating "the life and death question," they affectionately warned me to beware of infidelity, etc., which, of course, I did. But, in spite of my vigilance, the Scriptures overcame preconceived notions, and I yielded to convictions of truth, and immediately commenced preaching the faith which I had endeavored to destroy. This, of course, caused a separation from them, the form of which I will give you.

Lord's day, April 17th, I preached at Rock Creek, at 3 o'clock, P. M. When about half done preaching, Eld. M., of the U. B., came in with two witnesses; who, on hearing me affirm that "the soul that sinneth it shall die," Ezek. 18: 20, and that the soul was something which God made, or formed—Gen. 2: 7,—"The Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground,"—then man is dust; "and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man (dust) became a living soul";—arose and accused me of preaching heterodoxy, and said the church would not be responsible for my preaching any longer; stating that they had a discipline to go by, and those who would not go by the discipline should not exercise the functions of the ministry. To which I answered that, if I must be circumscribed by another man's notions in preaching Bible truth, I wished it distinctly understood that I was an independent, and should, as I had done, preach my sentiments openly and above board, despite the efforts of any; that the Bible was my discipline, and I intended to follow it. "Well, then," said the Elder, "we don't want the people to receive Bro. Preston as one of the U. B. preachers; and we wish all who want to be United Brethren to make it known by rising." Seven rose. He said, "In two weeks from to-day I will preach to you." N. B. The appointment was not his, but one of my own. "Well," said I, "I claim to be a gospel minister, called of God, as was Aaron; but if the people here do not want to hear me preach, I will yield the appointment to one whom you will hear."

This brought things to a point. They found that they were about to lose my services, which caused considerable excitement; so much, that one man started around the house to find out whether there were any objections to my preaching there, and ascertaining that there were none, he arose and requested me to return and preach as before, with the understanding that I should preach what I believed to be truth; saying that any thing that was in the Bible they were willing to receive, so the matter ended.

Since, I find that they are disposed to fight me everywhere. Well, let them do it. With the Bible on my side, I fear not. Sunday evening I tried to preach at this place (Floyd), where I had a house full to hear me. I told them plainly that my mind was changed, by force of logic and Scriptures, from the doctrine which I had formerly preached; and that henceforth I should make the Bible my standard author on theology, and should present its truths as there laid down. This remark caused some peculiar expressions to show themselves in the countenances of the audience. The U. B. were very angry with me. The Christians were joyful, but dared not express their joy, save in loud murmurs of applause and deep amens, which came from full hearts. After meeting closed there were some short words said by the U. B., which were appropriately answered by Bro. Alonzo Raymond.

I suppose I am now driven out of the church with which I have been connected. Yet my name is Christian still, and ever more shall be, by the grace of God. If you are curious to know how all this came to be, I answer, by the help of the Bible, "Ghostology," and "The Advent at hand." I now expect to devote myself to the work as zealously as I opposed it. Pray for us. Yours in the gospel of the Prince of Peace,

J. R. PRESTON.

Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa.

From Bro. and Sr. Mathewson.

BRO. GRANT:—Ten days since we bade adieu to the loved and loving of Sandy Hill, N. Y., where we have resided nearly five years; and in about two hours, by the aid of the iron horse, landed in this place, where we expect to reside for the present. We have already enjoyed some ten meetings with them, in which we have realized, to some extent, that "heart had met its kindred,"—the great motive being the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom. Thus we already feel quite at home with this dear people, and now we earnestly crave the prayers of the faithful and tried ones, with whom we have been associated in the blessed cause of our soon coming King for more than twenty years, that we may be instrumental in saving souls in this place and vicinity; that some immortal gems may be given us in Castleton with which to bedeck our crowns in the day of the Lord Jesus.

S. G. & B. MATHEWSON.

Castleton, Vt., May 16th, 1864.

BRO. E. ORTON writes from North Bennington, Vt.:—"The Lord has been doing a work here that all his enemies cannot overthrow. A little flock has risen up, and the battle has raged hot. Some have gone back into the world, but still the work goes on, and new ones come up. I praise the Lord, and give him the glory for what he has done."

From Bro. J. A. Cleveland.

BRO. GRANT:—The Crisis is doing much good in Whitefield, as well as in other places. We are all glad to get it weekly. It comes full of good food for hungry souls. I hope the Lord will bless you and give you heavenly wisdom, that you may so conduct the paper until the Lord comes that it will prove a blessing to all that read it. We are doing what we can for it here.

The Lord is with us in Whitefield. I baptized four the first day of May. There are others that will go forward soon. The interest in our meetings is good. The young people hold three weekly prayer-meetings as usual. Our social meetings are well attended. The brethren are well engaged. Dear brethren, pray for us, that the good work may go on in Whitefield.

Your brother in Christ, J. A. CLEVELAND.

P. S. I wish Bro. D. T. Taylor would give us through the Crisis, the number of inhabitants the New Jerusalem may contain, it being twelve thousand furlongs square. Also the number of inhabitants from the creation, as near as it can be given. Infidelity says this earth cannot be the saints' rest because there is not room enough. J. A. C.

ERRATUM.—In article, "The signs of these days," published in Crisis of April 12th, it is made to read, "Bible dishonesty." It should read, "Public dishonesty." JOHN TAYLOR.

Obituaries.

ABIGAIL SMITH.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in West Gardiner, Me., Tuesday, March 22d, 1864, Abigail J. Smith, wife of Sherburne S. Smith, aged forty-nine years, four months, and four days.

Sister S. has left a large family to mourn their bereavement, consisting of six sons and six daughters, all living, to whom her faithfulness and devotion were manifest to the end of life; calling them around her bed, receiving and giving the last kiss, and then urging them to meet her in the kingdom of God. With tearful eyes and sorrowing hearts they knelt around her, and poured out their souls unto God, that the dying request of their mother might be answered. She then said she gained the evidence that the prayers of her family would be answered, and she should meet them, an unbroken family, in the Kingdom. Then saying her tears were all ended, she exclaimed, "Glory to God! peace on earth, and good will to men." From thence she struggled till death laid her low to wait the return of the great Life-giver to raise her to immortality at the resurrection of the just, which she believed to be near. Truly it may be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

She requested that the text in Jer. 14: 14, should be made use of on the occasion of her funeral, which was done by the writer, before a large and attentive congregation, in the Freewill Baptist meeting-house in the place where she had lived.

ISAAC WIGHT.

Advent Herald, please copy.

JOSIAH S. BROWN.

After a long and peaceful life, Bro. J. S. Brown rested from his labors, in the ninetieth year of his age.

His hope was in the resurrection of the dead to immortality, brought to light in the gospel by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead. Bro. Brown was one of the oldest citizens in this parish, and one of the first that received the preaching of the Advent doctrine under the labors of Bro. Albion Ross. He firmly held to the same, and was not ashamed to bear witness to the light that shone on his mind from the sacred word. He went down to death like a "shock of corn fully ripe," to wait for the Son of God from heaven, who will call forth the sleepers from their resting places, when those that dwell in dust shall awake and sing, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

The church in Simonds feel this loss, but sorrow not as others that have no hope. He leaves a large circle of friends and relatives. May the consolations of the christian's hope be their joy. The writer spoke some words to the relatives and friends from Rev. 14: 13. M. W. CORLISS.

JAS. H. AUSTIN.

Fell asleep in Jesus, March, 1864, in Winsted, Ct., James H., youngest son of S. W. and Julia Austin, aged twenty years and six months.

His disease was dropsy in the chest, with an affection of the heart. For years he had been subject to frequent severe attacks of the inflammatory rheumatism, and always was a great sufferer at those times.

His last sickness dates from the 17th of Feb., when he felt that he should not again recover. A short time before he died he remarked to his father that he believed it would be well with him, as he felt that God had forgiven him,—that he should not sleep but a little time, for he believed Jesus was soon coming, and then he would awake to die no more,—and asked his parents to meet him in the kingdom.

It may be he has been taken from the evil to come.

"After life's fitful fever he sleeps well."

May the comforting grace which the Beloved only can impart, gently bless the hearts stricken with grief, and the full assurance of a patient hope ever uphold them through the future days of their waiting pilgrimage.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

M. A. G.

JAMES PERRY.

Died in Bowdoinham, Me., April 30th, of consumption, Bro. James Perry, aged sixty-one years, ten months.

I called to see him a week previous to his death, and he requested me to say to the friends, if I attended his funeral, that he did not expect his reward until the Lord comes. H. D. REED.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

From Liverpool 28th ult.

The Times asserts that the English and French Admirals at Tunis would act in concert. The insurrection is said to have assumed serious proportions. Additional Italian frigates had been ordered to the scene.

Affairs in Denmark are unchanged.

Garibaldi embarked on the Duke of Sutherland's yacht Undine at Fowry, at 9 o'clock on the 27th, but at noon on the same day the yacht put into San Marino from stress of weather.

There had been no fighting in Denmark. The Prussians were increasing their batteries on the channel which divides Alsen from the main land, and it was supposed the Danes would have to retire from Alsen, unless an armistice was speedily proclaimed.

The Vienna Gazette says the Cabinets of Vienna and Berlin have declined the proposal made at the Conference for an armistice with a continuance of the blockade of the German ports.

Liverpool May 4th, Queenstown 5th.

The Daily News learns that the Great Eastern has been purchased for the French Government at about a quarter of a million sterling. She will nevertheless carry out the engagement to lay the Atlantic cable.

Tunis advices represent the insurrection as becoming general.

It is asserted that the French troops are masters of the revolutionary movement in Algeria.

☞ The following, says an English paper, is an extract of a letter just received from Melbourne: Professor Newmaker, on a three years' scientific visit from Bavaria, tells us that in 1865 a comet shall come so close as to endanger this our earth; and should it not attach itself (as one globule of quicksilver to another), nor annihilate us, the sight will be most beautiful to behold. During three nights we shall have no darkness, but be bathed in the brilliant light of the blazing train.

DOMESTIC.

Monday, May 9th. We have now been out six days and have been fighting continuously. We have succeeded in penetrating some fifteen miles into the rebel territory, and have fifty miles further to go to get to Richmond. We have eaten and used up a very large proportion of the supplies which we took with us. If the rebels give us as much trouble on the rest of the route as they have thus far our chances for success are slim indeed.

Our losses have been terrible. I hardly dare to give my own opinion as to the number, but I think I am within bounds when I give the estimates of those who are supposed to know as follows:

Killed, 3000. Wounded, 18,000. Missing, 6,000. Total, 27,000.—Cor. Journal.

Baltimore, May 10th. The flag of truce boat New York, arrived at Annapolis to-day, with three hundred prisoners who were exchanged on the James river at Aiken's Landing. They report that there was great excitement at Richmond when they left.

Army of the Potomac, May 10th. Maj. Gen. John Sedgwick, commanding the 6th corps, was killed yesterday morning while standing with Col. McMahon and Major Wither of his staff, inside of an outer line of works, two miles from Spottsylvania Court House.

He was killed by a sharpshooter; the bullet entered his head about an inch below the left eye and passed out just back of the right ear. He died instantly. His death has cast a gloom over the entire army. No General in the service was more respected and beloved.

Brig. Gen. W. H. Morris, commanding 1st brigade, 2d division, 6th corps, was wounded yesterday, but not dangerously, by a minie shot through the thigh. The bodies of Gens. Sedgwick and Hayes are being taken to Washington to-day.

There was but very little fighting to-day, except skirmishing, until very late, and I have not learned the result.

Our losses in general officers during the five days fighting are in killed, Maj. Gen. Sedgwick, Brig. Gen. Jas. S. Wardsworth, and Brig. Gen. Alex. Hayes. Wounded, Brig. Gens. G. W. Getty, W. H. Morris, H. Baxter, and Robinson. Prisoners, Gens. Shaler and Seymour.

Baltimore, May 10th. The Norfolk New Regime says Gen. Butler had a brisk encounter with Gen. Beauregard on Saturday, near Petersburg, and yesterday (Sunday) attacked him (Beauregard) with a considerable force and drove him.

Gen. Butler (it adds) has the key to Richmond in his hands. Rebel prisoners report Lee wounded on Friday, Pickett killed. Two small gunboats were blown up on the James river by torpedoes.

Washington, May 11th, 1864.

To Major-General Dix:

Dispatches from the Army of the Potomac have just reached here, bringing dates to 5 o'clock P. M. of yesterday. Both armies at that time held their positions at Spottsylvania Court House, without any material change. The enemy had been driven to their breast works. The 6th corps under Gen. Wright, had carried the first line of the enemy's rifle-pits. There had been heavy skirmishing during the day. Our wounded had reached Fredericksburg, and during the night some were brought to Washington.

The Surgeon-General reports that the ample supplies of nurses, surgeons and medical stores have gone forward. There has been nothing heard from Gen. Butler or Sherman since my last dispatch of yesterday. (Signed) E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

Washington, May 11th. A distinguished officer arrived here about 10 o'clock to-night who was present during the terrible conflict of yesterday afternoon and last evening, and who left Gen. Grant in the saddle as late as 10 A. M. to-day. He sums up the bloody work of yesterday thus:

The fight opened all along the line. Longstreet's corps, under Hill, held the rebel right, resting about two miles northeast of Spottsylvania Court House, and Gen. Grant pitted Gen. Burnside's corps against it. At a given moment, later in the afternoon, Gen. Burnside precipitated his entire command, except the colored troops, upon the rebel right, driving and completely crushing it, and capturing three rebel brigades and four pieces of cannon. The fight continued with a ferocity never before witnessed until 9 P. M., when it closed upon the bloodiest field produced in this war.

The losses on both sides are stated to be very large.

New York, May 11th. The Secretary of the rebel navy has official information that the pirate Florida sunk the Federal gunboat Huntsville and another vessel in the West Indies.

Beauregard with seven thousand men made a surprise attack upon Gen. Butler about ten miles from Richmond. So sudden and unexpected was the encounter that Gen. Butler narrowly escaped capture. Indeed, his own orderly was captured fifty yards in front of him. The command being in readiness it quickly passed from the defensive to the offensive position, and the enemy were most signally defeated.

Authentic accounts from Chattanooga represent the force with which Gen. Sherman has advanced into Georgia as much superior to that of Johnston, who confronts him, and who is estimated to have about 30,000 men. The railroads are able to supply the whole army of the department and accumulate about thirty-seven per cent. of each day's transportation, so that Gen. Sherman will be well provided for in this respect.

Richmond papers announce a terrible panic existing in the rebel capital and the surrounding country, caused by the battles fought with Grant, and Gen. Butler's advance up James river. No provisions had been brought into Richmond for three days.

The colored troops who compose the extreme right of the army are said to behave steadily and to be ready for the fray.

New York, May 12. The Herald has the following official dispatch from Secretary Stanton:

WASHINGTON, May 11, 11 30, P. M.

To Maj. Gen. Dix, New York:

Dispatches from Gen. Grant, dated 8 o'clock this morning, have just reached this Department. He says:

"We have now ended the sixth day of very heavy fighting. The result to this time is much in our favor.

Our losses have been heavy, as well as those of the enemy. I think the loss of the enemy must be greater.

We have taken over 5000 prisoners in battle, whilst he has taken from us but few except stragglers.

I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The Government is sparing no pains to support him. (Signed) EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

The Times' dispatch says our loss in Monday's fight was over 2000 killed and wounded. It was fought only by Gen. Hancock, who in his effort to capture Spottsylvania Court House, accomplished the crossing of the river Po under cover of a tremendous artillery fire, and established himself on the south bank.

Tuesday morning Gen. Sheridan's cannon were heard away to the southward.

Gen. Grant presents no signs of uneasiness. Lee's men give unmistakable signs of despondency. They no longer cheer when they fight, but charge or retreat in dogged silence. Lee's losses begin to tell on him. He flinches from direct assault.

In an order to his (Lee's) army, Monday, found on a prisoner, he notified them that his communication with Richmond is broken, and no rations can be drawn from there. He advises efforts to capture supplies from Grant.

Gen. Grant up to yesterday had taken about 6000 prisoners. A regiment was taken, the greater part of which was only exchanged a few weeks since.

The World's Washington dispatch says it is rumored that 4000 of our wounded were captured and paroled by Stuart. It is also rumored that Gillmore's and Smith's corps have been withdrawn from the peninsula to reinforce Gen. Grant.

A Tribune's correspondent with the army states that it is supposed that Lee has dispatched his best corps to Richmond and that we are only opposed by the remaining two.

Washington, May 12. Reinforcements are being sent to the front. Twelve thousand left here this morning.

New York, May 13.

The Herald has the following from the Army of the Potomac:

Headquarters 5th Army Corps, in the Field, May 12, 7 A. M.

Maj. Gen. Hancock made a brilliant capture at 4 o'clock this morning.

An entire rebel division, including Maj. Gen. Ned Johnson commanding, Brig. Gen. Stuart and Brig. Gen. Robert Johnson, commanding brigades, between two or three thousand prisoners and two batteries of six pieces each fell into our hands.

Taking advantage of the storm and darkness last evening, Gen. Hancock managed to change the position of his troops unobserved by the enemy, and while the darkness and fog still prevailed, pounced on them this morning like a wolf on the fold.

He took his captives completely by surprise, and having sent his prisoners securely to the rear, turned their own guns on the enemy in the vicinity. As I write, these and other batteries are sending shells among the enemy at a rapid and destructive rate. The skirmishers are also pretty heavily engaged, and there is every indication of another battle.

The news of Hancock's capture has inspirited our forces with renewed enthusiasm. As the news first spread, the woods where our infantry columns lie rang with deafening and prolonged shouts of rejoicing.

Washington, May 14. 10,000 rebel prisoners reached Belle Plain yesterday, and will arrive here to-day; 5000 more are on the way. The rebel dead remain unburied, and together with their wounded, which have fallen into our hands, they number 35,000. The rebel army is retreating in the direction of Gordonsville. Their wagon trains which we have captured contain no provisions. Lee commenced his retreat at 8 o'clock Thursday evening; his rear guard at daylight.

Lee's retreat is fully confirmed. Prisoners state positively that his army was entirely worn out and fearfully reduced by tremendous losses.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 13. The Chattanooga correspondent of the Chicago Journal says Johnston has evacuated Dalton. He had not more than 30,000 men, and would scarcely seem able to make a stand this side of Atlanta. Our forces were very strong and closing in upon him on all sides.

The entire loss in the Red River campaign in men was 4300 in killed, wounded and missing. There is no truth in the report of a battle at Cane River. Gen. Banks' army had been reinforced and was 4000 stronger than when he first advanced.

Gen. Banks was hit with a piece of shell in the battle of Morets Bluffs, on the 23d ult. He was improving.

Washington, May 13. Gen. Butler has removed the obstructions from James River, and our monitors and iron clads are moving toward Richmond. A chart showing the location of the torpedoes was found on the man who was shot while attempting to explode torpedoes a few nights since, and Gen. Butler has used it to excellent purpose.

Washington, May 14. Dispatches from Gen. Grant dated yesterday evening at 6 o'clock have reached this Department.

The advance of Gen. Hancock yesterday developed the fact that the enemy had fallen back four miles. Col. Carroll was severely wounded.

A dispatch has just been received from Gen. Sherman, dated near Resaca, May 14. It is stated that by the flank movement on Resaca, Johnston has been forced to evacuate Dalton, and our forces were in his rear and flank. The weather was fine and the troops were in good order. All is working well and as fast as possible.

Cincinnati, May 14. News has been received here that Gen. Scofield's army moved from Bull's Gap on the 2d, and that after four hours fighting on the 4th, the rebels retreated, the Union troops pursuing them into North Carolina.

The news that Gen. Thomas has taken Dalton is confirmed. Our forces have captured 5000 prisoners and ten or twelve pieces of artillery. The rebels have retreated in some disorder to Resaca and Rome—our troops in hot pursuit.

Careful investigation fixes the total losses of the Army of the Potomac in killed, wounded and missing, including prisoners captured by the rebels and stragglers up to the commencement of the battle of Thursday, at about 20,000.

Washington, May 16. Parties who left the Army of the Potomac this afternoon report that Lee was occupying a strongly intrenched position between the Po and Ny rivers, or rather creeks. Some of the redoubts are said to have been thrown up a year ago, and the position possesses many natural advantages for defense. It is believed in the army that Lee has been considerably reinforced. The rebels seem determined to fight it out. There is yet to be hard work and a great sacrifice of life.

New York, May 16. The Herald's special Washington dispatch says reinforcements have been sent forward to Gen. Grant's army. The loss in killed and wounded has almost been made good by the reinforcements which have already reached the army. Troops have been pouring through this city from the West and elsewhere during the past week. It is believed the number will not amount to less than 20,000 fresh men.

The Alexandria correspondent of the St. Louis Republican makes the following statement:

"Before the battle of Pleasant Hill Gen. Dick Taylor sent in by a flag of truce a letter to Gen. Banks, in which he told him that if negro troops were used against the Confederate army he would raise the black flag and show no quarter. It may be owing to this fact that no negro troops were engaged, they having been sent to the rear (or rather to the front) to guard the baggage train on its way back to Grand Encore."

GEN. GRANT'S RESOURCES AND SPIRIT. The New York Commercial Advertiser says:—

"Whatever may be his plan of future operations is a matter of mere conjecture. The public may rest assured, however, that he has a very large force to carry it out; much larger than is generally supposed. Suffice it to say that there is now with him, after deducting the losses, a larger army than fought at Antietam, Fredericksburg, or Chancellorville. This does not include Butler's column. Just prior to moving he wrote, as we are informed by one who perused it, a letter to the President, thanking Mr. Lincoln for having furnished him with all the men and munitions he asked. He nobly added, 'Upon me devolves the entire responsibility for the success or failure of the coming campaign.'"

MARRIED.

At West Springfield, Mass., May 10th, by Eld. Rufus Wendell, THOS. R. WEAVER and ELLA MORSE, daughter of Randolph E. Ladd.

By Eld. C. L. Page, May 8th, 1864, Mr. JOHN M. SISLER to Mrs. ANN PATTERSON, both of Utica, Winona Co., Minn.

At Blooming Valley, Pa., May 3d, by Eld. J. T. Ongley, WM. E. ONGLEY to ESTHER DAVISON, both of Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Also, on the 8th inst, by the same, Bro. JAMES H. ONGLEY to Sr. MARIA H. PRATT, both of Randolph, Crawford Co., Pa.

Notices.

Notice.

I am requested to say, for the brethren in Springfield, that they have hired a hall in Goodrich's block, a little south of the Depot, where they will hold meetings every Sabbath. This is for a free Second Advent meeting, where the whole church have a chance to work out what God works in, whether it is speaking, praying, crying or shouting. They intend to contend for the liberty of the gospel as well as the letter.

The first meeting, May 1st, was a blessed one. God set his seal of approbation to it by giving us all a blessing. Some ten good warm exhortations after preaching in the forenoon, and eight in the afternoon. Others praised the Lord aloud. It seemed like an Advent meeting in '43. The singing went off on a high key, without a fiddle to hinder it. After meeting, the brethren stopped and chose three of their number to act as servants of the rest, not officers over them:—Brn. Thos. R. Weaver, Levi Allen, and Ethan Allen. They request me to say to the preachers, who may pass through Springfield, to correspond with Bro. Thos. R. Weaver. I feel that this is a providential door opened for those who wish to go where there is freedom of spirit. HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Northern N. Y. Christian Association will be held at Wilcox' Corners, twelve miles northeast of Mannsville, Jefferson Co., to commence Friday evening, May 27th, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, Brn. and Srs., one and all, let us rally to this meeting. Let us make this the most interesting meeting ever enjoyed in this region of country. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Mannsville, and conveyance will be in readiness to carry them to the meeting. Inquire for Milton R. Miles, or Benoni Stevens. It is expected that Eld. C. F. Sweet will be present to help preach the word. C. B. TURNER.

Meeting in Reading, Mich.

To the friends of Jesus living in Cambria, Reading, Allen, Algansee, Camden, and Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., would say that there will be, Lord willing, a meeting held at Reading village, the first Sunday in June, at 10 1-2 A. M. This meeting will be held either in the school-house or the Free Will Baptist church. We hope to see all at this meeting full of faith, hope, and zeal, which is according to knowledge, ready to work for God and the salvation of perishing souls. Come one, come all! A. N. SEYMOUR.

Conference.

The Eastern Maine Conference will be convened at Exeter, at the Chamberlain meeting-house, so-called, to commence June 9th, at 5 P. M., and continue over the following Lord's day. Our preaching brethren are ardently desired to atttend, and all others who possibly can from other portions of the country, and preach to us the word of God in sincerity and humility. God has blest us in that place of late with redeeming grace. To him be all the glory.

In behalf of the conference, I. DAMMAN.

Notice.

The Lord willing, our next quarterly meeting will be held in the city of Winona, in the county of Winona, Minn., to begin June 8th, and continue over the next first day of the week. Elder J. V. Himes will be there to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in the several sister churches are invited to attend, as ample provision will be made to accommodate the brethren from a distance. The Lord grant us a good time. In behalf of the brethren, PHILIP RAMER.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, 2 o'clock P. M., and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. SPENCER, President.
C. W. SMITH, Secretary.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

QUESTIONS.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 14th, 1864, at Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. The brethren in Floyd will gladly entertain all who may desire to attend. Come one and all that can.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. GRIFFIN.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Prepare for Camp.

The Fourth Annual Camp and Grove meeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence (D. V.,) June 26th, and continue over July 4th. Full particulars will will be given soon. Will churches that can be represented at that meeting intimate the same to me, as it may assist in obtaining a reduction of fare? Come, all that are good and that seek good.

H. F. CARPENTER, Poultney, Vt.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

CHAS. P. DOW.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—ED.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. HITCHCOCK.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. SHELDON.

Notice.

If any one owes me any money, and wants to pay it about these days, it will help me about paying some big bills for a lot of paper, printing, book-binding, &c., &c. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Notice.

Those wishing the ministerial labors of Bro. Lewis Robinson, Jun., will please address him at Holyoke, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.

2. PEARL, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.

3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.

4. MINION, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.

5. TESTAMENTS. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine, $3.00.

Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., new, $7.00

Rollin's History, two vols., sheep, $3.00.

Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.

Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $4.00.

Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.

Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.

Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol. sheep, new, $2.00.

Bower's History of the Popes, 3 vols., sheep, nearly new. $5.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by EXPRESS.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $2.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. WOODWARD, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.
H. L. Hastings.......................Sunday, May 22d

Concord, N. H.......................May 22d
Worcester, Mass.......................May 29th
Southampton, Long Island, N. Y., at the yearly meeting of the Shinnecock Indians.......................June 5th
Melbourne, C. E.........Wednesday evening, June 8th
Montreal, C. E., June 9th to 19th inclusive.
MILES GRANT.

Hartford, Ct.......................May 22d
Springfield, Mass.......................May 29th
At liberty in June. H. MUNGER.

Clinton, Mass.......................Sunday, May 22d
J. W. BRITTAN.

Wallingford, Ct., (North Farms).......Sunday, May 22d
O. D. WOODRUFF.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SCITICO, CT.
Sr. S. J. Higgins.......................Sunday, May 22d
R. Williams.......................Sunday, June 5th
I. B. Potter.......................Sunday, June 12th

Chicago, Ill.......................Sunday, May 21st
Wyanet Conference.......................May 25th
JACOB BLAIN.

New Salem, (Daniel Robie's school-house), June 5th, at 5 o'clock P. M. C. RICHARDSON.

Northwood Narrows, N. H.............Sunday, May 29th
N. GLIDDEN.

Exeter, N. H.......................Sunday, May 29th
Lee, N. H.......................Sunday, June 5th
C. S. EMERSON.

Haverhill, Mass.......................Sunday, May 22d
A. W. SIBLEY.

Waterloo, N. H.......................Sunday, May 22d
A. SIMPSON.

Dalton, Mass., (where Bro. Warren may appoint), Sunday, May 22d.
North Adams, Mass.......................Sunday, May 29th
E. McCULLOCK.

Agawam, Mass.......................Sunday, May 29th
Warehouse Point, Ct., (Chapel).......Sunday, June 5th
S. D. DANIELS.

Warehouse Point, Ct.......................Sunday, May 22d
WM. A. FENN.

Westerly, R. I.......................Sunday, May 22d
Lafayette, R. I.......................Sunday, May 29th
Warwick Plains.......................Sunday, June 5th
Glocester, R. I.......................Sunday, June 12th
J. K. BELLOWS.

Nottingham, N. H.......................Sunday, May 22d
West Ossipee, N. H.......................Sunday, May 29th
J. G. SMITH.

Merideth Village, N. H.......................May 22d
Melvin Village, (for baptism).......................May 29th
Ossipee, (Leighton's Corner) for baptism, (if desired), June 5th. T. W. PIPER.

APPOINTMENT FOR BRISTOL, CT.
H. K. Flagg.......................May 29th
George L. Teeple.......................June 12th

Danbury, N. H., Saturday evening, May 21st, at A. C. Knowlton's, and Sunday, May 22d, in the Town Hall.
JOHN G. HOOK.

East Canaan, N. H.......................Sunday, May 29th
A. SIMPSON.

Copenhagen.......................Sunday, May 22d
Barnes' Corners.......................Tuesday evening, May 24th
Wilcox' Corners.......................Friday evening, May 27th
C. B. TURNER.

East Hartland, Ct., May 25th, and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, the 29th.
Goshen, Mass.......................Sunday, June 5th
C. GOODRICH.

Prospect, (at Bro. Mix').......................Sunday, May 29th
S. WOODRUFF.

Yarmouth, Me.......................May 22d
Richmond Corner, (Meeting-house), with Bro. H. D. Reed, May 29th. R. R. YORK.

East Atkinson, Me., (Turner's Corner), Sunday, May 22d.
Medford, Me., (Cold Brook School-house), Sunday, May 29th.
Lincolnville, Me.......................Sunday, June 5th
THOMAS SMITH.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SPRINGFIELD, No. 5 OAK ST.
B. Spaulding.......................Sunday, May 22d
P. S. Butler.......................Sunday, May 29th

APPOINTMENTS FOR AGAWAM, MASS.
P. S. Butler.......................Sunday, May 22d
H. Pratt.......................Sunday, June 5th

Goshen.......................Sunday, May 29th
H. PRATT.

Epping Corner, (where Bro. J. R. Colbath may appoint), Saturday evening, May 21st, and Sunday, 22d.
New Durham Corner, Saturday evening, May 28th, and Sunday, 29th. JOSEPH PINKHAM.

State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill.......May 25th and through the week. J. V. HIMES.

Holliston.......................Sunday, May 22d
H. K. FLAGG.

Goshen, Mass.......................May 22d
Amherst, Mass.......................May 23d
GEO. A. STREETER.

APPOINTMENTS FOR VERNON, VT.
L. Boutell.......................Sunday, May 22d
S. S. Brewer.......................Sundays, June 15th and 19th

North Norway, Saturday evening, May 21st, and over the Sabbath.
Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore.......................June 5th
J. T. JORDAN.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.......................May 22d
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Ashburnham Depot, Mass.......................May 22d
Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's).......May 29th
Vernon, Vt.......................June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (Centerville school-house)....June 12th
S. S. BREWER.

Worcester, Mass.......................May 22d
Grafton Centre, N. H.......................May 29th
J. COUCH.

Cold Spring, Mass.......................Sunday, May 29th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block).........May 22d
Lynn, Mass.......................Sunday, May 29th
J. S. WHITE.

Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, May 22d, at half-past ten A. M.
Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. ONGLEY.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.......................Sundays, May 22d and 29th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. CHAS. P. DOW.

Expository Works on Prophecy.

REMOVAL.—I have moved to Ashburnham, Depot, Mass., where all letters and orders must be directed. I have now on hand the following works: 1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 2. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. 3. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. 4. EXPOSITION OF REVELATION SIXTH. 5. TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII. IN TWO PARTS,—A HISTORY OF THE LEOPARD AND TWO-HORNED BEAST. 6. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. 7. A third and new edition of THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS, with additional pages and cover. THE LAST DAY TOKENS, Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Please see notice in another column. All the above works sent by mail for one dollar and twenty-five cents. Several are illustrated with good engravings. ☞ Write NAME, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE, in a plain manner. ☜

S. S. BREWER, Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Dear friend, get them, and circulate them. They will do you and all that read them good.

Valuable Books for Sale.

LARDNER'S WORKS, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

ROY'S HEBREW DICTIONARY, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW CONCORDANCE, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

LOWTH on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

GRIESBACH'S GREEK TESTAMENT, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

ENGLISH REFERENCE BIBLES, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted. ☜

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

Weeden Holloway, Sarah P. Sprague, Polly King, H. C. Anderson, Wm. Hurd, C. R. Edmonds, J. W. Barnell, J. Sampson, Reuben Wethby, Rachel Oliver, John W. Bliss.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their POST OFFICE and STATE. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

C. Farrington, T. Lane, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. R. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E. Soper, Henry Hilliard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman, MARY BOYD wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, MARGARET C. RILEY, what P. O.?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

L. C. McKinstry—We propose to go the other way.
D. G. M.—It is sent.
Mrs. C. R. Danks—If you will give us his address, we will send him some tracts and papers.
Jane Morrell—Do not find the credit of $5.00.
E. Hemenway—The money was paid in, and the paper sent regularly.
G. W. Green—$1.50 on acct. received.
J. Sarle—Do not think there will be. None have yet been written.
S. L. Walter—Tell us which they are, and we will send them.
J. W.—They were received.
S. A. Chaplin—The money for A. Wood was received and credited.
Frank Nelson—We have none of the books you ordered; hope to have them soon.
S. C. Wilcox—We have mailed you the Bible according to directions, to CENTREVILLE, W. VA. We have credited you the money sent in August last.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 450. The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—J Wilson 444, J H Edmonds 468, S Waters 385, S J Buswell 448, J M Snook 472, A Bagley 369, J Johnson 469, P Benson 468, M Capwell 461, H Wheeler 473, Mrs J Burgess 500, R S Webber 474, J Staples 474, Mrs. E. A. Duncan 410, J. Buckingham 487, E M Glidden 474, C D W Scott 2 copies 482, M. Curtis 474, J M Hackett 475, J E Green 474, R OLIVER—what P. O? E P Streeter 476, S. Woodruff 464, B Bennis 472, J Smith 476, S O Parker 469, A Doolittle 476, M J Hodgkins 480, S B Saxton 475, Mrs. E. Hambleton 476, G. Bridge 476, A O Reed 476, E. Nichols 476, J. Clifford 442, C B Keach 472, R J Whitehead 476, G T Whitney 475, M A Barker 474, A Churchill 470, B F Emery 468, C Stevens 476, E W Brown 502, S Torrey 497.

$2.00 each.—B E Wetherbee 457, S. Manning 497, N C Bulloch 487, L Andrew 452, Mrs. P D Harper 500, L Roundsville 468, E T Butman 480, D Bump 466, L Caskey 499, R R Pierce 499, L Conley 474, J. Brown 468, E Tibbetts 500, S B Ireland 494, Mrs E V Barney 450, J McCrillis 495, L. H. Wiggin 500, W. Davis 491, L A Durgin 451, H. Brown 426, R. WETHBY—what P. O.? H Eaton 497, E MERRILL 494, J B Hurd 502, J S Morgan 475, J. W. BLISS—what P. O.? C. Bolt 502, E. G. Hobbs 498, A C Wells 442, B Hooper 437, C C Whittier 502.

50c each.—P T Wilson 460, MRS. B. ORTON—what P. O.? E Orton 463, E. A. Pratt 457, O W Smith 535, J Stanley 461, O Scott 461, E Williams 461, Mrs. M A Mundell 462, S A Johnson 458, M Willard 457, E Cowles 463, A F Welch 460, J N Snyder 453, S. Simons 463, M Smiley 462, S L Walter 451.

Mrs. S. Myers 40c, 425; S. R. Eddy $1.20, 481; D O Hopkins $1.50, 2 copies, 502; C. Cady $3.00, 468; S C Wilcox $1.22, 460.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

L. Roundsville 60c, E Orton $1.50, D Chilson 50c, E A. Prescott $3.00, M. A. Fowler 25c, C. Phillips $1.51, H Bailey $2.50, L D Lord $5.95, G. M. Estey 25c, J W Taylor 10c, N. Glidden 85c, J. N. Snyder $1.00, G. F. Locke $1.40, J. M. Durnam $2.25, G. Stockwell $1.10, S. L. Manley 55c, A. L. Forrester $1.00, C. D. W. Scott $1.00, S C Wilcox $2.78.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

D. Chilson, Eunice Orton, L. Roundsville, Z Boody, H Bailey, M A Fowler, C. Phillips, C D W Scott, G M Estey, J W Taylor, S R Eddy, D F Smith, N Glidden, J. M. Durnam, G. W. Allen, G F Locke, G Stockwell, S. Prentiss, W. Smith, S. L. Manley, A L Forrester, G Hollett.

BY EXPRESS.—J Blain.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M H Morrison, S A Isbell, V N Cudworth, R H Nye, M. Mathews Weaver, N M Wells, A L Forrester, L. A. Wheeler, C H Leverton, A Ross, J R Preston, H A Arnold, D. G. M., Alson.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

L. C. McKinstry—Montreal, C. E.
S. S. Brazee—Cold Spring, Mass.
P. W. Hough—After May 20th, Cascade, Dubuque Co., Iowa.
S. G. Mathewson—Castleton, Vt.
Walter Pratt—Boston, Mass.
B. Spaulding—Springfield, Mass., for a few weeks. Brethren wishing my labors will please address me there.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian Mission the past week, as follows:—

9th and Sp. Garden St. Church, Philadelphia, $11.85; Bro. R. and wife, $10.00; Bro. Stetler, A friend of Missions, Cash, Lawrence, Mass., I. C. M. Gredy, each $5.00; Agricul. Hall, Ad. Church, Phila., $2.20; George, Newburyport, L. Robins, each $2; Abigail H. Stokes, Eld. Carpenter, John M. Orrock, A Bro., through Eld. Himes, F. H. Pilley, I. B. Estabrook, A Sister at East Boston, each $1.00; a friend of the cause in Nevado, Ohio, $1.00.

☞ All contributions in future which may be sent to Elders J. LITCH, MILES GRANT, or H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass., or to Elder J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich., will be forwarded to me, and acknowledged. Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for the kingdom,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is 2 cents for each FOUR OUNCES, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each FOUR OUNCES or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is two cents; but three or four tracts may be sent in the same parcel at the same price. A Book weighing 4 ounces costs 4 cents postage, one weighing 5 ounces would cost 8 cents, or just as much as if it weighed 8 ounces.

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Greece, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition, of a very interesting nature. Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.50; single, by mail, 15 cts.

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $0.00. Single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Woe" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrible, bloody, and cruel beyond conception, or the power of language to describe. "Behold the Third Woe cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the [illegible] "The Two-Horned Beast." Per dozen, by mail, $1.25. Single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $2.25. Single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $1.25. Single, by mail, 15 cts.

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compound, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars; [illegible] Single, by mail, 25 cts.

9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.

10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology on Bible; [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, 87 cts. Single, 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 8 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 80 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25. [illegible] write your name, Post Office, County, and State in a plain manner.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. 160 pp. In cloth, 60c. Paper, 35c.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. Cloth, 60c. Paper, 35c. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. [illegible]

Many thanks to the donors. They have shown their love and interest for the cause, and have filled my heart with gratitude, and my hands with something which will introduce me into every family as a religious man, as a servant of God, and a servant of the church, and will with the Lord's blessing open the eyes of the understanding to behold wondrous things in God's book, and thus lead them to prepare for the glorious kingdom.

If any desire to go and do likewise, they may send by express to Springfield, Mass., where I shall probably get them, as I propose to be in that region for the present, and Springfield will be my post-office address for a few weeks to come. I find plenty of work to do, and I love to do it.

One word to brethren who are in the vicinity of Springfield. If you wish me to come and labor with you in my way, send a letter to Springfield, and with the Lord's help I will come.

Let me say to brethren generally, strive for union, brotherly love, and harmony. Shun strife, division, contention, debate, and the spirit of hardness. Then will God bless you, and you will look forth "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible (to your enemies) as an army with banners."

Yours, E. Spaulding.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

Bro. Grant:—I send you a letter that I received since our last quarterly meeting, as a part of the fruit of that meeting, and tracts we there gave away; also some verses composed and sung on the occasion of Bro. Preston's reception into the church, thinking they will be of some interest to the lovers of truth.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

Floyd, Iowa, March 28th, 1864.

Eld. Peter S. W. Deyo:—Dear Bro:—Permit me, if you please, to address you a few lines. Myself and family are enjoying good health and a degree of prosperity. We now reside in Floyd, which change in local position was the cause of some suspicion on the part of the United Brethren; and when they found that I was investigating "the life and death question," they affectionately warned me to beware of infidelity, etc., which, of course, I did. But, in spite of my vigilance, the Scriptures overcame preconceived notions, and I yielded to convictions of truth, and immediately commenced preaching the faith which I had endeavored to destroy. This, of course, caused a separation from them, the form of which I will give you.

Lord's day, April 17th, I preached at Rock Creek, at 3 o'clock, P. M. When about half done preaching, Eld. M., of the U. B., came in with two witnesses; who, on hearing me affirm that "the soul that sinneth it shall die," Ezek. 18: 20, and that the soul was something which God made, or formed—Gen. 2: 7,—"The Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground,"—then man is dust; "and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man (dust) became a living soul";—arose and accused me of preaching heterodoxy, and said the church would not be responsible for my preaching any longer; stating that they had a discipline to go by, and those who would not go by the discipline should not exercise the functions of the ministry. To which I answered that, if I must be circumscribed by another man's notions in preaching Bible truth, I wished it distinctly understood that I was an independent, and should, as I had done, preach my sentiments openly and above board, despite the efforts of any; that the Bible was my discipline, and I intended to follow it. "Well, then," said the Elder, "we don't want the people to receive Bro. Preston as one of the U. B. preachers; and we wish all who want to be United Brethren to make it known by rising." Seven rose. He said, "In two weeks from to-day I will preach to you." N. B. The appointment was not his, but one of my own. "Well," said I, "I claim to be a gospel minister, called of God, as was Aaron; but if the people here do not want to hear me preach, I will yield the appointment to one whom you will hear."

This brought things to a point. They found that they were about to lose my services, which caused considerable excitement; so much, that one man started around the house to find out whether there were any objections to my preaching there, and ascertaining that there were none, he arose and requested me to return and preach as before, with the understanding that I should preach what I believed to be truth; saying that any thing that was in the Bible they were willing to receive, so the matter ended.

Since, I find that they are disposed to fight me everywhere. Well, let them do it. With the Bible on my side, I fear not. Sunday evening I tried to preach at this place (Floyd), where I had a house full to hear me. I told them plainly that my mind was changed, by force of logic and Scriptures, from the doctrine which I had formerly preached; and that henceforth I should make the Bible my standard author on theology, and should present its truths as there laid down. This remark caused some peculiar expressions to show themselves in the countenances of the audience. The U. B. were very angry with me. The Christians were joyful, but dared not express their joy, save in loud murmurs of applause and deep amens, which came from full hearts. After meeting closed there were some short words said by the U. B., which were appropriately answered by Bro. Alonzo Raymond.

I suppose I am now driven out of the church with which I have been connected. Yet my name is Christian still, and ever more shall be, by the grace of God. If you are curious to know how all this came to be, I answer, by the help of the Bible, "Ghostology," and "The Advent at hand." I now expect to devote myself to the work as zealously as I opposed it. Pray for us. Yours in the gospel of the Prince of Peace,

J. R. Preston.

Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa.

From Bro. and Sr. Mathewson.

Bro. Grant:—Ten days since we bade adieu to the loved and loving of Sandy Hill, N. Y., where we have resided nearly five years; and in about two hours, by the aid of the iron horse, landed in this place, where we expect to reside for the present. We have already enjoyed some ten meetings with them, in which we have realized, to some extent, that "heart had met its kindred,"—the great motive being the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom. Thus we already feel quite at home with this dear people, and now we earnestly crave the prayers of the faithful and tried ones, with whom we have been associated in the blessed cause of our soon coming King for more than twenty years, that we may be instrumental in saving souls in this place and vicinity; that some immortal gems may be given us in Castleton with which to bedeck our crowns in the day of the Lord Jesus.

S. G. & B. Mathewson.

Castleton, Vt., May 16th, 1864.

Bro. E. Orton writes from North Bennington, Vt.:—"The Lord has been doing a work here that all his enemies cannot overthrow. A little flock has risen up, and the battle has raged hot. Some have gone back into the world, but still the work goes on, and new ones come up. I praise the Lord, and give him the glory for what he has done."

From Bro. J. A. Cleveland.

Bro. Grant:—The Crisis is doing much good in Whitefield, as well as in other places. We are all glad to get it weekly. It comes full of good food for hungry souls. I hope the Lord will bless you and give you heavenly wisdom, that you may so conduct the paper until the Lord comes that it will prove a blessing to all that read it. We are doing what we can for it here.

The Lord is with us in Whitefield. I baptized four the first day of May. There are others that will go forward soon. The interest in our meetings is good. The young people hold three weekly prayer-meetings as usual. Our social meetings are well attended. The brethren are well engaged. Dear brethren, pray for us, that the good work may go on in Whitefield.

Your brother in Christ, J. A. Cleveland.

P. S. I wish Bro. D. T. Taylor would give us through the Crisis, the number of inhabitants the New Jerusalem may contain, it being twelve thousand furlongs square. Also the number of inhabitants from the creation, as near as it can be given. Infidelity says this earth cannot be the saints' rest because there is not room enough. J. A. C.

Erratum.—In article, "The signs of these days," published in Crisis of April 12th, it is made to read, "Bible dishonesty." It should read, "Public dishonesty." John Taylor.

Obituaries.

Abigail Smith.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in West Gardiner, Me., Tuesday, March 22d, 1864, Abigail J. Smith, wife of Sherburne S. Smith, aged forty-nine years, four months, and four days.

Sister S. has left a large family to mourn their bereavement, consisting of six sons and six daughters, all living, to whom her faithfulness and devotion were manifest to the end of life; calling them around her bed, receiving and giving the last kiss, and then urging them to meet her in the kingdom of God. With tearful eyes and sorrowing hearts they knelt around her, and poured out their souls unto God, that the dying request of their mother might be answered. She then said she gained the evidence that the prayers of her family would be answered, and she should meet them, an unbroken family, in the Kingdom. Then saying her tears were all ended, she exclaimed, "Glory to God! peace on earth, and good will to men." From thence she struggled till death laid her low to wait the return of the great Life-giver to raise her to immortality at the resurrection of the just, which she believed to be near. Truly it may be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

She requested that the text in Jer. 14: 14, should be made use of on the occasion of her funeral, which was done by the writer, before a large and attentive congregation, in the Freewill Baptist meeting-house in the place where she had lived.

Isaac Wight.

Advent Herald, please copy.

Josiah S. Brown.

After a long and peaceful life, Bro. J. S. Brown rested from his labors, in the ninetieth year of his age.

His hope was in the resurrection of the dead to immortality, brought to light in the gospel by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead. Bro. Brown was one of the oldest citizens in this parish, and one of the first that received the preaching of the Advent doctrine under the labors of Bro. Albion Ross. He firmly held to the same, and was not ashamed to bear witness to the light that shone on his mind from the sacred word. He went down to death like a "shock of corn fully ripe," to wait for the Son of God from heaven, who will call forth the sleepers from their resting places, when those that dwell in dust shall awake and sing, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

The church in Simonds feel this loss, but sorrow not as others that have no hope. He leaves a large circle of friends and relatives. May the consolations of the christian's hope be their joy. The writer spoke some words to the relatives and friends from Rev. 14: 13. M. W. Corliss.

Jas. H. Austin.

Fell asleep in Jesus, March, 1864, in Winsted, Ct., James H., youngest son of S. W. and Julia Austin, aged twenty years and six months.

His disease was dropsy in the chest, with an affection of the heart. For years he had been subject to frequent severe attacks of the inflammatory rheumatism, and always was a great sufferer at those times.

His last sickness dates from the 17th of Feb., when he felt that he should not again recover. A short time before he died he remarked to his father that he believed it would be well with him, as he felt that God had forgiven him,—that he should not sleep but a little time, for he believed Jesus was soon coming, and then he would awake to die no more,—and asked his parents to meet him in the kingdom.

It may be he has been taken from the evil to come.

"After life's fitful fever he sleeps well."

May the comforting grace which the Beloved only can impart, gently bless the hearts stricken with grief, and the full assurance of a patient hope ever uphold them through the future days of their waiting pilgrimage.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

M. A. G.

James Perry.

Died in Bowdoinham, Me., April 30th, of consumption, Bro. James Perry, aged sixty-one years, ten months.

I called to see him a week previous to his death, and he requested me to say to the friends, if I attended his funeral, that he did not expect his reward until the Lord comes. H. D. Reed.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

From Liverpool 28th ult.

The Times asserts that the English and French Admirals at Tunis would act in concert. The insurrection is said to have assumed serious proportions. Additional Italian frigates had been ordered to the scene.

Affairs in Denmark are unchanged.

Garibaldi embarked on the Duke of Sutherland's yacht Undine at Fowry, at 9 o'clock on the 27th, but at noon on the same day the yacht put into San Marino from stress of weather.

There had been no fighting in Denmark. The Prussians were increasing their batteries on the channel which divides Alsen from the main land, and it was supposed the Danes would have to retire from Alsen, unless an armistice was speedily proclaimed.

The Vienna Gazette says the Cabinets of Vienna and Berlin have declined the proposal made at the Conference for an armstice with a continuance of the blockade of the German ports.

Liverpool May 4th, Queenstown 5th.

The Daily News learns that the Great Eastern has been purchased for the French Government at about a quarter of a million sterling. She will nevertheless carry out the engagement to lay the Atlantic cable.

Tunis advices represent the insurrection as becoming general.

It is asserted that the French troops are masters of the revolutionary movement in Algeria.

☞ The following, says an English paper, is an extract of a letter just received from Melbourne: Professor Newmaker, on a three years' scientific visit from Bavaria, tells us that in 1865 a comet shall come so close as to endanger this our earth; and should it not attach itself (as one globule of quicksilver to another), nor annihilate us, the sight will be most beautiful to behold. During three nights we shall have no darkness, but be bathed in the brilliant light of the blazing train.

DOMESTIC.

Monday, May 9th. We have now been out six days and have been fighting continuously. We have succeeded in penetrating some fifteen miles into the rebel territory, and have fifty miles further to go to get to Richmond. We have eaten and used up a very large proportion of the supplies which we took with us. If the rebels give us as much trouble on the rest of the route as they have thus far our chances for success are slim indeed.

Our losses have been terrible. I hardly dare to give my own opinion as to the number, but I think I am within bounds when I give the estimates of those who are supposed to know as follows:

Killed, 3000. Wounded, 18,000. Missing, 6,000. Total, 27,000.—Cor. Journal.

Baltimore, May 10th. The flag of truce boat New York, arrived at Annapolis to-day, with three hundred prisoners who were exchanged on the James river at Aiken's Landing. They report that there was great excitement at Richmond when they left.

Army of the Potomac, May 10th. Maj. Gen. John Sedgwick, commanding the 6th corps, was killed yesterday morning while standing with Col. McMahon and Major Wither of his staff, inside of an outer line of works, two miles from Spottsylvania Court House.

He was killed by a sharpshooter; the bullet entered his head about an inch below the left eye and passed out just back of the right ear. He died instantly. His death has cast a gloom over the entire army. No General in the service was more respected and beloved.

Brig. Gen. W. H. Morris, commanding 1st brigade, 2d division, 6th corps, was wounded yesterday, but not dangerously, by a minie shot through the thigh. The bodies of Gens. Sedgwick and Hayes are being taken to Washington to-day.

There was but very little fighting to-day, except skirmishing, until very late, and I have not learned the result.

Our losses in general officers during the five days fighting are in killed, Maj. Gen. Sedgwick, Brig. Gen. Jas. S. Wardsworth, and Brig. Gen. Alex. Hayes. Wounded, Brig. Gens. G. W. Getty, W. H. Morris, H. Baxter, and Robinson. Prisoners, Gens. Shaler and Seymour.

Baltimore, May 10th. The Norfolk New Regime says Gen. Butler had a brisk encounter with Gen. Beauregard on Saturday, near Petersburg, and yesterday (Sunday) attacked him (Beauregard) with a considerable force and drove him.

Gen. Butler (it adds) has the key to Richmond in his hands. Rebel prisoners report Lee wounded on Friday, Pickett killed. Two small gunboats were blown up on the James river by torpedoes.

Washington, May 11th, 1864.

To Major-General Dix:

Dispatches from the Army of the Potomac have just reached here, bringing dates to 5 o'clock P. M. of yesterday. Both armies at that time held their positions at Spottsylvania Court House, without any material change. The enemy had been driven to their breast works. The 6th corps under Gen. Wright, had carried the first line of the enemy's rifle-pits. There had been heavy skirmishing during the day. Our wounded had reached Fredericksburg, and during the night some were brought to Washington.

The Surgeon-General reports that the ample supplies of nurses, surgeons and medical stores have gone forward. There has been nothing heard from Gen. Butler or Sherman since my last dispatch of yesterday. (Signed) E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War.

Washington, May 11th. A distinguished officer arrived here about 10 o'clock to-night who was present during the terrible conflict of yesterday afternoon and last evening, and who left Gen. Grant in the saddle as late as 10 A. M. to-day. He sums up the bloody work of yesterday thus:

The fight opened all along the line. Longstreet's corps, under Hill, held the rebel right, resting about two miles northeast of Spottsylvania Court House, and Gen. Grant pitted Gen. Burnside's corps against it. At a given moment, later in the afternoon, Gen. Burnside precipitated his entire command, except the colored troops, upon the rebel right, driving and completely crushing it, and capturing three rebel brigades and four pieces of cannon. The fight continued with a ferocity never before witnessed until 9 P. M., when it closed upon the bloodiest field produced in this war.

The losses on both sides are stated to be very large.

New York, May 11th. The Secretary of the rebel navy has official information that the pirate Florida sunk the Federal gunboat Huntsville and another vessel in the West Indies.

Beauregard with seven thousand men made a surprise attack upon Gen. Butler about ten miles from Richmond. So sudden and unexpected was the encounter that Gen. Butler narrowly escaped capture. Indeed, his own orderly was captured fifty yards in front of him. The command being in readiness it quickly passed from the defensive to the offensive position, and the enemy were most signally defeated.

Authentic accounts from Chattanooga represent the force with which Gen. Sherman has advanced into Georgia as much superior to that of Johnston, who confronts him, and who is estimated to have about 30,000 men. The railroads are able to supply the whole army of the department and accumulate about thirty-seven per cent. of each day's transportation, so that Gen. Sherman will be well provided for in this respect.

Richmond papers announce a terrible panic existing in the rebel capital and the surrounding country, caused by the battles fought with Grant, and Gen. Butler's advance up James river. No provisions had been brought into Richmond for three days.

The colored troops who compose the extreme right of the army are said to behave steadily and to be ready for the fray.

New York, May 12. The Herald has the following official dispatch from Secretary Stanton:

Washington, May 11, 11 30, P. M.

To Maj. Gen. Dix, New York:

Dispatches from Gen. Grant, dated 8 o'clock this morning, have just reached this Department. He says:

"We have now ended the sixth day of very heavy fighting. The result to this time is much in our favor.

Our losses have been heavy, as well as those of the enemy. I think the loss of the enemy must be greater.

We have taken over 5000 prisoners in battle, whilst he has taken from us but few except stragglers.

I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The Government is sparing no pains to support him. (Signed) Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War.

The Times' dispatch says our loss in Monday's fight was over 2000 killed and wounded. It was fought only by Gen. Hancock, who in his effort to capture Spottsylvania Court House, accomplished the crossing of the river Po under cover of a tremendous artillery fire, and established himself on the south bank.

Tuesday morning Gen. Sheridan's cannon were heard away to the southward.

Gen. Grant presents no signs of uneasiness. Lee's men give unmistakable signs of despondency. They no longer cheer when they fight, but charge or retreat in dogged silence. Lee's losses begin to tell on him. He flinches from direct assault.

In an order to his (Lee's) army, Monday, found on a prisoner, he notified them that his communication with Richmond is broken, and no rations can be drawn from there. He advises efforts to capture supplies from Grant.

Gen. Grant up to yesterday had taken about 6000 prisoners. A regiment was taken, the greater part of which was only exchanged a few weeks since.

The World's Washington dispatch says it is rumored that 4000 of our wounded were captured and paroled by Stuart. It is also rumored that Gillmore's and Smith's corps have been withdrawn from the peninsula to reinforce Gen. Grant.

A Tribune's correspondent with the army states that it is supposed that Lee has dispatched his best corps to Richmond and that we are only opposed by the remaining two.

Washington, May 12. Reinforcements are being sent to the front. Twelve thousand left here this morning.

New York, May 13.

The Herald has the following from the Army of the Potomac:

Headquarters 5th Army Corps, in the Field, May 12, 7 A. M.

Maj. Gen. Hancock made a brilliant capture at 4 o'clock this morning.

An entire rebel division, including Maj. Gen. Ned Johnson commanding, Brig. Gen. Stuart and Brig. Gen. Robert Johnson, commanding brigades, between two or three thousand prisoners and two batteries of six pieces each fell into our hands.

Taking advantage of the storm and darkness last evening, Gen. Hancock managed to change the position of his troops unobserved by the enemy, and while the darkness and fog still prevailed, pounced on them this morning like a wolf on the fold.

He took his captives completely by surprise, and having sent his prisoners securely to the rear, turned their own guns on the enemy in the vicinity. As I write, these and other batteries are sending shells among the enemy at a rapid and destructive rate. The skirmishers are also pretty heavily engaged, and there is every indication of another battle.

The news of Hancock's capture has inspirited our forces with renewed enthusiasm. As the news first spread, the woods where our infantry columns lie rang with deafening and prolonged shouts of rejoicing.

Washington, May 14. 10,000 rebel prisoners reached Belle Plain yesterday, and will arrive here to-day; 5000 more are on the way. The rebel dead remain unburied, and together with their wounded, which have fallen into our hands, they number 35,000. The rebel army is retreating in the direction of Gordonsville. Their wagon trains which we have captured contain no provisions. Lee commenced his retreat at 8 o'clock Thursday evening; his rear guard at daylight.

Lee's retreat is fully confirmed. Prisoners state positively that his army was entirely worn out and fearfully reduced by tremendous losses.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 13. The Chattanooga correspondent of the Chicago Journal says Johnston has evacuated Dalton. He had not more than 30,000 men, and would scarcely seem able to make a stand this side of Atlanta. Our forces were very strong and closing in upon him on all sides.

The entire loss in the Red River campaign in men was 4300 in killed, wounded and missing. There is no truth in the report of a battle at Cane River. Gen. Banks' army had been reinforced and was 4000 stronger than when he first advanced.

Gen. Banks was hit with a piece of shell in the battle of Morets Bluffs, on the 23d ult. He was improving.

Washington, May 13. Gen. Butler has removed the obstructions from James River, and our monitors and iron clads are moving toward Richmond. A chart showing the location of the torpedoes was found on the man who was shot while attempting to explode torpedoes a few nights since, and Gen. Butler has used it to excellent purpose.

Washington, May 14. Dispatches from Gen. Grant dated yesterday evening at 6 o'clock have reached this Department.

The advance of Gen. Hancock yesterday developed the fact that the enemy had fallen back four miles. Col. Carroll was severely wounded.

A dispatch has just been received from Gen. Sherman, dated near Resaca, May 14. It is stated that by the flank movement on Resaca, Johnston has been forced to evacuate Dalton, and our forces were in his rear and flank. The weather was fine and the troops were in good order. All is working well and as fast as possible.

Cincinnati, May 14. News has been received here that Gen. Scofield's army moved from Bull's Gap on the 2d, and that after four hours fighting on the 4th, the rebels retreated, the Union troops pursuing them into North Carolina.

The news that Gen. Thomas has taken Dalton is confirmed. Our forces have captured 5000 prisoners and ten or twelve pieces of artillery. The rebels have retreated in some disorder to Resaca and Rome—our troops in hot pursuit.

Careful investigation fixes the total losses of the Army of the Potomac in killed, wounded and missing, including prisoners captured by the rebels and stragglers up to the commencement of the battle of Thursday, at about 20,000.

Washington, May 16. Parties who left the Army of the Potomac this afternoon report that Lee was occupying a strongly intrenched position between the Po and Ny rivers, or rather creeks. Some of the redoubts are said to have been thrown up a year ago, and the position possesses many natural advantages for defense. It is believed in the army that Lee has been considerably reinforced. The rebels seem determined to fight it out. There is yet to be hard work and a great sacrifice of life.

New York, May 16. The Herald's special Washington dispatch says reinforcements have been sent forward to Gen. Grant's army. The loss in killed and wounded has almost been made good by the reinforcements which have already reached the army. Troops have been pouring through this city from the West and elsewhere during the past week. It is believed the number will not amount to less than 20,000 fresh men.

The Alexandria correspondent of the St. Louis Republican makes the following statement:

"Before the battle of Pleasant Hill Gen. Dick Taylor sent in by a flag of truce a letter to Gen. Banks, in which he told him that if negro troops were used against the Confederate army he would raise the black flag and show no quarter. It may be owing to this fact that no negro troops were engaged, they having been sent to the rear (or rather to the front) to guard the baggage train on its way back to Grand Encore."

Gen. Grant's Resources and Spirit. The New York Commercial Advertiser says:—

"Whatever may be his plan of future operations is a matter of mere conjecture. The public may rest assured, however, that he has a very large force to carry it out; much larger than is generally supposed. Suffice it to say that there is now with him, after deducting the losses, a larger army than fought at Antietam, Fredericksburg, or Chancellorville. This does not include Butler's column. Just prior to moving he wrote, as we are informed by one who perused it, a letter to the President, thanking Mr. Lincoln for having furnished him with all the men and munitions he asked. He nobly added, 'Upon me devolves the entire responsibility for the success or failure of the coming campaign.'"

MARRIED.

At West Springfield, Mass., May 10th, by Eld. Rufus Wendell, Thos. R. Weaver and Ella Morse, daughter of Randolph E. Ladd.

By Eld. C. L. Page, May 8th, 1864, Mr. John M. Sisler to Mrs. Ann Patterson, both of Utica, Winona Co., Minn.

At Blooming Valley, Pa., May 3d, by Eld. J. T. Ongley, Wm. E. Ongley to Esther Davison, both of Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Also, on the 8th inst, by the same, Bro. James H. Ongley to Sr. Maria H. Pratt, both of Randolph, Crawford Co., Pa.

Notices.

Notice.

I am requested to say, for the brethren in Springfield, that they have hired a hall in Goodrich's block, a little south of the Depot, where they will hold meetings every Sabbath. This is for a free Second Advent meeting, where the whole church have a chance to work out what God works in, whether it is speaking, praying, crying or shouting. They intend to contend for the liberty of the gospel as well as the letter.

The first meeting, May 1st, was a blessed one. God set his seal of approbation to it by giving us all a blessing. Some ten good warm exhortations after preaching in the forenoon, and eight in the afternoon. Others praised the Lord aloud. It seemed like an Advent meeting in '43. The singing went off on a high key, without a fiddle to hinder it. After meeting, the brethren stopped and chose three of their number to act as servants of the rest, not officers over them:—Brn. Thos. R. Weaver, Levi Allen, and Ethan Allen. They request me to say to the preachers, who may pass through Springfield, to correspond with Bro. Thos. R. Weaver. I feel that this is a providential door opened for those who wish to go where there is freedom of spirit. Hiram Munger.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Northern N. Y. Christian Association will be held at Wilcox' Corners, twelve miles northeast of Mannsville, Jefferson Co., to commence Friday evening, May 27th, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, Brn. and Srs., one and all, let us rally to this meeting. Let us make this the most interesting meeting ever enjoyed in this region of country. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Mannsville, and conveyance will be in readiness to carry them to the meeting. Inquire for Milton R. Miles, or Benoni Stevens. It is expected that Eld. C. F. Sweet will be present to help preach the word. C. B. Turner.

Meeting in Reading, Mich.

To the friends of Jesus living in Cambria, Reading, Allen, Algansee, Camden, and Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., would say that there will be, Lord willing, a meeting held at Reading village, the first Sunday in June, at 10 1-2 A. M. This meeting will be held either in the school-house or the Free Will Baptist church. We hope to see all at this meeting full of faith, hope, and zeal, which is according to knowledge, ready to work for God and the salvation of perishing souls. Come one, come all! A. N. Seymour.

Conference.

The Eastern Maine Conference will be convened at Exeter, at the Chamberlain meeting-house, so-called, to commence June 9th, at 5 P. M., and continue over the following Lord's day. Our preaching brethren are ardently desired to attend, and all others who possibly can from other portions of the country, and preach to us the word of God in sincerity and humility. God has blest us in that place of late with redeeming grace. To him be all the glory.

In behalf of the conference, I. Damman.

Notice.

The Lord willing, our next quarterly meeting will be held in the city of Winona, in the county of Winona, Minn., to begin June 8th, and continue over the next first day of the week. Elder J. V. Himes will be there to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in the several sister churches are invited to attend, as ample provision will be made to accommodate the brethren from a distance. The Lord grant us a good time. In behalf of the brethren, Philip Ramer.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, 2 o'clock P. M., and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. Spencer, President.
C. W. Smith, Secretary.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

Questions.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 14th, 1864, at Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. The brethren in Floyd will gladly entertain all who may desire to attend. Come one and all that can.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. Griffin.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Prepare for Camp.

The Fourth Annual Camp and Grove meeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence (D. V.,) June 26th, and continue over July 4th. Full particulars will will be given soon. Will churches that can be represented at that meeting intimate the same to me, as it may assist in obtaining a reduction of fare? Come, all that are good and that seek good.

H. F. Carpenter, Poultney, Vt.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

Chas. P. Dow.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—Ed.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. Hitchcock.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. Sheldon.

Notice.

If any one owes me any money, and wants to pay it about these days, it will help me about paying some big bills for a lot of paper, printing, bookbinding, &c., &c. Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Notice.

Those wishing the ministerial labors of Bro. Lewis Robinson, Jun., will please address him at Holyoke, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. Diamond, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. Pearl, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. Nonpareil, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. Minion, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. Testaments. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS

AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine, $3.00.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., new, $7.00
Rollin's History, two vols., sheep, $3.00.
Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.
Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $4.00.
Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.
Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.
Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol. sheep, new, $2.00.
Bower's History of the Popes, 3 vols., sheep, nearly new. $5.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by express.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
" " Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $2.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. Woodward, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Appointment for Lowell Street Chapel.
H. L. Hastings.......Sunday, May 22d

Concord, N. H.......May 22d
Worcester, Mass.......May 29th
Southampton, Long Island, N. Y., at the yearly meeting of the Shinnecock Indians.......June 5th
Melbourne, C. E.......Wednesday evening, June 8th
Montreal, C. E., June 9th to 12th inclusive.
Miles Grant.

Hartford, Ct.......May 22d
Springfield, Mass.......May 29th
At liberty in June. H. Munger.

Clinton, Mass.......Sunday, May 22d
J. W. Brittan.

Wallingford, Ct., (North Farms).......Sunday, May 22d
O. D. Woodruff.

Appointments for Scitico, Ct.
Sr. S. J. Higgins.......Sunday, May 22d
R. Williams.......Sunday, June 5th
I. B. Potter.......Sunday, June 12th

Chicago, Ill.......Sunday, May 21st
Wyanet Conference.......May 25th
Jacob Blain.

New Salem, (Daniel Robie's school-house), June 5th, at 5 o'clock P. M. C. Richardson.

Northwood Narrows, N. H.......Sunday, May 29th
N. Glidden.

Exeter, N. H.......Sunday, May 29th
Lee, N. H.......Sunday, June 5th
C. S. Emerson.

Haverhill, Mass.......Sunday, May 22d
A. W. Sibley.

Waterloo, N. H.......Sunday, May 22d
A. Simpson.

Dalton, Mass., (where Bro. Warren may appoint), Sunday, May 22d.
North Adams, Mass.......Sunday, May 29th
E. McCulloch.

Agawam, Mass.......Sunday, May 29th
Warehouse Point, Ct., (Chapel).......Sunday, June 5th
S. D. Daniels.

Warehouse Point, Ct.......Sunday, May 22d
Wm. A. Fenn.

Westerly, R. I.......Sunday, May 22d
Lafayette, R. I.......Sunday, May 29th
Warwick Plains.......Sunday, June 5th
Glocester, R. I.......Sunday, June 12th
J. K. Bellows.

Nottingham, N. H.......Sunday, May 22d
West Ossipee, N. H.......Sunday, May 29th
J. G. Smith.

Merideth Village, N. H.......May 22d
Melvin Village, (for baptism).......May 29th
Ossipee, (Leighton's Corner) for baptism, (if desired), June 5th. T. W. Piper.

Appointment for Bristol, Ct.
H. K. Flagg.......May 29th
George L. Teeple.......June 12th

Danbury, N. H., Saturday evening, May 21st, at A. C. Knowlton's, and Sunday, May 22d, in the Town Hall.
John G. Hook.

East Canaan, N. H.......Sunday, May 29th
A. Simpson.

Copenhagen.......Sunday, May 22d
Barnes' Corners.......Tuesday evening, May 24th
Wilcox' Corners.......Friday evening, May 27th
C. B. Turner.

East Hartland, Ct., May 25th, and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, the 29th.
Goshen, Mass.......Sunday, June 5th
C. Goodrich.

Prospect, (at Bro. Mix')......Sunday, May 29th
S. Woodruff.

Yarmouth, Me.......May 22d
Richmond Corner, (Meeting-house), with Bro. H. D. Reed, May 29th. R. R. York.

East Atkinson, Me., (Turner's Corner), Sunday, May 22d.
Medford, Me., (Cold Brook School-house), Sunday, May 29th.
Lincolnville, Me.......Sunday, June 5th
Thomas Smith.

Appointments for Springfield, No. 5 Oak St.
B. Spaulding.......Sunday, May 22d
P. S. Butler.......Sunday, May 29th

Appointments for Agawam, Mass.
P. S. Butler.......Sunday, May 22d
H. Pratt.......Sunday, June 5th

Goshen.......Sunday, May 29th
H. Pratt.

Epping Corner, (where Bro. J. R. Colbath may appoint), Saturday evening, May 21st, and Sunday, 22d.
New Durham Corner, Saturday evening, May 28th, and Sunday, 29th. Joseph Pinkham.

State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill.......May 25th and through the week. J. V. Himes.

Holliston.......Sunday, May 22d
H. K. Flagg.

Goshen, Mass.......May 22d
Amherst, Mass.......May 23d
Geo. A. Streeter.

Appointments for Vernon, Vt.
L. Boutell.......Sunday, May 22d
S. S. Brewer.......Sundays, June 15th and 19th

North Norway, Saturday evening, May 21st, and over the Sabbath.
Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore.......June 5th
J. T. Jordan.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.......May 22d
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
Jos. D. Brown.

Ashburnham Depot, Mass.......May 22d
Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's).......May 29th
Vernon, Vt.......June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (Centerville school-house)..June 12th
S. S. Brewer.

Worcester, Mass.......May 22d
Grafton Centre, N. H.......May 29th
J. Couch.

Cold Spring, Mass.......Sunday, May 29th
Geo. L. Teeple.

Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block).......May 22d
Lynn, Mass.......Sunday, May 29th
J. S. White.

Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, May 22d, at half-past ten A. M.
Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. Ongley.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.......Sundays, May 22d and 29th
H. F. Carpenter.

Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. Chas. P. Dow.

Expository Works on Prophecy.

Removal.—I have moved to Ashburnham, Depot, Mass., where all letters and orders must be directed. I have now on hand the following works:

1. The Days in which we live. 2. The Slaying of the Witnesses. 3. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. 4. Exposition of Revelation Sixth. 5. Treatise on Revelation XIII. in Two Parts,—A History of the Leopard and Two-Horned Beast. 6. The History of an Immortal Soul. 7. A third and new edition of The Rich Man and Lazarus, with additional pages and cover. The Last Day Tokens, Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Please see notice in another column. All the above works sent by mail for one dollar and twenty-five cents. Several are illustrated with good engravings. ☞ Write Name, Post Office, County and State, in a plain manner.

S. S. Brewer, Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Dear friend, get them, and circulate them. They will do you and all that read them good.

Valuable Books for Sale.

Lardner's Works, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

Roy's Hebrew Dictionary, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

Englishman's Hebrew Concordance, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

Lowth on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

Griesbach's Greek Testament, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

English Reference Bibles, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted.

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State from which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

Weeden Holloway, Sarah P. Sprague, Polly King, H. C. Anderson, Wm. Hurd, C. R. Edmonds, J. W. Barnell, J. Sampson, Reuben Wethby, Rachel Oliver, John W. Bliss.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their Post Office and State. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

C. Farrington, T. Lane, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. E. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E. Soper, Henry Hillard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman, Mary Boyd wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, Margaret C. Riley, what P. O.?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

L. C. McKinstry—We propose to go the other way.
D. G. M.—It is sent.
Mrs. C. R. Danks—If you will give us his address, we will send him some tracts and papers.
Jane Morrell—Do not find the credit of $5.00.
E. Hemenway—The money was paid in, and the paper sent regularly.
G. W. Green—$1.50 on acct. received.
J. Sarle—Do not think there will be. None have yet been written.
S. L. Walter—Tell us which they are, and we will send them.
J. W.—They were received.
S. A. Chaplin—The money for A. Wood was received and credited.
Frank Nelson—We have none of the books you ordered; hope to have them soon.
S. C. Wilcox—We have mailed you the Bible according to directions, to Centreville, W. Va. We have credited you the money sent in August last.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 450. The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—J Wilson 444, J H Edmonds 468, S Waters 385, S J Buswell 448, J M Snook 472, A Bagley 360, J Johnson 469, P Benson 468, M Capwell 461, H Wheeler 473, Mrs J Burgess 500, R S Webber 474, J Staples 474, Mrs. E. A. Duncan 410, J. Buckingham 487, E M Glidden 474, C D W Scott 2 copies 482, M. Curtis 474, J M Hackett 475, J E Green 474, R OLIVER—what P. O? E P Streeter 476, S. Woodruff 464, B Bennis 472, J Smith 476, S O Parker 469, A Doolittle 476, M J Hodgkins 480, S B Saxton 475, Mrs. E. Hambleton 476, G. Bridge 476, A O Reed 476, E. Nichols 476, J. Clifford 442, C B Keach 472, R J Whitehead 476, G T Whitney 475, M A Barker 474, A Churchill 470, D F Emery 468, C Stevens 476, E W Brown 502, S Torrey 497.

$2.00 each.—B E Wetherbee 457, S. Manning 497, N C Bulloch 487, I. Andrew 482, Mrs. P D Harper 500, L Roundsville 468, E T Butman 480, D Bump 465, L Caskey 499, R R Pierce 499, L Conley 474, J. Brown 468, E Tibbetts 500, S B Ireland 494, Mrs E V Barney 450, J McCrillis 495, L. H. Wiggin 500, W. Davis 491, L A Durgin 451, H. Brown 426, R. WETHBY—what P. O.? H Ea[illegible] 497, E Merrill 494, J B Hurd 502, J S Morgan [illegible] J. W. BLISS—what P. O.? C. Bolt 502, E. G. Hobbs 498, A C Wells 442, B Hooper 437, C C Whittier 502.

50c each.—P T Wilson 460, MRS. B. ORTON—what P. O.? E Orton 463, E. A. Pratt 457, O W Smith 535, J Stanley 461, O Scott 461, E Williams 461, Mrs. M A Mundell 462, S A Johnson 458, M Willard 457, E Cowles 463, A F Welch 463, J N Snyder 463, S. Simons 463, M Smiley 462, S L Walter 451.

Mrs. S. Myers 40c, 426; S. R. Eddy $1.20, 461; D O Hopkins $1.50, 2 copies, 512; C. Cady $3.00, 468; S C Wilcox $1.22, 460.

For Books and Tracts.

L. Roundsville 60c, E Orton $1.50, D Chilson 60c, E A. Prescott $3.00, M. A. Fowler 25c, C. Phillips $1.51, H Bailey $2.50, L D Lord $5.05, G. M. Estey 25c, J W Taylor 10c, N. Glidden 85c, J. N. Snyder $1.00, G. F. Locke $1.10, J. M. Durnam $2.22, G. Stockwell $1.10, S. L. Manley 55c, A. L. Forrester $1.00, C. D. W. Scott $1.00, S C Wilcox $2.78.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.

D. Chilson, Eunice Orton, L. Roundsville, Z Boody, H Bailey, M A Fowler, C. Phillips, C D W Scott, G M Estey, J W Taylor, S R Eddy, D F Smith, N Glidden, J. M. Durnam, G. W. Allen, G F Locke, G Stockwell, S. Prentiss, W. Smith, S. L. Manley, A L Forrester, G Hollett.

By Express.—J Blain.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M H Morrison, S A Isbell, V N Cudworth, R H Nye, M. Mathews Weaver, N M Wells, A L Forrester, L. A. Wheeler, C H Leverton, A Ross, J R Preston, H A Arnold, D. G. M., Alson.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

L. C. McKinstry—Montreal, C. E.
S. S. Brazee—Cold Spring, Mass.
P. W. Hough—After May 20th, Cascade, Dubuque Co., Iowa.
S. G. Mathewson—Castleton, Vt.
Walter Pratt—Boston, Mass.
B. Spaulding—Springfield, Mass., for a few weeks. Brethren wishing my labors will please address me there.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian Mission the past week, as follows:—

9th and Sp. Garden St. Church, Philadelphia, $11.85; Bro. R. and wife, $10.00; Bro. Stetler, A friend of Missions, Cash, Lawrence, Mass., I. C. M. Gredy, each $5.00; Agricul. Hall, Ad. Church, Phila., $2.23; George, Newburyport. L. Robins, each $2; Abigail H. Stokes, Eld. Carpenter, John M. Orrock, A Bro., through Eld. Himes, F. H. Pilley, I. B. Estabrook, A Sister at East Boston, each $1.00; a friend of the cause in Nevado, Ohio, $1.00.

☞ All contributions in future which may be sent to Elders J. Litch, Miles Grant, or H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass., or to Elder J. V. Himes, Buchanan, Mich., will be forwarded to me, and acknowledged. Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for the kingdom,

M. B. Czechowski.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is 2 cents for each four ounces, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each four ounces or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is two cents; but three or four tracts may be sent in the same parcel at the same price. A Book weighing 4 ounces costs 4 cents postage, one weighing 5 ounces would cost 8 cents, or just as much as if it weighed 8 ounces.

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media, Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. Facts and testimonies concerning Papal Rome in its present condition. [illegible] Illustrated with good engravings. Per dozen, by mail, $1.00; single, by mail, 12 cts.
2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of the state of symbols, and the proximity of the Judgment. Per dozen, by mail, 80 cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.
3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. It was terrific, bloody, [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, 80 cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.
4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $1.20. Single, by mail, 12 cts.
5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible]
6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." [illegible]
7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and of the end of the World?" [illegible]
8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars; [illegible]
9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.
10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology, or, Bible: embracing testimony from the above [illegible]
11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 8 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 60 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25. Be sure to write your name, Post Office, County, and State in a plain manner.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability, and research, containing quotations from over four hundred writers of all ages [illegible] 1 vol. 12 mo., pp. 482, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. 160 pp. In cloth, 60c. Paper, 30c.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. Cloth, 60c. Paper, 30c. With the following and Mr. H.'s other Tracts, 223 pages in all, 60c.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From Sir James Stephen, with notes. 5c, postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 5c, postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. 5c, postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Moore. 5c, postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Christian Examiner, [illegible] and April and October, 1862. [illegible]

Many thanks to the donors. They have shown their love and interest for the cause, and have filled my heart with gratitude, and my hands with something which will introduce me into every family as a religious man, as a servant of God, and a servant of the church, and will with the Lord's blessing open the eyes of the understanding to behold wondrous things in God's book, and thus lead them to prepare for the glorious kingdom.

If any desire to go and do likewise, they may send by express to Springfield, Mass., where I shall probably get them, as I propose to be in that region for the present, and Springfield will be my post-office address for a few weeks to come. I find plenty of work to do, and I love to do it.

One word to brethren who are in the vicinity of Springfield. If you wish me to come and labor with you in my way, send a letter to Springfield, and with the Lord's help I will come.

Let me say to brethren generally, strive for union, brotherly love, and harmony. Shun strife, division, contention, debate, and the spirit of hardness. Then will God bless you, and you will look forth "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible (to your enemies) as an army with banners."

Yours, B. Spaulding.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

Bro. Grant:—I send you a letter that I received since our last quarterly meeting, as a part of the fruit of that meeting, and tracts we there gave away; also some verses composed and sung on the occasion of Bro. Preston's reception into the church, thinking they will be of some interest to the lovers of truth.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

Floyd, Iowa, March 28th, 1864.

Eld. Peter S. W. Deyo:—Dear Bro:—Permit me, if you please, to address you a few lines. Myself and family are enjoying good health and a degree of prosperity. We now reside in Floyd, which change in local position was the cause of some suspicion on the part of the United Brethren; and when they found that I was investigating "the life and death question," they affectionately warned me to beware of infidelity, etc., which, of course, I did. But, in spite of my vigilance, the Scriptures overcame preconceived notions, and I yielded to convictions of truth, and immediately commenced preaching the faith which I had endeavored to destroy. This, of course, caused a separation from them, the form of which I will give you.

Lord's day, April 17th, I preached at Rock Creek, at 3 o'clock, P. M. When about half done preaching, Eld. M., of the U. B., came in with two witnesses; who, on hearing me affirm that "the soul that sinneth it shall die," Ezek. 18: 20, and that the soul was something which God made, or formed—Gen. 2: 7,—"The Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground,"—then man is dust; "and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man (dust) became a living soul";—arose and accused me of preaching heterodoxy, and said the church would not be responsible for my preaching any longer; stating that they had a discipline to go by, and those who would not go by the discipline should not exercise the functions of the ministry. To which I answered that, if I must be circumscribed by another man's notions in preaching Bible truth, I wished it distinctly understood that I was an independent, and should, as I had done, preach my sentiments openly and above board, despite the efforts of any; that the Bible was my discipline, and I intended to follow it. "Well, then," said the Elder, "we don't want the people to receive Bro. Preston as one of the U. B. preachers; and we wish all who want to be United Brethren to make it known by rising." Seven rose. He said, "In two weeks from to-day I will preach to you." N. B. The appointment was not his, but one of my own. "Well," said I, "I claim to be a gospel minister, called of God, as was Aaron; but if the people here do not want to hear me preach, I will yield the appointment to one whom you will hear."

This brought things to a point. They found that they were about to lose my services, which caused considerable excitement; so much, that one man started around the house to find out whether there were any objections to my preaching there, and ascertaining that there were none, he arose and requested me to return and preach as before, with the understanding that I should preach what I believed to be truth; saying that any thing that was in the Bible they were willing to receive, so the matter ended.

Since, I find that they are disposed to fight me everywhere. Well, let them do it. With the Bible on my side, I fear not. Sunday evening I tried to preach at this place (Floyd), where I had a house full to hear me. I told them plainly that my mind was changed, by force of logic and Scriptures, from the doctrine which I had formerly preached; and that henceforth I should make the Bible my standard author on theology, and should present its truths as there laid down. This remark caused some peculiar expressions to show themselves in the countenances of the audience. The U. B. were very angry with me. The Christians were joyful, but dared not express their joy, save in loud murmurs of applause and deep amens, which came from full hearts. After meeting closed there were some short words said by the U. B., which were appropriately answered by Bro. Alonzo Raymond.

I suppose I am now driven out of the church with which I have been connected. Yet my name is Christian still, and ever more shall be, by the grace of God. If you are curious to know how all this came to be, I answer, by the help of the Bible, "Ghostology," and "The Advent at hand." I now expect to devote myself to the work as zealously as I opposed it. Pray for us. Yours in the gospel of the Prince of Peace,

J. R. Preston.

Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa.

From Bro. and Sr. Mathewson.

Bro. Grant:—Ten days since we bade adieu to the loved and loving of Sandy Hill, N. Y., where we have resided nearly five years; and in about two hours, by the aid of the iron horse, landed in this place, where we expect to reside for the present. We have already enjoyed some ten meetings with them, in which we have realized, to some extent, that "heart had met its kindred,"—the great motive being the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom. Thus we already feel quite at home with this dear people, and now we earnestly crave the prayers of the faithful and tried ones, with whom we have been associated in the blessed cause of our soon coming King for more than twenty years, that we may be instrumental in saving souls in this place and vicinity; that some immortal gems may be given us in Castleton with which to bedeck our crowns in the day of the Lord Jesus.

S. G. & B. Mathewson.

Castleton, Vt., May 16th, 1864.

Bro. E. Orton writes from North Bennington, Vt.:—"The Lord has been doing a work here that all his enemies cannot overthrow. A little flock has risen up, and the battle has raged hot. Some have gone back into the world, but still the work goes on, and new ones come up. I praise the Lord, and give him the glory for what he has done."

From Bro. J. A. Cleveland.

Bro. Grant:—The Crisis is doing much good in Whitefield, as well as in other places. We are all glad to get it weekly. It comes full of good food for hungry souls. I hope the Lord will bless you and give you heavenly wisdom, that you may so conduct the paper until the Lord comes that it will prove a blessing to all that read it. We are doing what we can for it here.

The Lord is with us in Whitefield. I baptized four the first day of May. There are others that will go forward soon. The interest in our meetings is good. The young people hold three weekly prayer-meetings as usual. Our social meetings are well attended. The brethren are well engaged. Dear brethren, pray for us, that the good work may go on in Whitefield.

Your brother in Christ, J. A. Cleveland.

P. S. I wish Bro. D. T. Taylor would give us through the Crisis, the number of inhabitants the New Jerusalem may contain, it being twelve thousand furlongs square. Also the number of inhabitants from the creation, as near as it can be given. Infidelity says this earth cannot be the saints' rest because there is not room enough. J. A. C.

Erratum.—In article, "The signs of these days," published in Crisis of April 12th, it is made to read, "Bible dishonesty." It should read, "Public dishonesty." John Taylor.

Obituaries.

Abigail Smith.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in West Gardiner, Me., Tuesday, March 22d, 1864, Abigail J. Smith, wife of Sherburne S. Smith, aged forty-nine years, four months, and four days.

Sister S. has left a large family to mourn their bereavement, consisting of six sons and six daughters, all living, to whom her faithfulness and devotion were manifest to the end of life; calling them around her bed, receiving and giving the last kiss, and then urging them to meet her in the kingdom of God. With tearful eyes and sorrowing hearts they knelt around her, and poured out their souls unto God, that the dying request of their mother might be answered. She then said she gained the evidence that the prayers of her family would be answered, and she should meet them, an unbroken family, in the Kingdom. Then saying her tears were all ended, she exclaimed, "Glory to God! peace on earth, and good will to men." From thence she struggled till death laid her low to wait the return of the great Life-giver to raise her to immortality at the resurrection of the just, which she believed to be near. Truly it may be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

She requested that the text in Jer. 14: 14, should be made use of on the occasion of her funeral, which was done by the writer, before a large and attentive congregation, in the Freewill Baptist meeting-house in the place where she had lived.

Isaac Wight.

Advent Herald, please copy.

Josiah S. Brown.

After a long and peaceful life, Bro. J. S. Brown rested from his labors, in the ninetieth year of his age.

His hope was in the resurrection of the dead to immortality, brought to light in the gospel by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead. Bro. Brown was one of the oldest citizens in this parish, and one of the first that received the preaching of the Advent doctrine under the labors of Bro. Albion Ross. He firmly held to the same, and was not ashamed to bear witness to the light that shone on his mind from the sacred word. He went down to death like a "shock of corn fully ripe," to wait for the Son of God from heaven, who will call forth the sleepers from their resting places, when those that dwell in dust shall awake and sing, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

The church in Simonds feel this loss, but sorrow not as others that have no hope. He leaves a large circle of friends and relatives. May the consolations of the christian's hope be their joy. The writer spoke some words to the relatives and friends from Rev. 14: 13. M. W. Corliss.

Jas. H. Austin.

Fell asleep in Jesus, March, 1864, in Winsted, Ct., James H., youngest son of S. W. and Julia Austin, aged twenty years and six months.

His disease was dropsy in the chest, with an affection of the heart. For years he had been subject to frequent severe attacks of the inflammatory rheumatism, and always was a great sufferer at those times.

His last sickness dates from the 17th of Feb., when he felt that he should not again recover. A short time before he died he remarked to his father that he believed it would be well with him, as he felt that God had forgiven him,—that he should not sleep but a little time, for he believed Jesus was soon coming, and then he would awake to die no more,—and asked his parents to meet him in the kingdom.

It may be he has been taken from the evil to come.

"After life's fitful fever he sleeps well."

May the comforting grace which the Beloved only can impart, gently bless the hearts stricken with grief, and the full assurance of a patient hope ever uphold them through the future days of their waiting pilgrimage.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

M. A. G.

James Perry.

Died in Bowdoinham, Me., April 30th, of consumption, Bro. James Perry, aged sixty-one years, ten months.

I called to see him a week previous to his death, and he requested me to say to the friends, if I attended his funeral, that he did not expect his reward until the Lord comes. H. D. Reed.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

From Liverpool 28th ult.

The Times asserts that the English and French Admirals at Tunis would act in concert. The insurrection is said to have assumed serious proportions. Additional Italian frigates had been ordered to the scene.

Affairs in Denmark are unchanged.

Garibaldi embarked on the Duke of Sutherland's yacht Undine at Fowry, at 9 o'clock on the 27th, but at noon on the same day the yacht put into San Marino from stress of weather.

There had been no fighting in Denmark. The Prussians were increasing their batteries on the channel which divides Alsen from the main land, and it was supposed the Danes would have to retire from Alsen, unless an armistice was speedily proclaimed.

The Vienna Gazette says the Cabinets of Vienna and Berlin have declined the proposal made at the Conference for an armstice with a continuance of the blockade of the German ports.

Liverpool May 4th, Queenstown 5th.

The Daily News learns that the Great Eastern has been purchased for the French Government at about a quarter of a million sterling. She will nevertheless carry out the engagement to lay the Atlantic cable.

Tunis advices represent the insurrection as becoming general.

It is asserted that the French troops are masters of the revolutionary movement in Algeria.

☞ The following, says an English paper, is an extract of a letter just received from Melbourne: Professor Newmaker, on a three years' scientific visit from Bavaria, tells us that in 1865 a comet shall come so close as to endanger this our earth; and should it not attach itself (as one globule of quicksilver to another), nor annihilate us, the sight will be most beautiful to behold. During three nights we shall have no darkness, but be bathed in the brilliant light of the blazing train.

DOMESTIC.

Monday, May 9th. We have now been out six days and have been fighting continuously. We have succeeded in penetrating some fifteen miles into the rebel territory, and have fifty miles further to go to get to Richmond. We have eaten and used up a very large proportion of the supplies which we took with us. If the rebels give us as much trouble on the rest of the route as they have thus far our chances for success are slim indeed.

Our losses have been terrible. I hardly dare to give my own opinion as to the number, but I think I am within bounds when I give the estimates of those who are supposed to know as follows:

Killed, 3000. Wounded, 18,000. Missing, 6,000. Total, 27,000.—Cor. Journal.

Baltimore, May 10th. The flag of truce boat New York, arrived at Annapolis to-day, with three hundred prisoners who were exchanged on the James river at Aiken's Landing. They report that there was great excitement at Richmond when they left.

Army of the Potomac, May 10th. Maj. Gen. John Sedgwick, commanding the 6th corps, was killed yesterday morning while standing with Col. McMahon and Major Wither of his staff, inside of an outer line of works, two miles from Spottsylvania Court House.

He was killed by a sharpshooter; the bullet entered his head about an inch below the left eye and passed out just back of the right ear. He died instantly. His death has cast a gloom over the entire army. No General in the service was more respected and beloved.

Brig. Gen. W. H. Morris, commanding 1st brigade, 2d division, 6th corps, was wounded yesterday, but not dangerously, by a minie shot through the thigh. The bodies of Gens. Sedgwick and Hayes are being taken to Washington to-day.

There was but very little fighting to-day, except skirmishing, until very late, and I have not learned the result.

Our losses in general officers during the five days fighting are in killed, Maj. Gen. Sedgwick, Brig. Gen. Jas. S. Wardsworth, and Brig. Gen. Alex. Hayes. Wounded, Brig. Gens. G. W. Getty, W. H. Morris, H. Baxter, and Robinson. Prisoners, Gens. Shaler and Seymour.

Baltimore, May 10th. The Norfolk New Regime says Gen. Butler had a brisk encounter with Gen. Beauregard on Saturday, near Petersburg, and yesterday (Sunday) attacked him (Beauregard) with a considerable force and drove him.

Gen. Butler (it adds) has the key to Richmond in his hands. Rebel prisoners report Lee wounded on Friday, Pickett killed. Two small gunboats were blown up on the James river by torpedoes.

Washington, May 11th, 1864.

To Major-General Dix:

Dispatches from the Army of the Potomac have just reached here, bringing dates to 5 o'clock P. M. of yesterday. Both armies at that time held their positions at Spottsylvania Court House, without any material change. The enemy had been driven to their breast works. The 6th corps under Gen. Wright, had carried the first line of the enemy's rifle-pits. There had been heavy skirmishing during the day. Our wounded had reached Fredericksburg, and during the night some were brought to Washington.

The Surgeon-General reports that the ample supplies of nurses, surgeons and medical stores have gone forward. There has been nothing heard from Gen. Butler or Sherman since my last dispatch of yesterday. (Signed) E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War.

Washington, May 11th. A distinguished officer arrived here about 10 o'clock to-night who was present during the terrible conflict of yesterday afternoon and last evening, and who left Gen. Grant in the saddle as late as 10 A. M. to-day. He sums up the bloody work of yesterday thus:

The fight opened all along the line. Longstreet's corps, under Hill, held the rebel right, resting about two miles northeast of Spottsylvania Court House, and Gen. Grant pitted Gen. Burnside's corps against it. At a given moment, later in the afternoon, Gen. Burnside precipitated his entire command, except the colored troops, upon the rebel right, driving and completely crushing it, and capturing three rebel brigades and four pieces of cannon. The fight continued with a ferocity never before witnessed until 9 P. M., when it closed upon the bloodiest field produced in this war.

The losses on both sides are stated to be very large.

New York, May 11th. The Secretary of the rebel navy has official information that the pirate Florida sunk the Federal gunboat Huntsville and another vessel in the West Indies.

Beauregard with seven thousand men made a surprise attack upon Gen. Butler about ten miles from Richmond. So sudden and unexpected was the encounter that Gen. Butler narrowly escaped capture. Indeed, his own orderly was captured fifty yards in front of him. The command being in readiness it quickly passed from the defensive to the offensive position, and the enemy were most signally defeated.

Authentic accounts from Chattanooga represent the force with which Gen. Sherman has advanced into Georgia as much superior to that of Johnston, who confronts him, and who is estimated to have about 30,000 men. The railroads are able to supply the whole army of the department and accumulate about thirty-seven per cent. of each day's transportation, so that Gen. Sherman will be well provided for in this respect.

Richmond papers announce a terrible panic existing in the rebel capital and the surrounding country, caused by the battles fought with Grant, and Gen. Butler's advance up James river. No provisions had been brought into Richmond for three days.

The colored troops who compose the extreme right of the army are said to behave steadily and to be ready for the fray.

New York, May 12. The Herald has the following official dispatch from Secretary Stanton:

Washington, May 11, 11 30, P. M.

To Maj. Gen. Dix, New York:

Dispatches from Gen. Grant, dated 8 o'clock this morning, have just reached this Department. He says:

"We have now ended the sixth day of very heavy fighting. The result to this time is much in our favor.

Our losses have been heavy, as well as those of the enemy. I think the loss of the enemy must be greater.

We have taken over 5000 prisoners in battle, whilst he has taken from us but few except stragglers.

I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The Government is sparing no pains to support him. (Signed) Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War.

The Times' dispatch says our loss in Monday's fight was over 2000 killed and wounded. It was fought only by Gen. Hancock, who in his effort to capture Spottsylvania Court House, accomplished the crossing of the river Po under cover of a tremendous artillery fire, and established himself on the south bank.

Tuesday morning Gen. Sheridan's cannon were heard away to the southward.

Gen. Grant presents no signs of uneasiness. Lee's men give unmistakable signs of despondency. They no longer cheer when they fight, but charge or retreat in dogged silence. Lee's losses begin to tell on him. He flinches from direct assault.

In an order to his (Lee's) army, Monday, found on a prisoner, he notified them that his communication with Richmond is broken, and no rations can be drawn from there. He advises efforts to capture supplies from Grant.

Gen. Grant up to yesterday had taken about 6000 prisoners. A regiment was taken, the greater part of which was only exchanged a few weeks since.

The World's Washington dispatch says it is rumored that 4000 of our wounded were captured and paroled by Stuart. It is also rumored that Gillmore's and Smith's corps have been withdrawn from the peninsula to reinforce Gen. Grant.

A Tribune's correspondent with the army states that it is supposed that Lee has dispatched his best corps to Richmond and that we are only opposed by the remaining two.

Washington, May 12. Reinforcements are being sent to the front. Twelve thousand left here this morning.

New York, May 13.

The Herald has the following from the Army of the Potomac:

Headquarters 5th Army Corps, in the Field, May 12, 7 A. M.

Maj. Gen. Hancock made a brilliant capture at 4 o'clock this morning.

An entire rebel division, including Maj. Gen. Ned Johnson commanding, Brig. Gen. Stuart and Brig. Gen. Robert Johnson, commanding brigades, between two or three thousand prisoners and two batteries of six pieces each fell into our hands.

Taking advantage of the storm and darkness last evening, Gen. Hancock managed to change the position of his troops unobserved by the enemy, and while the darkness and fog still prevailed, pounced on them this morning like a wolf on the fold.

He took his captives completely by surprise, and having sent his prisoners securely to the rear, turned their own guns on the enemy in the vicinity. As I write, these and other batteries are sending shells among the enemy at a rapid and destructive rate. The skirmishers are also pretty heavily engaged, and there is every indication of another battle.

The news of Hancock's capture has inspirited our forces with renewed enthusiasm. As the news first spread, the woods where our infantry columns lie rang with deafening and prolonged shouts of rejoicing.

Washington, May 14. 10,000 rebel prisoners reached Belle Plain yesterday, and will arrive here to-day; 5000 more are on the way. The rebel dead remain unburied, and together with their wounded, which have fallen into our hands, they number 35,000. The rebel army is retreating in the direction of Gordonsville. Their wagon trains which we have captured contain no provisions. Lee commenced his retreat at 8 o'clock Thursday evening; his rear guard at daylight.

Lee's retreat is fully confirmed. Prisoners state positively that his army was entirely worn out and fearfully reduced by tremendous losses.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 13. The Chattanooga correspondent of the Chicago Journal says Johnston has evacuated Dalton. He had not more than 30,000 men, and would scarcely seem able to make a stand this side of Atlanta. Our forces were very strong and closing in upon him on all sides.

The entire loss in the Red River campaign in men was 4300 in killed, wounded and missing. There is no truth in the report of a battle at Cane River. Gen. Banks' army had been reinforced and was 4000 stronger than when he first advanced.

Gen. Banks was hit with a piece of shell in the battle of Morets Bluffs, on the 23d ult. He was improving.

Washington, May 13. Gen. Butler has removed the obstructions from James River, and our monitors and iron clads are moving toward Richmond. A chart showing the location of the torpedoes was found on the man who was shot while attempting to explode torpedoes a few nights since, and Gen. Butler has used it to excellent purpose.

Washington, May 14. Dispatches from Gen. Grant dated yesterday evening at 6 o'clock have reached this Department.

The advance of Gen. Hancock yesterday developed the fact that the enemy had fallen back four miles. Col. Carroll was severely wounded.

A dispatch has just been received from Gen. Sherman, dated near Resaca, May 14. It is stated that by the flank movement on Resaca, Johnston has been forced to evacuate Dalton, and our forces were in his rear and flank. The weather was fine and the troops were in good order. All is working well and as fast as possible.

Cincinnati, May 14. News has been received here that Gen. Scofield's army moved from Bull's Gap on the 2d, and that after four hours fighting on the 4th, the rebels retreated, the Union troops pursuing them into North Carolina.

The news that Gen. Thomas has taken Dalton is confirmed. Our forces have captured 5000 prisoners and ten or twelve pieces of artillery. The rebels have retreated in some disorder to Resaca and Rome—our troops in hot pursuit.

Careful investigation fixes the total losses of the Army of the Potomac in killed, wounded and missing, including prisoners captured by the rebels and stragglers up to the commencement of the battle of Thursday, at about 20,000.

Washington, May 16. Parties who left the Army of the Potomac this afternoon report that Lee was occupying a strongly intrenched position between the Po and Ny rivers, or rather creeks. Some of the redoubts are said to have been thrown up a year ago, and the position possesses many natural advantages for defense. It is believed in the army that Lee has been considerably reinforced. The rebels seem determined to fight it out. There is yet to be hard work and a great sacrifice of life.

New York, May 16. The Herald's special Washington dispatch says reinforcements have been sent forward to Gen. Grant's army. The loss in killed and wounded has almost been made good by the reinforcements which have already reached the army. Troops have been pouring through this city from the West and elsewhere during the past week. It is believed the number will not amount to less than 20,000 fresh men.

The Alexandria correspondent of the St. Louis Republican makes the following statement:

"Before the battle of Pleasant Hill Gen. Dick Taylor sent in by a flag of truce a letter to Gen. Banks, in which he told him that if negro troops were used against the Confederate army he would raise the black flag and show no quarter. It may be owing to this fact that no negro troops were engaged, they having been sent to the rear (or rather to the front) to guard the baggage train on its way back to Grand Encore."

Gen. Grant's Resources and Spirit. The New York Commercial Advertiser says:—

"Whatever may be his plan of future operations is a matter of mere conjecture. The public may rest assured, however, that he has a very large force to carry it out; much larger than is generally supposed. Suffice it to say that there is now with him, after deducting the losses, a larger army than fought at Antietam, Fredericksburg, or Chancellorville. This does not include Butler's column. Just prior to moving he wrote, as we are informed by one who perused it, a letter to the President, thanking Mr. Lincoln for having furnished him with all the men and munitions he asked. He nobly added, 'Upon me devolves the entire responsibility for the success or failure of the coming campaign.'"

MARRIED.

At West Springfield, Mass., May 10th, by Eld. Rufus Wendell, Thos. R. Weaver and Ella Morse, daughter of Randolph E. Ladd.

By Eld. C. L. Page, May 8th, 1864, Mr. John M. Sisler to Mrs. Ann Patterson, both of Utica, Winona Co., Minn.

At Blooming Valley, Pa., May 3d, by Eld. J. T. Ongley, Wm. E. Ongley to Esther Davison, both of Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Also, on the 8th inst, by the same, Bro. James H. Ongley to Sr. Maria H. Pratt, both of Randolph, Crawford Co., Pa.

Notices.

Notice.

I am requested to say, for the brethren in Springfield, that they have hired a hall in Goodrich's block, a little south of the Depot, where they will hold meetings every Sabbath. This is for a free Second Advent meeting, where the whole church have a chance to work out what God works in, whether it is speaking, praying, crying or shouting. They intend to contend for the liberty of the gospel as well as the letter.

The first meeting, May 1st, was a blessed one. God set his seal of approbation to it by giving us all a blessing. Some ten good warm exhortations after preaching in the forenoon, and eight in the afternoon. Others praised the Lord aloud. It seemed like an Advent meeting in '43. The singing went off on a high key, without a fiddle to hinder it. After meeting, the brethren stopped and chose three of their number to act as servants of the rest, not officers over them:—Brn. Thos. R. Weaver, Levi Allen, and Ethan Allen. They request me to say to the preachers, who may pass through Springfield, to correspond with Bro. Thos. R. Weaver. I feel that this is a providential door opened for those who wish to go where there is freedom of spirit. Hiram Munger.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Northern N. Y. Christian Association will be held at Wilcox' Corners, twelve miles northeast of Mannsville, Jefferson Co., to commence Friday evening, May 27th, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, Brn. and Srs., one and all, let us rally to this meeting. Let us make this the most interesting meeting ever enjoyed in this region of country. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Mannsville, and conveyance will be in readiness to carry them to the meeting. Inquire for Milton R. Miles, or Benoni Stevens. It is expected that Eld. C. F. Sweet will be present to help preach the word. C. B. Turner.

Meeting in Reading, Mich.

To the friends of Jesus living in Cambria, Reading, Allen, Algansee, Camden, and Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., would say that there will be, Lord willing, a meeting held at Reading village, the first Sunday in June, at 10 1-2 A. M. This meeting will be held either in the school-house or the Free Will Baptist church. We hope to see all at this meeting full of faith, hope, and zeal, which is according to knowledge, ready to work for God and the salvation of perishing souls. Come one, come all! A. N. Seymour.

Conference.

The Eastern Maine Conference will be convened at Exeter, at the Chamberlain meeting-house, so-called, to commence June 9th, at 5 P. M., and continue over the following Lord's day. Our preaching brethren are ardently desired to attend, and all others who possibly can from other portions of the country, and preach to us the word of God in sincerity and humility. God has blest us in that place of late with redeeming grace. To him be all the glory.

In behalf of the conference, I. Damman.

Notice.

The Lord willing, our next quarterly meeting will be held in the city of Winona, in the county of Winona, Minn., to begin June 8th, and continue over the next first day of the week. Elder J. V. Himes will be there to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in the several sister churches are invited to attend, as ample provision will be made to accommodate the brethren from a distance. The Lord grant us a good time. In behalf of the brethren, Philip Ramer.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, 2 o'clock P. M., and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. Spencer, President.
C. W. Smith, Secretary.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

Questions.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 14th, 1864, at Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. The brethren in Floyd will gladly entertain all who may desire to attend. Come one and all that can.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. Griffin.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Prepare for Camp.

The Fourth Annual Camp and Grove meeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence (D. V.,) June 26th, and continue over July 4th. Full particulars will will be given soon. Will churches that can be represented at that meeting intimate the same to me, as it may assist in obtaining a reduction of fare? Come, all that are good and that seek good.

H. F. Carpenter, Poultney, Vt.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

Chas. P. Dow.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—Ed.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. Hitchcock.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. Sheldon.

Notice.

If any one owes me any money, and wants to pay it about these days, it will help me about paying some big bills for a lot of paper, printing, bookbinding, &c., &c. Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Notice.

Those wishing the ministerial labors of Bro. Lewis Robinson, Jun., will please address him at Holyoke, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. Diamond, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. Pearl, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. Nonpareil, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. Minion, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. Testaments. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS

AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine, $3.00.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., new, $7.00
Rollin's History, two vols., sheep, $3.00.
Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.
Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $4.00.
Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.
Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.
Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol. sheep, new, $2.00.
Bower's History of the Popes, 3 vols., sheep, nearly new. $5.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by express.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts. Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $2.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. Woodward, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Appointment for Lowell Street Chapel.
H. L. Hastings........Sunday, May 22d

Concord, N. H.........May 22d
Worcester, Mass.........May 29th
Southampton, Long Island, N. Y., at the yearly meeting of the Shinnecock Indians.........June 5th
Melbourne, C. E.........Wednesday evening, June 8th
Montreal, C. E., June 9th to 12th inclusive.
Miles Grant.

Hartford, Ct.........May 22d
Springfield, Mass.........May 29th
At liberty in June. H. Munger.

Clinton, Mass.........Sunday, May 22d
J. W. Brittan.

Wallingford, Ct., (North Farms).........Sunday, May 22d
O. D. Woodruff.

Appointments for Scitico, Ct.
Sr. S. J. Higgins.........Sunday, May 22d
R. Williams.........Sunday, June 5th
I. B. Potter.........Sunday, June 12th

Chicago, Ill.........Sunday, May 21st
Wyanet Conference.........May 25th
Jacob Blain.

New Salem, (Daniel Robie's school-house), June 5th, at 5 o'clock P. M. C. Richardson.

Northwood Narrows, N. H.........Sunday, May 29th
N. Glidden.

Exeter, N. H.........Sunday, May 29th
Lee, N. H.........Sunday, June 5th
C. S. Emerson.

Haverhill, Mass.........Sunday, May 22d
A. W. Sibley.

Waterloo, N. H.........Sunday, May 22d
A. Simpson.

Dalton, Mass., (where Bro. Warren may appoint), Sunday, May 22d.
North Adams, Mass.........Sunday, May 29th
E. McCulloch.

Agawam, Mass.........Sunday, May 29th
Warehouse Point, Ct., (Chapel).........Sunday, June 5th
S. D. Daniels.

Warehouse Point, Ct.........Sunday, May 22d
Wm. A. Fenn.

Westerly, R. I.........Sunday, May 22d
Lafayette, R. I.........Sunday, May 29th
Warwick Plains.........Sunday, June 5th
Glocester, R. I.........Sunday, June 12th
J. K. Bellows.

Nottingham, N. H.........Sunday, May 22d
West Ossipee, N. H.........Sunday, May 29th
J. G. Smith.

Merideth Village, N. H.........May 22d
Melvin Village, (for baptism).........May 29th
Ossipee, (Leighton's Corner) for baptism, (if desired), June 5th. T. W. Piper.

Appointment for Bristol, Ct.
H. K. Flagg.........May 29th
George L. Teeple.........June 12th

Danbury, N. H., Saturday evening, May 21st, at A. C. Knowlton's, and Sunday, May 22d, in the Town Hall.
John G. Hook.

East Canaan, N. H.........Sunday, May 29th
A. Simpson.

Copenhagen.........Sunday, May 22d
Barnes' Corners.........Tuesday evening, May 24th
Wilcox' Corners.........Friday evening, May 27th
C. B. Turner.

East Hartland, Ct., May 25th, and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, the 29th.
Goshen, Mass.........Sunday, June 5th
C. Goodrich.

Prospect, (at Bro. Mix').........Sunday, May 29th
S. Woodruff.

Yarmouth, Me.........May 22d
Richmond Corner, (Meeting-house), with Bro. H. D. Reed, May 29th. R. R. York.

East Atkinson, Me., (Turner's Corner), Sunday, May 22d.
Medford, Me., (Cold Brook School-house), Sunday, May 29th.
Lincolnville, Me.........Sunday, June 5th
Thomas Smith.

Appointments for Springfield, No. 5 Oak St.
B. Spaulding.........Sunday, May 22d
P. S. Butler.........Sunday, May 29th

Appointments for Agawam, Mass.
P. S. Butler.........Sunday, May 22d
H. Pratt.........Sunday, June 5th

Goshen.........Sunday, May 29th
H. Pratt.

Epping Corner, (where Bro. J. R. Colbath may appoint), Saturday evening, May 21st, and Sunday, 22d.
New Durham Corner, Saturday evening, May 28th, and Sunday, 29th. Joseph Pinkham.

State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill.........May 25th and through the week. J. V. Himes.

Holliston.........Sunday, May 22d
H. K. Flagg.

Goshen, Mass.........May 22d
Amherst, Mass.........May 23d
Geo. A. Streeter.

Appointments for Vernon, Vt.
L. Boutell.........Sunday, May 22d
S. S. Brewer.........Sundays, June 15th and 19th

North Norway, Saturday evening, May 21st, and over the Sabbath.
Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore.........June 5th
J. T. Jordan.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.........May 22d
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
Jos. D. Brown.

Ashburnham Depot, Mass.........May 22d
Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's).........May 29th
Vernon, Vt.........June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (Centerville school-house).........June 12th
S. S. Brewer.

Worcester, Mass.........May 22d
Grafton Centre, N. H.........May 29th
J. Couch.

Cold Spring, Mass.........Sunday, May 29th
Geo. L. Teeple.

Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block).........May 22d
Lynn, Mass.........Sunday, May 29th
J. S. White.

Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, May 22d, at half-past ten A. M.
Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. Ongley.

Sandy Hill, N. Y.........Sundays, May 22d and 29th
H. F. Carpenter.

Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. Chas. P. Dow.

Expository Works on Prophecy.

Removal.—I have moved to Ashburnham, Depot, Mass., where all letters and orders must be directed. I have now on hand the following works:

1. The Days in which we Live. 2. The Slaying of the Witnesses. 3. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. 4. Exposition of Revelation Sixth. 5. Treatise on Revelation XIII. in Two Parts,—A History of the Leopard and Two-Horned Beast. 6. The History of an Immortal Soul. 7. A third and new edition of The Rich Man and Lazarus, with additional pages and cover. The Last Day Tokens, Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Please see notice in another column. All the above works sent by mail for one dollar and twenty-five cents. Several are illustrated with good engravings. ☞ Write Name, Post Office, County and State, in a plain manner.

S. S. Brewer, Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Dear friend, get them, and circulate them. They will do you and all that read them good.

Valuable Books for Sale.

Lardner's Works, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

Roy's Hebrew Dictionary, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

Englishman's Hebrew Concordance, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

Lowth on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

Griesbach's Greek Testament, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols. 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

English Reference Bibles, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted. ☜

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State from which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

Weeden Holloway, Sarah P. Sprague, Polly King, H. C. Anderson, Wm. Hurd, C. R. Edmunds, J. W. Barnell, J. Sampson, Reuben Wethby, Rachel Oliver, John W. Bliss.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their Post Office and State. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

C. Farrington, T. Lane, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. E. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E. Soper, Henry Hilliard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman, Mary Boyd wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, Margaret C. Riley, what P. O.?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

L. C. McKinstry—We propose to go the other way.
D. G. M.—It is sent.
Mrs. C. R. Danks—If you will give us his address, we will send him some tracts and papers.
Jane Morrell—Do not find the credit of $5.00.
E. Hemenway—The money was paid in, and the paper sent regularly.
G. W. Green—$1.50 on acct. received.
J. Sarle—Do not think there will be. None have yet been written.
S. L. Walter—Tell us which they are, and we will send them.
J. W.—They were received.
S. A. Choplin—The money for A. Wood was received and credited.
Frank Nelson—We have none of the books you ordered; hope to have them soon.
S. C. Wilcox—We have mailed you the Bible according to directions, to Centreville, W. Va. We have credited you the money sent in August last.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 450. The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—J Wilson 444, J H Edmonds 463, S Waters 386, S J Buswell 448, J M Snook 472, A Begley 369, J Johnson 469, P Benson 463, M Capwell 461, H Wheeler 473, Mrs J Burgess 500, R S Webber 474, J Staples 474, Mrs. E. A. Duncan 410, J. Buckingham 457, E M Glidden 474, C D W Scott 2 copies 482, M. Curtis 474, J M Hackett 475, J E Green 474, R OLIVER—what P. O? E P Streeter 476, S. Woodruff 464, H Bennis 472, J Smith 476, S O Parker 469, A Doolittle 476, M J Hodgkins 480, S B Saxton 475, Mrs. E. Hambleton 476, O. Bridge 476, A O Reed 476, E. Nichols 476, J. Clifford 442, C B Keach 472, R J Whitehead 476, G T Whitney 475, M A Barker 474, A Churchill 470, B F Emery 460, C Stevens 476, E W Brown 502, S Torrey 497.

$2.00 each.—B E Wetherbee 457, S. Manning 497, N C Bulloch 457, L Andrew 452, Mrs. P D Harper 500, L Roundsville 468, E T Batman 480, D Bump 465, L Caskey 499, R R Pierce 499, L Conley 474, J. Brown 468, E Tibbetts 500, S B Ireland 494, Mrs E V Barney 450, J McCrillis 495, L. H. Wiggin 500, W. Davis 491, L A Durgin 481, H. Brown 426, R. WETHBY—what P. O.? H [illegible] 497, E Merrill 494, J B Hurd 502, S Morgan [illegible], J. W. BLISS—what P. O.? C. Bolt 502, E. G. Hobbs 498, A C Wells 442, B Hooper 437, C C Whittier 502.

50c each.—P T Wilson 460, MRS. B. ORTON—what P. O.? E Orton 463, E. A. Pratt 457, G W Smith 535, J Stanley 461, O Scott 461, E Williams 461, Mrs. M A Mundell 462, S A Johnson 458, M Willard 457, E Cowles 463, A F Welch 460, J N Snyder 483, S. Simons 453, M Smiley 462, S L Walter 461.

Mrs. S. Myers 40c, 426; S. R. Eddy $1.20, 481; D O Hopkins $1.50, 2 copies, 502; C. Cady $3.00, 468; S C Wilcox $1.22, 460.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

L. Roundsville 60c, E Orton $1.50, D Chilson 50c, E A. Prescott $3.00, M. A. Fowler 25c, C. Phillips $1.51, H Bailey $2.50, L D Lord $3.55, G. M. Estey 25c, J W Taylor 10c, N. Glidden 85c, J. N. Snyder $1.00, G. F. Locke $1.40, J. M. Durnam $2.25, G. Stockwell $1.10, S. L. Manley 50c, A. L. Forrester $1.00, C. D. W. Scott $1.00, S C Wilcox $2.78.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.

D. Chilson, Eunice Orton, L. Roundsville, Z Boody, H Bailey, M A Fowler, C. Phillips, C D W Scott, G M Estey, J W Taylor, S R Eddy, D F Smith, N Glidden, J. M. Durnam, G. W. Allen, O F Locke, G Stockwell, S. Prentiss, W. Smith, S. L. Manley, A L Forrester, G Hollett.

By Express.—J Blain.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M H Morrison, S A Isbell, V N Cudworth, R H Nye, M. Mathews Weaver, N M Wells, A L Forrester, L. A. Wheeler, C H Leverton, A Ross, J R Preston, H A Arnold, D. G. M., Alson.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

L. C. McKinstry—Montreal, C. E.
S. S. Brasee—Cold Spring, Mass.
P. W. Hough—After May 20th, Cascade, Dubuque Co., Iowa.
S. G. Mathewson—Castleton, Vt.
Walter Pratt—Boston, Mass.
B. Spaulding—Springfield, Mass., for a few weeks. Brethren wishing my labors will please address me there.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian Mission the past week, as follows:—

9th and Sp. Garden St. Church, Philadelphia, $11.85; Bro. R. and wife, $10.00; Bro. Stetler, A friend of Missions, Cash, Lawrence, Mass., I. C. M. Gredy, each $5.00; Agricul. Hall, Ad. Church, Phila., $2.20; George, Newburyport. L. Robins, each $2; Abigail H. Stokes, Eld. Carpenter, John M. Orrock, A Bro., through Eld. Himes, F. H. Pilley, I. B. Estabrook, A Sister at East Boston, each $1.00; a friend of the cause in Nevado, Ohio, $1.00.

☞ All contributions in future which may be sent to Elders J. Litch, Miles Grant, or H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass., or to Elder J. V. Himes, Buchanan, Mich., will be forwarded to me, and acknowledged. Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for the kingdom,

M. B. Czechowski.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Medo Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, [illegible]
2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. [illegible]
3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that [illegible]
4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible]
5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible]
6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7,—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." [illegible]
7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and of the end of the World?" [illegible]
8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars [illegible]
9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.
10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; [illegible]
11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. [illegible]

[illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense, is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. [illegible]

Many thanks to the donors. They have shown their love and interest for the cause, and have filled my heart with gratitude, and my hands with something which will introduce me into every family as a religious man, as a servant of God, and a servant of the church, and will with the Lord's blessing open the eyes of the understanding to behold wondrous things in God's book, and thus lead them to prepare for the glorious kingdom.

If any desire to go and do likewise, they may send by express to Springfield, Mass., where I shall probably get them, as I propose to be in that region for the present, and Springfield will be my post-office address for a few weeks to come. I find plenty of work to do, and I love to do it.

One word to brethren who are in the vicinity of Springfield. If you wish me to come and labor with you in my way, send a letter to Springfield, and with the Lord's help I will come.

Let me say to brethren generally, strive for union, brotherly love, and harmony. Shun strife, division, contention, debate, and the spirit of hardness. Then will God bless you, and you will look forth "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible (to your enemies) as an army with banners."

Yours, B. SPAULDING.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

BRO. GRANT:—I send you a letter that I received since our last quarterly meeting, as a part of the fruit of that meeting, and tracts we there gave away; also some verses composed and sung on the occasion of Bro. Preston's reception into the church, thinking they will be of some interest to the lovers of truth.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

FLOYD, IOWA, March 28th, 1864.

Eld. Peter S. W. Deyo:—Dear Bro:—Permit me, if you please, to address you a few lines. Myself and family are enjoying good health and a degree of prosperity. We now reside in Floyd, which change in local position was the cause of some suspicion on the part of the United Brethren; and when they found that I was investigating "the life and death question," they affectionately warned me to beware of infidelity, etc., which, of course, I did. But, in spite of my vigilance, the Scriptures overcame preconceived notions, and I yielded to convictions of truth, and immediately commenced preaching the faith which I had endeavored to destroy. This, of course, caused a separation from them, the form of which I will give you.

Lord's day, April 17th, I preached at Rock Creek, at 3 o'clock, P. M. When about half done preaching, Eld. M., of the U. B., came in with two witnesses; who, on hearing me affirm that "the soul that sinneth it shall die," Ezek. 18: 20, and that the soul was something which God made, or formed—Gen. 2: 7,—"The Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground,"—then man is dust; "and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man (dust) became a living soul";—arose and accused me of preaching heterodoxy, and said the church would not be responsible for my preaching any longer; stating that they had a discipline to go by, and those who would not go by the discipline should not exercise the functions of the ministry. To which I answered that, if I must be circumscribed by another man's notions in preaching Bible truth, I wished it distinctly understood that I was an independent, and should, as I had done, preach my sentiments openly and above board, despite the efforts of any; that the Bible was my discipline, and I intended to follow it. "Well, then," said the Elder, "we don't want the people to receive Bro. Preston as one of the U. B. preachers; and we wish all who want to be United Brethren to make it known by rising." Seven rose. He said, "In two weeks from to-day I will preach to you." N. B. The appointment was not his, but one of my own. "Well," said I, "I claim to be a gospel minister, called of God, as was Aaron; but if the people here do not want to hear me preach, I will yield the appointment to one whom you will hear."

This brought things to a point. They found that they were about to lose my services, which caused considerable excitement; so much, that one man started around the house to find out whether there were any objections to my preaching there, and ascertaining that there were none, he arose and requested me to return and preach as before, with the understanding that I should preach what I believed to be truth; saying that any thing that was in the Bible they were willing to receive, so the matter ended.

Since, I find that they are disposed to fight me everywhere. Well, let them do it. With the Bible on my side, I fear not. Sunday evening I tried to preach at this place (Floyd), where I had a house full to hear me. I told them plainly that my mind was changed, by force of logic and Scriptures, from the doctrine which I had formerly preached; and that henceforth I should make the Bible my standard author on theology, and should present its truths as there laid down. This remark caused some peculiar expressions to show themselves in the countenances of the audience. The U. B. were very angry with me. The Christians were joyful, but dared not express their joy, save in loud murmurs of applause and deep amens, which came from full hearts. After meeting closed there were some short words said by the U. B., which were appropriately answered by Bro. Alonzo Raymond.

I suppose I am now driven out of the church with which I have been connected. Yet my name is Christian still, and ever more shall be, by the grace of God. If you are curious to know how all this came to be, I answer, by the help of the Bible, "Ghostology," and "The Advent at hand." I now expect to devote myself to the work as zealously as I opposed it. Pray for us. Yours in the gospel of the Prince of Peace,

J. R. PRESTON.

Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa.

From Bro. and Sr. Mathewson.

BRO. GRANT:—Ten days since we bade adieu to the loved and loving of Sandy Hill, N. Y., where we have resided nearly five years; and in about two hours, by the aid of the iron horse, landed in this place, where we expect to reside for the present. We have already enjoyed some ten meetings with them, in which we have realized, to some extent, that "heart had met its kindred,"—the great motive being the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom. Thus we already feel quite at home with this dear people, and now we earnestly crave the prayers of the faithful and tried ones, with whom we have been associated in the blessed cause of our soon coming King for more than twenty years, that we may be instrumental in saving souls in this place and vicinity; that some immortal gems may be given us in Castleton with which to bedeck our crowns in the day of the Lord Jesus.

S. G. & B. MATHEWSON.

Castleton, Vt., May 16th, 1864.

BRO. E. ORTON writes from North Bennington, Vt.:—"The Lord has been doing a work here that all his enemies cannot overthrow. A little flock has risen up, and the battle has raged hot. Some have gone back into the world, but still the work goes on, and new ones come up. I praise the Lord, and give him the glory for what he has done."

From Bro. J. A. Cleveland.

BRO. GRANT:—The Crisis is doing much good in Whitefield, as well as in other places. We are all glad to get it weekly. It comes full of good food for hungry souls. I hope the Lord will bless you and give you heavenly wisdom, that you may so conduct the paper until the Lord comes that it will prove a blessing to all that read it. We are doing what we can for it here.

The Lord is with us in Whitefield. I baptized four the first day of May. There are others that will go forward soon. The interest in our meetings is good. The young people hold three weekly prayer-meetings as usual. Our social meetings are well attended. The brethren are well engaged. Dear brethren, pray for us, that the good work may go on in Whitefield.

Your brother in Christ, J. A. CLEVELAND.

P. S. I wish Bro. D. T. Taylor would give us through the Crisis, the number of inhabitants the New Jerusalem may contain, it being twelve thousand furlongs square. Also the number of inhabitants from the creation, as near as it can be given. Infidelity says this earth cannot be the saints' rest because there is not room enough. J. A. C.

ERRATUM.—In article, "The signs of these days," published in Crisis of April 12th, it is made to read, "Bible dishonesty." It should read, "Public dishonesty." JOHN TAYLOR.

Obituaries.

ABIGAIL SMITH.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in West Gardiner, Me., Tuesday, March 22d, 1864, Abigail J. Smith, wife of Sherburne S. Smith, aged forty-nine years, four months, and four days.

Sister S. has left a large family to mourn their bereavement, consisting of six sons and six daughters, all living, to whom her faithfulness and devotion were manifest to the end of life; calling them around her bed, receiving and giving the last kiss, and then urging them to meet her in the kingdom of God. With tearful eyes and sorrowing hearts they knelt around her, and poured out their souls unto God, that the dying request of their mother might be answered. She then said she gained the evidence that the prayers of her family would be answered, and she should meet them, an unbroken family, in the Kingdom. Then saying her tears were all ended, she exclaimed, "Glory to God! peace on earth, and good will to men." From thence she struggled till death laid her low to wait the return of the great Life-giver to raise her to immortality at the resurrection of the just, which she believed to be near. Truly it may be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

She requested that the text in Jer. 14: 14, should be made use of on the occasion of her funeral, which was done by the writer, before a large and attentive congregation, in the Freewill Baptist meeting-house in the place where she had lived.

ISAAC WIGHT.

Advent Herald, please copy.

JOSIAH S. BROWN.

After a long and peaceful life, Bro. J. S. Brown rested from his labors, in the ninetieth year of his age.

His hope was in the resurrection of the dead to immortality, brought to light in the gospel by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead. Bro. Brown was one of the oldest citizens in this parish, and one of the first that received the preaching of the Advent doctrine under the labors of Bro. Albion Ross. He firmly held to the same, and was not ashamed to bear witness to the light that shone on his mind from the sacred word. He went down to death like a "shock of corn fully ripe," to wait for the Son of God from heaven, who will call forth the sleepers from their resting places, when those that dwell in dust shall awake and sing, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

The church in Simonds feel this loss, but sorrow not as others that have no hope. He leaves a large circle of friends and relatives. May the consolations of the christian's hope be their joy. The writer spoke some words to the relatives and friends from Rev. 14: 13. M. W. CORLISS.

JAS. H. AUSTIN.

Fell asleep in Jesus, March, 1864, in Winsted, Ct., James H., youngest son of S. W. and Julia Austin, aged twenty years and six months.

His disease was dropsy in the chest, with an affection of the heart. For years he had been subject to frequent severe attacks of the inflammatory rheumatism, and always was a great sufferer at those times.

His last sickness dates from the 17th of Feb., when he felt that he should not again recover. A short time before he died he remarked to his father that he believed it would be well with him, as he felt that God had forgiven him,—that he should not sleep but a little time, for he believed Jesus was soon coming, and then he would awake to die no more,—and asked his parents to meet him in the kingdom.

It may be he has been taken from the evil to come.

"After life's fitful fever he sleeps well."

May the comforting grace which the Beloved only can impart, gently bless the hearts stricken with grief, and the full assurance of a patient hope ever uphold them through the future days of their waiting pilgrimage.

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

M. A. G.

JAMES PERRY.

Died in Bowdoinham, Me., April 30th, of consumption, Bro. James Perry, aged sixty-one years, ten months.

I called to see him a week previous to his death, and he requested me to say to the friends, if I attended his funeral, that he did not expect his reward until the Lord comes. H. D. REED.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

From Liverpool 28th ult.

The Times asserts that the English and French Admirals at Tunis would act in concert. The insurrection is said to have assumed serious proportions. Additional Italian frigates had been ordered to the scene.

Affairs in Denmark are unchanged.

Garibaldi embarked on the Duke of Sutherland's yacht Undine at Fowry, at 9 o'clock on the 27th, but at noon on the same day the yacht put into San Marino from stress of weather.

There had been no fighting in Denmark. The Prussians were increasing their batteries on the channel which divides Alsen from the main land, and it was supposed the Danes would have to retire from Alsen, unless an armistice was speedily proclaimed.

The Vienna Gazette says the Cabinets of Vienna and Berlin have declined the proposal made at the Conference for an armstice with a continuance of the blockade of the German ports.

Liverpool May 4th, Queenstown 5th.

The Daily News learns that the Great Eastern has been purchased for the French Government at about a quarter of a million sterling. She will nevertheless carry out the engagement to lay the Atlantic cable.

Tunis advices represent the insurrection as becoming general.

It is asserted that the French troops are masters of the revolutionary movement in Algeria.

☞ The following, says an English paper, is an extract of a letter just received from Melbourne: Professor Newmaker, on a three years' scientific visit from Bavaria, tells us that in 1865 a comet shall come so close as to endanger this our earth; and should it not attach itself (as one globule of quicksilver to another), nor annihilate us, the sight will be most beautiful to behold. During three nights we shall have no darkness, but be bathed in the brilliant light of the blazing train.

DOMESTIC.

Monday, May 9th. We have now been out six days and have been fighting continuously. We have succeeded in penetrating some fifteen miles into the rebel territory, and have fifty miles further to go to get to Richmond. We have eaten and used up a very large proportion of the supplies which we took with us. If the rebels give us as much trouble on the rest of the route as they have thus far our chances for success are slim indeed.

Our losses have been terrible. I hardly dare to give my own opinion as to the number, but I think I am within bounds when I give the estimates of those who are supposed to know as follows:

Killed, 3000. Wounded, 18,000. Missing, 6,000. Total, 27,000.—Cor. Journal.

Baltimore, May 10th. The flag of truce boat New York, arrived at Annapolis to-day, with three hundred prisoners who were exchanged on the James river at Aiken's Landing. They report that there was great excitement at Richmond when they left.

Army of the Potomac, May 10th. Maj. Gen. John Sedgwick, commanding the 6th corps, was killed yesterday morning while standing with Col. McMahon and Major Wither of his staff, inside of an outer line of works, two miles from Spottsylvania Court House.

He was killed by a sharpshooter; the bullet entered his head about an inch below the left eye and passed out just back of the right ear. He died instantly. His death has cast a gloom over the entire army. No General in the service was more respected and beloved.

Brig. Gen. W. H. Morris, commanding 1st brigade, 2d division, 6th corps, was wounded yesterday, but not dangerously, by a minie shot through the thigh. The bodies of Gens. Sedgwick and Hayes are being taken to Washington to-day.

There was but very little fighting to-day, except skirmishing, until very late, and I have not learned the result.

Our losses in general officers during the five days fighting are in killed, Maj. Gen. Sedgwick, Brig. Gen. Jas. S. Wardsworth, and Brig. Gen. Alex. Hayes. Wounded, Brig. Gens. G. W. Getty, W. H. Morris, H. Baxter, and Robinson. Prisoners, Gens. Shaler and Seymour.

Baltimore, May 10th. The Norfolk New Regime says Gen. Butler had a brisk encounter with Gen. Beauregard on Saturday, near Petersburg, and yesterday (Sunday) attacked him (Beauregard) with a considerable force and drove him.

Gen. Butler (it adds) has the key to Richmond in his hands. Rebel prisoners report Lee wounded on Friday, Pickett killed. Two small gunboats were blown up on the James river by torpedoes.

Washington, May 11th, 1864.

To Major-General Dix:

Dispatches from the Army of the Potomac have just reached here, bringing dates to 5 o'clock P. M. of yesterday. Both armies at that time held their positions at Spottsylvania Court House, without any material change. The enemy had been driven to their breast works. The 6th corps under Gen. Wright, had carried the first line of the enemy's rifle-pits. There had been heavy skirmishing during the day. Our wounded had reached Fredericksburg, and during the night some were brought to Washington.

The Surgeon-General reports that the ample supplies of nurses, surgeons and medical stores have gone forward. There has been nothing heard from Gen. Butler or Sherman since my last dispatch of yesterday. (Signed) E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

Washington, May 11th. A distinguished officer arrived here about 10 o'clock to-night who was present during the terrible conflict of yesterday afternoon and last evening, and who left Gen. Grant in the saddle as late as 10 A. M. to-day. He sums up the bloody work of yesterday thus:

The fight opened all along the line. Longstreet's corps, under Hill, held the rebel right, resting about two miles northeast of Spottsylvania Court House, and Gen. Grant pitted Gen. Burnside's corps against it. At a given moment, later in the afternoon, Gen. Burnside precipitated his entire command, except the colored troops, upon the rebel right, driving and completely crushing it, and capturing three rebel brigades and four pieces of cannon. The fight continued with a ferocity never before witnessed until 9 P. M., when it closed upon the bloodiest field produced in this war.

The losses on both sides are stated to be very large.

New York, May 11th. The Secretary of the rebel navy has official information that the pirate Florida sunk the Federal gunboat Huntsville and another vessel in the West Indies.

Beauregard with seven thousand men made a surprise attack upon Gen. Butler about ten miles from Richmond. So sudden and unexpected was the encounter that Gen. Butler narrowly escaped capture. Indeed, his own orderly was captured fifty yards in front of him. The command being in readiness it quickly passed from the defensive to the offensive position, and the enemy were most signally defeated.

Authentic accounts from Chattanooga represent the force with which Gen. Sherman has advanced into Georgia as much superior to that of Johnston, who confronts him, and who is estimated to have about 30,000 men. The railroads are able to supply the whole army of the department and accumulate about thirty-seven per cent. of each day's transportation, so that Gen. Sherman will be well provided for in this respect.

Richmond papers announce a terrible panic existing in the rebel capital and the surrounding country, caused by the battles fought with Grant, and Gen. Butler's advance up James river. No provisions had been brought into Richmond for three days.

The colored troops who compose the extreme right of the army are said to behave steadily and to be ready for the fray.

New York, May 12. The Herald has the following official dispatch from Secretary Stanton:

WASHINGTON, May 11, 11 30, P. M.

To Maj. Gen. Dix, New York:

Dispatches from Gen. Grant, dated 8 o'clock this morning, have just reached this Department. He says:

"We have now ended the sixth day of very heavy fighting. The result to this time is much in our favor.

Our losses have been heavy, as well as those of the enemy. I think the loss of the enemy must be greater.

We have taken over 5000 prisoners in battle, whilst he has taken from us but few except stragglers.

I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The Government is sparing no pains to support him. (Signed) EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

The Times' dispatch says our loss in Monday's fight was over 2000 killed and wounded. It was fought only by Gen. Hancock, who in his effort to capture Spottsylvania Court House, accomplished the crossing of the river Po under cover of a tremendous artillery fire, and established himself on the south bank.

Tuesday morning Gen. Sheridan's cannon were heard away to the southward.

Gen. Grant presents no signs of uneasiness. Lee's men give unmistakable signs of despondency. They no longer cheer when they fight, but charge or retreat in dogged silence. Lee's losses begin to tell on him. He flinches from direct assault.

In an order to his (Lee's) army, Monday, found on a prisoner, he notified them that his communication with Richmond is broken, and no rations can be drawn from there. He advises efforts to capture supplies from Grant.

Gen. Grant up to yesterday had taken about 6000 prisoners. A regiment was taken, the greater part of which was only exchanged a few weeks since.

The World's Washington dispatch says it is rumored that 4000 of our wounded were captured and paroled by Stuart. It is also rumored that Gillmore's and Smith's corps have been withdrawn from the peninsula to reinforce Gen. Grant.

A Tribune's correspondent with the army states that it is supposed that Lee has dispatched his best corps to Richmond and that we are only opposed by the remaining two.

Washington, May 12. Reinforcements are being sent to the front. Twelve thousand left here this morning.

New York, May 13.

The Herald has the following from the Army of the Potomac:

Headquarters 5th Army Corps, in the Field, May 12, 7 A. M.

Maj. Gen. Hancock made a brilliant capture at 4 o'clock this morning.

An entire rebel division, including Maj. Gen. Ned Johnson commanding, Brig. Gen. Stuart and Brig. Gen. Robert Johnson, commanding brigades, between two or three thousand prisoners and two batteries of six pieces each fell into our hands.

Taking advantage of the storm and darkness last evening, Gen. Hancock managed to change the position of his troops unobserved by the enemy, and while the darkness and fog still prevailed, pounced on them this morning like a wolf on the fold.

He took his captives completely by surprise, and having sent his prisoners securely to the rear, turned their own guns on the enemy in the vicinity. As I write, these and other batteries are sending shells among the enemy at a rapid and destructive rate. The skirmishers are also pretty heavily engaged, and there is every indication of another battle.

The news of Hancock's capture has inspirited our forces with renewed enthusiasm. As the news first spread, the woods where our infantry columns lie rang with deafening and prolonged shouts of rejoicing.

Washington, May 14. 10,000 rebel prisoners reached Belle Plain yesterday, and will arrive here to-day; 5000 more are on the way. The rebel dead remain unburied, and together with their wounded, which have fallen into our hands, they number 35,000. The rebel army is retreating in the direction of Gordonsville. Their wagon trains which we have captured contain no provisions. Lee commenced his retreat at 8 o'clock Thursday evening; his rear guard at daylight.

Lee's retreat is fully confirmed. Prisoners state positively that his army was entirely worn out and fearfully reduced by tremendous losses.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 13. The Chattanooga correspondent of the Chicago Journal says Johnston has evacuated Dalton. He had not more than 30,000 men, and would scarcely seem able to make a stand this side of Atlanta. Our forces were very strong and closing in upon him on all sides.

The entire loss in the Red River campaign in men was 4300 in killed, wounded and missing. There is no truth in the report of a battle at Cane River. Gen. Banks' army had been reinforced and was 4000 stronger than when he first advanced.

Gen. Banks was hit with a piece of shell in the battle of Morets Bluffs, on the 23d ult. He was improving.

Washington, May 13. Gen. Butler has removed the obstructions from James River, and our monitors and iron clads are moving toward Richmond. A chart showing the location of the torpedoes was found on the man who was shot while attempting to explode torpedoes a few nights since, and Gen. Butler has used it to excellent purpose.

Washington, May 14. Dispatches from Gen. Grant dated yesterday evening at 6 o'clock have reached this Department.

The advance of Gen. Hancock yesterday developed the fact that the enemy had fallen back four miles. Col. Carroll was severely wounded.

A dispatch has just been received from Gen. Sherman, dated near Resaca, May 14. It is stated that by the flank movement on Resaca, Johnston has been forced to evacuate Dalton, and our forces were in his rear and flank. The weather was fine and the troops were in good order. All is working well and as fast as possible.

Cincinnati, May 14. News has been received here that Gen. Scofield's army moved from Bull's Gap on the 2d, and that after four hours fighting on the 4th, the rebels retreated, the Union troops pursuing them into North Carolina.

The news that Gen. Thomas has taken Dalton is confirmed. Our forces have captured 5000 prisoners and ten or twelve pieces of artillery. The rebels have retreated in some disorder to Resaca and Rome—our troops in hot pursuit.

Careful investigation fixes the total losses of the Army of the Potomac in killed, wounded and missing, including prisoners captured by the rebels and stragglers up to the commencement of the battle of Thursday, at about 20,000.

Washington, May 16. Parties who left the Army of the Potomac this afternoon report that Lee was occupying a strongly intrenched position between the Po and Ny rivers, or rather creeks. Some of the redoubts are said to have been thrown up a year ago, and the position possesses many natural advantages for defense. It is believed in the army that Lee has been considerably reinforced. The rebels seem determined to fight it out. There is yet to be hard work and a great sacrifice of life.

New York, May 16. The Herald's special Washington dispatch says reinforcements have been sent forward to Gen. Grant's army. The loss in killed and wounded has almost been made good by the reinforcements which have already reached the army. Troops have been pouring through this city from the West and elsewhere during the past week. It is believed the number will not amount to less than 20,000 fresh men.

The Alexandria correspondent of the St. Louis Republican makes the following statement:

"Before the battle of Pleasant Hill Gen. Dick Taylor sent in by a flag of truce a letter to Gen. Banks, in which he told him that if negro troops were used against the Confederate army he would raise the black flag and show no quarter. It may be owing to this fact that no negro troops were engaged, they having been sent to the rear (or rather to the front) to guard the baggage train on its way back to Grand Encore."

GEN. GRANT'S RESOURCES AND SPIRIT. The New York Commercial Advertiser says:—

"Whatever may be his plan of future operations is a matter of mere conjecture. The public may rest assured, however, that he has a very large force to carry it out; much larger than is generally supposed. Suffice it to say that there is now with him, after deducting the losses, a larger army than fought at Antietam, Fredericksburg, or Chancellorville. This does not include Butler's column. Just prior to moving he wrote, as we are informed by one who perused it, a letter to the President, thanking Mr. Lincoln for having furnished him with all the men and munitions he asked. He nobly added, 'Upon me devolves the entire responsibility for the success or failure of the coming campaign.'"

MARRIED.

At West Springfield, Mass., May 10th, by Eld. Rufus Wendell, THOS. R. WEAVER and ELLA MORSE, daughter of Randolph E. Ladd.

By Eld. C. L. Page, May 8th, 1864, Mr. JOHN M. SISLER to Mrs. ANN PATTERSON, both of Utica, Winona Co., Minn.

At Blooming Valley, Pa., May 3d, by Eld. J. T. Ongley, WM. E. ONGLEY to ESTHER DAVISON, both of Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Also, on the 8th inst, by the same, Bro. JAMES H. ONGLEY to Sr. MARIA H. PRATT, both of Randolph, Crawford Co., Pa.

Notices.

Notice.

I am requested to say, for the brethren in Springfield, that they have hired a hall in Goodrich's block, a little south of the Depot, where they will hold meetings every Sabbath. This is for a free Second Advent meeting, where the whole church have a chance to work out what God works in, whether it is speaking, praying, crying or shouting. They intend to contend for the liberty of the gospel as well as the letter.

The first meeting, May 1st, was a blessed one. God set his seal of approbation to it by giving us all a blessing. Some ten good warm exhortations after preaching in the forenoon, and eight in the afternoon. Others praised the Lord aloud. It seemed like an Advent meeting in '43. The singing went off on a high key, without a fiddle to hinder it. After meeting, the brethren stopped and chose three of their number to act as servants of the rest, not officers over them:—Brn. Thos. R. Weaver, Levi Allen, and Ethan Allen. They request me to say to the preachers, who may pass through Springfield, to correspond with Bro. Thos. R. Weaver. I feel that this is a providential door opened for those who wish to go where there is freedom of spirit. HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Northern N. Y. Christian Association will be held at Wilcox' Corners, twelve miles northeast of Mannsville, Jefferson Co., to commence Friday evening, May 27th, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, Brn. and Srs., one and all, let us rally to this meeting. Let us make this the most interesting meeting ever enjoyed in this region of country. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Mannsville, and conveyance will be in readiness to carry them to the meeting. Inquire for Milton R. Miles, or Benoni Stevens. It is expected that Eld. C. F. Sweet will be present to help preach the word. C. B. TURNER.

Meeting in Reading, Mich.

To the friends of Jesus living in Cambria, Reading, Allen, Algansee, Camden, and Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., would say that there will be, Lord willing, a meeting held at Reading village, the first Sunday in June, at 10 1-2 A. M. This meeting will be held either in the school-house or the Free Will Baptist church. We hope to see all at this meeting full of faith, hope, and zeal, which is according to knowledge, ready to work for God and the salvation of perishing souls. Come one, come all! A. N. SEYMOUR.

Conference.

The Eastern Maine Conference will be convened at Exeter, at the Chamberlain meeting-house, so-called, to commence June 9th, at 5 P. M., and continue over the following Lord's day. Our preaching brethren are ardently desired to atttend, and all others who possibly can from other portions of the country, and preach to us the word of God in sincerity and humility. God has blest us in that place of late with redeeming grace. To him be all the glory.

In behalf of the conference, I. DAMMAN.

Notice.

The Lord willing, our next quarterly meeting will be held in the city of Winona, in the county of Winona, Minn., to begin June 8th, and continue over the next first day of the week. Elder J. V. Himes will be there to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in the several sister churches are invited to attend, as ample provision will be made to accommodate the brethren from a distance. The Lord grant us a good time. In behalf of the brethren, PHILIP RAMER.

Conference Notice.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Advent Christian Conference will be held at Wyanet, Bureau Co., Ill., commencing Wednesday, May 25th, 2 o'clock P. M., and holding over Sunday. Elder J. V. Himes and several other preaching brethren will be present to preach the word.

Dear brethren and sisters, come to this feast in the name of our soon coming King. Let us make one grand rally in this glorious cause. We hope all will make a special effort to attend; and come with hearts richly imbued with the spirit of faith and love, to labor in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. What we do to save our fellow-men must be done very soon. Dear brethren in Christ, let us consecrate ourselves anew for this great work.

The meeting will be held in the Mission Tent. Wyanet is on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad. Those coming on the Rock Island Railroad will stop at Pond Creek, where a team will be ready to convey friends to the encampment. Those coming on the Illinois Central Railroad from the north will change cars at Mendota, taking the Burlington for Wyanet. Those coming from the south on the Central, will change at La Salle, taking the Rock Island Road for Pond Creek.

We sincerely hope and expect that all our ministering brethren of this conference will be present in person, or report by letter at this meeting. We trust every church will send delegates. This will be a favorable time for any who wish to unite with the conference. Again we say, come one, come all; as we hope for great good as the result of this meeting. In behalf of the conference,

N. W. SPENCER, President.
C. W. SMITH, Secretary.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

QUESTIONS.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 14th, 1864, at Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. The brethren in Floyd will gladly entertain all who may desire to attend. Come one and all that can.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. GRIFFIN.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Prepare for Camp.

The Fourth Annual Camp and Grove meeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence (D. V.,) June 26th, and continue over July 4th. Full particulars will be given soon. Will churches that can be represented at that meeting intimate the same to me, as it may assist in obtaining a reduction of fare? Come, all that are good and that seek good.

H. F. CARPENTER, Poultney, Vt.

Tour West.

To meet the wishes of friends in the West, I now intend to visit that region this summer, to preach in as many places as I can conveniently reach in the time allowed for my visit, which will be near two months. I shall go from St. Albans, Vt., by rail to Chicago, Ill. Those wishing me to visit them will correspond with me by letter immediately, at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vt. All I shall expect to realize, by way of remuneration, will be to have my traveling expenses met. Those desiring my labor will write. Appointments hereafter.

CHAS. P. DOW.

[Bro. C. P. Dow is one of the true men. None need be afraid to give him a call.—ED.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. HITCHCOCK.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. SHELDON.

Notice.

If any one owes me any money, and wants to pay it about these days, it will help me about paying some big bills for a lot of paper, printing, book-binding, &c., &c. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Notice.

Those wishing the ministerial labors of Bro. Lewis Robinson, Jun., will please address him at Holyoke, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. PEARL, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. TESTAMENTS. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS AT LOW RATES.

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Notes by Jas. Murdock. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50. Ditto, two vols. sheep, notes by McLaine, $3.00.

Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf; 2 vols., new, $7.00

Rollin's History, two vols., sheep, $3.00.

Gibbon's Rome, edited by Guizot, with life of Gibbon, and Watson's Reply to Gibbon, two vols. sheep, (only one copy), $4.00.

Campbell's Four Gospels, translation and notes, 2 vols. cloth, $4.00.

Livy's History of Rome, translated by Baker, two vols., cloth, new, $2.50.

Horne's Introduction to the Scriptures, sheep, one vol., $4.25. Ditto, two vols. half cloth, $3.75.

Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol. sheep, new, $2.00.

Bower's History of the Popes, 3 vols., sheep, nearly new. $5.00.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by EXPRESS.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—

Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.50.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
" " Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $2.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. WOODWARD, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.
H. L. Hastings............Sunday, May 22d

Concord, N. H..............May 22d
Worcester, Mass............May 29th
Southampton, Long Island, N. Y., at the yearly meeting of the Shinnecock Indians..........June 5th
Melbourne, C. E.........Wednesday evening, June 8th
Montreal, C. E., June 9th to 19th inclusive.
MILES GRANT.

Hartford, Ct..............May 22d
Springfield, Mass..........May 29th
At liberty in June. H. MUNGER.

Clinton, Mass............Sunday, May 22d
J. W. BRITTAN.

Wallingford, Ct., (North Farms)......Sunday, May 22d
O. D. WOODRUFF.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SCITICO, CT.
Sr. S. J. Higgins..........Sunday, May 22d
R. Williams...............Sunday, June 5th
I. B. Potter..............Sunday, June 12th

Chicago, Ill...............Sunday, May 21st
Wyanet Conference..........May 25th
JACOB BLAIN.

New Salem, (Daniel Robie's school-house), June 5th, at 5 o'clock P. M. C. RICHARDSON.

Northwood Narrows, N. H.........Sunday, May 29th
N. GLIDDEN.

Exeter, N. H..............Sunday, May 29th
Lee, N. H.................Sunday, June 5th
C. S. EMERSON.

Haverhill, Mass............Sunday, May 22d
A. W. SIBLEY.

Waterloo, N. H.............Sunday, May 22d
A. SIMPSON.

Dalton, Mass., (where Bro. Warren may appoint), Sunday, May 22d.
North Adams, Mass..........Sunday, May 29th
E. McCULLOCK.

Agawam, Mass...............Sunday, May 29th
Warehouse Point, Ct., (Chapel)......Sunday, June 5th
S. D. DANIELS.

Warehouse Point, Ct..........Sunday, May 22d
WM. A. FENN.

Westerly, R. I.............Sunday, May 22d
Lafayette, R. I............Sunday, May 29th
Warwick Plains.............Sunday, June 5th
Glocester, R. I............Sunday, June 12th
J. K. BELLOWS.

Nottingham, N. H...........Sunday, May 22d
West Ossipee, N. H.........Sunday, May 29th
J. G. SMITH.

Merideth Village, N. H.........May 22d
Melvin Village, (for baptism).........May 29th
Ossipee, (Leighton's Corner) for baptism, (if desired), June 5th. T. W. PIPER.

APPOINTMENT FOR BRISTOL, CT.
H. K. Flagg................May 29th
George L. Teeple...........June 12th

Danbury, N. H., Saturday evening, May 21st, at A. C. Knowlton's, and Sunday, May 22d, in the Town Hall.
JOHN G. HOOK.

East Canaan, N. H..........Sunday, May 29th
A. SIMPSON.

Copenhagen.................Sunday, May 22d
Barnes' Corners............Tuesday evening, May 24th
Wilcox' Corners............Friday evening, May 27th
C. B. TURNER.

East Hartland, Ct., May 25th, and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, the 29th.
Goshen, Mass...............Sunday, June 5th
C. GOODRICH.

Prospect, (at Bro. Mix')........Sunday, May 29th
S. WOODRUFF.

Yarmouth, Me...............May 22d
Richmond Corner, (Meeting-house), with Bro. H. D. Reed, May 29th. R. R. YORK.

East Atkinson, Me., (Turner's Corner), Sunday, May 22d.
Medford, Me., (Cold Brook School-house), Sunday, May 29th.
Lincolnville, Me...........Sunday, June 5th
THOMAS SMITH.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SPRINGFIELD, NO. 5 OAK ST.
B. Spaulding...............Sunday, May 22d
P. S. Butler...............Sunday, May 29th

APPOINTMENTS FOR AGAWAM, MASS.
P. S. Butler...............Sunday, May 22d
H. Pratt...................Sunday, June 5th

Goshen.....................Sunday, May 29th
H. PRATT.

Epping Corner, (where Bro. J. R. Colbath may appoint), Saturday evening, May 21st, and Sunday, 22d.
New Durham Corner, Saturday evening, May 28th, and Sunday, 29th. JOSEPH PINKHAM.

State Advent Conference at Wyanet, Ill......May 25th and through the week. J. V. HIMES.

Holliston..................Sunday, May 22d
H. K. FLAGG.

Goshen, Mass...............May 22d
Amherst, Mass..............May 23d
GEO. A. STREETER.

APPOINTMENTS FOR VERNON, VT.
L. Boutell.................Sunday, May 22d
S. S. Brewer...............Sundays, June 15th and 19th

North Norway, Saturday evening, May 21st, and over the Sabbath.
Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore..................June 5th
J. T. JORDAN.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.........May 22d
Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Ashburnham Depot, Mass.........May 22d
Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's).......May 29th
Vernon, Vt.................June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (Centerville school-house)...June 12th
S. S. BREWER.

Worcester, Mass............May 22d
Grafton Centre, N. H.......May 29th
J. COUCH.

Cold Spring, Mass..........Sunday, May 29th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block).......May 22d
Lynn, Mass.................Sunday, May 29th
J. S. WHITE.

Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., Sunday, May 22d, at half-past ten A. M.
Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. ONGLEY.

Sandy Hill, N. Y...........Sundays, May 22d and 29th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Barnston, C. E., Wayville, 3 P. M., May 21st, Sunday, 22d, and baptize if desired. CHAS. P. DOW.

Expository Works on Prophecy.

REMOVAL.—I have moved to Ashburnham, Depot, Mass., where all letters and orders must be directed. I have now on hand the following works:

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 2. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. 3. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. 4. EXPOSITION OF REVELATION SIXTH. 5. TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII. in TWO PARTS,—A HISTORY OF THE LEOPARD AND TWO-HORNED BEAST. 6. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. 7. A third and new edition of THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS, with additional pages and cover. THE LAST DAY TOKENS, Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Please see notice in another column. All the above works sent by mail for one dollar and twenty-five cents. Several are illustrated with good engravings. ☞ Write NAME, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE, in a plain manner. ☜

S. S. BREWER, Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Dear friend, get them, and circulate them. They will do you and all that read them good.

Valuable Books for Sale.

LARDNER'S WORKS, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

ROY'S HEBREW DICTIONARY, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc. etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW CONCORDANCE, bound in cloth. One copy left. Price $23.

LOWTH on the Prophets: A Commentary on all the prophets in the Old Testament. 1 Vol. 4to. Price $2.50.

GRIESBACH'S GREEK TESTAMENT, with all his various readings, and the authorities for them, in 2 vols., 8vo. $2.50. Post paid, $3.00.

ENGLISH REFERENCE BIBLES, a good selection. $1.00 to $4.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Business.

☞ Information Wanted. ☜

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

Weeden Holloway, Sarah P. Sprague, Polly King, H. C. Anderson, Wm. Hurd, C. R. Edmunds, J. W. Barnell, J. Sampson, Reuben Wethby, Rachel Oliver, John W. Bliss.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their POST OFFICE and STATE. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

C. Farrington, T. Lane, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. E. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E. Soper, Henry Hillard, Miss C. D. Butler, J. C. Freeman.

MARY BOYD wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, MARGARET C. RILEY, what P. O.?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

L. C. McKinstry—We propose to go the other way.
D. G. M.—It is sent.
Mrs. C. R. Danks—If you will give us his address, we will send him some tracts and papers.
Jane Morrell—Do not find the credit of $5.00.
E. Hemenway—The money was paid in, and the paper sent regularly.
G. W. Green—$2.50 on acct. received.
J. Sarle—Do not think there will be. None have yet been written.
S. L. Walter—Tell us which they are, and we will send them.
J. W.—They were received.
S. A. Chaplin—The money for A. Wood was received and credited.
Frank Nelson—We have none of the books you ordered; hope to have them soon.
S. C. Wilcox—We have mailed you the Bible according to directions, to CENTREVILLE, W. VA. We have credited you the money sent in August last.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 450. The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

$1.00 each.—J Wilson 444, J H Edmonds 463, S Waters 385, S J Buswell 448, J M Snook 472, A Begley 369, J Johnson 469, P Benson 468, M Capwell 461, H Wheeler 473, Mrs J Burgess 500, R S Webber 474, J Staples 474, Mrs. E. A. Duncan 410, J. Buckingham 487, E M Glidden 474, C D W Scott 2 copies 482, M. Curtis 474, J M Hackett 475, J E Green 474, R OLIVER—what P. O? E P Streeter 476, S. Woodruff 464, H Bennis 472, J Smith 476, S O Parker 469, A Doolittle 476, M J Hodgkins 480, S B Saxton 475, Mrs. E. Hambleton 476, O. Bridges 476, A O Reed 476, E. Nichols 476, J. Clifford 442, C B Keach 472, R J Whitehead 476, G T Whitney 475, M A Barker 474, A Churchill 470, B F Emery 460, C Stevens 476, E W Brown 502, S Torrey 497.

$2.00 each.—B E Wetherbee 457, S. Manning 497, N C Bullock 487, L Andrew 482, Mrs. P D Harper 500, L Roundsville 468, E T Butman 480, D Bump 465, L Caskey 499, R R Pierce 499, L Conley 474, J. Brown 468, E Tibbetts 500, S B Ireland 494, Mrs E V Barney 450, J McCrillis 495, L. H. Wiggin 500, W. Davis 491, L A Durgin 481, H. Brown 426, R. WETHBY—what P. O.? H Eaton 497, E MERRILL 494, J B Hurd 502, J S Morgan [illegible], J. W. BLISS—what P. O.? C. Bolt 502, E. G. Hobbs 498, A C Wells 442, B Hooper 437, C C Whittier 502.

50c each.—P T Wilson 460, MRS. B. ORTON—what P. O.? E Orton 463, E. A. Pratt 457, G W Smith 535, J Stanley 461, G Scott 461, E Williams 461, Mrs. M A Mundell 462, S A Johnson 458, M Willard 457, E Cowles 463, A F Welch 460, J N Snyder 483, S. Simons 463, M Smiley 462, S L Walter 461.

Mrs. S. Myers 40c, 420; S. R. Eddy $1.20, 481; D O Hopkins $1.50, 2 copies, 512; C. Cady $3.00, 468; S C Wilcox $1.22, 460.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

L. Roundsville 60c, E Orton $1.50, D Chilson 50c, E A. Prescott $3.00, M. A. Fowler 25c, C. Phillips $1.51, H Bailey $2.50, L D Lord $5.05, G. M. Estey 25c, J W Taylor 10c, N. Glidden 85c, J. N. Snyder $1.00, G. F. Locke $1.40, J. M. Durnam $2.25, G. Stockwell $1.10, S. L. Manley 50c, A. L. Forrester $1.00, C. D. W. Scott $1.00, S C Wilcox $2.78.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT. BY MAIL.

D. Chilson, Eunice Orton, L. Roundsville, Z Boody, H Bailey, M A Fowler, C. Phillips, C D W Scott, G M Estey, J W Taylor, S R Eddy, D F Smith, N Glidden, J. M. Durnam, G. W. Allen, G F Locke, G Stockwell, S. Prentiss, W. Smith, S. L. Manley, A L Forrester, G Hollett.

BY EXPRESS.—J Blain.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M H Morrison, S A Isbell, V N Cudworth, R H Nye, M. Mathews Weaver, N M Wells, A L Forrester, L. A. Wheeler, C H Leverton, A Ross, J R Preston, H A Arnold, D. G. M., Alson.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

L. C. McKinstry—Montreal, C. E.
S. S. Brazee—Cold Spring, Mass.
P. W. Hough—After May 20th, Cascade, Dubuque Co., Iowa.
S. G. Mathewson—Castleton, Vt.
Walter Pratt—Boston, Mass.
B. Spaulding—Springfield, Mass., for a few weeks. Brethren wishing my labors will please address me there.

Mission to Italy.

I acknowledge with much gratitude contributions from dear christian friends for the Italian Mission the past week, as follows:—

9th and Sp. Garden St. Church, Philadelphia, $11.85; Bro. R. and wife, $10.00; Bro. Stetler, A friend of Missions, Cash, Lawrence, Mass., I. C. M. Gredy, each $5.00; Agricul. Hall, Ad. Church, Phila., $2.23; George, Newburyport, L. Robins, each $2; Abigail H. Stokes, Eld. Carpenter, John M. Orrock, A Bro., through Eld. Himes, F. H. Pilley, I. B. Estabrook, A Sister at East Boston, each $1.00; a friend of the cause in Nevada, Ohio, $1.00.

☞ All contributions in future which may be sent to Elders J. LITCH, MILES GRANT, or H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass., or to Elder J. V. HIMES, Buchanan, Mich., will be forwarded to me, and acknowledged. Your Bro. in Christ, waiting for the kingdom,

M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is 2 cents for each FOUR OUNCES, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each FOUR OUNCES or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is TWO cents; but three or four tracts may be sent in the same parcel at the same price. A Book weighing 4 ounces costs 4 cents postage, one weighing 5 ounces would cost 8 cents, or just as much as if it weighed 8 ounces.

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY. BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. [illegible] Single, by mail, 12 cts.
2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood. Illustrated with engravings, showing the exhausted condition of the chain of symbols, and the proximity of the Judgment. [illegible] Single, by mail, 10 cts.
3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Wo" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, during which period the Witnesses were slain. [illegible] "Behold the Third Wo cometh quickly." [illegible] Single, by mail, 10 cts.
4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. In the first part we have endeavored to show by historical facts the rise, career, and complicity of the Leopard Beast with Popery [illegible] the "Two-Horned Beast." [illegible]
5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. This is written with a desire to impart instruction upon the Kingdom of God, Matt. [illegible] Signs of the Times, nearness of the Great Day of the Lord, &c., &c. [illegible] Single, by mail, 20 cts.
6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." [illegible]
7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" [illegible]
8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Sights in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars; [illegible]
9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.
10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; [illegible]
11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, revised, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 8 cts. [illegible]

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25. Be sure to write your name, Post Office, County, and State in a plain manner.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, [illegible] Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo., pp. 482, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? With [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the [illegible]

PRAYER.

"THY will be done," our lips are trained to saying;
My will be done, our urgent hearts implore;
But while we look for gifts to crown such praying,
God's No has crushed us—we will pray no more.

We're slow to learn that we have asked insanely;
Misread the text; and so reversed the spell
Of benediction meant for all—not mainly
That I and mine may in the sunshine dwell.

That we must loose the idols we are holding,
Ere we can rightly lift our hands in prayer,
Though life go with them;—and our arms, unfolding
That dear embrace, drop nerveless with despair.

When, swooning downward prone before God's altar,
Our eyes close blindly, and we think all's done,
An arm uplifts us; and our steps that falter
Are guided forth—and lo! a day begun.

With morning brightness all the East is burning,
Although but now we deemed the daylight dead;
And up the ragged steeps our way discerning,
We ask for guidance, and for daily bread.

Not bread alone, but all good gifts bestowing,
God's angel sends us strengthened on our way;
With sacramental wine life's cup o'erflowing,
And palms kept clean from idols, let us pray.
—New Jerusalem Mess. CELIA M. BURR.

For the World's Crisis.

THE VILLAGE IN THE MOUNTAINS.

NUMBER ONE.

Having accidentally met with a part of an old tract (commencing with the third and ending with the eighteenth page), which contained some items that interested me very much, I thought I would pen them for the Crisis, for the benefit of its readers, as illustrating the effect of unmixed Bible teaching.

A Parisan merchant, traveling through a mountainous part of France in 1821, on his way to Lyons, in a district wearing a most forbidding aspect, met with an aged, pious lady, who invited him to her dwelling, to whom he replied,

"I shall comply most cheerfully with your request, for though time is precious, I shall be thankful to spend a few minutes in these mountains, among those with whom I hope to dwell forever on Mount Zion."

After reaching the widow's dwelling, where all her arrangements bespoke industry, frugality, and piety, she accosted him with,

"Sir, may I ask what you are called?" To which the merchant replied, in an evasive way, by giving her his name.

She then said, "Sir, I shall not forget; but this is not what I meant; I wished to know whether you are Protestant or Catholic, a pastor or a priest?"

"Madam, I have not the honor to be either; I am a merchant; I desire to be a christian, and to have no other title but a disciple of Christ," he replied.

"That is exactly as we are here, sir," exclaimed the good widow, and added, "but as you are so frank, are you, sir, Catholic or Protestant?"

"Catholic," replied the merchant.

The widow looked confused, and observed, that it was "rare for the Catholics to talk as her visitor had done."

"I am a Catholic," resumed the merchant, "but not a member of the Roman Catholic church. I love all that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. I do not ask in what fold they feed, so that they are guided and nourished by the Good Shepherd and Bishop of souls."

"Oh! what a favor the Lord has granted us to meet with a christian like ourselves," said the deeply affected widow, as she looked around her; "we desire to live in charity with all mankind; but, to be frank also, sir, we do not go to mass, nor to confession, for we do not learn from our Testament, which is indeed almost worn out, that we are required to confess to sinners like ourselves, nor to worship the host, nor to perform penance for the salvation of our sins; and we believe we can serve God acceptably in a cave, or in a chamber, or on a mountain."

"I confess, madam, in my turn," said the merchant, "that I am exceedingly astonished to find such persons on such a spot; pray, how many may there be of your sentiments?"

"Here, sir, and scattered over the mountains, there are from three to four hundred. We meet on Sabbath evenings, and as often as we can, to pray to Jesus, to read the Testament, and to converse about the salvation of our souls. We are so much persecuted by the clergy, that we cannot appear as publicly as we wish. We are called beguines (religious enthusiasts) and fools; but I can bear this, and I hope a great deal more, for Him who has suffered so much for us."

While this conversation was passing, the rooms were filled by those nearest, who could leave their work, by the information and request of the widow lady, the heroine of the story. At this juncture, the merchant desired to see the Testament alluded to above, when a book was presented, bearing unmistakable marks of frequent and long continued use, (and this not in vain, as the account will fully justify us in saying,) the title page gone, the sacred pages worn to shreds by hands inured to toil, who sought eagerly for the truth, for, heeding the prophet's caution, "Cease ye from man," they had turned to the word of the Lord.

Mark the condition of the hardy mountaineers, under the fostering care of holy mother church, who kept the Bible from her faithful and all others, in order the more easily to establish her traditions. Their destitution is seen in the fact, that as the merchant was examining the copy of the Testament presented, the edition of which he could not discover, a female of respectable appearance approached him and said, "Sir, for several years I have sought every where a New Testament, and I have offered any price for one in all the neighboring villages, but in vain. Could you, sir, possibly procure me a copy? I will gladly pay you any sum you demand."

"Madam, I will not only procure you one," replied the merchant with earnestness, "but in forty-eight hours I will send you half a dozen."

"Is it possible!" exclaimed the astonished villagers. "May we, sir, believe the good news? May we rely on your promise? It appears too great—too good—we will pay for them now, if you please."

"You may depend upon receiving them," said the merchant, "if God prolongs my life. But I entreat you to do me the favor to receive them as a proof of my christian regard, and an expression of my gratitude for having been permitted to enjoy, in this unpromising spot, the refreshing company of the followers of Christ."

After the above intercourse, the conversation is said to have turned upon the value of the sacred volume, and the sinfulness of those who withhold it from perishing sinners. And we may well suppose that these persecuted christians were well prepared to estimate the value of the Bible; it being their only teacher, affording them ample consolation, and ground of hope with regard to the future. It also appears, that the simple reading of the New Testament by these unlettered, untraditionated, simple-hearted christians, evidently belonging to a class with reference to whom Christ once said, "I thank thee, O Father, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes, even so Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight;" had awakened in them a spirit of inquiry, as in the instance of those brought to view under the opening of the "fifth seal," who inquired, "How long, O Lord, dost thou not judge, and avenge our blood?" for after some time, the hostess inquired,

"Pray, sir, can you tell us if any thing extraordinary is passing in the world? We are shut out from all intercourse; but we have an impression that God is commencing a great work in the earth, and that wonderful events are coming to pass."

And although the specific character of their "impressions" with regard to the nature of coming events may not be learned by the above inquiry, yet it will fully appear in the sequel. And the portions of the widow's correspondence with the merchant, which will afford matter for the next number of this communication, will prove, I trust, deeply interesting to the readers of the World's Crisis, as affording evidence of the extension of knowledge concerning the near approach of the end.

When Edward Irving was interesting the masses of London by his burning, powerful eloquence, exciting in them the expectation and hope of the speedy return of Christ, God was using his word—without the auxiliary of human eloquence, to awaken a like interest in his own people in France.

In reply to their earnest inquiry, the merchant said, "Great events have taken place, and news is arriving every day from all parts of the world, of the progress of the gospel,—and the fulfillment of the Holy Scriptures,"—telling them of the labors of missionaries, and the establishment of schools, in a manner suited to their imperfect knowledge of the religious world. And when he had concluded, they all joined in the prayer: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven."

And "the termination of this extraordinary meeting," says the narrative, "was most affecting; tears of gratitude, pleasure, and regret, streamed from the eyes of the mountaineers, as the merchant parted with them and went on his way."

Calling upon the mayor of the next town, "he inquired, as with the curiosity of a traveler, the name of the hamlet he had passed on the mountains, and the nature of the employments, and the character of its inhabitants." "The men," said the mayor, "work in the mines, drive the teams, and labor in the fields; and the women and children weave. They are a very curious people, outres illumines, (new lights,) but the most honest work people in the country—probity itself. We have no occasion to weigh our silk, either when we give it out or take it in, for we are sure not to lose the value of a farthing; and the kindest creatures in the world; they will take the clothes off their backs to give to any one in distress; indeed, there is no wretchedness among them, for, though poor, they are industrious, temperate, charitable, and always assist each other; but touch them on their religion, and they are almost idiots. They never go to mass or confession; in fact they are not christians, though the most worthy people in the world—and so droll; imagine those poor people, after working all the week, instead of enjoying the Sunday, and going to a fete or a ball to amuse themselves, meeting in each others' houses, and sometimes in the mountains, to read some book, and pray, and sing hymns. They are very clever work people, but they pass their Sundays and holidays stupidly enough."

The same testimony, in substance, was given by several others, showing the influence their own book of theology, the much-worn and highly prized New Testament, had upon their lives. Next I will give some extracts showing what they learned from their Testament.

CHAS. P. DOW.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND EAST CONN. QUAR. CONFERENCE.

Conference met according to appointment. M. R. Phetteplace in the chair. After singing a hymn, prayer was offered by Eld. E. Bellows. The minutes of the last conference were read and accepted, with corrections made by the Clerk, after which adjourned the business until Thursday, 9 A. M. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in social worship.

7 P. M. Met again for social worship. At 8 P. M., preaching by J. K. Bellows, from Luke 18:1. Thursday, 9 A. M. Met for business. Prayer by J. K. Bellows. Invitation was given to those not belonging to this conference to take part with us in our deliberations. Report of the Treasurer was read and accepted. Delegates were called upon to report from the following churches.

Church at River Point. A. C. Greene, delegate. Interest rather low at present time. Few trying to do the will of the Lord. Sunday School rather more interesting than it has been in the past. Our conference meetings about the same as usual; two a week. The following ministers have preached to us since last conference: Eld. E. Bellows, J. K. Bellows, A. Durfee, and Bro. Rufus Pierce. Eld. A. Durfee has resigned his office as pastor of the church.

Exeter church. No delegate.

Lafayette church. No delegate. Bro. Ambrose Taylor reported unofficially. Believed none added, none left. Thought interest had increased since last conference. Some revived of late. Sunday School on the increase.

Foster church. No delegate. M. R. Phetteplace reported unofficially. Rather dull, but good congregations. Preaching by A. Durfee, Henry Hopkins, M. R. Phetteplace. Eld. J. K. Bellows had been there some; had been stirred up; hoped good would be done. No additions, none dropped, some ought to be. Committee been appointed to see some of them. No Sunday School.

Danielsonville church. Bro. Howard, delegate. Some striving to live near the Lord. Some rather discouraged, in a worldly point of view, several of the brethren having left the place. Preaching by Brn. Fenn, Jones, Brewer, and Brittain. Sunday School still sustained.

Central church, Chestnut Hill, Abington, No delegates.

Gloucester church. Bro. Evans, delegate. Church on rising ground. Thought the church had been misrepresented in the past.

Clark's Mills, Westerly church, no delegates.

Rocky Brook Church reported by letter.

"Rocky Brook, R. I., April 5th, '64.

REPORT. Church of Adventists worshiping at Rocky Brook, R. I., to the Rhode Island Conference met at Central, Rhode Island.

Brethren at the Conference: As stated in our last report, M. E. Cornell, a seventh-day Advent preacher, from Battle Creek, Mich., was with us holding meetings. This preacher continued with us during the month of January, occupying the Chapel three times Sun days, and nearly every evening during the week. A great interest was manifested to hear him, and people came from all points round about here. His labors resulted in convincing some of what they considered to be duty, viz: to keep the seventh day. The speaker made this his theme, the Law and Sabbath, devoting most of his lectures to it. Some of the church have gone to keeping the seventh day. They hold meetings on seventh-day afternoons and Wednesday evenings. Bro. Cornell left us Thursday, Feb. 4th.

Bro. H. L. Hastings preached to us the following Sunday, and two evenings after. We then renewed our conference and prayer meetings, which had been suspended while Bro. Cornell was here. The Lord blessed us in these meetings. Several confessed Jesus for the first time. They were young, mostly Sunday school scholars, but the Lord loves children.

Bro. Wm. Shepherd preached to us two evenings the first of March. Bro. E. Bellows preached to us Sunday, March 6th, and baptized seven souls, who are still continuing on their way rejoicing. We have had no preaching since then, but have kept up our conference meetings. The good Lord has been with us. Our Sunday school has been quite interesting, although we lack some faithful teachers. Brethren, pray for us.

CHARLES F. DIXON, Clerk."

Reports of preaching brethren. Eld. E. Bellows. Labored for the last three months. Been most of the time at Rocky Brook and Exeter. Quite an interest at the latter place. Sinners converted, backsliders reclaimed, three been baptized. The brethren had started a subscription paper to build a meeting house. Quite an interest at Rocky Brook. Power of God manifested, two requested prayers. Hard place to labor. Seven of the Sunday scholars been baptized. Been at the Central and Chestnut Hill churches. Had a good time. Few there serving the Lord.

Clerk left to attend funeral. J. P. Babcock Clerk pro tem.

Bro. M. R. Phetteplace' report. Labored in Harmony Village. Had very good time. Chance to do good there. Sister Steer had organized a Sunday School. Been at Chepachet with the Baptist church. Good congregation. Two ministers came out in strong opposition against him. One of the preachers had left his church. Great chance to do good there.

Bro. D. O. Hopkins. Labored in West Foster. Had very interesting time. Interest increasing. Many desire to become christians. They are about to organize a Sunday School.

Bro. Edwin Wood. Had labored in Hillsburgh, N. S. Interest increasing in every place. Labored in Fenn Mountain. Interest good. Baptized two.

Bro. J. K. Bellows. Labored in several places. Some were cold, some warm. Some converted, some baptized. Had a hard time with the powers of darkness at Warwick Plains. Thought that Adventists amalgamated too much with the world. It destroyed their influence.

Bro. R. Pierce. Had labored at home about Westerly. Good interest. One converted. Made arrangements to hold meetings at the meeting-house on the hill.

Eld. A. Durfee. Still trying to preach the gospel of the kingdom. Satisfied it was a glorious work. Labors about the same as they had been in the past. Been at Clark's Mills. Thought some of preaching at Mohegan most of the time. Thought the truth was gaining ground at that place.

Eld. Peter Noka. Labors limited since last conference. Been at the Pond St. Church in Providence (Freewill Baptist); some came in from other churches. Truth had got in among them. Been at Gloucester. Had good time. Coldness had got in among them. Some pulling apart. Tried to show them the consequences of so doing.

Bro. Benjamin Roberts. Tried to preach. Felt the approbation of his Master in so doing. Been laboring in Providence at the Charles St. church. Some had seen the truth. Been at Natick. Had good time. Also at the Plains in Warwick. Thought interest increasing. Been at Manton. Great opposition. Some still holding on. Some good souls at Allendale and Chestnut Hill. At Scituate, Burnt Hill, found good field. Determined to do more than he had done.

Bro. E. Bellows thought something ought to be done about sending an Evangelist into the field. Thought our best preachers had left the State, and the churches must have preaching.

Bro. M. Phetteplace offered the following resolutions, which were passed.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by this conference to correspond with the churches destitute of preaching, to ascertain how much they would do towards sustaining an Evangelist. That said committee be empowered to complete the arrangements of the conference in supplying such churches as are willing to co-operate with them, as far as practicable, either with an itinerant preacher, or an evangelist, or both. Committee to do said business—Eld. D. O. Hopkins, E. Bellows, and M. R. Phetteplace.

Brn. S. Howard and E. Card were appointed to act with the Chairman as a preaching committee for this conference. Adjourned to meet Friday, at 9 A. M., for business.

1 1-2 o'clock. Met for social worship. At 3 o'clock, sermon for criticism by E. Bellows on the Thousand Years. At 7 o'clock met again for social worship. Had a good time. 8 o'clock, preaching by Bro. D. O Hopkins, from 1 Cor. 3:15.

Friday, 9 A. M. Prayer by Bro. P. Noka. Report of committee to supply destitute churches with preaching. Reported eight destitute churches. Report accepted. Bro. J. K. Bellows was chosen evangelist.

Criticism of Bro. E. Bellows' sermon on the "thousand years," by Brn. A. Durfee, M. R. Phetteplace, and J. K. Bellows. Moved that the rules of this conference be suspended in regard to length of time for speaking.

Bro. Peter Noka thought Bro. E. Bellows ought to be helped, as he paid out about $30 more than he received during his office as Evangelist. A collection was taken up for this purpose, amounting to ten dollars and fifty-eight cents; after which an Essay was read by Eld. A. Durfee, on the Intermediate State.

3 P. M. Preaching by Bro. A. Durfee, from Num. 14:7.

7 P. M. Met again for social worship. At 8.30, preaching by Bro. Noka, from 1 Tim. 1:15, after which we met around the table to commemorate the sufferings of our Savior. Solemn and interesting season.

Adjourned to meet at River Point the first Wednesday in July, at 2 P. M. Preaching brethren present:—J. K. Bellows, E. Bellows, P. Noka, A. Durfee, D. O. Hopkins, E. R. Wood, R. Pierce, B. Roberts, and M. R. Phetteplace.

Subject for Criticism, at the next conference—Sermon by A. Durfee: Did Christ exist previous to his birth of the Virgin Mary? Essay by Bro. Alva Bellows: Is there a personal devil? A. C. GREENE, Sec'y.

For the World's Crisis.

WOMEN AND FAMILY DEVOTION.

"Come to the place of prayer!
Mothers and children come and kneel before
Your God, and with united hearts adore
Him whose alone your life and being are."

Is there to be witnessed this side of heaven, a more lovely sight, than that of a christian mother, in the absence of father and husband, gathering her children together, and engaging with them in family worship? There are christian wives, not a few, whose husbands are yet in the gall of bitterness and in the bonds of iniquity—do these wives acknowledge God in the domestic circle?

Wives and mothers, is your family altar kept burning brightly morning and evening? Very many christian women are sighing from day to day because no family altar exists beneath their roof. Yet how few have the courage to assemble their households, and in presence of an irreligious companion, offer themselves the morning and evening incense. Still, one thus situated should consider prayerfully whether such is not her duty—whether it is not the daily cross Jesus asks her to bear for him.

A friend discovered, with pain, on her second marriage, that no prayer was offered in her new home. Her husband, though a professor of religion, refused to establish family worship. She then resolved, with his consent, to perform the duty herself.

"When God commands, we must take up
Our cross without delay;
Our lives—a thousand lives were ours
Can ne'er his love repay."
—D. F. Newton.

For the World's Crisis.

FAITH.

It is a very important part of religion to take God at his word. We are to have a childlike faith. Children are naturally credulous; that is, they believe what their parents tell them. Just so should the children of God do. They should believe what he has promised he will perform. "Ask, and ye shall receive," Christ says. What a most precious promise is this! "He is more willing to give good gifts to them that ask him, than earthly parents are to give good gifts unto their children." But we must be careful not to ask amiss, else we shall not be heard; our asking then will be of no use. If we will come to God earnestly desiring pardon, and in humility and simplicity, he will grant our requests.

I have sometimes thought it a good sign to doubt God's willingness to forgive, but "without faith it is impossible to please God." If Christ had not died for even the chief of sinners, I should despair of ever being saved, but when I think how he came to this world, and was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," how his "soul was exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," and how he was in an "agony of soul," and "sweat, great drops of blood falling down to the ground," I cannot help weeping. God forbid that his precious blood should be shed in vain. I will trust myself in his hands, and go to him as to a father, or a dear friend, who is willing at all times to bestow his grace upon us.

We are saved by grace, through faith, but it is the gift of God. May he help us to be faithful. T. L. WAUGH.

The following burlesque, taken from the Christian Examiner, is said to have been written by Walter Scott, one of Alexander Campbell's coadjutors. We reproduce it here, and commend it to the attention of those to whom it is addressed.—Millennial Harbinger.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF PETER,

TO THE PREACHERS AND RULERS OF CONGREGATIONS.

CHAP. I.—THE STYLE AND MANNER OF LIVING.

Now ye who are called and chosen to go forth to all nations and among people, in time present and in time to come, to preach the word, see that ye take unto yourselves marks, yea, many outward marks, whereby ye shall be known of men.

Be ye not called as men are called; but be ye called Pope, Archbishop, Archdeacon, or Divine, or Reverend, and Right Reverend, or some like holy name; so may ye show forth your honor and your calling.

And let your dwelling places be houses of splendor and edifices of cost; and let your doors be decked with plates of brass, and let your names, even your reverend titles, be graven thereon; so shall it be as a sign.

Let your garments in which you minister be garments not as the garments of men, neither let them be "seamless garments, woven throughout," but let them be robes of richest silk, and robes of fine linen, of curious device and of costly workmanship; and have ye robes of black and robes of white, that ye may change the one for the other; so shall ye show forth your wisdom and humility.

Let your fare be sumptuous, not plain and frugal as the fare of the husbandman who tilleth the ground; but live ye on the fat of the land, taking "good heed for the morrow and wherewithal ye shall be fed."

And drink ye of the wines of the vintage brought from afar, and wines of great price; then shall the light of your spirits be the light of your countenances, and your faces shall be bright, even as the morning sun shall your faces glow in brightness; thus shall ye show forth your moderation and your temperance in all things.

Let the houses in which you preach be called churches, and let them be built in manner of great ornament without, and adorned with much cost within; with rich pillars and paints, and with fine altars and pedestals, and urns of precious stones, and cloths and velvet of scarlet, and vessels of silver.

And let there rooms for the changing of robes, and places for the precious metals and mitres.

And let the houses be divided into seats for the congregation, and let every man know his own seat; and let the first seats in front of the altar be for the rich that pay by thousands; and the next that pay by hundreds; and the last for those that pay by tens. And let the poor man sit behind the door.

And let the seats be garnished with cushions and crimson cloth, and with fine velvet; for if the houses of players and vain people who deal in idle sayings and shows of mockery, be rich and georgeous, how much more so should be the houses that are dedicated to Him "that is meek and lowly of spirit."

CHAP. II.—THE CHOOSING OF MINISTERS.

When ye go out to choose holy ones to be of your brethren, and to minister at the altar, choose ye from among the youth, even those whose judgments are not yet ripe, and whose hearts know not yet whether they incline to God or mammon.

But ye are wise, and ye shall know the inclining of their future spirits, and ye shall make them incline to the good things which the church hath in store for them that are called, even those that shall be called of you.

Then shall ye have them taught exceeding many things. They shall not be as "ignorant fishermen," or husbandmen, or men speaking one tongue, and serving God only by the knowledge of his law.

Nay, ye shall make them wise in the things of your wisdom; yea, exceedingly cunning in many mysteries, even the mysteries which you teach.

Then shall they be fitted for the "laying on of hands;" and when the Bishop hath done his office, then shall they be reverend divines.

But if any man believe that he is called of God to speak to his brethren, "without money and without price," though his soul be bowed to the will of the father, and though he work all righteousness, and "speak as with the tongue of an angel,"—if he be not made a divine by your rulers and by the hands of a Bishop, then he is not a divine, nor shall he preach.

He that is chosen of you shall give you honor, and shall be honored of men and honored of women; and verily he expects his reward.

CHAP. III.—THE PERFORMANCE OF PREACHING.

When ye go to the church to preach, go not by the retired way, where go those that would shun the crowd, but go in the highway, where go the multitude, and see that ye have on the robes of black, and take heed that your pace be measured well, and that your march be stately.

Then shall your "hearts be lifted up," even as the hearts of mighty men shall they be lifted up. And ye shall be gazed upon by the multitude, and they shall honor you; and the men shall praise you, and the women shall glorify you, even by the women shall ye be glorified.

And when ye go in, go not as the ordained, prepared only with a soul to God and with a heart to men, and a spirit filled with the Holy Ghost; but go ye with your pockets full of papers and full of divine words; even in your pockets shall your divinity be.

And let your sermon be full of "the enticing words of man's wisdom," and let it be beautified with just divisions, with tropes, and with metaphors, and with hyperbole, and apostrophe, and with interrogation, and with acclamation, and with syllogisms, and with sophisms, and throughout let declamation be.

And take good heed to your attitudes and your gestures, knowing when to bend, and when to stand erect; when to lift your right hand and when your left, and let your motions be graceful, even in your attitudes and in your gestures let your grace be. Thus shall ye be pleasing in the eyes of the people and graceful in their sight.

Let your voice at times be smooth as the stream of the valley, and soft as the breeze that waves not the bough on its bank; and at times let it swell like the wave of the ocean, or like the whirlwind on the mountain-top.

Then shall ye charm the ears of your hearers, and their hearts shall be softened, and their minds shall be astounded, and their souls shall incline unto you; and the men shall incline unto you, and likewise the women; yea, unto your sayings and unto your persons shall they be inclined.

And be ye mindful not to offend the people; rebuke ye not their sins; but when ye rebuke sin, rebuke it at a distance; and let no man apply your sayings to his own case; so shall he not be offended.

If a brother shall raise up the banner of war against brother, and christians against christians, rebuke them not; but be some of you on the one side, and some on the other; and tell the one host that God is on their side, and the other host that he is on their side; so make them bold to kill. And even among swords and lances let your black robes be seen.

Preach ye not "Peace on earth and good will to men," but preach ye glory to the victor, and victory to the brave.

If any man go into a foreign land and seize upon his fellow man, and put irons on his feet and irons on his hands, and bring him across the great deep, into bondage; nay, if he tear asunder the dearest ties of nature, the tenderest leagues of the human heart; if he tear the wife from the husband, and force the struggling infant from its mother's bleeding breast, rebuke him not!

And although he sell them into foreign slavery, to toil beneath the lash all their days, tell him not that his doings are of Antichrist; for lo! he is rich and giveth unto the church, and is esteemed pious; so shall ye not offend him, lest, peradventure, he withdraw himself from your flock.

Teach them to believe that you have the care of their souls, and that the saving mysteries are for your explaining; and when you explain your mysteries, encompass them round about with words as with a bright veil, so bright that through it no man can see.

And lo! ye shall bind the judgments of men (and more especially of women,) as with a band of iron; and ye shall make them blind in the midst of light, even as the owl is blind in the noonday sun; and behold ye shall lead them captive to your reverend wills.

CHAP. IV.—THE CLERGY'S REWARD.

"In all your gettings" get money! Now, therefore, when ye go forth on your ministerial journey, go where there are silver and gold, and where each man will pay according to his measure. For verily I say ye must get your reward.

Go ye not forth as those that have been sent, "without two coats, without gold or silver, or brass, in their purses; without scrip for their journey, or shoes, or staves;" but go ye forth in the good things of this world.

And when ye shall hear of a church that is vacant and hath no one to preach therein, then be that a call unto you, and be ye mindful of the call, and take ye charge of the flock thereof, and of the fleece thereof, even of the golden fleece.

And when ye shall have fleeced your flock and shall know of another call, and if the flock be greater, or, rather, if the fleece be greater, then greater be also unto you the call. Then shall ye leave your old flock, and of the new flock shall ye take the charge.

Those who have "freely received, let them freely give," and let not men have your words "without money, nor without price," but bargain ye for hundreds and bargain for thousands, even for thousands of silver and gold shall ye bargain.

And over and above the price for which ye have sold your service, take ye also gifts, and be ye mindful to refuse none, saying, "Lo! I have enough,"—but receive gifts from them that go in chariots, and from them that feed flocks, and from them that earn their morsel by the sweat of their brow.

Yea, take ye gifts of all, and take them in gold and in silver, and in bread; in wine and in oil, in raiment and in fine linen.

And the more that the people give you, the more will they honor you, for they shall believe that "in giving to you they are giving to the Lord;" for behold their sight shall be taken from them, and they shall be as blind as bats, and "shall know not what they do."

And ye shall wax richer and richer, and grow greater and greater, and ye shall be lifted up in your own sight, and exalted in the eyes of the multitude; and "lucre" shall be no longer "filthy" in your sight. And verily ye have your reward.

In doing these things ye shall never fail, and may abundance of gold, and silver, and bank notes, and corn, and wool, and flax, and spirits, and wine, and land, be multiplied unto you; both now and forever. Amen!

EARRINGS.

The custom of wearing earrings is said to have originated on this wise:—

"Originally, among the Hebrews, Arabs and other nations, the ears of the slaves were bored to signify the obligation of the servant to hearken to the commands of his master. Rings were afterwards invented to denote the perpetuity of his bonds, as the slave who had his ears bored was a servant forever. Thus earrings were a badge of slavery. In modern times they mean no more, perhaps, than that the person's progenitors were slaves, or perchance, that the persons themselves are the slaves of vanity and fashion."—Selected.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

NAMES FOR THE TRY COMPANY.
Emma A. Gilbert, Gerritt S. Gilbert, Frederic Thomas.

For the World's Crisis.

THE GOOD DOG TOWSER.

A LESSON FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Young friends, what do you think Towser does? When his master has a loaf of bread, or a pie, or a plate of dinner, to send to poor old Mrs. Green, Towser carries it. He never says, "Not now, mistress, or by and by, or it is too hot, or too cold, or I don't want to," as some children object when told to do an errand; but he goes, as pleased as can be. Nor does he ever touch a thing he carries, as a greedy little boy once ate up some nice jelly his mother sent by him to a sick woman.

A dog once followed Towser as he was carrying a piece of meat in his basket, smelling round, and trying to put his nose into the basket. Towser gave a big growl to frighten him off, but the dog would not go. I suppose he was very hungry. At length Towser set his basket down, turned round, and gave his troublesome companion a sound shaking, then took up his basket and trotted on. The hungry dog did not dare follow then.

When Towser reaches Mrs. Green's door, how do you think he lets her know he is there? He scratches? No. He puts his basket down, and sets up a great "bow-wow;" and Mrs. Green opens the door, and she says, "How now, Towser, you have brought me something good to eat; good dog!" Towser wags his tail as much as to say he has. She takes and empties the basket, and hands it back to him, and away he bounds; and the good old lady walks back to her little kitchen, saying in heart, "God sent the ravens to feed Elijah, and he sends Towser to feed me. He never sees the righteous forsaken, or his seed begging bread. Praise God."

Again, not long since we were passing a store about mid-day, and the owner came out with Towser at his heels and a pail in his hand. He told Towser to take the pail and carry it to the house, a few rods across the way. The dog did not whine over the command, nor curl his tail and refuse to go; no, not he. He obeyed at once, took the pail in his mouth, and away he went to the house. We watched him to see how well he fulfilled his master's orders. The door was closed, so he sat down on the piazza and waited a welcome. Five minutes passed, and no one opened the door; yet the dog was patient and faithful. Five minutes more passed, and just as he was about to leave, he was seen from the window and admitted with his charge. Faithful dog, thought I, never to refuse obedience or wait for the second bidding.

Then I thought of little Willie S——, who said to his mother, in my presence, "No, I can't do it; let Ned go, he is not doing any thing."

Think of this, little readers. Willie was less obedient than Towser; for he went cheerfully, wagging his bushy tail, and lifting his head as if to say, "I obey." Learn a good lesson from the dog, and never let it be said of you, "Towser is more obedient than Willie."

"Be kind to your mother; for when thou wast young,
Who loved thee so fondly as she?
Who caught the first accents that fell from thy tongue,
And joined in thy innocent glee."

D. F. NEWTON.

For the World's Crisis.

HE RESTS.

WILBER E. MARSH.

Sleep on, my darling lost one, sleep,
Thy mother's left alone to weep;
How deep the grief within my breast,
But, blessed thought, thou art at rest.
Oh! yes, thou'lt slumber 'neath the ground
Until the last great trump shall sound.

I saw thy form grow cold in death,
And listened to thy quick drawn breath;
At first I hoped, but hope soon fled,
They softly whispered—he is dead!
Yes, thou art dead, my noble boy,
Gone, gone thou art, my constant joy.

Thy little room, where stands thy bed,
Which oft thy boyish feet have trod,
Is still; the echoing of the door,
And thy glad footsteps on the floor,
Are hushed; and still and cold thou art,
And ceased the throbbings of thy heart.

It filled my tender heart with woe;
Thou wert my last, I loved thee so!
Child after child I've given up,
Yet still I drink of sorrow's cup;
The sod lies heaped upon thy breast,
The soft winds sigh thou art at rest.

The sun was sinking in the west,
They laid thee down to sweetly rest;
And now, my child, in deepest gloom
I weep in silence o'er thy tomb;
But sleep, my darling lost one, sleep,
Although I'm left alone to weep.

New Richmond, Pa. EMILY L. MARSH.

"I AM MY FATHER'S."

"Will you not be my little girl?" I said one day to little Nannie Wheeler; "you do not know how much I love you, and how happy I will try to make you, if you will only be my little Nannie."

She looked up earnestly in my face with her bright black eyes, and said:

"I'm father's."

"Well, Nannie, I will give you such nice things if you will be my little girl; I will give you a beautiful new dress, and a hood, and such a cunning little muff to keep Jack Frost from finding your fingers, and a little shawl, and new shoes. Now do be my little girl!"

She looked up again in the same touching manner, and said:

"I'm father's."

"O now, Nannie!" I continued more earnestly; "when poor aunt Carrie has no little girl, and father has Augusta and pet Nellie, besides Willie and Tooly. O! I will buy you a new doll, very large, with eyes 'most as bright as yours, lots of candies, and a little rocking-horse; and you shall have so many toys that I will give you a drawer on purpose to keep them in, all for yourself; and such picture-books! Dear Nannie, now do be aunt Carrie's little girl."

She again said in her quiet, simple way: "I'm father's."

Dear little girl! how few would have withstood temptation so strongly set forth! She is only three years old, and yet she could not, for any inducement held out, give up her love for her father.

Little children, we all have one Father, even "our Father who art in heaven." The world, with all its allurements, is held out to tempt us from his love; do we turn from it, and with childlike faith and love, answer, "I am Father's?"

Living friends gather around us, and would fain lead us to forget that there is One whom we must love above all others; do we turn from them and say with little Nannie, "I am my Father's?"

Comforts and luxuries are brought to us to tempt us on every side; do we take up the cross humbly, and walk in the footsteps of Him who "had not where to lay his head, and answer, "I am my Father's?"

Let us all take a lesson from little Nannie, in her unswerving love for her father. Nothing can tempt her from his side; she follows him about like a little lamb, and she nestles in his arms, and lays her precious head on his bosom. May the good Shepherd watch over her, and keep her, and when at the last great day we shall all stand before the awful tribunal of the judgment-seat, may I hear that dear voice, as unswerving in its trust in a heavenly parent as now of the earthly, answer: "I am my Father's."—Ex.

FAITH.

The subject of Ellen T——'s Sunday-school lesson was faith. "Can you tell me," asked her teacher, "what faith is?"

"No, ma'am" said Ellen; "I have looked in the lesson, and in the Bible, and in the dictionary, and I can't understand it."

"I will illustrate it," said the teacher; "A little girl was taking a sail with her father and his two servants, when a storm overtook them with lightning and thunder. The child was in the arms of one of the men in the end of the boat away from her father. Startled at the seeming danger, she stretched her little hands toward him and cried out, 'Me 'fraid, papa; me 'fraid!' 'Come to me!' said the father; and the servant placed her at his feet, where she nestled down while he attended to the management of his boat. Presently with the happiest, most satisfied smile, she looked up to her father's face and lisped, 'Now me safe, papa; now me safe!' That little girl's confidence in her father was faith; she believed he was strong enough and loving enough to shield her from the storm. All the thunder and lightning could not terrify her while she sat at her father's feet. That is just as we should feel toward God. Do you understand now, Ellen, what faith is?"

"I think I do," said Ellen; "we must believe that God is strong enough and loves us well enough to save us."

"It is that," said the teacher, "and something more. The child not only called out to her father when she was afraid, but she went to him when he bade her, and felt safe and happy. We, dear Ellen, in greater danger than she, must go to our heavenly Father,—to be saved from sin, and shielded from harm, and be made happy in our blessed confidence.

"And do you know that to understand what faith means, places you under obligations to practice it toward God in believing and casting yourself upon him—in loving and obeying him?"

Did Ellen T—— know that when her Sunday school teacher explained this truth to her understanding—when she saw the duty of believing and loving God, it was to her soul the voice of that unseen Father saying, "Come to me?"—Child at Home.

FAITH ILLUSTRATED.

Could any mature christian give a more correct idea of justification by faith than is contained in the following reply of a little child?

In "Kind Words for Children," Newcome says: I remember talking with a very little girl, to whom I put the question, "Are you a sinner?"—to which she promptly replied,

"No, sir."

"But," said I, "have you never done anything that was wrong?"

"O, yes," she replied, "a great many times."

"How then," I asked, "can you say that you are not a sinner?"

"It is tooken away," she replied.

"Who has taken it away?" I inquired again.

She replied, "I have trusted in Christ."

This was from a very little girl, not five years old. Yet, in all the conversations I have had with grown people, I never heard a more intelligent, practical idea of faith in Christ.

A KISS FOR A BLOW.—A visitor once went into a school in the city of Boston, where he saw a boy and girl on one seat, who were brother and sister. In a moment of thoughtless passion the little boy struck his sister. The little girl was provoked, and raised her hand to return the blow. Her face showed the rage that was working within, and her clenched fist was aimed at her brother, when her teacher caught her eye.

"Stop, my dear," said he; "you had better kiss your brother than strike him!"

The look and the word reached her heart. Her hand dropped. She threw her arms around his neck and kissed him. The boy was subdued. He could have stood against the blow, but he could not withstand a sister's kiss.—Ex.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.00
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable buarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CRISIS BOX, BOSTON, MASS.

PRAYER.

"Thy will be done," our lips are trained to saying;
My will be done, our urgent hearts implore;
But while we look for gifts to crown such praying,
God's No has crushed us—we will pray no more.

We're slow to learn that we have asked insanely;
Misread the text; and so reversed the spell
Of benediction meant for all—not mainly
That I and mine may in the sunshine dwell.

That we must loose the idols we are holding,
Ere we can rightly lift our hands in prayer,
Though life go with them;—and our arms, unfolding
That dear embrace, drop nerveless with despair.

When, swooning downward prone before God's altar,
Our eyes close blindly, and we think all's done,
An arm uplifts us; and our steps that falter
Are guided forth—and lo! a day begun.

With morning brightness all the East is burning,
Although but now we deemed the daylight dead;
And up the ragged steeps our way discerning,
We ask for guidance, and for daily bread.

Not bread alone, but all good gifts bestowing,
God's angel sends us strengthened on our way;
With sacramental wine life's cup o'erflowing,
And palms kept clean from idols, let us pray.

—New Jerusalem Mess. CELIA M. BURR.

For the World's Crisis.

THE VILLAGE IN THE MOUNTAINS.

NUMBER ONE.

Having accidentally met with a part of an old tract (commencing with the third and ending with the eighteenth page), which contained some items that interested me very much, I thought I would pen them for the Crisis, for the benefit of its readers, as illustrating the effect of unmixed Bible teaching.

A Parisan merchant, traveling through a mountainous part of France in 1821, on his way to Lyons, in a district wearing a most forbidding aspect, met with an aged, pious lady, who invited him to her dwelling, to whom he replied,

"I shall comply most cheerfully with your request, for though time is precious, I shall be thankful to spend a few minutes in these mountains, among those with whom I hope to dwell forever on Mount Zion."

After reaching the widow's dwelling, where all her arrangements bespoke industry, frugality, and piety, she accosted him with,

"Sir, may I ask what you are called?" To which the merchant replied, in an evasive way, by giving her his name.

She then said, "Sir, I shall not forget; but this is not what I meant; I wished to know whether you are Protestant or Catholic, a pastor or a priest?"

"Madam, I have not the honor to be either; I am a merchant; I desire to be a christian, and to have no other title but a disciple of Christ," he replied.

"That is exactly as we are here, sir," exclaimed the good widow, and added, "but as you are so frank, are you, sir, Catholic or Protestant?"

"Catholic," replied the merchant.

The widow looked confused, and observed, that it was "rare for the Catholics to talk as her visitor had done."

"I am a Catholic," resumed the merchant, "but not a member of the Roman Catholic church. I love all that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. I do not ask in what fold they feed, so that they are guided and nourished by the Good Shepherd and Bishop of souls."

"Oh! what a favor the Lord has granted us to meet with a christian like ourselves," said the deeply affected widow, as she looked around her; "we desire to live in charity with all mankind; but, to be frank also, sir, we do not go to mass, nor to confession, for we do not learn from our Testament, which is indeed almost worn out, that we are required to confess to sinners like ourselves, nor to worship the host, nor to perform penance for the salvation of our sins; and we believe we can serve God acceptably in a cave, or in a chamber, or on a mountain."

"I confess, madam, in my turn," said the merchant, "that I am exceedingly astonished to find such persons on such a spot; pray, how many may there be of your sentiments?"

"Here, sir, and scattered over the mountains, there are from three to four hundred. We meet on Sabbath evenings, and as often as we can, to pray to Jesus, to read the Testament, and to converse about the salvation of our souls. We are so much persecuted by the clergy, that we cannot appear as publicly as we wish. We are called beguines (religious enthusiasts) and fools; but I can bear this, and I hope a great deal more, for Him who has suffered so much for us."

While this conversation was passing, the rooms were filled by those nearest, who could leave their work, by the information and request of the widow lady, the heroine of the story. At this juncture, the merchant desired to see the Testament alluded to above, when a book was presented, bearing unmistakable marks of frequent and long continued use, (and this not in vain, as the account will fully justify us in saying,) the title page gone, the sacred pages worn to shreds by hands inured to toil, who sought eagerly for the truth, for, heeding the prophet's caution, "Cease ye from man," they had turned to the word of the Lord.

Mark the condition of the hardy mountaineers, under the fostering care of holy mother church, who kept the Bible from her faithful and all others, in order the more easily to establish her traditions. Their destitution is seen in the fact, that as the merchant was examining the copy of the Testament presented, the edition of which he could not discover, a female of respectable appearance approached him and said, "Sir, for several years I have sought every where a New Testament, and I have offered any price for one in all the neighboring villages, but in vain. Could you, sir, possibly procure me a copy? I will gladly pay you any sum you demand."

"Madam, I will not only procure you one," replied the merchant with earnestness, "but in forty-eight hours I will send you half a dozen."

"Is it possible!" exclaimed the astonished villagers. "May we, sir, believe the good news? May we rely on your promise? It appears too great—too good—we will pay for them now, if you please."

"You may depend upon receiving them," said the merchant, "if God prolongs my life. But I entreat you to do me the favor to receive them as a proof of my christian regard, and an expression of my gratitude for having been permitted to enjoy, in this unpromising spot, the refreshing company of the followers of Christ."

After the above intercourse, the conversation is said to have turned upon the value of the sacred volume, and the sinfulness of those who withhold it from perishing sinners. And we may well suppose that these persecuted christians were well prepared to estimate the value of the Bible; it being their only teacher, affording them simple consolation, and ground of hope with regard to the future. It also appears, that the simple reading of the New Testament by these unlettered, untraditionated, simple-hearted christians, evidently belonging to a class with reference to whom Christ once said, "I thank thee, O Father, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes, even so Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight;" had awakened in them a spirit of inquiry, as in the instance of those brought to view under the opening of the "fifth seal," who inquired, "How long, O Lord, dost thou not judge, and avenge our blood?" for after some time, the hostess inquired,

"Pray, sir, can you tell us if any thing extraordinary is passing in the world? We are shut out from all intercourse; but we have an impression that God is commencing a great work in the earth, and that wonderful events are coming to pass."

And although the specific character of their "impressions" with regard to the nature of coming events may not be learned by the above inquiry, yet it will fully appear in the sequel. And the portions of the widow's correspondence with the merchant, which will afford matter for the next number of this communication, will prove, I trust, deeply interesting to the readers of the World's Crisis, as affording evidence of the extension of knowledge concerning the near approach of the end.

When Edward Irving was interesting the masses of London by his burning, powerful eloquence, exciting in them the expectation and hope of the speedy return of Christ, God was using his word—without the auxiliary of human eloquence, to awaken a like interest in his own people in France.

In reply to their earnest inquiry, the merchant said, "Great events have taken place, and news is arriving every day from all parts of the world, of the progress of the gospel,—and the fulfillment of the Holy Scriptures,"—telling them of the labors of missionaries, and the establishment of schools, in a manner suited to their imperfect knowledge of the religious world. And when he had concluded, they all joined in the prayer: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven."

And "the termination of this extraordinary meeting," says the narrative, "was most affecting; tears of gratitude, pleasure, and regret, streamed from the eyes of the mountaineers, as the merchant parted with them and went on his way."

Calling upon the mayor of the next town, "he inquired, as with the curiosity of a traveler, the name of the hamlet he had passed on the mountains, and the nature of the employments, and the character of its inhabitants." "The men," said the mayor, "work in the mines, drive the teams, and labor in the fields; and the women and children weave. They are a very curious people, outres illumines, (new lights,) but the most honest work people in the country—probity itself. We have no occasion to weigh our silk, either when we give it out or take it in, for we are sure not to lose the value of a farthing; and the kindest creatures in the world; they will take the clothes off their backs to give to any one in distress; indeed, there is no wretchedness among them, for, though poor, they are industrious, temperate, charitable, and always assist each other; but touch them on their religion, and they are almost idiots. They never go to mass or confession; in fact they are not christians, though the most worthy people in the world—and so droll; imagine those poor people, after working all the week, instead of enjoying the Sunday, and going to a fete or a ball to amuse themselves, meeting in each others' houses, and sometimes in the mountains, to read some book, and pray, and sing hymns. They are very clever work people, but they pass their Sundays and holidays stupidly enough."

The same testimony, in substance, was given by several others, showing the influence their own book of theology, the much-worn and highly prized New Testament, had upon their lives. Next I will give some extracts showing what they learned from their Testament.

CHAS. P. DOW.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND EAST CONN. QUAR. CONFERENCE.

Conference met according to appointment. M. R. Phetteplace in the chair. After singing a hymn, prayer was offered by Eld. E. Bellows. The minutes of the last conference were read and accepted, with corrections made by the Clerk, after which adjourned the business until Thursday, 9 A. M. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in social worship.

7 P. M. Met again for social worship. At 8 P. M., preaching by J. K. Bellows, from Luke 18: 1. Thursday, 9 A. M. Met for business. Prayer by J. K. Bellows. Invitation was given to those not belonging to this conference to take part with us in our deliberations. Report of the Treasurer was read and accepted. Delegates were called upon to report from the following churches.

Church at River Point. A. C. Greene, delegate. Interest rather low at present time. Few trying to do the will of the Lord. Sunday School rather more interesting than it has been in the past. Our conference meetings about the same as usual; two a week. The following ministers have preached to us since last conference: Eld. E. Bellows, J. K. Bellows, A. Durfee, and Bro. Rufus Pierce. Eld. A. Durfee has resigned his office as pastor of the church.

Exeter church. No delegate.

Lafayette church. No delegate. Bro. Ambrose Taylor reported unofficially. Believed none added, none left. Thought interest had increased since last conference. Some revived of late. Sunday School on the increase.

Foster church. No delegate. M. R. Phetteplace reported unofficially. Rather dull, but good congregations. Preaching by A. Durfee, Henry Hopkins, M. R. Phetteplace. Eld. J. K. Bellows had been there some; had been stirred up; hoped good would be done. No additions, none dropped, some ought to be. Committee been appointed to see some of them. No Sunday School.

Danielsonville church. Bro. Howard, delegate. Some striving to live near the Lord. Some rather discouraged, in a worldly point of view, several of the brethren having left the place. Preaching by Brn. Fenn, Jones, Brewer, and Brittain. Sunday School still sustained.

Central church, Chestnut Hill, Abington, No delegates.

Gloucester church. Bro. Evans, delegate. Church on rising ground. Thought the church had been misrepresented in the past.

Clark's Mills, Westerly church, no delegates.

Rocky Brook Church reported by letter.

"Rocky Brook, R. I., April 5th, '64.

REPORT. Church of Adventists worshiping at Rocky Brook, R. I., to the Rhode Island Conference met at Central, Rhode Island.

Brethren at the Conference: As stated in our last report, M. E. Cornell, a seventh-day Advent preacher, from Battle Creek, Mich., was with us holding meetings. This preacher continued with us during the month of January, occupying the Chapel three times Sundays, and nearly every evening during the week. A great interest was manifested to hear him, and people came from all points round about here. His labors resulted in convincing some of what they considered to be duty, viz: to keep the seventh day. The speaker made this his theme, the Law and Sabbath, devoting most of his lectures to it. Some of the church have gone to keeping the seventh day. They hold meetings on seventh-day afternoons and Wednesday evenings. Bro. Cornell left us Thursday, Feb. 4th.

Bro. H. L. Hastings preached to us the following Sunday, and two evenings after. We then renewed our conference and prayer meetings, which had been suspended while Bro. Cornell was here. The Lord blessed us in these meetings. Several confessed Jesus for the first time. They were young, mostly Sunday school scholars, but the Lord loves children.

Bro. Wm. Shepherd preached to us two evenings the first of March. Bro. E. Bellows preached to us Sunday, March 6th, and baptized seven souls, who are still continuing on their way rejoicing. We have had no preaching since then, but have kept up our conference meetings. The good Lord has been with us. Our Sunday school has been quite interesting, although we lack some faithful teachers. Brethren, pray for us.

CHARLES F. DIXON, Clerk."

Reports of preaching brethren. Eld. E. Bellows. Labored for the last three months. Been most of the time at Rocky Brook and Exeter. Quite an interest at the latter place. Sinners converted, backsliders reclaimed, three been baptized. The brethren had started a subscription paper to build a meeting house. Quite an interest at Rocky Brook. Power of God manifested, two requested prayers. Hard place to labor. Seven of the Sunday scholars been baptized. Been at the Central and Chestnut Hill churches. Had a good time. Few there serving the Lord.

Clerk left to attend funeral. J. P. Babcock Clerk pro tem.

Bro. M. R. Phetteplace' report. Labored in Harmony Village. Had very good time. Chance to do good there. Sister Steer had organized a Sunday School. Been at Chepachet with the Baptist church. Good congregation. Two ministers came out in strong opposition against him. One of the preachers had left his church. Great chance to do good there.

Bro. D. O. Hopkins. Labored in West Foster. Had very interesting time. Interest increasing. Many desire to become christians. They are about to organize a Sunday School.

Bro. Edwin Wood. Had labored in Hillsburgh, N. S. Interest increasing in every place. Labored in Fenn Mountain. Interest good. Baptized two.

Bro. J. K. Bellows. Labored in several places. Some were cold, some warm. Some converted, some baptized. Had a hard time with the powers of darkness at Warwick Plains. Thought that Adventists amalgamated too much with the world. It destroyed their influence.

Bro. R. Pierce. Had labored at home about Westerly. Good interest. One converted. Made arrangements to hold meetings at the meeting-house on the hill.

Eld. A. Durfee. Still trying to preach the gospel of the kingdom. Satisfied it was a glorious work. Labors about the same as they had been in the past. Been at Clark's Mills. Thought some of preaching at Mohegan most of the time. Thought the truth was gaining ground at that place.

Eld. Peter Noka. Labors limited since last conference. Been at the Pond St. Church in Providence (Freewill Baptist); some came in from other churches. Truth had got in among them. Been at Gloucester. Had good time. Coldness had got in among them. Some pulling apart. Tried to show them the consequences of so doing.

Bro. Benjamin Roberts. Tried to preach. Felt the approbation of his Master in so doing. Been laboring in Providence at the Charles St. church. Some had seen the truth. Been at Natick. Had good time. Also at the Plains in Warwick. Thought interest increasing. Been at Manton. Great opposition. Some still holding on. Some good souls at Allendale and Chestnut Hill. At Scituate, Burnt Hill, found good field. Determined to do more than he had done.

Bro. E. Bellows thought something ought to be done about sending an Evangelist into the field. Thought our best preachers had left the State, and the churches must have preaching.

Bro. M. Phetteplace offered the following resolutions, which were passed.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by this conference to correspond with the churches destitute of preaching, to ascertain how much they would do towards sustaining an Evangelist. That said committee be empowered to complete the arrangements of the conference in supplying such churches as are willing to co-operate with them, as far as practicable, either with an itinerant preacher, or an evangelist, or both. Committee to do said business—Eld. D. O. Hopkins, E. Bellows, and M. R. Phetteplace.

Brn. S. Howard and E. Card were appointed to act with the Chairman as a preaching committee for this conference. Adjourned to meet Friday, at 9 A. M., for business.

1 1-2 o'clock. Met for social worship. At 3 o'clock, sermon for criticism by E. Bellows on the Thousand Years. At 7 o'clock met again for social worship. Had a good time. 8 o'clock, preaching by Bro. D. O Hopkins, from 1 Cor. 3: 15.

Friday, 9 A. M. Prayer by Bro. P. Noka. Report of committee to supply destitute churches with preaching. Reported eight destitute churches. Report accepted. Bro. J. K. Bellows was chosen evangelist.

Criticism of Bro. E. Bellows' sermon on the "thousand years," by Brn. A. Durfee, M. R. Phetteplace, and J. K. Bellows. Moved that the rules of this conference be suspended in regard to length of time for speaking.

Bro. Peter Noka thought Bro. E. Bellows ought to be helped, as he paid out about $30 more than he received during his office as Evangelist. A collection was taken up for this purpose, amounting to ten dollars and fifty-eight cents; after which an Essay was read by Eld. A. Durfee, on the Intermediate State.

3 P. M. Preaching by Bro. A. Durfee, from Num. 14: 7.

7 P. M. Met again for social worship. At 8.30, preaching by Bro. Noka, from 1 Tim. 1: 15, after which we met around the table to commemorate the sufferings of our Savior. Solemn and interesting season.

Adjourned to meet at River Point the first Wednesday in July, at 2 P. M. Preaching brethren present:—J. K. Bellows, E. Bellows, P. Noka, A. Durfee, D. O. Hopkins, E. R. Wood, R. Pierce, B. Roberts, and M. R. Phetteplace.

Subject for Criticism, at the next conference—Sermon by A. Durfee: Did Christ exist previous to his birth of the Virgin Mary? Essay by Bro. Alva Bellows: Is there a personal devil?

A. C. GREENE, Sec'y.

For the World's Crisis.

WOMEN AND FAMILY DEVOTION.

"Come to the place of prayer!
Mothers and children come and kneel before
Your God, and with united hearts adore
Him whose alone your life and being are."

Is there to be witnessed this side of heaven, a more lovely sight, than that of a christian mother, in the absence of father and husband, gathering her children together, and engaging with them in family worship? There are christian wives, not a few, whose husbands are yet in the gall of bitterness and in the bonds of iniquity—do these wives acknowledge God in the domestic circle?

Wives and mothers, is your family altar kept burning brightly morning and evening? Very many christian women are sighing from day to day because no family altar exists beneath their roof. Yet how few have the courage to assemble their households, and in presence of an irreligious companion, offer themselves the morning and evening incense. Still, one thus situated should consider prayerfully whether such is not her duty—whether it is not the daily cross Jesus asks her to bear for him.

A friend discovered, with pain, on her second marriage, that no prayer was offered in her new home. Her husband, though a professor of religion, refused to establish family worship. She then resolved, with his consent, to perform the duty herself.

"When God commands, we must take up
Our cross without delay;
Our lives—a thousand lives were ours
Can ne'er his love repay."

—D. F. Newton.

For the World's Crisis.

FAITH.

It is a very important part of religion to take God at his word. We are to have a childlike faith. Children are naturally credulous; that is, they believe what their parents tell them. Just so should the children of God do. They should believe what he has promised he will perform. "Ask, and ye shall receive," Christ says. What a most precious promise is this! "He is more willing to give good gifts to them that ask him, than earthly parents are to give good gifts unto their children." But we must be careful not to ask amiss, else we shall not be heard; our asking then will be of no use. If we will come to God earnestly desiring pardon, and in humility and simplicity, he will grant our requests.

I have sometimes thought it a good sign to doubt God's willingness to forgive, but "without faith it is impossible to please God." If Christ had not died for even the chief of sinners, I should despair of ever being saved, but when I think how he came to this world, and was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief," how his "soul was exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," and how he was in an "agony of soul," and "sweat, great drops of blood falling down to the ground," I cannot help weeping. God forbid that his precious blood should be shed in vain. I will trust myself in his hands, and go to him as to a father, or a dear friend, who is willing at all times to bestow his grace upon us.

We are saved by grace, through faith, but it is the gift of God. May he help us to be faithful.

T. L. WAUGH.

The following burlesque, taken from the Christian Examiner, is said to have been written by Walter Scott, one of Alexander Campbell's coadjutors. We reproduce it here, and commend it to the attention of those to whom it is addressed.—Millennial Harbinger.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF PETER,

TO THE PREACHERS AND RULERS OF CONGREGATIONS.

CHAP. I.—THE STYLE AND MANNER OF LIVING.

Now ye who are called and chosen to go forth to all nations and among people, in time present and in time to come, to preach the word, see that ye take unto yourselves marks, yea, many outward marks, whereby ye shall be known of men.

Be ye not called as men are called; but be ye called Pope, Archbishop, Archdeacon, or Divine, or Reverend, and Right Reverend, or some like holy name; so may ye show forth your honor and your calling.

And let your dwelling places be houses of splendor and edifices of cost; and let your doors be decked with plates of brass, and let your names, even your reverend titles, be graven thereon; so shall it be as a sign.

Let your garments in which you minister be garments not as the garments of men, neither let them be "seamless garments, woven throughout," but let them be robes of richest silk, and robes of fine linen, of curious device and of costly workmanship; and have ye robes of black and robes of white, that ye may change the one for the other; so shall ye show forth your wisdom and humility.

Let your fare be sumptuous, not plain and frugal as the fare of the husbandman who tilleth the ground; but live ye on the fat of the land, taking "good heed for the morrow and wherewithal ye shall be fed."

And drink ye of the wines of the vintage brought from afar, and wines of great price; then shall the light of your spirits be the light of your countenances, and your faces shall be bright, even as the morning sun shall your faces glow in brightness; thus shall ye show forth your moderation and your temperance in all things.

Let the houses in which you preach be called churches, and let them be built in manner of great ornament without, and adorned with much cost within; with rich pillars and paints, and with fine altars and pedestals, and urns of precious stones, and cloths and velvet of scarlet, and vessels of silver.

And let there rooms for the changing of robes, and places for the precious metals and mitres.

And let the houses be divided into seats for the congregation, and let every man know his own seat; and let the first seats in front of the altar be for the rich that pay by thousands; and the next that pay by hundreds; and the last for those that pay by tens. And let the poor man sit behind the door.

And let the seats be garnished with cushions and crimson cloth, and with fine velvet; for if the houses of players and vain people who deal in idle sayings and shows of mockery, be rich and georgeous, how much more so should be the houses that are dedicated to Him "that is meek and lowly of spirit."

CHAP. II.—THE CHOOSING OF MINISTERS.

When ye go out to choose holy ones to be of your brethren, and to minister at the altar, choose ye from among the youth, even those whose judgments are not yet ripe, and whose hearts know not yet whether they incline to God or mammon.

But ye are wise, and ye shall know the inclining of their future spirits, and ye shall make them incline to the good things which the church hath in store for them that are called, even those that shall be called of you.

Then shall ye have them taught exceeding many things. They shall not be as "ignorant fishermen," or husbandmen, or men speaking one tongue, and serving God only by the knowledge of his law.

Nay, ye shall make them wise in the things of your wisdom; yea, exceedingly cunning in many mysteries, even the mysteries which you teach.

Then shall they be fitted for the "laying on of hands;" and when the Bishop hath done his office, then shall they be reverend divines.

But if any man believe that he is called of God to speak to his brethren, "without money and without price," though his soul be bowed to the will of the father, and though he work all righteousness, and "speak as with the tongue of an angel,"—if he be not made a divine by your rulers and by the hands of a Bishop, then he is not a divine, nor shall he preach.

He that is chosen of you shall give you honor, and shall be honored of men and honored of women; and verily he expects his reward.

CHAP. III.—THE PERFORMANCE OF PREACHING.

When ye go to the church to preach, go not by the retired way, where go those that would shun the crowd, but go in the highway, where go the multitude, and see that ye have on the robes of black, and take heed that your pace be measured well, and that your march be stately.

Then shall your "hearts be lifted up," even as the hearts of mighty men shall they be lifted up. And ye shall be gazed upon by the multitude, and they shall honor you; and the men shall praise you, and the women shall glorify you, even by the women shall ye be glorified.

And when ye go in, go not as the ordained, prepared only with a soul to God and with a heart to men, and a spirit filled with the Holy Ghost; but go ye with your pockets full of papers and full of divine words; even in your pockets shall your divinity be.

And let your sermon be full of "the enticing words of man's wisdom," and let it be beautified with just divisions, with tropes, and with metaphors, and with hyperbole, and apostrophe, and with interrogation, and with acclamation, and with syllogisms, and with sophisms, and throughout let declamation be.

And take good heed to your attitudes and your gestures, knowing when to bend, and when to stand erect; when to lift your right hand and when your left, and let your motions be graceful, even in your attitudes and in your gestures let your grace be. Thus shall ye be pleasing in the eyes of the people and graceful in their sight.

Let your voice at times be smooth as the stream of the valley, and soft as the breeze that waves not the bough on its bank; and at times let it swell like the wave of the ocean, or like the whirlwind on the mountain-top.

Then shall ye charm the ears of your hearers, and their hearts shall be softened, and their minds shall be astounded, and their souls shall incline unto you; and the men shall incline unto you, and likewise the women; yea, unto your sayings and unto your persons shall they be inclined.

And be ye mindful not to offend the people; rebuke ye not their sins; but when ye rebuke sin, rebuke it at a distance; and let no man apply your sayings to his own case; so shall he not be offended.

If a brother shall raise up the banner of war against brother, and christians against christians, rebuke them not; but be some of you on the one side, and some on the other; and tell the one host that God is on their side, and the other host that he is on their side; so make them bold to kill. And even among swords and lances let your black robes be seen.

Preach ye not "Peace on earth and good will to men," but preach ye glory to the victor, and victory to the brave.

If any man go into a foreign land and seize upon his fellow man, and put irons on his feet and irons on his hands, and bring him across the great deep, into bondage; nay, if he tear asunder the dearest ties of nature, the tenderest leagues of the human heart; if he tear the wife from the husband, and force the struggling infant from its mother's bleeding breast, rebuke him not!

And although he sell them into foreign slavery, to toil beneath the lash all their days, tell him not that his doings are of Antichrist; for lo! he is rich and giveth unto the church, and is esteemed pious; so shall ye not offend him, lest, peradventure, he withdraw himself from your flock.

Teach them to believe that you have the care of their souls, and that the saving mysteries are for your explaining; and when you explain your mysteries, encompass them round about with words as with a bright veil, so bright that through it no man can see.

And lo! ye shall bind the judgments of men (and more especially of women,) as with a band of iron; and ye shall make them blind in the midst of light, even as the owl is blind in the noonday sun; and behold ye shall lead them captive to your reverend wills.

CHAP. IV.—THE CLERGY'S REWARD.

"In all your gettings" get money! Now, therefore, when ye go forth on your ministerial journey, go where there are silver and gold, and where each man will pay according to his measure. For verily I say ye must get your reward.

Go ye not forth as those that have been sent, "without two coats, without gold or silver, or brass, in their purses; without scrip for their journey, or shoes, or staves;" but go ye forth in the good things of this world.

And when ye shall hear of a church that is vacant and hath no one to preach therein, then be that a call unto you, and be ye mindful of the call, and take ye charge of the flock thereof, and of the fleece thereof, even of the golden fleece.

And when ye shall have fleeced your flock and shall know of another call, and if the flock be greater, or, rather, if the fleece be greater, then greater be also unto you the call. Then shall ye leave your old flock, and of the new flock shall ye take the charge.

Those who have "freely received, let them freely give," and let not men have your words "without money, nor without price," but bargain ye for hundreds and bargain for thousands, even for thousands of silver and gold shall ye bargain.

And over and above the price for which ye have sold your service, take ye also gifts, and be ye mindful to refuse none, saying, "Lo! I have enough,"—but receive gifts from them that go in chariots, and from them that feed flocks, and from them that earn their morsel by the sweat of their brow.

Yea, take ye gifts of all, and take them in gold and in silver, and in bread; in wine and in oil, in raiment and in fine linen.

And the more that the people give you, the more will they honor you, for they shall believe that "in giving to you they are giving to the Lord;" for behold their sight shall be taken from them, and they shall be as blind as bats, and "shall know not what they do."

And ye shall wax richer and richer, and grow greater and greater, and ye shall be lifted up in your own sight, and exalted in the eyes of the multitude; and "lucre" shall be no longer "filthy" in your sight. And verily ye have your reward.

In doing these things ye shall never fail, and may abundance of gold, and silver, and bank notes, and corn, and wool, and flax, and spirits, and wine, and land, be multiplied unto you, both now and forever. Amen!

EARRINGS.

The custom of wearing earrings is said to have originated on this wise:—

"Originally, among the Hebrews, Arabs and other nations, the ears of the slaves were bored to signify the obligation of the servant to hearken to the commands of his master. Rings were afterwards invented to denote the perpetuity of his bonds, as the slave who had his ears bored was a servant forever. Thus earrings were a badge of slavery. In modern times they mean no more, perhaps, than that the person's progenitors were slaves, or perchance, that the persons themselves are the slaves of vanity and fashion."—Selected.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

NAMES FOR THE TRY COMPANY,
Emma A. Gilbert, Gerritt S. Gilbert, Frederic Thomas.

For the World's Crisis.

THE GOOD DOG TOWSER.

A LESSON FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Young friends, what do you think Towser does? When his master has a loaf of bread, or a pie, or a plate of dinner, to send to poor old Mrs. Green, Towser carries it. He never says, "Not now, mistress, or by and by, or it is too hot, or too cold, or I don't want to," as some children object when told to do an errand; but he goes, as pleased as can be. Nor does he ever touch a thing he carries, as a greedy little boy once ate up some nice jelly his mother sent by him to a sick woman.

A dog once followed Towser as he was carrying a piece of meat in his basket, smelling round, and trying to put his nose into the basket. Towser gave a big growl to frighten him off, but the dog would not go. I suppose he was very hungry. At length Towser set his basket down, turned round, and gave his troublesome companion a sound shaking, then took up his basket and trotted on. The hungry dog did not dare follow then.

When Towser reaches Mrs. Green's door, how do you think he lets her know he is there? He scratches? No. He puts his basket down, and sets up a great "bow-wow;" and Mrs. Green opens the door, and she says, "How now, Towser, you have brought me something good to eat; good dog!" Towser wags his tail as much as to say he has. She takes and empties the basket, and hands it back to him, and away he bounds; and the good old lady walks back to her little kitchen, saying in heart, "God sent the ravens to feed Elijah, and he sends Towser to feed me. He never sees the righteous forsaken, or his seed begging bread. Praise God."

Again, not long since we were passing a store about mid-day, and the owner came out with Towser at his heels and a pail in his hand. He told Towser to take the pail and carry it to the house, a few rods across the way. The dog did not whine over the command, nor curl his tail and refuse to go; no, not he. He obeyed at once, took the pail in his mouth, and away he went to the house. We watched him to see how well he fulfilled his master's orders. The door was closed, so he sat down on the piazza and waited a welcome. Five minutes passed, and no one opened the door; yet the dog was patient and faithful. Five minutes more passed, and just as he was about to leave, he was seen from the window and admitted with his charge. Faithful dog, thought I, never to refuse obedience or wait for the second bidding.

Then I thought of little Willie S——, who said to his mother, in my presence, "No, I can't do it; let Ned go, he is not doing any thing."

Think of this, little readers. Willie was less obedient than Towser; for he went cheerfully, wagging his bushy tail, and lifting his head as if to say, "I obey." Learn a good lesson from the dog, and never let it be said of you, "Towser is more obedient than Willie."

"Be kind to your mother; for when thou wast young,
Who loved thee so fondly as she?
Who caught the first accents that fell from thy tongue,
And joined in thy innocent glee."

D. F. NEWTON.

For the World's Crisis.

HE RESTS.

WILBER E. MARSH.

Sleep on, my darling lost one, sleep,
Thy mother's left alone to weep;
How deep the grief within my breast,
But, blessed thought, thou art at rest.
Oh! yes, thou'lt slumber 'neath the ground
Until the last great trump shall sound.

I saw thy form grow cold in death,
And listened to thy quick drawn breath;
At first I hoped, but hope soon fled,
They softly whispered—he is dead!
Yes, thou art dead, my noble boy,
Gone, gone thou art, my constant joy.

Thy little room, where stands thy bed,
Which oft thy boyish feet have trod,
Is still; the echoing of the door,
And thy glad footsteps on the floor,
Are hushed; and still and cold thou art,
And ceased the throbbings of thy heart.

It filled my tender heart with woe;
Thou wert my last, I loved thee so!
Child after child I've given up,
Yet still I drink of sorrow's cup;
The sod lies heaped upon thy breast,
The soft winds sigh thou art at rest.

The sun was sinking in the west,
They laid thee down to sweetly rest;
And now, my child, in deepest gloom
I weep in silence o'er thy tomb;
But sleep, my darling lost one, sleep,
Although I'm left alone to weep.

New Richmond, Pa. EMILY L. MARSH.

"I AM MY FATHER'S.

"Will you not be my little girl?" I said one day to little Nannie Wheeler; "you do not know how much I love you, and how happy I will try to make you, if you will only be my little Nannie."

She looked up earnestly in my face with her bright black eyes, and said:

"I'm father's."

"Well, Nannie, I will give you such nice things if you will be my little girl; I will give you a beautiful new dress, and a hood, and such a cunning little muff to keep Jack Frost from finding your fingers, and a little shawl, and new shoes. Now do be my little girl!"

She looked up again in the same touching manner, and said:

"I'm father's."

"O now, Nannie!" I continued more earnestly; "when poor aunt Carrie has no little girl, and father has Augusta and pet Nellie, besides Willie and Tooly. O! I will buy you a new doll, very large, with eyes 'most as bright as yours, lots of candies, and a little rocking-horse; and you shall have so many toys that I will give you a drawer on purpose to keep them in, all for yourself; and such picture-books! Dear Nannie, now do be aunt Carrie's little girl."

She again said in her quiet, simple way: "I'm father's."

Dear little girl! how few would have withstood temptation so strongly set forth! She is only three years old, and yet she could not, for any inducement held out, give up her love for her father.

Little children, we all have one Father, even "our Father who art in heaven." The world, with all its allurements, is held out to tempt us from his love; do we turn from it, and with childlike faith and love, answer, "I am Father's?"

Living friends gather around us, and would fain lead us to forget that there is One whom we must love above all others; do we turn from them and say with little Nannie, "I am my Father's?"

Comforts and luxuries are brought to us to tempt us on every side; do we take up the cross humbly, and walk in the footsteps of Him who "had not where to lay his head, and answer, "I am my Father's?"

Let us all take a lesson from little Nannie, in her unswerving love for her father. Nothing can tempt her from his side; she follows him about like a little lamb, and she nestles in his arms, and lays her precious head on his bosom. May the good Shepherd watch over her, and keep her, and when at the last great day we shall all stand before the awful tribunal of the judgment-seat, may I hear that dear voice, as unswerving in its trust in a heavenly parent as now of the earthly, answer: "I am my Father's."—Ex.

FAITH.

The subject of Ellen T——'s Sunday-school lesson was faith. "Can you tell me," asked her teacher, "what faith is?"

"No, ma'am" said Ellen; "I have looked in the lesson, and in the Bible, and in the dictionary, and I can't understand it."

"I will illustrate it," said the teacher; "A little girl was taking a sail with her father and his two servants, when a storm overtook them with lightning and thunder. The child was in the arms of one of the men in the end of the boat away from her father. Startled at the seeming danger, she stretched her little hands toward him and cried out, 'Me 'fraid, papa; me 'fraid!' 'Come to me!' said the father; and the servant placed her at his feet, where she nestled down while he attended to the management of his boat. Presently with the happiest, most satisfied smile, she looked up to her father's face and lisped, 'Now me safe, papa; now me safe!' That little girl's confidence in her father was faith; she believed he was strong enough and loving enough to shield her from the storm. All the thunder and lightning could not terrify her while she sat at her father's feet. That is just as we should feel toward God. Do you understand now, Ellen, what faith is?"

"I think I do," said Ellen; "we must believe that God is strong enough and loves us well enough to save us."

"It is that," said the teacher, "and something more. The child not only called out to her father when she was afraid, but she went to him when he bade her, and felt safe and happy. We, dear Ellen, in greater danger than she, must go to our heavenly Father,—to be saved from sin, and shielded from harm, and be made happy in our blessed confidence.

"And do you know that to understand what faith means, places you under obligations to practice it toward God in believing and casting yourself upon him—in loving and obeying him?"

Did Ellen T—— know that when her Sunday school teacher explained this truth to her understanding—when she saw the duty of believing and loving God, it was to her soul the voice of that unseen Father saying, "Come to me?"—Child at Home.

FAITH ILLUSTRATED.

Could any mature christian give a more correct idea of justification by faith than is contained in the following reply of a little child?

In "Kind Words for Children," Neweome says: I remember talking with a very little girl, to whom I put the question, "Are you a sinner?"—to which she promptly replied,

"No, sir."

"But," said I, "have you never done anything that was wrong?"

"O, yes," she replied, "a great many times."

"How then," I asked, "can you say that you are not a sinner?"

"It is tooken away," she replied.

"Who has taken it away?" I inquired again.

She replied, "I have trusted in Christ."

This was from a very little girl, not five years old. Yet, in all the conversations I have had with grown people, I never heard a more intelligent, practical idea of faith in Christ.

A KISS FOR A BLOW.—A visitor once went into a school in the city of Boston, where he saw a boy and girl on one seat, who were brother and sister. In a moment of thoughtless passion the little boy struck his sister. The little girl was provoked, and raised her hand to return the blow. Her face showed the rage that was working within, and her clenched fist was aimed at her brother, when her teacher caught her eye.

"Stop, my dear," said he; "you had better kiss your brother than strike him!"

The look and the word reached her heart. Her hand dropped. She threw her arms around his neck and kissed him. The boy was subdued. He could have stood against the blow, but he could not withstand a sister's kiss.—Ex.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.50
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CRISIS BOX, BOSTON, MASS.

MR. WARREN

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 451. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 24, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 10.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

OVER IN EDEN.

Over in Eden the bowers are green,
Fadeless the roses blossoming there;
Over the river rich beauties are seen,
Music is ringing so sweet in the air.

Pilgrim, look over, look up and rejoice,
Let the wild hurricane roar;
Soon shall we hear our dear Savior's voice,—
Courage! we're nearing the shore.

There we shall rest from the toils of this life,
There meet our loved ones again;
There be beyond earth's commotion and strife,
Free from all sorrow and pain.

Jesus is coming! the tidings I hear,
Sweeter than music to me;
Pilgrims, rejoice, your redemption draws near,
Soon over in Eden we'll be.

MARIA MATHEWS WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

WHO ARE THE TRUE CHURCH OF CHRIST?

Is there any means by which this question can be decided? and if so, what are the means by which safe conclusions can be reached without being biassed by sectarian prejudices? I answer, the testimony of Jesus must in this, as well as all other matters, be our unerring guide. It is not the church that claims to be the oldest and whose only claim to the espousal of the Redeemer is her age, that Christ will acknowledge as his chosen, but that church which has proved true to her trust and loyal to the Savior. Jesus himself hath portrayed her character and defined her attitude; and it is by such means that we may be able to recognize the church as the chaste virgin in whose garments eventually will be found neither spot nor wrinkle nor any such thing.

In considering this subject, let us confine our thoughts to these two points:

I. The character of the true church as portrayed in the New Testament.

II. The attitude of the church. And

1. In the exhibition of her moral miniature we find a number of very significant terms used, such as,—holiness, sanctification, regeneration, renewing, etc., etc. The true church, then, is made up of the holy, sanctified, regenerated, renewed ones of the earth, and as such they are always addressed in the New Testament. Take a few examples as specimens of many that might be cited.

"Unto the church of God which is at Corinth to them tha[illegible]e in Christ Jesus, called to be saints" (or holy ones, as the term saint signifies).—1 Cor. 1: 2. "Wherefore holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." Heb. 3: 1. "Jude, a servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father and preserved in Jesus Christ and called." Jude 1: 2. "Not by works of righteousness that we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Lord." Titus 3: 5.

Beloved brethren and sisters looking for the Lord, do you feel when such a miniature of the character of God's true church drawn by the hand of inspiration is held up before you, that it is like face answering to face? Are you conscious of a relationship of a divine character, based on the principle of a heaven-begotten faith, existing between you and the holy Son of God? Do you feel assured that the work of sanctification by the power of the eternal Spirit is progressing in your heart? Do you feel that you have been regenerated and renewed by the Holy Ghost, and does the Spirit of God witness with your Spirit that you are his?

These things are not only privileges of the children of God, but absolute necessities, for "without holiness no man can see the Lord." Without the putting on of the new man, who is created in righteousness and true holiness, all our exterior righteousness will prove but filthy rags. How important that we search ourselves upon these points. Many, I fear, will deceive themselves and lose the prize at last.

It is not enough for one to understand some of the cardinal doctrines of the Advent faith, or of any other system of belief, to constitute them members of the body of Christ; but there must be a work done for us and in us; the handwriting of ordinances, which was against us and contrary to us, must be blotted out, and in us there must be renewed the image of God.

Having in brief portrayed the moral likeness of the church of Christ, we pass, secondly, to consider her attitude. We have a description of this drawn by our Savior in a parable thus: "Let your loins be girded about and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord when he shall come from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh they may open unto him immediately. Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find watching." The attitude, then, of a servant occupying a position at the door with a burning lamp and girded loins, whose Master is absent and is to return from a wedding, is here brought to view by the Savior to represent the attitude of his church during his absence. Yes, it is to be that of waiting for the Lord from heaven. In this attitude he left his church, like the faithful sentinel at the door, and commanded her there to stand until he should return and receive her to himself.

The apostles understood this perfectly, and on this hope planted churches throughout the various provinces of the Roman Empire, all of which are addressed as waiting ones. Hence in Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians he says, 1: 7,—"So that ye come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." And in his letter to the Philippians (3: 20, 21),—"For our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself." And again in 1 Thess. 1: 9, 10,—"For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."

What a contrast between the church whose attitude is described in the above language and that which boasts of age, and pillows her harlot head on the bosom of civil power, declaring in her wantonness—"I sit a queen and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." She who courts the counsels of the potentates of earth rather than to abide in the covenant of her God. The true church of Christ has been clad in habiliments of mourning and celebrating a fast all the while that her Lord has been absent. Jesus said to his disciples, "The days will come that the Bridegroom shall be taken away, and then shall ye fast (mourn) in those days." But the apostate church has been glorifying herself and living deliciously. While to the announcement—"Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me," the true church responds, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus"; the apostate church only amuses herself by studying and planning schemes for worldly aggrandizement.

But so sure as this difference exists between the apostate and true church now, so sure the one is the child of perdition and the other the heir of glory. While the one maintaining a gorgeous visibility and glittering with worldly splendor shall at length like a great mill-stone be cast into the sea, and no more be found at all; the other, dwelling in nooks and corners of the earth (like gems concealed by rubbish), shall arise and shine, for her light will then have come, and the glory of the Lord will rise upon her.

O my soul! of whose household art thou? Dost thou belong to the family of the "beast and his image"? or art thou watched by the eye of Almighty God as a chosen one of his? May this be my lot, and the portion of all who love Jesus. Amen. A. ROSS.

For the World's Crisis.

GOD IS NOT PARTIAL.

Must God be called partial because his Spirit is manifested in some of his children more than others? Is it not the privilege of every child of God to receive a full flow of his infinite goodness and divine love? Does he not give the invitation to all, and say, Come, ye that are athirst, and partake of the water of life freely? It is a fountain that runs freely for all that will partake of its flowing streams. If some of his children drink deep from the fountain, untill a well of water springs up in their soul, must God be called partial? I answer nay.

We are all his children, the great mother earth our mother. God has endowed us with reason and faculties that Wisdom only could create. Truly we are fearfully and wonderfully made. The great law is given to man, and a plan of redemption provided should man break the law. Mark the infinite goodness of God. He sees man is inclined to evil, and in his mercy provides an escape; portraying to man through his word the evil of sin and the reward of the overcomer of sin, he is left to his own free choice to obey God or disregard the offer that he through his goodness hath made. God never changeth. His plan was from the beginning. But when he sees his children striving to overcome the world, praying with a pure heart, with a deep desire to serve him, he sends the Holy Comforter to strengthen and lead them to the truth. Hence we see that God is not partial, but the obedient children reap the good things of God. He seeth in secret, and rewards openly. No man hath conceived of the things that God will give to those that love him. It is not in long prayers or eloquent exhortations, if evil be in the heart. Christ says, "If a man love me and hate his brother," he is none of his, for if we offend one of his we offend him. If we defraud a brother, we defraud Christ. If we condemn one of his we condemn Christ. Then how watchful ought we to be in all manner of conversation. With what measure we mete shall it be measured to us again; and with what judgment we judge shall we be judged. Then let us be true to the laws of our own being, true to the great principle of right, true to the covenant we have made to God when we were buried to the world and arose again in a newness of life, a life in Christ, where we receive the witness that we are begotten of God to become joint heirs with Christ to receive the inheritance promised all the faithful and true children.

The question is asked, why do not I receive that Spirit you talk of? God must be partial. Go ask God the question. I can only tell what is required of us before we can receive that comforter or witness. The disciples of Jesus were humble men. Christ chose them from the world. His truth and precepts could not be received into the world without contention, strife, and persecution, but they left all and followed Jesus; persecuted, despised by the world, but they received the divine unction promised them by Christ as a comfortor.

The Spirit calls after us when we are afar off, sometimes striving for our good; if we heed its voice we become partakers of the inheritance; but if not he will not always strive with men, but leave us to ourselves to grope our way in darkness; but if we receive that gift and run well for a season and then draw back, that gift is withdrawn, and we are left without hope unto the resurrection of life.

Let us examine our hearts and see if the impurities of self-conceit, overbearance and covetousness do not cloud the heart, and shut out the impartial flow of his divine power, and not deny that power that will be manifested in every true child of God, but let us be humble, loving one another, as we see the day approaching; be just in all our dealings, then love will flow in our hearts, charity ennoble our beings, until we are ingrafted in the image and likeness of Christ, to reign on the purified earth as happy recipients of his glorious kingdom. M. A. WOOD.

Lawrence, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

MORAL CORRUPTION.

Moral corruption signifies a depraved state of being resulting from following the corrupt desires of the flesh. And were it not that man is depraved by nature the desires of the flesh would not be sinful. By "nature," we understand that inherited nature derived by birth, and not the original nature of Adam as it came pure from the hand of Him who created him. This derived nature Paul calls "the old man," which he says is "corrupt according to the deceitful lusts." Eph. 4: 22. Hence, in reference to this natural depravity, he says, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6: 7, 8. Please remember that whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap; if he sows moral corruption, by allowing the unlawful fleshly desires to rule, then he must reap moral corruption; else he would not reap what he sowed.

Physical corruption pertains to matter, as it now exists, independent of whether a "man sows to his flesh," or sows to the Spirit. And we might as well say if a man sows tobacco seed, he shall reap skunk cabbage, as that physical corruption results from a man sowing to his flesh, in the sense referred to by Paul.

Hence we conclude that if a man sow to his flesh, he will sow moral corruption, and consequently reap the same, and so increase therein. And if he does not cease from his corrupt ways will utterly perish in his own corruption; as "the wages of sin (for moral corruption) is death."

Now Peter speaks of some that "walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness," and declares that they "shall utterly perish in their own corruption." 2 Peter 2: 12. And this cannot mean physical corruption, for that is something pertaining to matter in general, and not to individuals, so as to be called "their own corruption." And persons who are morally corrupt might escape physical corruption, so as not to perish therein, by consuming themselves by fire, or even committing suicide in any way, so as to die before the process of corruption had so worked on their physical organization as to produce death.

But moral corruption pertains to individuals, and "their own corruption" is that which they reap by sowing to the flesh; and hence, in whatever way they shall perish, they will utterly perish in their own corruption. Therefore we may repeat the words of Paul, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, (which ends in death); but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." WM. HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

FORGIVING ONE ANOTHER.

We often read and hear remarks upon forgiving one another, but seldom hear of confession being expected of the transgressor, as the prophets, Christ, and the apostles have allowed it to be. The great Teacher taught his disciples to look for forgiveness as they forgave others.

On what terms are we taught to expect forgiveness? Forgiveness is promised on the terms of repentance and confession. But some one will bring up the following,—"In that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." And again, "If any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye." Rom. 5: 8; Col. 3: 13. But be it remembered that the apostle's letters are written to believers; therefore he expected they understood to forgive on the same Bible terms as they were forgiven. And as Christ hath said, "Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." There is a drawing from God, a learning of the Father, and a coming to Christ. John 6. And the test of our having come to Christ is submission to his holy will in all things; and confession is one of said things.

Our Master has taught us to pray for "our debts" to be forgiven, "as we forgive our debtors." On what terms has Christ promised to forgive the sinner's debts? Just as we have said before; on the conditions of repentance and confession. This rule is given for the church to abide by. And what a beautiful, healthful doctrine for the church! each party fulfilling their own part in an humble and Christ-like manner, and all to the glory of God the Father. Yes, and when the offender has confessed, his conscience is cleared, his God is satisfied, yea, and the offended and grieved one is filled with more love than ever to the humble penitent, and thereby their hearts are more and more knit together in love by that Spirit which makes us ready to confess and ready to forgive.

We now call the reader's attention to a few passages on this important subject. "I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the Lord; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my heart."—Ps. 32: 5. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper (in spiritual things); but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."—Prov. 28: 13. "And were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins."—Mark 1: 5. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10: 9, 10. The passages just quoted are unquestionable proof that forgiveness is on conditional terms. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—1 John 1: 9.

We next call attention to the rule and command given as to dealing with an offending brother. "Moreover, if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church (the whole when they come together): but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as as heathen man and a publican. . . . Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, Until seventy times seven."—Matt. 18: 15, 17, 21, 22. "Take heed to yourselves: if thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent, thou shalt forgive him."—Luke 17: 3, 4.

We think the above is very plain. And should the transgressor remain obstinate and hardened, and the offended one has the Spirit of God, all he can do is to pray for him or her, treating them in kindness at the same time; not going against the law our God has given—"with such an one no, not to eat."—1 Cor. 5: 11. We cannot hold communion with God and communion with those who despise the laws of Jesus.

As far as Providence marks out our path, it is the christian's privilege to walk thereby, in the spirit of humility, watchfulness and prayer. M. H. MORRISON.

New Glasgow, C. E.

For the World's Crisis.

WHO WAS IT?

Of whom it was said, "Thou madest him a little lower than the angels." Heb. 2: 7; Ps. 8: 5. Our question is an important one if we consider that its definite, positive, and unequivocal answer must of necessity determine the application of the prophet, Micah 4: 8, as to what is meant by the "first dominion." Should it appear as spoken of the "first Adam," who was of the earth, simply an animal or fleshly man, then "the first dominion" is spoken of in an ORDINAL sense; but if spoken of CHRIST, then it is used cardinally, i. e., as being pre-eminent, superior to, etc., answering to Paul's Jerusalem which now is, ... in bondage with her children." Gal. 4: 25; which "shall be trodden down of the Gentiles," (Luke 21: 24,); and Jerusalem which is above, 4: 26, i. e., uppermost, superior, having gotten the advantage of her adversary, who has heretofore led her a captive and had her foot upon the neck of the "free woman's" children, but now the time has come when "the tables are turned," and she that was first in order herself becomes subjugated, the children of the "free woman" having gained the ascension and the victory over their "persecutor," rising "above" the oppressor, obtain the "first" or superior "dominion," and the former oppressor becomes the "foot-stool" of the once oppressed.

But as the first Adam "was the figure of HIM who was to come" (Rom. 5: 14) so the Jerusalem "that now is," is the figure of that which is to be "above," "free;" which is our mother." Gal. 4: 24, 25. Hence, says the apostle, "unto the angels hath He (the Father) not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak." If my memory be correct the phrase here is, "oi koumene," the habitable globe. After declaring that he is speaking of "the world to come," and not of "the heavens and the earth which now are," or "the earthly house of this tabernacle," he proceeds to quote the Psalmist (8: 4–8), "What is man that thou art mindful of him? or the Son of man that thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the work of thy hands. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that HE put all in subjection under him, HE left nothing that is not put under him."

Now comes Paul's exposition of the same." "But now, we see not yet all things put under him, but we (do) see JESUS, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man, for it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." Thus we find the language applied by the "one Spirit" through the apostle of the Gentiles to JESUS, the anointed of God, and "in his times he shall show who is the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords."

"Now if any man build upon this foundation . . . . hay, wood, stubble; . . . if any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss." May the Lord help us all to build thereon, "gold, silver, precious (and living) stones," that our work may "abide" the fiery ordeal.

Olena, Ohio. G. W. STETSON.

AWAKE!

Awake! O chosen and faithful,
And see that your lamps burn bright;
For thick fall the evening shadows,
Then follows the deep, dark night.
The train hath set forth for the wedding,
The Bridegroom is on his way,
And quickly cometh the marriage,—
Awaken! and watch and pray.

—Selected.

THE WINES OF SCRIPTURE, AND THEIR USE AT THE PASSOVER, Etc.

No less than nine words are employed in the Hebrew Bible to express the different kinds of vinous beverage formerly in use; all of which kinds of beverage are expressed in our English version by the single term "wine," or by that term in connection with some other term expressive of quality. [These terms are, Yayin, a generic term, comprehending wine of all kinds. Tirosh, also a generic term, denoting the fruit of the vine in the cluster, the press, and the vat, either in the solid form of grapes, or of grape-juice expressed, (i. e.) new wine. Ausis, the fresh juice of the grape, and even of other fruit. Sobhe, inspissated wine, corresponding to the Latin sapa, or the Greek sireaum and hepsena. Hamar, unmingled wine, wine red, thick, turbid. Mesech, mixed wine; whether with water or with drugs. Shemarin, lees of wine, and sometimes preserves or jellies. Eshisha, cooked wine, or grape cake. Shechar, sweet drink, from the palm of other trees, but not from the vine.]

The term wine, therefore, as used in our English Bible, is to be regarded as a generic term; comprehending different kinds of beverage, and of very different qualities; some of which kinds were good, some bad; some to be used frequently and freely, some seldom and sparingly; and some to be utterly and at all times avoided.

By a mere comparison of the passages in which the term wine occurs, this will be rendered probable.

For it were difficult to believe that the wine by which Noah was dishonored; by which Lot was defiled; the wine which caused prophets to err in judgment, and priests to stumble and fall; the wine which occasions woe and sorrow, and wounds without cause; wine of which he who is deceived thereby, is not wise; wine which Solomon styles a mocker, and which is alluded to by One who is greater than Solomon, as a symbol of wrath; it were difficult to believe that this wine—the wine mingled by harlots, and sought by libertines, was THE VERY WINE which wisdom mingles; to which wisdom invites; wine which priests offered in sacrifice; evangelists dispensed at communion-tables, and which, making glad the heart of man, was a fit emblem of the mercies of God.

There is a wine of some sort spoken of very frequently in the Bible, with express disapprobation, or in connection with drunken feasts, or as an emblem of temporal and eternal judgment. And there is also a wine spoken of perhaps as frequently with express approbation, or in connection with religious festivals, or as an emblem of temporal and eternal blessings.

That wines of such different qualities, and presented in such different aspects, and even in such frequent and frightful contrast, were one and the same article, in one and the same state, would seem, even though history, both sacred and profane, had been silent, quite incredible. How much more so now, that in place of silence, history, both sacred and profane, hath spoken; and spoken not of their identity, but known and marked dissimilarity.

The fruit of the vine, in the state it exists in the vat, the vineyard, and the cluster, is called in the original by the sacred writers of the Old Testament, tirosh, yayin, ausis, khemer, etc., in the Greek translation of these terms by the seventy, it is called oinon, in the Latin translation vinum, and in the English, wine. And it is further apparent that the fruit of the vine, in the same state, is called by the same name by profane writers; hence we meet in Aristotle with oinon, wine of the vat; in Livy, with vinum, wine of the field; and in Cato as well as Isaiah, with vinum pendens, wine of the cluster; and here, also, when we do so meet with these terms, though the presumption of course will be that they refer to the fruit of the vine in some state, it can only be determined in which by considering the attendant circumstances; and for the obvious reason, that the terms yayin, oinos, and vinum, are generic terms, and embrace in their comprehensive meaning the fruit of the vine or pure blood of the grape, in all of the states in which it exists.

But whatever question may be raised about the quality of other kinds of wine, there can be no question about this pendant wine of Cato; for it is the wine of the cluster of Isaiah. This wine must be good wine, for it is wine approved of God; and there was, as we have seen, a time when it was approved of man also; and however it may now be spoken against, we believe it still to be not the less worthy of commendation on that account, because we believe it still to be what it then was (in the sense in which we use the terms,) unintoxicating wine.

We have shown that different kinds of wine existed, and were known to exist from remote antiquity, some of which are salubrious, sober wines, and some deleterious and intoxicating.

Since these things are so, since different kinds of wine exist, and are known to have existed from remote antiquity—to ascertain which of these, whether salubrious or sober, or insalubrious and intoxicating wine was used by our Lord in the sacramental supper, it will be of use first to ascertain which of these kinds of wine was used at the paschal supper.

And here it is obvious to mark that the fruit of the vine in none of its forms constituted any part of the original institution, as will appear from the thirteenth chapter of Exodus. On the contrary, on the fourteenth of Nisan, a lamb without blemish, was by each family to be eaten, with bitter herbs; eaten standing with their loins girded, their shoes on their feet, their staves in their hands, and eaten in haste.

In whatever form the fruit of the vine was subsequently used, it was probably introduced after the settlement in Canaan—when the guests, in place of standing (as appears from John 12: 23,) reclined on their left arm on couches placed round the table—a posture which according to the writers in the Talmud, was an emblem of that rest and freedom which God had granted to his people.

But at whatever time wine was introduced at the paschal supper, it might be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the kind selected would be in keeping with the nature of the ordinance. And this it should seem could not well be intoxicating wine, since this would but ill accord with a solemnity in which bitter herbs were to be eaten, and from which leaven was to be excluded. "Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee in all thy quarters."

Gesenius declares that the Hebrew word which the English translators have rendered leaven, applies to wine as well as bread.

"The word chomets," says Mr. Herschell, a converted Jew, "has a wider signification than that which is generally attached to 'leaven,' by which it is rendered in the English Bible, and applies to the fermentation of corn in any form, to beer, and to all fermented liquors."

The Rev. C. F. Frey says, "that during the Passover Jews dare not drink any liquor made from grain, nor any that has passed through the process of fermentation."

The testimony of Mr. Frey is corroborated by another Hebrew writer who declares "that their drink during the time of the feast is either pure water or raisin wine prepared by themselves, but no kind of leaven must be mixed therein."

And M. M. Noah, Esq., says in a recent publication: "unfermented liquor or wine free from alcohol was alone used in those times, as it is used at the present day at the Passover."

But not to insist on this. Whatever the kind of wine made use of at the paschal supper, it was always, if the writers in the Talmud or even the christian fathers are to be credited, diluted with water.

But if the wine made use of in the paschal supper was diluted with water, then probably the wine made use of at the supper of our Lord, was also diluted.

For we are told that, having on the night before his passion retired to an inner chamber at Jerusalem and celebrated for the last time the paschal supper, he took bread and the cup, and having blessed and broke the one, and poured out the other, he gave both to his disciples in token of his love and as memorials of his death; which solemnity was thereafter to be repeated, that by its repetition his death might be showed forth until his second coming.

As our Lord in this latter ordinance, for aught that appears, made use of the elements previously prepared for the former ordinance, it may fairly be concluded, that water was mingled in the wine contained in the cup made use of in the former, as it was mingled in the wine contained in the cup made use of in the latter.

And thus the fathers of the church believed, and the early councils authoritatively ordered. But if the wine made use of in these offices of religion was not intoxicating, why was it diluted with water? Does not its dilution prove that it was intoxicating wine? Certainly not. Other qualities apart from its contained alcohol may have rendered dilution necessary. The unintoxicating wines of antiquity were often thick and even ropy, and therefore required to be diluted to fit them for convenient and sometimes for healthful and pleasurable use.

Since then the intoxicating wines of antiquity required dilution, and since the wines made use of in the offices of religion were actually diluted, the fact of their dilution increases rather than diminishes the presumption that the wines so made use of were unintoxicating wines.

On the whole, since the bread of the Passover must be unleavened, that is, unfermented; since the use, nay, even the possession of leaven was prohibited during this festival; since many of the modern Jews, who may be supposed to understand the usages of their fathers better than we do, refuse even now the use of fermented wine in the cup of blessing which they bless—to say the least, it is not improbable that unfermented wine as well as unfermented bread was made use of at the paschal supper, and if at the paschal supper then probably at the supper of our Lord.

Nor let it be forgotten, that however much may of late have been said by the disciples about fermented, that is, intoxicating wine, the Master has said nothing of the use of wine of any kind in that solemnity. Nor is the term wine ever employed by the sacred writers in connection with the sacramental supper. It was the "CUP" that Jesus Christ gave to his disciples; and neither fermented nor unfermented wine, but the "FRUIT OF THE VINE" are the terms by which the contents of that cup are, by him that poured it out, designated. And surely the pure blood of the grape, as it is expressed from the cluster, is quite as intelligible and striking an emblem of the blood of Christ, and quite as truly the fruit of the vine, as that same blood of the grape will be after continued fermentation shall have converted a nutritious and healthful into an intoxicating and deleterious beverage. And if it be so, then surely it may be used on sacramental occasions without scruple and without offence.

As to the dilution of the paschal and sacramental wine with water, the usage may be said to have been peculiarly pertinent and proper, if the wine itself was unfermented wine, because such wine often, if not usually, required dilution.

If these things are so—if the wine used in primitive times and on sacred occasions, and whether fermented or unfermented, was diluted with water—then how inconclusive the argument drawn from such usage, in favor of the use, as a common beverage, of fermented wine, and without dilution!—Dr. Nott's Temperance Lectures.

For the World's Crisis.

SCRIPTURE, AND ITS MEANING.

Rev. 13: 11;—"And I beheld another beast (p[illegible]ical power) coming up out of the earth (coming up in a new country, not from among the people); and he had two horns (the two executives—Church and State) like a lamb (one the State, professing to extend liberty; the other the Church, professing to be the ambassadors of the Lamb of God); and he spake as a dragon" (in enacting laws of vengeance).

12th verse;—"And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast (Roman power) before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship (see ver. 4) the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed."

13th v.;—"And he doeth great wonders (in the arts and sciences), so that he maketh fire (electricity) to come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men" (beheld by men with wonder).

14th v.;—"And he deceiveth them that dwell on the earth (causing them to believe in the prosperity and future glory of this world, thus constituting himself the false prophet: see 19th chap., 20th ver.) by those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast (wonders performed, looked upon by other people as miraculous), saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image (form of government) to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live."

15th v.;—"And he had power to give life (to put in operation) unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak (make laws), and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed" (making death the penalty for treason).

16th v.;—"And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their forehead" (to take the oath to support the government, either by subscribing to it or receiving it verbally).

17th v.;—"And that no man might buy or sell (might have the benefit of the law, to legalize their business), save he that had the mark, or the name (professional church name of the government) of the beast, or the number of his name" (those taking the name being numbered).

18th v.;—"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast (divisions, or church names): for it is the number of a man); and his number is six hundred threescore and six" (the number of professed churches, trusting in physical power, being married again to the laws, and becoming daughters of the mother of harlots).

W. N. FISK.

For the World's Crisis.

DO YOU KNOW JESUS? OR, THE DYING CHRISTIAN.

It was near the close of a beautiful day that we were called in to see old father Patterson fall asleep in Christ. Father Patterson had lived to an extreme old age, so much so that he had lost his reason, in a measure; and as he drew near life's closing scene, it seemed wholly to forsake him. His children were sent for, and gathered around his dying couch; but he knew them not. In vain they besought him to call them by name, and to tell them that he recognized them. But the answer was, "I know you not." At last the companion of his bosom, the wife of his youth, tottered up to his bed, and bending over him, her hot tears falling upon his cold cheek, whispered,

"Don't you know me, your Mary?" There was the same answer as to the children:

"I don't know you."

While the aged wife and mother stood by the side of her dying husband, she thought she would ask him if he knew his Lord and Master. So she bent over him once again and whispered,

"Do you know Jesus?" The eye that was fast losing its light seemed to brighten, and a heavenly smile played about his lips as he repeated,

"Jesus! Jesus! Yes, I know that dear friend. He it is on whom my hopes of heaven depend."

Those were his last words. Thus passed away a good man from the earth. But, thank God, he will come up in the last day, at the resurrection of the dead. R. H. NYE.

Canaan, Me.

☞ No man will fully find out what he is by a mere survey of himself. He must explore if he would know himself.

MR. WARREN

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 451. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 24, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 10.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

OVER IN EDEN.

Over in Eden the bowers are green,
 Fadeless the roses blossoming there;
Over the river rich beauties are seen,
 Music is ringing so sweet in the air.

Pilgrim, look over, look up and rejoice,
 Let the wild hurricane roar;
Soon shall we hear our dear Savior's voice,—
 Courage! we're nearing the shore.

There we shall rest from the toils of this life,
 There meet our loved ones again;
There be beyond earth's commotion and strife,
 Free from all sorrow and pain.

Jesus is coming! the tidings I hear,
 Sweeter than music to me;
Pilgrims, rejoice, your redemption draws near,
 Soon over in Eden we'll be.

MARIA MATHEWS WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

WHO ARE THE TRUE CHURCH OF CHRIST?

Is there any means by which this question can be decided? and if so, what are the means by which safe conclusions can be reached without being biassed by sectarian prejudices? I answer, the testimony of Jesus must in this, as well as all other matters, be our unerring guide. It is not the church that claims to be the oldest and whose only claim to the espousal of the Redeemer is her age, that Christ will acknowledge as his chosen, but that church which has proved true to her trust and loyal to the Savior. Jesus himself hath portrayed her character and defined her attitude; and it is by such means that we may be able to recognize the church as the chaste virgin in whose garments eventually will be found neither spot nor wrinkle nor any such thing.

In considering this subject, let us confine our thoughts to these two points:

I. The character of the true church as portrayed in the New Testament.

II. The attitude of the church. And

1. In the exhibition of her moral miniature we find a number of very significant terms used, such as,—holiness, sanctification, regeneration, renewing, etc., etc. The true church, then, is made up of the holy, sanctified, regenerated, renewed ones of the earth, and as such they are always addressed in the New Testament. Take a few examples as specimens of many that might be cited.

"Unto the church of God which is at Corinth to them that are in Christ Jesus, called to be saints" (or holy ones, as the term saint signifies).—1 Cor. 1: 2. "Wherefore holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." Heb. 3: 1. "Jude, a servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father and preserved in Jesus Christ and called." Jude 1: 2. "Not by works of righteousness that we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost, which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Lord." Titus 3: 5.

Beloved brethren and sisters looking for the Lord, do you feel when such a miniature of the character of God's true church drawn by the hand of inspiration is held up before you, that it is like face answering to face? Are you conscious of a relationship of a divine character, based on the principle of a heaven-begotten faith, existing between you and the holy Son of God? Do you feel assured that the work of sanctification by the power of the eternal Spirit is progressing in your heart? Do you feel that you have been regenerated and renewed by the Holy Ghost, and does the Spirit of God witness with your Spirit that you are his?

These things are not only privileges of the children of God, but absolute necessities, for "without holiness no man can see the Lord." Without the putting on of the new man, who is created in righteousness and true holiness, all our exterior righteousness will prove but filthy rags. How important that we search ourselves upon these points. Many, I fear, will deceive themselves and lose the prize at last.

It is not enough for one to understand some of the cardinal doctrines of the Advent faith, or of any other system of belief, to constitute them members of the body of Christ; but there must be a work done for us and in us; the handwriting of ordinances, which was against us and contrary to us, must be blotted out, and in us there must be renewed the image of God.

Having in brief portrayed the moral likeness of the church of Christ, we pass, secondly, to consider her attitude. We have a description of this drawn by our Savior in a parable thus: "Let your loins be girded about and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord when he shall come from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh they may open unto him immediately. Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find watching." The attitude, then, of a servant occupying a position at the door with a burning lamp and girded loins, whose Master is absent and is to return from a wedding, is here brought to view by the Savior to represent the attitude of his church during his absence. Yes, it is to be that of waiting for the Lord from heaven. In this attitude he left his church, like the faithful sentinel at the door, and commanded her there to stand until he should return and receive her to himself.

The apostles understood this perfectly, and on this hope planted churches throughout the various provinces of the Roman Empire, all of which are addressed as waiting ones. Hence in Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians he says, 1: 7,—"So that ye come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." And in his letter to the Philippians (3: 20, 21),—"For our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself." And again in 1 Thess. 1: 9, 10,—"For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come."

What a contrast between the church whose attitude is described in the above language and that which boasts of age, and pillows her harlot head on the bosom of civil power, declaring in her wantonness—"I sit a queen and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow." She who courts the counsels of the potentates of earth rather than to abide in the covenant of her God. The true church of Christ has been clad in habiliments of mourning and celebrating a fast all the while that her Lord has been absent. Jesus said to his disciples, "The days will come that the Bridegroom shall be taken away, and then shall ye fast (mourn) in those days." But the apostate church has been glorifying herself and living deliciously. While to the announcement—"Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me," the true church responds, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus"; the apostate church only amuses herself by studying and planning schemes for worldly aggrandizement.

But so sure as this difference exists between the apostate and true church now, so sure the one is the child of perdition and the other the heir of glory. While the one maintaining a gorgeous visibility and glittering with worldly splendor shall at length like a great mill-stone be cast into the sea, and no more be found at all; the other, dwelling in nooks and corners of the earth (like gems concealed by rubbish), shall arise and shine, for her light will then have come, and the glory of the Lord will rise upon her.

O my soul! of whose household art thou? Dost thou belong to the family of the "beast and his image"? or art thou watched by the eye of Almighty God as a chosen one of his? May this be my lot, and the portion of all who love Jesus. Amen. A. ROSS.

For the World's Crisis.

GOD IS NOT PARTIAL.

Must God be called partial because his Spirit is manifested in some of his children more than others? Is it not the privilege of every child of God to receive a full flow of his infinite goodness and divine love? Does he not give the invitation to all, and say, Come, ye that are athirst, and partake of the water of life freely? It is a fountain that runs freely for all that will partake of its flowing streams. If some of his children drink deep from the fountain, untill a well of water springs up in their soul, must God be called partial? I answer nay.

We are all his children, the great mother earth our mother. God has endowed us with reason and faculties that Wisdom only could create. Truly we are fearfully and wonderfully made. The great law is given to man, and a plan of redemption provided should man break the law. Mark the infinite goodness of God. He sees man is inclined to evil, and in his mercy provides an escape; portraying to man through his word the evil of sin and the reward of the overcomer of sin, he is left to his own free choice to obey God or disregard the offer that he through his goodness hath made. God never changeth. His plan was from the beginning. But when he sees his children striving to overcome the world, praying with a pure heart, with a deep desire to serve him, he sends the Holy Comforter to strengthen and lead them to the truth. Hence we see that God is not partial, but the obedient children reap the good things of God. He seeth in secret, and rewards openly. No man hath conceived of the things that God will give to those that love him. It is not in long prayers or eloquent exhortations, if evil be in the heart. Christ says, "If a man love me and hate his brother," he is none of his, for if we offend one of his we offend him. If we defraud a brother, we defraud Christ. If we condemn one of his we condemn Christ. Then how watchful ought we to be in all manner of conversation. With what measure we mete shall it be measured to us again; and with what judgment we judge shall we be judged. Then let us be true to the laws of our own being, true to the great principle of right, true to the covenant we have made to God when we were buried to the world and arose again in a newness of life, a life in Christ, where we receive the witness that we are begotten of God to become joint heirs with Christ to receive the inheritance promised all the faithful and true children.

The question is asked, why do not I receive that Spirit you talk of? God must be partial. Go ask God the question. I can only tell what is required of us before we can receive that comforter or witness. The disciples of Jesus were humble men. Christ chose them from the world. His truth and precepts could not be received into the world without contention, strife, and persecution, but they left all and followed Jesus; persecuted, despised by the world, but they received the divine unction promised them by Christ as a comfortor.

The Spirit calls after us when we are afar off, sometimes striving for our good; if we heed its voice we become partakers of the inheritance; but if not he will not always strive with men, but leave us to ourselves to grope our way in darkness; but if we receive that gift and run well for a season and then draw back, that gift is withdrawn, and we are left without hope unto the resurrection of life.

Let us examine our hearts and see if the impurities of self-conceit, overbearance and covetousness do not cloud the heart, and shut out the impartial flow of his divine power, and not deny that power that will be manifested in every true child of God, but let us be humble, loving one another, as we see the day approaching; be just in all our dealings, then love will flow in our hearts, charity ennoble our beings, until we are ingrafted in the image and likeness of Christ, to reign on the purified earth as happy recipients of his glorious kingdom. M. A. WOOD.

Lawrence, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

MORAL CORRUPTION.

Moral corruption signifies a depraved state of being resulting from following the corrupt desires of the flesh. And were it not that man is depraved by nature the desires of the flesh would not be sinful. By "nature," we understand that inherited nature derived by birth, and not the original nature of Adam as it came pure from the hand of Him who created him. This derived nature Paul calls "the old man," which he says is "corrupt according to the deceitful lusts." Eph. 4: 22. Hence, in reference to this natural depravity, he says, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6: 7, 8. Please remember that whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap; if he sows moral corruption, by allowing the unlawful fleshly desires to rule, then he must reap moral corruption; else he would not reap what he sowed.

Physical corruption pertains to matter, as it now exists, independent of whether a "man sows to his flesh," or sows to the Spirit. And we might as well say if a man sows tobacco seed, he shall reap skunk cabbage, as that physical corruption results from a man sowing to his flesh, in the sense referred to by Paul.

Hence we conclude that if a man sow to his flesh, he will sow moral corruption, and consequently reap the same, and so increase therein. And if he does not cease from his corrupt ways will utterly perish in his own corruption; as "the wages of sin (for moral corruption) is death."

Now Peter speaks of some that "walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness," and declares that they "shall utterly perish in their own corruption." 2 Peter 2: 12. And this cannot mean physical corruption, for that is something pertaining to matter in general, and not to individuals, so as to be called "their own corruption." And persons who are morally corrupt might escape physical corruption, so as not to perish therein, by consuming themselves by fire, or even committing suicide in any way, so as to die before the process of corruption had so worked on their physical organization as to produce death.

But moral corruption pertains to individuals, and "their own corruption" is that which they reap by sowing to the flesh; and hence, in whatever way they shall perish, they will utterly perish in their own corruption. Therefore we may repeat the words of Paul, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, (which ends in death); but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." WM. HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

FORGIVING ONE ANOTHER.

We often read and hear remarks upon forgiving one another, but seldom hear of confession being expected of the transgressor, as the prophets, Christ, and the apostles have allowed it to be. The great Teacher taught his disciples to look for forgiveness as they forgave others.

On what terms are we taught to expect forgiveness? Forgiveness is promised on the terms of repentance and confession. But some one will bring up the following,—"In that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." And again, "If any man have a quarrel against any, even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye." Rom. 5: 8; Col. 3: 13. But be it remembered that the apostle's letters are written to believers; therefore he expected they understood to forgive on the same Bible terms as they were forgiven. And as Christ hath said, "Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." There is a drawing from God, a learning of the Father, and a coming to Christ. John 6. And the test of our having come to Christ is submission to his holy will in all things; and confession is one of said things.

Our Master has taught us to pray for "our debts" to be forgiven, "as we forgive our debtors." On what terms has Christ promised to forgive the sinner's debts? Just as we have said before; on the conditions of repentance and confession. This rule is given for the church to abide by. And what a beautiful, healthful doctrine for the church! each party fulfilling their own part in an humble and Christ-like manner, and all to the glory of God the Father. Yes, and when the offender has confessed, his conscience is cleared, his God is satisfied, yea, and the offended and grieved one is filled with more love than ever to the humble penitent, and thereby their hearts are more and more knit together in love by that Spirit which makes us ready to confess and ready to forgive.

We now call the reader's attention to a few passages on this important subject. "I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the Lord; and thou forgavest the iniquity of my heart."—Ps. 32: 5. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper (in spiritual things); but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."—Prov. 28: 13. "And were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins."—Mark 1: 5. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10: 9, 10. The passages just quoted are unquestionable proof that forgiveness is on conditional terms. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—1 John 1: 9.

We next call attention to the rule and command given as to dealing with an offending brother. "Moreover, if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church (the whole when they come together): but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as as heathen man and a publican. . . . Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but, Until seventy times seven."—Matt. 18: 15, 17, 21, 22. "Take heed to yourselves: if thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent, thou shalt forgive him."—Luke 17: 3, 4.

We think the above is very plain. And should the transgressor remain obstinate and hardened, and the offended one has the Spirit of God, all he can do is to pray for him or her, treating them in kindness at the same time; not going against the law our God has given—"with such an one no, not to eat."—1 Cor. 5: 11. We cannot hold communion with God and communion with those who despise the laws of Jesus.

As far as Providence marks out our path, it is the christian's privilege to walk thereby, in the spirit of humility, watchfulness and prayer. M. H. MORRISON.

New Glasgow, C. E.

For the World's Crisis.

WHO WAS IT?

Of whom it was said, "Thou madest him a little lower than the angels." Heb. 2: 7; Ps. 8: 5. Our question is an important one if we consider that its definite, positive, and unequivocal answer must of necessity determine the application of the prophet, Micah 4: 8, as to what is meant by the "first dominion." Should it appear as spoken of the "first Adam," who was of the earth, simply an animal or fleshly man, then "the first dominion" is spoken of in an ORDINAL sense; but if spoken of CHRIST, then it is used cardinally, i. e., as being pre-eminent, superior to, etc., answering to Paul's Jerusalem which now is, ... in bondage with her children." Gal. 4: 25; which "shall be trodden down of the Gentiles," (Luke 21: 24,); and Jerusalem which is above, 4: 26, i. e., uppermost, superior, having gotten the advantage of her adversary, who has heretofore led her a captive and had her foot upon the neck of the "free woman's" children, but now the time has come when "the tables are turned," and she that was first in order herself becomes subjugated, the children of the "free woman" having gained the ascension and the victory over their "persecutor," rising "above" the oppressor, obtain the "first" or superior "dominion," and the former oppressor becomes the "foot-stool" of the once oppressed.

But as the first Adam "was the figure of HIM who was to come" (Rom. 5: 14) so the Jerusalem "that now is," is the figure of that which is to be "above," "free;" which is our mother." Gal. 4: 24, 25. Hence, says the apostle, "unto the angels hath He (the Father) not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak." If my memory be correct the phrase here is, "oi koumene," the habitable globe. After declaring that he is speaking of "the world to come," and not of "the heavens and the earth which now are," or "the earthly house of this tabernacle," he proceeds to quote the Psalmist (8: 4–8), "What is man that thou art mindful of him? or the Son of man that thou visitest him? Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honor, and didst set him over the work of thy hands. Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that HE put all in subjection under him, HE left nothing that is not put under him."

Now comes Paul's exposition of the same." "But now, we see not yet all things put under him, but we (do) see JESUS, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man, for it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." Thus we find the language applied by the "one Spirit" through the apostle of the Gentiles to JESUS, the anointed of God, and "in his times he shall show who is the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords."

"Now if any man build upon this foundation . . . . hay, wood, stubble; . . . if any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss." May the Lord help us all to build thereon, "gold, silver, precious (and living) stones," that our work may "abide" the fiery ordeal.

Olena, Ohio. G. W. STETSON.

AWAKE!

Awake! O chosen and faithful,
 And see that your lamps burn bright;
For thick fall the evening shadows,
 Then follows the deep, dark night.
The train hath set forth for the wedding,
 The Bridegroom is on his way,
And quickly cometh the marriage,—
 Awaken! and watch and pray.

—Selected.

THE WINES OF SCRIPTURE, AND THEIR USE AT THE PASSOVER, Etc.

No less than nine words are employed in the Hebrew Bible to express the different kinds of vinous beverage formerly in use; all of which kinds of beverage are expressed in our English version by the single term "wine," or by that term in connection with some other term expressive of quality. [These terms are, Yayin, a generic term, comprehending wine of all kinds. Tirosh, also a generic term, denoting the fruit of the vine in the cluster, the press, and the vat, either in the solid form of grapes, or of grape-juice expressed, (i. e.) new wine. Ausis, the fresh juice of the grape, and even of other fruit. Sobhe, inspissated wine, corresponding to the Latin sapa, or the Greek sireaum and hepsena. Hamar, unmingled wine, wine red, thick, turbid. Mesech, mixed wine; whether with water or with drugs. Shemarin, lees of wine, and sometimes preserves or jellies. Eshisha, cooked wine, or grape cake. Shechar, sweet drink, from the palm of other trees, but not from the vine.]

The term wine, therefore, as used in our English Bible, is to be regarded as a generic term; comprehending different kinds of beverage, and of very different qualities; some of which kinds were good, some bad; some to be used frequently and freely, some seldom and sparingly; and some to be utterly and at all times avoided.

By a mere comparison of the passages in which the term wine occurs, this will be rendered probable.

For it were difficult to believe that the wine by which Noah was dishonored; by which Lot was defiled; the wine which caused prophets to err in judgment, and priests to stumble and fall; the wine which occasions woe and sorrow, and wounds without cause; wine of which he who is deceived thereby, is not wise; wine which Solomon styles a mocker, and which is alluded to by One who is greater than Solomon, as a symbol of wrath; it were difficult to believe that this wine—the wine mingled by harlots, and sought by libertines, was THE VERY WINE which wisdom mingles; to which wisdom invites; wine which priests offered in sacrifice; evangelists dispensed at communion-tables, and which, making glad the heart of man, was a fit emblem of the mercies of God.

There is a wine of some sort spoken of very frequently in the Bible, with express disapprobation, or in connection with drunken feasts, or as an emblem of temporal and eternal judgment. And there is also a wine spoken of perhaps as frequently with express approbation, or in connection with religious festivals, or as an emblem of temporal and eternal blessings.

That wines of such different qualities, and presented in such different aspects, and even in such frequent and frightful contrast, were one and the same article, in one and the same state, would seem, even though history, both sacred and profane, had been silent, quite incredible. How much more so now, that in place of silence, history, both sacred and profane, hath spoken; and spoken not of their identity, but known and marked dissimilarity.

The fruit of the vine, in the state it exists in the vat, the vineyard, and the cluster, is called in the original by the sacred writers of the Old Testament, tirosh, yayin, ausis, hhemer, etc., in the Greek translation of these terms by the seventy, it is called oinon, in the Latin translation vinum, and in the English, wine. And it is further apparent that the fruit of the vine, in the same state, is called by the same name by profane writers; hence we meet in Aristotle with oinon, wine of the vat; in Livy, with vinum, wine of the field; and in Cato as well as Isaiah, with vinum pendens, wine of the cluster; and here, also, when we do so meet with these terms, though the presumption of course will be that they refer to the fruit of the vine in some state, it can only be determined in which by considering the attendant circumstances; and for the obvious reason, that the terms yayin, oinos, and vinum, are generic terms, and embrace in their comprehensive meaning the fruit of the vine or pure blood of the grape, in all of the states in which it exists.

But whatever question may be raised about the quality of other kinds of wine, there can be no question about this pendant wine of Cato; for it is the wine of the cluster of Isaiah. This wine must be good wine, for it is wine approved of God; and there was, as we have seen, a time when it was approved of man also; and however it may now be spoken against, we believe it still to be not the less worthy of commendation on that account, because we believe it still to be what it then was (in the sense in which we use the terms,) unintoxicating wine.

We have shown that different kinds of wine existed, and were known to exist from remote antiquity, some of which are salubrious, sober wines, and some deleterious and intoxicating.

Since these things are so, since different kinds of wine exist, and are known to have existed from remote antiquity—to ascertain which of these, whether salubrious or sober, or insalubrious and intoxicating wine was used by our Lord in the sacramental supper, it will be of use first to ascertain which of these kinds of wine was used at the paschal supper.

And here it is obvious to mark that the fruit of the vine in none of its forms constituted any part of the original institution, as will appear from the thirteenth chapter of Exodus. On the contrary, on the fourteenth of Nisan, a lamb without blemish, was by each family to be eaten, with bitter herbs; eaten standing with their loins girded, their shoes on their feet, their staves in their hands, and eaten in haste.

In whatever form the fruit of the vine was subsequently used, it was probably introduced after the settlement in Canaan—when the guests, in place of standing (as appears from John 12: 23,) reclined on their left arm on couches placed round the table—a posture which according to the writers in the Talmud, was an emblem of that rest and freedom which God had granted to his people.

But at whatever time wine was introduced at the paschal supper, it might be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the kind selected would be in keeping with the nature of the ordinance. And this it should seem could not well be intoxicating wine, since this would but ill accord with a solemnity in which bitter herbs were to be eaten, and from which leaven was to be excluded. "Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days; and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee in all thy quarters."

Gesenius declares that the Hebrew word which the English translators have rendered leaven, applies to wine as well as bread.

"The word chomets," says Mr. Herschell, a converted Jew, "has a wider signification than that which is generally attached to 'leaven,' by which it is rendered in the English Bible, and applies to the fermentation of corn in any form, to beer, and to all fermented liquors."

The Rev. C. F. Frey says, "that during the Passover Jews dare not drink any liquor made from grain, nor any that has passed through the process of fermentation."

The testimony of Mr. Frey is corroborated by another Hebrew writer who declares "that their drink during the time of the feast is either pure water or raisin wine prepared by themselves, but no kind of leaven must be mixed therein."

And M. M. Noah, Esq., says in a recent publication: "unfermented liquor or wine free from alcohol was alone used in those times, as it is used at the present day at the Passover."

But not to insist on this. Whatever the kind of wine made use of at the paschal supper, it was always, if the writers in the Talmud or even the christian fathers are to be credited, diluted with water.

But if the wine made use of in the paschal supper was diluted with water, then probably the wine made use of at the supper of our Lord, was also diluted.

For we are told that, having on the night before his passion retired to an inner chamber at Jerusalem and celebrated for the last time the paschal supper, he took bread and the cup, and having blessed and broke the one, and poured out the other, he gave both to his disciples in token of his love and as memorials of his death; which solemnity was thereafter to be repeated, that by its repetition his death might be showed forth until his second coming.

As our Lord in this latter ordinance, for aught that appears, made use of the elements previously prepared for the former ordinance, it may fairly be concluded, that water was mingled in the wine contained in the cup made use of in the former, as it was mingled in the wine contained in the cup made use of in the latter.

And thus the fathers of the church believed, and the early councils authoritatively ordered. But if the wine made use of in these offices of religion was not intoxicating, why was it diluted with water? Does not its dilution prove that it was intoxicating wine? Certainly not. Other qualities apart from its contained alcohol may have rendered dilution necessary. The unintoxicating wines of antiquity were often thick and even ropy, and therefore required to be diluted to fit them for convenient and sometimes for healthful and pleasurable use.

Since then the intoxicating wines of antiquity required dilution, and since the wines made use of in the offices of religion were actually diluted, the fact of their dilution increases rather than diminishes the presumption that the wines so made use of were unintoxicating wines.

On the whole, since the bread of the Passover must be unleavened, that is, unfermented; since the use, nay, even the possession of leaven was prohibited during this festival; since many of the modern Jews, who may be supposed to understand the usages of their fathers better than we do, refuse even now the use of fermented wine in the cup of blessing which they bless—to say the least, it is not improbable that unfermented wine as well as unfermented bread was made use of at the paschal supper, and if at the paschal supper then probably at the supper of our Lord.

Nor let it be forgotten, that however much may of late have been said by the disciples about fermented, that is, intoxicating wine, the Master has said nothing of the use of wine of any kind in that solemnity. Nor is the term wine ever employed by the sacred writers in connection with the sacramental supper. It was the "CUP" that Jesus Christ gave to his disciples; and neither fermented nor unfermented wine, but the "FRUIT OF THE VINE" are the terms by which the contents of that cup are, by him that poured it out, designated. And surely the pure blood of the grape, as it is expressed from the cluster, is quite as intelligible and striking an emblem of the blood of Christ, and quite as truly the fruit of the vine, as that same blood of the grape will be after continued fermentation shall have converted a nutritious and healthful into an intoxicating and deleterious beverage. And if it be so, then surely it may be used on sacramental occasions without scruple and without offence.

As to the dilution of the paschal and sacramental wine with water, the usage may be said to have been peculiarly pertinent and proper, if the wine itself was unfermented wine, because such wine often, if not usually, required dilution.

If these things are so—if the wine used in primitive times and on sacred occasions, and whether fermented or unfermented, was diluted with water—then how inconclusive the argument drawn from such usage, in favor of the use, as a common beverage, of fermented wine, and without dilution!—Dr. Nott's Temperance Lectures.

For the World's Crisis.

SCRIPTURE, AND ITS MEANING.

Rev. 13: 11;—"And I beheld another beast (physical power) coming up out of the earth (coming up in a new country, not from among the people); and he had two horns (the two executives—Church and State) like a lamb (one the State, professing to extend liberty; the other the Church, professing to be the ambassadors of the Lamb of God); and he spake as a dragon" (in enacting laws of vengeance).

12th verse;—"And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast (Roman power) before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship (see ver. 4) the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed."

13th v.;—"And he doeth great wonders (in the arts and sciences), so that he maketh fire (electricity) to come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men" (beheld by men with wonder).

14th v.;—"And he deceiveth them that dwell on the earth (causing them to believe in the prosperity and future glory of this world, thus constituting himself the false prophet: see 19th chap., 20th ver.) by those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast (wonders performed, looked upon by other people as miraculous), saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image (form of government) to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live."

15th v.;—"And he had power to give life (to put in operation) unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak (make laws), and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed" (making death the penalty for treason).

16th v.;—"And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their forehead" (to take the oath to support the government, either by subscribing to it or receiving it verbally).

17th v.;—"And that no man might buy or sell (might have the benefit of the law, to legalize their business), save he that had the mark, or the name (professional church name of the government) of the beast, or the number of his name" (those taking the name being numbered).

18th v.;—"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast (divisions, or church names): for it is the number of a man); and his number is six hundred threescore and six" (the number of professed churches, trusting in physical power, being married again to the laws, and becoming daughters of the mother of harlots).

W. N. FISK.

For the World's Crisis.

DO YOU KNOW JESUS? OR, THE DYING CHRISTIAN.

It was near the close of a beautiful day that we were called in to see old father Patterson fall asleep in Christ. Father Patterson had lived to an extreme old age, so much so that he had lost his reason, in a measure; and as he drew near life's closing scene, it seemed wholly to forsake him. His children were sent for, and gathered around his dying couch; but he knew them not. In vain they besought him to call them by name, and to tell them that he recognized them. But the answer was, "I know you not." At last the companion of his bosom, the wife of his youth, tottered up to his bed, and bending over him, her hot tears falling upon his cold cheek, whispered,

"Don't you know me, your Mary?" There was the same answer as to the children:

"I don't know you."

While the aged wife and mother stood by the side of her dying husband, she thought she would ask him if he knew his Lord and Master. So she bent over him once again and whispered,

"Do you know Jesus?" The eye that was fast losing its light seemed to brighten, and a heavenly smile played about his lips as he repeated,

"Jesus! Jesus! Yes, I know that dear friend. He it is on whom my hopes of heaven depend."

Those were his last words. Thus passed away a good man from the earth. But, thank God, he will come up in the last day, at the resurrection of the dead. R. H. NYE.

Canaan, Me.

☞ No man will fully find out what he is by a mere survey of himself. He must explore if he would know himself.

For the World's Crisis.

FIRE! FIRE! FIRE!

The fire! Have you it, reader? Is your soul full of it? the fire of the gospel, the fire of Paul,—pentecostal? the tongue of fire? the fire that burns, kindles to a flame, blazes out and out, sets the whole world on fire? What can you do without it? how can you live and breathe without this celestial fire, the fire of holy love? How can you pray without it; write without it; preach without it; sing or give thanks; exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine? Is fire wanting? the fire of God, God's fire, heavenly fire, the fire that inspired the holy prophets and apostles, the fire that kindled the soul of Isaiah to a flame when he saw the vision of God in the temple, and the seraphim crying, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory?" Isa. 6: 3.

When Isaiah saw this glory, the holiness of God, he cried out, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." Then one of the seraphim flew to him with a live coal in his hand from the altar, and laid it upon his mouth, and when this live coal touched his lips, his iniquity was taken away, and his sin purged; and now his soul was on fire, the fire of holy love. And when the call was made, "Whom shall I send? and who will go for us?" Isaiah was ready, full of fire to do God's will. "Here am I," says he, "send me." Was Isaiah prepared to fight, face the enemy, till he received this fire from God's altar? Were the apostles and the early christians prepared to glorify God in the world's salvation, till they had received the pentecostal fire? When Peter received this tongue of fire three thousand were converted to God under one sermon! It was this fire that inspired Luther's soul, Melancthon's, Wesley's, Bunyan's, Baxter's, Payson's, J. B. Taylor's. Reader, have you the fire of God's love in your soul, the fire that strikes terror in the hearts of the king's enemies, that rejoices the souls of the righteous? Can you pray? Can you talk, preach, or write for God, save your soul is on fire; save God rules in you, over you; inditing every thought to his own glory; save this fire of love is in your inmost soul, burning hotter and hotter, shining brighter and brighter, even unto the perfect day? O for this fire! Lord, send it. O that a live coal might touch the lips of each minister and each disciple of the Lord Jesus in America in this important crisis!

John the Baptist said: "One mightier than I cometh, the lachet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose; he shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire." Three years after this promise was made, our risen Lord said to his disciples, "Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem till ye be endued with power from on high." "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, the promise was fulfilled in the baptism of the Spirit—the baptism of fire—and on the head of each disciple appeared cloven tongues of fire, indicating that "Christianity was to be a Tongue of Fire." It has been well observed that "the symbol is a tongue, the only instrument of the grandest war ever waged—a tongue—man's speech to his fellow-man—a message in human words to human faculties, from the understanding to the understanding, from the heart to the heart. A tongue of fire—man's voice, God's truth—man's speech, the Holy Spirit's inspiration; a human organ, a superhuman power."

The disciples on Pentecost were filled with the Holy Ghost—a blessing promised to the whole church, "even to as many as the Lord our God shall call." "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit."

"Thus strong in our Redeemer's strength,
Sin, death, and hell we trample down,
Fight the good fight, and win, at length,
Through mercy an immortal crown."

D. F. Newton, Author of Home Thrusts.

For the World's Crisis.

SEVEN REASONS WHY I DESIRE THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST TO COME.

I desire the kingdom of Christ to come soon,

1. Because earthly governments often rise in iniquity, flourish by fraud, stealth, robbery, and war, and fall to rise no more. The kingdom of Christ will be established in righteousness; mercy and truth shall meet together, righteousness and peace shall kiss each other within it, and it shall remain FOREVER.

2. Because here we must needs submit to unjust laws, but more frequently to the unjust administration of law. The law of Christ's kingdom will be established in righteousness, administered in justice, and will be the law of peace. Not to punish the disobedient, for all will be obedient. Not to restrain the vicious, for purity and holiness will be possessed by each subject of that kingdom. Its law will never be violated, for the outbreathings of every heart shall bless it.

3. Because the most vicious of men are often called to sit upon earthly thrones and exercise authority; and if perchance a good man is called to a kingdom, he soon dies, and a worse one is called to reign in his stead. Christ will be the sovereign of his own kingdom, who is the Prince of peace, the king of glory, "who only hath immortality." All other kings have been mortal; he only hath immortality. His throne will never be vacant; he will reign upon it forever.

4. Because here the rich often grind the faces of the poor, and exact dishonest gain from them. In Christ's kingdom all will share alike in its wealth and glory. The saint shall be heir of "all things." The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven," shall be his everlasting portion.

5. Because temporal kingdoms are established upon the sin-blighted territory of the present earth. Brambles and thorns, quagmires and miasma, mortality and grim death himself are written on it with the very finger of God's curse. The kingdom of Christ will be established in the new earth, blooming in unsullied beauty. The stain of sin's curse will be wiped off from it. Evergreen herbage will adorn its extended plains and blooming vales. The tabernacle of God will crown the holy hill of Zion, and immortality permeate every atom of it. Earth is a wilderness. Paradise will be home.

6. Because death has snatched my loved ones and laid them in his narrow charnel house. In Christ's kingdom I shall receive them again, restored in immortal beauty and vigor. I shall then clasp them again in my arms and press upon them the tender caress of love. I long to be there.

7. Because I am now away from my Savior. By faith alone I see him who is now invisible. Then I shall see the "King in his beauty." I shall behold the star-gemmed brow of the King of glory. I shall gaze on the sun-lighted beauty that beams from his countenance. I shall sit on his throne. I shall measure the inexhaustible depths of his love. I shall sit with him at the nuptial table of immortal union and undecaying love. Shall I be there? Help me, O Spirit of Jesus. Help, or I perish!

M. R. Phetteplace.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, May 24, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

DISCUSSION AT GOODWIN'S MILLS.

Question:—"Do the Scriptures teach that the wicked will suffer eternal conscious misery?"

Our late discussion at Goodwin's Mills, Me. (not Griswoldville, as advertised in the Crisis), was one of deep interest, and resulted, we trust, in much good. Our opponent, Bro. Wm. Jones, is a Methodist preacher,—an Englishman,—who has been in America about a year. He knew nothing of our views till recently, and hence was not posted in the arguments and scriptures on which they are based. Considering the circumstances, he did as well as could be expected.

Our discussion was held in the Methodist meeting-house, and continued four evenings. Though the weather was rather unfavorable, the house was crowded to overflowing, every evening, with a very crowded audience, that observed excellent order. Some came twelve miles every night. A new interest has been awakened in the study of the Scriptures, and the truth has taken strong hold of many honest hearts. We expect happy results from this discussion.

The arguments adduced by our opponent were those commonly presented by those who hold the doctrine that the wicked will be eternally miserable. We do not recollect any new arguments, with one exception, hence we do not need to present them again to our readers, who are familiar with them. When he was endeavoring to prove the immortality of the soul, and the consequent eternal misery of the wicked, he presented as proof, that it is said of the destruction of the infants by Herod, as recorded in Matt. 2: 17, 18, that there was "a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not"; consequently Rachel must be alive. This was a new argument to us. We replied that we were not aware before that Rachel, Jacob's wife, had any children two years old about the time of the birth of our Savior.

We found some warm friends at Goodwin's Mills, who are ardent lovers of the truth, and willing to stand up for its defense. We think the discussion will increase the number.

On Saturday, May 14th, Bro. Samuel Lord, who came from Kennebunk to attend the debate, took us to his pleasant home, where we had a hearty welcome. In the evening, we had a good meeting at Kennebunk Port. We found another good home at Bro. Wm. H. Mitchell's, one of the Lord's faithful servants in his vineyard, who is trying to persuade men to prepare for the coming judgment.

On the Lord's day, 15th, we had interesting meetings. Two requested prayers, and others felt deeply. There is an abiding impression on the minds of the people that some great event is at hand. This feeling follows them by night and by day. Would that they would heed it, and prepare to meet the coming of the Son of man. They tremble at the signs of the times, and yet have not courage to act in harmony with their better judgment. What a perilous hour is this in which we are living! If it were not for the "blessed hope," all would be "dark and dreary"; but with such a hope as ours, we may well lift up our heads, knowing that redemption is at hand. Earth's long, tedious night is nearly spent. The bright morning of glory will soon dawn, and the saints be gathered home.

THE WAR.

The war news has been bloody for some days. There has been much hard fighting on the Potomac, and in other sections of the field of strife. The scales of victory seem to preponderate rather in favor of the Union army; but the enemy is still strong, and seems as determined as ever to continue the war. Many thousands have been slain in battle during the last two or three weeks, besides the many thousands more who have been wounded and taken prisoners. Ours is a land of mourning. Widows and orphans are being made by the ten thousand, while others have loved ones groaning among the wounded on the battle-field, with no one to care for them, and speak a kind word, as they lie exposed to the storm, the chilly night air, without shelter or food, and in the hands of a cruel enemy. We may well say, in the language of Jesus, "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God."

We may expect soon to hear of more terrible war scenes, not only in our land, but in Europe. Events there are indicating a general war of the nations. All efforts to stay the rising storm seem to be unavailing. It advances as surely as the tide of the ocean, or the tempest in the heavens. The hour of the deadly conflict is at hand. The Lord has a controversy with the nations. They are angry, and determined to work wickedness. They are fast filling up their cup of iniquity, in imitation of the Antediluvians and Sodomites. We have reason to be thankful that the days of sin and sorrow are approaching an end; but till the glad hour arrives, we can only look for darker scenes of wickedness, more bloody deeds, cruelty and carnage, more general and appalling.

"We'll face the storm,
It can't be long."

A QUESTION OR TWO.

As I am just beginning in your matters, having never had intercourse with any of your belief, and not having read "The World's Crisis" but four weeks, I ask the privilege of receiving civil answers to the following inquiries:—

1. How do you interpret 2 Cor. 5: 1–8, so as to make it consistent with the idea that there is no soul separate from the body? "Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord; (for we walk by faith, not by sight;) we are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." Ver. 6–8. I would like to see your remarks on the whole passage.

2. What are your views of Phil. 1: 23? "For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better."

3. How do you interpret Luke 23: 42, 43? "And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

An Inquirer.

[The above inquiries are from a Congregational minister. Although these questions have been answered several times in the columns of the Crisis, we cheerfully speak again.

I.

It should be observed that there is not a word about the soul in the chapter, hence it proves nothing concerning it, pro or con. We will quote the first eight verses of the fifth chapter including the last of the fourth:—

"While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal. For we know that, if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord: for we walk by faith, not by sight: we are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord."

The apostle is comparing "temporal" and "eternal" things. In the first verse of the fifth chapter he contrasts the existing tabernacle, or tent arrangement, of this world, with the one to come. As the present system of things is to be dissolved, he shows us what to look for next; that is, the new Jerusalem, which John saw in vision, and of which he speaks as follows:—

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."—Rev. 21: 1–3.

When the "new Jerusalem" comes down, then we shall have the "building of God, a house not made with hands." This will be the "eternal" city. The present system is only a temporary "tabernacle" or tent arrangement, to continue but a brief period, when compared with the one to come.

The Prophet says:—"It is he that .... stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a TENT to dwell in." Isa. 40: 22.

Wakefield renders 2 Cor. 5: 1–2 as follows:—"For we know that if this tent, wherein we dwell, which is fixed on the ground, be taken to pieces, we have a divine building, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For, indeed, in this tent we sigh with an earnest desire of clothing ourselves with that heavenly habitation."

It will be noticed there is but one tabernacle" or "house," for all the church; hence, we think these words have no reference to man's physical constitution in this life; but to the difference between his present and future home. One is but a temporary sojourn for a little season, as in a "tent," the "heavens" being the "curtain," or covering; while the coming "house," or "tabernacle," will be "eternal."

The Savior said:—"In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you."—John 14: 2. Paul seems anxious to reach the heavenly state, and is groaning for it to come. He then compares the shelter to be afforded by that "tabernacle" to being "clothed."

Another point of great interest in the Apostle's mind, connected with the coming of the heavenly "tabernacle," consisted in the change from mortality to immortality. While in this "tabernacle," or "tent," arrangement, "we groan" to be delivered and come in possession of the heavenly one.

As Jesus has gone away from this tabernacle, we cannot see him again till he returns. He represents himself as the head of the church, while its different members constitute his "body." As Paul uses figures when speaking of the clothing, so we understand him to use the term "body," in this connection, in a figurative sense. We will now let him explain himself: "So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another."—Rom. 12: 5. "And he is the head of the body, the church."—Col. 1: 18. As Christ is now personally "absent from the body," or "church, while we remain here "in the body," or church, we are also "absent from the Lord." Paul, like other christians, felt willing to be translated from the "body" to the Head of the church. He felt ready.

We see no proof in this scripture to favor the popular idea of the soul. A passage that makes no mention of the term, cannot afford reliable evidence.

II.

We now turn to Phil. 1: 23,—"For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better." Far better than what? Better than to live here and be whipped, "beaten with rods," and "stoned;" or to die and sleep in the grave till the coming of Christ. To either of these he preferred to be translated like Enoch and Elijah. Many have the same feeling to-day. There is not a word about the soul in the whole chapter; therefore it proves nothing on the subject.

There is another view of this passage which demands attention. The word analus, rendered "depart," in ver. 23, occurs in but one other passage, which is in Luke 12: 36; where it is rendered return. "And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord when he will return from the wedding." This same word analus is used in twenty-two manuscripts of the Septuagint, including the Oxford, to translate the Hebrew word shoov, in Joshua, 22: 8, which always means return. We think this is the meaning of Paul, —"Having a desire for the returning and being with Christ." This idea is in keeping with the feeling commonly expressed in his epistles. In his letter to the Corinthian church he speaks very plainly, and shows that his only hope of future life was based upon the resurrection of the dead, at the coming of Christ.

III.

We come next to the thief on the cross, Luke 23: 42, 43. Observe, the thief says, "Remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." It may be shown most clearly from the Scriptures, that the Savior has not yet come into his kingdom; but the signs of the times show that the event is near. The Savior replies, "Verily I say unto thee to-day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

We inquire first, where is paradise? In Rev. 2: 7, we read, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." This passage settles the point that when we find the locality "of the tree of life" we shall have found paradise. When we turn to Revelation, the whole matter is made plain. In the twenty-first and twenty-second chapters, John is shown "a new heaven and a new earth" and the "new Jerusalem" upon it as the Capitol of the coming kingdom. When describing it, he says in Rev. 22: 2, "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bear twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruits every month." We now see that paradise is in the "new earth," where the Savior's kingdom is to be located; because "the tree of life . . . is in the midst of the paradise of God;" but "the tree of life" is in the new earth, therefore paradise is in the same place.

The question now arises, did the Savior go to the new earth on the day of his crucifixion? Certainly not, for that is still a future event, to take place after his second advent. The grave could not be paradise. The tree of life does not grow there. Neither can the paradise mentioned be in heaven where the Savior now is; for he said after he was raised from the dead, three days subsequent to the time when he made the declaration to the thief, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father."—John 20: 17. Then it follows that if the thief went to heaven on the day of his crucifixion, he did not find the Savior there; hence was not with him. The word "me" in Luke 23: 43, and in John 20: 17, must represent the same personal identity. We now find the subject involved in difficulties on every side. 1. Paradise is not yet restored, and will not be till Jesus comes again. 2. "The tree of life" is not in the grave, hence that was not the place meant. 3. The thief did not go to heaven with the Savior on the day of crucifixion, because three days later he said he had not yet ascended to his Father.

How shall we dispose of these insurmountable difficulties? If we simply put the comma the other side of "to-day," all will be plain, and harmonious with the whole Bible.

There are no commas in the original, and were not used at all till about the sixteenth century. Our Bibles are now punctuated differently, by different printers. Let us notice the power of the comma to change the meaning of a passage. Take for example, Heb. 10: 12. "But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever sat down on the right hand of God." In some Bibles the comma is after sins; in others after "ever." If it be placed after sins, then the passage proves that Christ is set down for ever, and consequently will never come back again. But if the comma be placed after the word ever, then it proves the sacrifice for sins was the final one; that is, he will never die again for sins; which is the obvious meaning of the text.

Take another example, in Matt. 19: 28. "Jesus said unto them, verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Some Bibles have a comma after me; in others, after regeneration. If placed after the latter word, then it teaches that Christ was regenerated. By regeneration is understood conversion. It would be a strange doctrine to teach that our Savior was converted. If the comma is placed after me, then all is clear; and this scripture teaches that the apostles who followed Christ, in this life, when the time comes to make all things new, in the regeneration, then they will sit on the "twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

Now, we say again, if the comma in Luke 23: 43, be placed the other side of "to-day," the passage will be in harmony with the whole Bible.

It may be said, "to-day" will be superfluous, if it should read, "Verily I say unto thee to-day;" but we find many similar examples in the Bible. We will notice a few: "I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God."—Deut. 30: 16. "I denounce unto you this day, that ye shall surely perish."—Deut. 30: 18. "I testify against you this day, that ye shall surely perish."—Deut. 8: 9. Moses does not mean to say they shall surely perish that day, but he testifies against them that day.

The word seemeron, rendered "to-day" in Luke 23: 43, occurs two hundred fifty-nine times in the Septuagint Scriptures of the Old Testament, including the Greek of the New Testament. It is used adjectively twenty-four times, without a verb to qualify, fourteen times, leaving two hundred twenty-one times to be used as a qualifying adverb. Of these two hundred twenty-one, it precedes the verb it qualifies fifty-one times. In these fifty-one examples, the comma should be placed before the word "to-day," as the text is now punctuated in Luke 23: 43.

In the remaining one hundred seventy examples, the word seemeron follows the verb it qualifies, as would be the case if the comma should be placed after the word "to-day;" when it would read, "Verily, I say unto thee to-day;" not, "to-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Hence, the use of the word gives one hundred and seventy witness against fifty-one, in favor of putting the comma the other side of "to-day" in Luke 23: 43.

A very old Syriac version, written, as was supposed, about the 5th century, reads as follows:—"Verily I say to thee to-day, that with me thou shalt be in the Eden's garden."

POLITICAL SPIRITUALISM; OR, THE VEIL REMOVED.

For some seven years, we have been satisfied that we should see in these last days, just before the coming of Christ, what is now beginning to be developed; namely, an effort on the part of Satan and his demons to get control of the political powers of this world, and through them confirm his own doctrines; first and foremost of which, is that of the natural immortality of man by means of which he sustains hero-worship, prayers to saints, purgatory, Mohammedanism, Swedenborgianism, Mormonism, Shakerism, Spiritualism, and every other false system of religion; and at the same time overthrows the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, the second personal coming of Christ, and all other great truths of the Bible. His plans thus far, have been executed with consummate skill, but none more so than the last phase of his wonderful delusions—Spiritualism.

At first, we found the Spiritualists unwilling to admit that they should ever carry their religion into political matters; but the time has come when the incipient steps are already taken.

We clipped the following from the Boston Evening Journal of May 20th:—

"One of the queer things at the Spiritual convention in New York was a series of resolutions sent in by a concourse of departed spirits, denouncing the present constitution and government of the United States, and calling a convention of progressionists on the 5th of September to nominate for the Presidency."

THE MORMON CREED.

It may be interesting to our readers to see some of the points in the Mormon creed. It will be observed that the second article corresponds with Spiritualism, making God consist only in certain qualities common to man.

Of course, those who believe in an "immaterial" and impersonal God, can see nothing else but qualities to worship; hence their God consists only of QUALITIES. With Paul, we would say, "This I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets."—Acts 24: 14.

The following, from one of our exchanges, contains a few points of doctrine in the Mormon creed:—

"1. The Mormon creed teaches the doctrine of the Trinity. 'That Christ was the God, the Father of all things.' Mormon Bible, Book of Mosiah, par. 5.

'Behold! I am Jesus Christ. I am the Father and the Son.' Book of Esther, ch. i, par. 3.

'Is the Son of God the very eternal Father? ..... Yea, he is the very Eternal Father.' Book of Alma, ch. viii, par. 7.

2. They believe in an immaterial God. 'It is truth, light, and love, that we worship and adore; these are the same in all worlds, and as these constitute God, he is the same in all worlds; wherever you find a fulness of wisdom, knowledge, truth, goodness, love, and such like qualities, there you find God in all his glory, power and majesty;—therefore if you worship these adorable qualities you worship God.' Mormon Seer, pp. 24, 25."

For the World's Crisis.

CAN YOU TELL?

If the common idea of the immortality of the soul be correct, and that the souls of the righteous go directly to heaven at their death, why did Hezekiah, king of Israel, being a righteous man, turn his face to the wall and weep, when he was told by the prophet of God that he should die and not live? If the righteous king was going directly to heaven to dwell with God and angels, why did he not rejoice, rather than weep? Can you tell?

J. E. Clark.

☞ Censure no man; detract no man; praise no man before his face; traduce no man behind his back. Boast not thyself abroad, nor flatter thyself at home; if any thing cross thee, accuse thyself; if any one extol thee, humble thyself. Honor those that instruct thee, and be thankful to those that reprehend thee. Let all thy desires be subjected to reason, and let thy reason be corrected by religion.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to May 17th, $1132.67
A. Lord pd	.50
S. Lord pd	.50
A friend pd	.50
" pd	.15
" pd	.25
" pd	.50
C. D. Hibbard pd	.25
C. Haines pd	.25
J. Cable pd	.25
H. Patterson pd	.25
A poor widow pd	.5
M. Owen pd	.10
Lydia Burgess pd	1.00
Three readers of the Crisis pd	.75
M. S. Smith pd	1.00
J. Stager pd	.25
J. C. Freeman pd	.25
Oscar B. Pease pd	.50
J. L. Small pd	.55
Thera Holden pd	1.00
Peter Johnson pd	1.00
Eliza A. Tuttle pd	.10
R. W. Neale pd	1.00
L. Grinnell pd	1.00
Jas. Page and wife pd	.50
M. C. pd	.50
P. Loud pd	.25
Mrs. E. Tager pd	.25
Widow's mite pd	.50

THE YOUNG PILGRIM.

The next volume of The Young Pilgrim commences with July, and will be published twice a month at the following rates:—

For a single copy, 30 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under TEN.

Ten copies, and any number over ten, when sent to one address, 25 cents a year for each copy.

The postage on every ten copies or less to one address, will be 24 cents a year, which must be paid quarterly or yearly in advance at the office where the paper is received.

Canada subscribers will receive the paper at the same rates as above (25 cents a year for each copy), when taken in packages of ten or more to one address. Single copies, 50 cents a year; we paying the American postage.

Sunday Schools and churches who take the paper in clubs of ten or more, having them all sent to one name, will get them at half the expense. Fifty copies, for instance, addressed to each subscriber, will cost $27.00, of which $12.00 is for postage; but, if all are addressed to one name, the postage will be only $1.20, and the whole cost but $13.70. In the one case, each subscriber pays 54 cents a year for paper and postage; and, in the other, only 28 cents.

Now is the time to form clubs, and get new subscribers for the next volume. Our subscription list already numbers six thousand. Shall it not be twelve thousand before another year closes? It can be; and it will be, if brethren will LABOR for it. Thousands ought to be given away, and scattered like autumn leaves among the children and youth outside of our own ranks. Who will pay for five, ten, twenty, fifty, or more, of each number, for that purpose?

Let us hear from you, brethren, before the new volume begins. Address all orders and remittances to The Young Pilgrim, Boston, Mass.

W. B. H.

For the World's Crisis.

MISSIONARY LABOR.

Some time ago, a report of my labor was sent to the Crisis, but did not reach its destination; hence I now pen a brief account of my missionary work during the last seven months. In October, I commenced meetings in Burlington, Me. This is a comparatively new place of labor for Adventists; yet there is a little company of believers here "looking for that blessed hope," and who are "ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh" them a reason of this hope. Here we had some excellent meetings. The people listened with interest to the plain, simple truths of the gospel. Often we could see the penitential tear fall, and some evinced a "godly sorrow" which "worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of." It was cheering to see as the fruit of our labor some turning "from the power of Satan unto God."

During our stay we held meetings in different parts of the town. One Sabbath we dedicated a new school-house. Besides our meetings in B., we also had some profitable meetings in Lincoln, an adjoining town. By request of a Universalist friend, we occupied a house one Sabbath in the village. The elements seemed to conspire against us, but still we had a number out to hear us. The congregation was composed mostly of Spiritualists. We endeavored to present substantial truth to them, in place of the ignis fatuus they are so eagerly following. A Bro. having obtained the use of the Congregational church in Lee Village for a Sabbath meeting, we occupied it, and had a good attendance. The deacon was much interested, and wished for a continuance of the meetings; but it being objectionable to some of the members, we had not the privilege of preaching to them again. However we held a few meetings in another part of the town. In the town of Lowell we also had some profitable meetings. This place was formerly much prejudiced against our views, but now most of the inhabitants are favorable to us. We also visited Township No. 3, joining Burlington on the east.

Leaving this vicinity, we came to Passadumkeag in November, and held a few meetings; but stormy weather prevented us from having so good attendance as we desired. Here, too, we found some lovers of truth. We went from P. to Surry, and held meetings in different parts of the town. We also visited Orland and Blue Hill, in which place we had previously held some interesting meetings. After this, we held a few meetings in Surry Village, and one meeting in W. Ellsworth; a few evenings we preached in Orland, and after attending the Eastern Conference and Ministerial Conference, returned to labor through January in this same vicinity. Feb. 4th we went to Passadumkeag, and spent a week laboring for the instruction and salvation of men. The Orthodox deacon was interested in the meetings, and aided us in bearing expenses. Some felt their need of salvation, but did not start for the kingdom then. We trust, however, that the seed sown will bring a harvest of souls hereafter.

This tour completed, we turned in another direction, and visited Millbridge, Cherryfield, and Harrington. In the former place we supplied the pulpit of the Baptist minister, at his request, a few Sabbaths. In the meantime we had meetings in Cherryfield, Harrington, and different parts of Millbridge. It was our purpose to spread the truth in these places as much as possible; and the eagerness of the people to get our tracts and pamphlets, manifested a desire in them for truth, and gave us renewed courage to work for the Lord.

May the Lord bless his truth in all this region, to the salvation of men, is our prayer. While laboring in M., we were taken sick with sore throat, and we think diphtheria, which deprived us of the privilege of going to some other places where we had appointments; and we were obliged to stop preaching for nearly three weeks. We recovered slowly, and recently have held meetings in Surry, Orland, and Blue Hill. We purpose to go soon to Burlington and vicinity to labor as the Lord may direct. May we have the prayers of the church in our behalf, that our labor may not be "in vain in the Lord."

C. H. Leverton.

Surry, Me., May 11th, 1864.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. Bickford.

Bro. Grant:—I would like to say to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, who have been tried, tempted, and scattered, that there seems to be more of that oneness manifested in years gone by. The love of God in the death of Christ for our salvation is what we feel at this late hour, and may God grant us and all his church grace to serve him with fear and wait patiently for the promise of the fathers, when the inheritance shall be given to the seed, even Christ, who shall reign over the house of David forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

Oh! the depth of the fullness there is in the plan of redemption; that God has called all nations, both near and afar off, to be heirs through Christ with the seed of Israel to the joys of the world to come. And if God so loved us while we were in sin, ought we not to love him for his goodness which delivers mortal man from that state of sin and bondage to which the world was subject?

But how can we love him whom we have not seen, if we have not love one for another? It is evident that God dwells in love, and will not dwell with any sect or class unless united to the high interest and upbuilding of each other in his love. If this had always been the aim of the strong, the weak would not have sickened and died, but would have been made strong also. Come, let all who are interested in this salvation, so full and free, and would do their neighbors good, love them and tell them of Jesus and his power to save; tell them of his groans, and of that fountain filled with blood, where the scarlet can be made like the wool, white as snow. My soul cries out in the langurge of my Master, Come, all ye that thirst, to the fountain, and drink freely. Drink till hatred is conquered by love. Drink till passion, and lust, and pride shall be subdued by peace, and joy, and righteousness in Christ our Savior.

Let all who have obeyed stand firm, and those who have not, rally to the standard; make no delay; the time is at hand when he that is righteous will be righteous still, and he that is unrighteous will be unrighteous still. We should not slight the warnings of so many true-hearted children that appear in the gospel light of our glorious messenger, the Crisis; and may God nerve its managers with holy zeal even to the end; for such men who are willing to sacrifice honor and worldly applause, will be rewarded at the resurrection of the just; which may God grant, for his Son's sake.

Brethren, pray for us, though few in number, that we may outride the storm of affliction, and at last meet all the sanctified through Christ our Lord.

J. Bickford.

Great Falls, N. H.

From Sr. M. A. Hardy.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I esteem it a matter of great gratitude to God, that he affords means in his providence to sustain such a paper as our beloved Crisis, for its object is to establish and enforce Bible truth, calculated to feed the household meat in due season. I make an effort to lend it wherever I think it will have a reading, hoping the truths so faithfully heralded may prove a savor of life to some precious ones, who are in want of just such instruction and light as our weekly sheet affords. The last day perils seem fast approaching, darkness prevails to a great extent on all the prophecies concerning the future, while the few wise are understanding and searching the blessed word, and feel it "like fire shut up in their bones," and are proclaiming publicly, and privately, that "the hour of his judgment has come," and "we must worship him, who made the earth and sea, and the fountains of water." And also on the great question of man's destiny—how few are willing to examine the subject, but cherish erroneous opinions. Would that they could see how the heavenly epistle harmonizes in taking the ground that "life and immortality are brought to light in the gospel." How such a view illuminates all the plan of salvation. Praise God for such a complete system to save all that believe.

The more I investigate the more blessed it seems. How sweet to rely on the promises contained in such a gospel, to rejoice in hope of a deliverance from all the evils of this present world. What a sweet satisfaction arises from reflecting on God's stupendous mercy, to bestow upon us condemned sinners such hopes and privileges so soon, to be realized. Truly the influence of these contemplations makes our whole being thrill with delight and holy admiration. O! may we be getting ready for the marriage feast. May our conversation be such as becometh the gospel of Christ.—May God help us to possess a "meek and quiet spirit," seeking the "honor that cometh from God only." May we belong to the company that shall adore the Lamb on Zion's heights, our robes made pure from his bleeding side, so that when redemption's song shall go up—"Not unto us, not unto us," but He that has washed us in his own blood shall be the glory of our salvation. May we all be there to join the everlasting praise, is the prayer of your sister,

Groveland, Mass. Mary A. Hardy.

From Sr. C. R. Danks.

Bro. Grant:—I have great reason to thank the Lord for his mercies unto me and mine. My second son enlisted in the United States service three months ago. He is now in Tennessee in the hospital. He has been in the habit of using tobacco for three or four years. I talked and read to him considerable before he left home, on the evils of its use, and he resolved to break off.

After he had been gone from home three or four weeks, he writes, "Mother, you cannot think how I have hankered after tobacco; but I asked the Lord to take away those feelings, and I have not wanted any tobacco since." In another letter he writes, "I ought not to have enlisted, but it cannot be helped now, and what comes may be for the best. I have given myself to God, and if I cannot serve him here, I believe he will open the way for me to get out." He says, "Mother, I want you should send my Bible to me and some numbers of the World's Crisis, also some good tracts."

I thank the Lord for his goodness. Ye faithful ones, pray for that dear son, that he may be kept from the wiles of satan.

Your unworthy sister, C. R. DANKS.
Fond du Lac, Wis.

From Sr. E. V. C. Bennett.

MR. EDITOR:—Dear Sir—I have a proposition to make the numerous readers of our good paper, "The World's Crisis." It is that each one present six months' or a year's subscription for it, to his best friend, or most bitter enemy, or to both. We are commanded to do good to all, and how shall we more effectually benefit either friend or foe than by inducing them to read the news of the coming kingdom? "Ah!" says one, "my case is an exceptional one. I have been most deeply wronged by one who is already a reader of the Crisis, but who has made very poor use of its counsels, and utterly failed to practise its precepts; for has he not entered my heart, as it were, and robbed me of the last ewe lamb of affection?" For such an one pray, my friend, that his eyes may be opened to see the error of his ways.

I have been waiting to make the above proposition, until I could send therewith a dollar or two with which to commence upon my list of friends and foes; but I will send, instead, a promise to invest in this manner the first dollar I may have at my disposal.

Jamestown, Ia. E. V. C. BENNETT.

From Bro. S. L. Manley.

BRO. GRANT:—Our Savior says of the wise and faithful servant giving meat in due season, "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing." I would that all those who are looking for the soon coming Messiah would make a practical application of this; that is, send on occasionally their mites for a supply of tracts, and distribute to their friends and neighbors around them. Brother, Sister, will you do so?

Please find enclosed another —— for tracts, as I am nearly out of those you sent last. Once I was a distributor of the American and Boston Society tracts, until about three years since, through the instrumentality of Bro. Shepherd of Newark, N. J., the Lord opened my eyes to see the truth as it is; for which I bless his holy name. Yours in Christ,

Marion, N. Y. S. L. MANLEY.

From Sr. L. Bliss.

BRO. GRANT:—I want to say to you that I am still striving for the kingdom. I believe the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, and I shall be glad when he comes and ends these scenes of sorrow. My son, Merritt Bliss, died in the army, May 4th, aged twenty-six. He was a kind boy to me, and loved the Lord. Leaves a wife. Sr. Maria M. Weaver wrote the following lines to comfort us, which please publish:

Cheer thee, pilgrim, day will break,
And thy sleeping loved ones wake;
Soon the heavenly hosts will come,
Bringing all the pilgrims home.
Death itself shall surely die,
Friends no more in dust shall lie,
Life eternal shall be given,
When the Lord returns from heaven.

Yours in hope, LUCINA BLISS.
North Dana, Mass.

Obituaries.

ANSON GREGORY.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Feb. 21st, our dear brother, Anson Gregory, aged sixty-three.

This brother embraced Jesus Christ about five years ago, under the labors of Bro. Guy W. Rathbun, of Cordova, Ill. He had formerly been disgusted with all claiming to be christians, because professing christians, by their actions, gave the lie so palpably to their professions. He, at that time, leaned toward Universalism, believing that God, in his infinite love to mankind, would finally save all, and cleanse all from the least and last remains of sin. But when he came to hear the great truths of the Bible, and began to see that here and now is the place and time of developing a character, either for eternal life, or for the second death, became alarmed for his own salvation, and began to cry aloud for mercy. When he came to Jesus in humble supplications, and found that he was willing to receive him in peace, his joy hardly knew bounds.

But the doctrine of Christ's soon coming to reign on David's throne in person, and our dependence on him for immortality and life, was his great joy; and upon this subject his mind was constantly fixed. Upon every proper occasion he would draw the attention of those around to these great truths.

We trust he sweetly sleeps "the sleep from which none ever wake to weep"; and rests, his life securely hid with Christ in God. He leaves the partner of his youth, with nine children, and a numerous company of relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. The writer endeavored to administer consolation from Ps. 17: 15. A very large audience listened with attention.

May we all be prepared, so that when death with cold and icy hand shall lay hold upon us, we may have the assurance that we are the Lord's, and that Jesus will say to us at his coming, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." GEO. W. HURD.

CAPT. BENJAMIN RANSOM.

Died of lung fever, at his residence in Carver, Mass., April 27th, 1864, aged sixty-five years.

He professed faith in the Savior in early life, and continued a member of the Congregational church for several years. He occupied prominent official positions in the town, and was its representative in the State Legislature, and was widely known and respected as a citizen.

In 1840 he became interested in the tidings of the Savior's near approach, and from that time gave his heart and hand to the cause of Christ and his truth. His house became a pilgrim's home, and a Bethel for weary souls. For long years, a little flock have gathered there to worship, and to wait for the Son of God from heaven. Bro. Ransom strove to lead them in the heavenly way, and was beloved by the flock, and by others who did not embrace with him the hope of the speedy advent of the Lord, and life and immortality as brought to light in the gospel.

His death was quite sudden, but he was ready. He leaned his dying head on Jesus' breast, and breathed his life out sweetly there. He was strong in the faith in which he so long had lived. Almost his last words were, "Continue the meetings, and remember the Communion." Important words! I would that many would give heed to them. The little flock in Carver will feel a loss which will not be easily made good. But the Lord is still their Shepherd and their hope. May God give comfort to the afflicted partner of his life and faith, and help his children to know the God of their father.

The funeral exercises were conducted by the writer, assisted by the Congregational minister of the place; and the faith and hope of the resurrection were presented to a large and solemn assembly. H. L. HASTINGS.

RICHARD WHITEHOUSE.

Died in Bolton, C. E., April 29th, 1864, Bro. Richard R. Whitehouse, after an illness of about four months of rheumatic fever, which ended in dropsy, aged fifty four-years.

Bro. Whitehouse formerly lived in Alton, N. H., from whence he removed to Canada, where he remained until his death. He was Baptist in faith, until a few years ago he embraced the Advent doctrine, and united with the Advent church in Bolton, C. E. I visited him several times during his sickness. Although he was nearing the shadow of death, he feared no evil. Confident was he that He in whom he had believed was able to bring him from the dust to sing praises anew to Him, when death should be swallowed up in victory. He was a noble and devout man, and one to be loved and respected; an indulgent husband, kind father, charitable neighbor, and a faithful and devoted christian. Asleep in Jesus! How comforting to the companion and children, who know that God having brought again from the dead the Lord Jesus, will bring from the graves those that sleep in him. A discourse was delivered by the writer, from Acts 26: 8.

"Though in the dust I lay my head,
Yet, gracious God, thou wilt not leave
My soul forever with the dead,
Nor lose thy children in the grave.
O glorious hour! O blest abode!
I shall be near and like my God;
And flesh and sin no more control
The sacred pleasures of the soul."

JOHN CHAPMAN.

ARVILLA LOCKE.

Died in Buxton, Me, May 6th, 1864, Arvilla Locke, daughter of James and Mary Locke, aged seventeen years.

We sorrow over the death of our loved one, but not as those that have no hope. We feel and believe that Christ will bring our loved ones again from the land of the enemy.

Dear father, why do you mourn for her who has been laid in the silent grave? Mother and brothers, look ye with me forward to the time, believing it is near, when Christ will set up his everlasting kingdom on earth; then, with faithful Abraham, will we enter into the joy of the Lord, there to dwell with him who suffered and died, that we through his death and suffering might have eternal life in that blessed and holy land, where sickness, pain and sorrow will never come.

"When shall the saints forever rest
With all the ransomed and the blest?
When will their journeyings all be o'er?
When will they meet to part no more?
When shall their toils and trials cease?
When shall they rest and be at peace?
When Jesus comes."

S. L LOCKE.

NANCY HASTINGS.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 18th, 1864, Sr. Nancy Hastings, wife of Jonas Hastings, of Bristol, N. H., aged seventy-seven years, five months and five days.

For years, the deceased together with her husband, and some of their children, have loved and longed for the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who would change these vile bodies, hoping and believing thereby to escape death, the dreaded foe; but alas! after severe suffering from erysipelas for more than a year, she reluctantly yielded, a conquered prisoner, to the tyrant's power, from whose cruel grasp Jesus will triumphantly deliver her at his second coming. This blissful hope cheers the heart of the aged and bereaved husband, and gives to the devoted children left to mourn an assurance that their loss will be only for a little while.

Soon will the wife and mother dear,
Eternal life through Christ receive;
With him and his forever then,
In Paradise on earth shall live.

D. V. R.

WM. WELCH.

Died in Van Buren, Onondaga Co., N. Y., May 11th, Bro. Wm. Welch, of congestion of the brain.

The subject of this notice united with the Christian church in 1837, of which he continued a faithful member until 1843, when his hope was brightened by the sound of Jesus' coming, and he felt it duty to take on this subject a decided stand. In consequence of opposition he with his beloved companion left the church, and since that time have been indeed strangers and pilgrims, seeking for a better country. His illness was very distressing, but ultimately fell gently asleep in Jesus, waiting the morning of the resurrection. He was an example of patience. We say with all our hearts,

"Peaceful be thy silent slumber."

He leaves a beloved companion, with numerous other friends, to mourn their loss. Sr. Welch desires the prayers of the church, that she may endure her affliction with patience, and so live as to be one of that happy number saved when Jesus comes. PHEBE WILLIAMS.

Harbinger, please copy.

MELLIE M. GREEN.

Died in Lynn, Mass., May 13th, 1864, Mellie Maria, only daughter of James E. and Martha E. Green, aged three years and six months.

Nellie was a lovely plant of earth, but was plucked by the ruthless hand of death in early life. Although painful indeed were the circumstances which caused her death, (her clothes having caught fire, and she burned so badly before they could be extinguished, she died in a few hours,) yet she rests, and will come again from the "land of the enemy." May this sad dispensation be sanctified to the good of the bereaved.

We endeavored to speak words of comfort to the afflicted from the following text:—2 Tim. 1: 10,—"Who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

A. W. SIBLEY.

EMELINE GILKEY.

Fell asleep in Jesus, after an illness of five weeks, of quick consumption, our beloved sister, Emeline Gilkey, wife of Bro. John F. Gilkey, aged forty-four years, four months, and ten days.

Sister Gilkey became interested in the Advent doctrine in 1844, and continued firm in the faith till the close of her life. Her dying words were, "Prepare to meet thy God." She leaves a husband and seven children to mourn her loss, and also numerous friends.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the dread of foes."

N. G. REED.

JEFFERSON SANBORN.

Died in Moultonborough, N. H., April 5th, Jefferson Sanborn, aged fifty-six years and twenty-six days.

Our dear brother has for many years been a firm believer in the great and glorious truths of the coming and kingdom of Christ, which hope cheered him to the last. Like many others he had to regret his unfaithfulness in bearing public testimony to the truth, but he heartily confessed it to God, and to all, and was truly blessed.

He leaves a dear wife and children to mourn their loss; but they sorrow not as those which have no hope. Funeral attended by the writer.

T. W. PIPER.

LUCY AND BETSEY WETHERELL.

Died in Melbourne, C. E., May 13th, 1861, of consumption, Lucy Wetherell, aged forty-four years.

Also in the same place, and of the same disease, May 9th, 1864, Betsey J. Wetherell, aged sixty years.

Thus within the space of three short years have both my dear sisters been torn from me by the enemy death. But I am comforted in knowing that they sleep in Jesus, and we have the promise that them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. I am looking forward with earnest longings for the coming of that just One, when I expect to see my dear sisters, with all the redeemed ones, robed in immortal beauty, and with them help swell the song of Moses and the Lamb. O Lord, hasten the glad day! LOT WETHERELL.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool May 7th, Queenstown 8th

It is announced that Garibaldi would decline the subscriptions to purchase him an estate. The money is said to be returned.

The Conference is generally regarded as hopeless, and stood adjourned to May 9.

The Times and Daily News both argue that the conference is unlikely to accomplish anything and may as well be abandoned, as Denmark refuses the armistice on condition that she raises the blockade.

The Star asserts that the majority of the Cabinet are in favor of a war policy, but that the attempt to enforce that policy will split the Cabinet.

There had been a strong concentration of Russian troops on the Danube.

☞ Karl Blind, the friend of Garibaldi, writes: "Garibaldi told me himself that Napoleon's influence decided the English Government to take this step," i. e., to induce him to leave the country. To one of my friends Garibaldi said: "I am driven out of England by Louis Napoleon."

DOMESTIC.

New York, May 17th. The World's Washington dispatch says a person who left Richmond on the 8th states that the streets of that city were full of people speculating on Lee's retreat, but they seemed confident that the fortifications of the city would be successfully defended. The garrison amounted to five thousand, but could be increased in a few hours to double that number. All men and boys between twelve and sixty had been incorporated in the militia. The planters north of Richmond had come into the city and their negroes put to work on the fortifications. Bragg was in command. Soldiers were coming from all parts of rebeldom, principally from North and South Carolina. Beauregard was then in command, organizing a reserve army to support Lee.

New York, May 17th. Richmond papers of the 12th are received. The city was greatly excited and the House Guard were all out. An official dispatch from Lee, dated Spottsylvania Court House, May 11th, says: "Our assaults on that day were repulsed, except in front of Gen. Dale's brigade. A four-gun battery was taken, but recovered it again. Brig. Gen. Hays and R. H. Walker were wounded."

The Richmond Dispatch says all the damage to the railroads by raiders has been repaired, and Lee's communication is intact. It also says Butler's movements on the south side of the James have been abandoned.

In the accounts they give of the fighting with Gen. Sheridan, which are short, they claim all the victory.

During today, Gen. Sherman encountered a strong body of the enemy near Resaca and engaged him.

Resaca is ours. It was occupied by Sherman today, capturing one thousand prisoners and ten guns.

Gen. Sherman is in hot pursuit of the enemy.

Johnston is said to be retreating towards Atlanta.

An Atlanta dispatch of the 10th to the rebel papers has the following relative to Johnston's plan: "The affair at Resaca was a plan of Gen. Johnston's to catch the enemy. Snead Gap was left open, troops sent to the rear of it and every thing prepared to meet him in front. It is not yet known whether the enemy is bagged."

Philadelphia, May 17th. The Inquirer of this city has the following special dispatch:

"Nashville, May 16th, There was sharp fighting yesterday and to-day. Resaca (Ga.) was captured this afternoon, with ten guns, twelve hundred prisoners, and six rebel trains going south with supplies.

Johnston is in full retreat, with Sherman rapidly pursuing him.

The World's correspondent, writing from near Chester, Va., 14th inst., says our infantry are gradually forcing the earthworks of Fort Darling. Last evening Gen. Terry carried the first line of works on the left, which commanded the Petersburg railroad approaches. The attack was made in front by Terry, while Gen. Hawley, guided by a negro through intricate pathways, outflanked them. The loss in the attack in front was large in officers and men. After skirmishing half a mile, the second line was carried by assault. The right wing has not advanced much, and it now looks as if our left wing would be swung around, thus completely surrounding the fort. An immediate attack on the main work is anticipated.

It has been ascertained that Beauregard slipped by on Tuesday last, and is now probably with Lee.

The World's Chester Junction dispatch of the 14th inst., states that Gen. Beauregard's troops, or a portion of them, and those of Gen. Hoke's command from North Carolina, have certainly passed us and are now in Richmond or beyond with Lee. On Tuesday last his forces slipped by, the very day that we were inside our intrenchments resting.

The night we supposed we had a heavy force in front of us we had but a small force sent down from Hoke to keep us within our line and prevent us from striking Hoke's rear or cutting him off altogether. It was a cute trick. Beauregard passed up with the last of his forces the following day, barely escaping our advance column. The enemy, it is thought, have few troops in Petersburg, the most of them having gone to Richmond or Lee.

Among the casualties in the late fight were Maj. Randlett, of 3d N. H., wounded; Capt. Ely, do., killed; Lieut. Clough, 24th Mass., killed; Maj. T. B. Brooks, aid-de-camp on Gen. Gillmore's staff, wounded.

Washington, May 18th—11.15 A. M.

To Major-General Dix, New York:

We have no reports of operations since my last dispatch.

The last information from Gen. Grant was that the roads had greatly improved. Large reinforcements had reached him, and he designed to move against the enemy without delay.

It is the design of the government to keep up the national forces until the rebellion is overthrown, and in order to provide against any inopportune reduction when the service of the hundred days' men goes out, a draft to fill up their places and all other reductions will be ordered to take place on the 1st of July, by which time the new enrollments will be completed. No order is yet issued.

(Signed) EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC,
Near Spottsylvania Court House, Va.,
Tuesday morning, May 17th, 1864.

All rumors of the retreat of Lee's army toward Richmond are unfounded in fact. The enemy still holds his line northwest of Spottsylvania Court House, and is in apparent readiness to accept battle whenever Grant feels disposed to renew the attack. The recent heavy rains, which have rendered the roads unfit for the passage of artillery, have precluded the possibility of aggressive movements by Grant for the last two days.

New York, May 18th. The World's Washington dispatch, dated midnight, states that Gen. Grant's reinforcements have made his army at least 20,000 stronger.

The indications are that he will avoid another battle at Spottsylvania by a flank movement, and move toward Richmond.

Lee is massing his right, evidently anticipating such a design. Lee, it is declared, is even depriving other points of rebeldom of troops to check Grant, and will contest every inch of ground.

The Herald's headquarters correspondent, writing May 13th, considers the following very close upon a correct summary of the Army of the Potomac losses:

Killed, 3,300; wounded, 20,500; missing, 3,900—total, 27,700. This does not include Burnside's loss, which will probably swell the number to 35,000.

Cincinnati, May 18. A special dispatch to the Commercial, dated at Gauley Bridge yesterday, says:

"A courier arrived this morning direct from Gen. Crook. He has fought three battles near Newbern with the forces under Gen. Morgan, Sam Jones, and A. Jenkins, gaining a complete victory over the enemy. The enemy lost 600 in killed and wounded and 300 prisoners. Gen. A. J. Jenkins fell into our hands mortally wounded.

A large railroad bridge over New river at Newbern, with several miles of track, was completely destroyed.

Chicago, May 18. Advices from Little Rock up to the 16th inst., report that Price was retreating in the direction of Camden. The rebels admit a loss of 2000 men in the fight with Steele on Sabine river. Among their killed are Generals Scurry and Randall, and Gen. Wall of Texas was badly wounded.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 18. Gen. Meade has just issued an order, stating that he is well satisfied with the position of affairs.

We will be ready to open fire when deemed advisable. When the weather permits we may prepare ourselves for one of the deadliest and most decisive struggles of the war.

New York, May 19. The Times has the following: "The struggle has this moment begun with skirmishing on our extreme right. We fully expect a great, a bloody, and we hope a decisive battle to-day."

The Mexican Minister of Finance at Metamoras was making arrangements for the support of the Mexican Government.

Gen. Maga is reported to have defeated 2000 French troops at Abuquerque.

The French are reported to be organizing an expedition at San Louis for the invasion of the frontier.

New York, May 21. The Tribune's Washington dispatch says Lee occupies Spottsylvania Court House, and his camp is a perfect fortress, being fortified all around.

Gen. Grant has made an almost entire circuit of the enemy's position, chiefly with the hope of forcing Lee out of his works, so that his army can be reached on a fair field. The roads are still in a terrible condition for a movement of artillery or even infantry. On this account the reinforcements which have been getting up have been greatly delayed. The army was never in better spirits or finer condition.

The author of the bogus proclamation has been discovered and arrested. It was Joseph Howard, Jr., city editor of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. He formerly occupied a similar position here on the Times and Tribune. His motive is believed to have been to affect the stock market, and thus benefit himself pecuniarily. He has been sent to Fort Lafayette.

☞ The "Wilderness," in which the first battle of the present campaign was fought, embraces fifteen miles of timber land, thickly studded with undergrowth, making it at some points utterly impassable. During the battles our men were often unable to see any object twenty-five feet distant from them. It is from twelve to fifteen miles from Fredericksburg.

☞ Switzerland, already so rich in beautiful scenery, has had a new feature added to its wonders of nature. Near St. Maurice, in the Canton de Vaud, a grand crystal cavern has been discovered, at which one arrives by a boat on a subterranean lake. The cavern lies 400 metres, or 1300 feet below the surface of the earth, and is said to be beautiful beyond description.

☞ New York City has a church for every three thousand inhabitants; a groggery for every one hundred.

MARRIED.

In Gloucester, R. I., May 2d, 1864, by Eld. M. R. Phetteplace, Mr. JOSEPH A. KINGSBURY, to Miss MARY M. YOUNG, both of Killingly, Conn.

Notices.

Notice.

There will be a meeting (D. V.) in the barn of Bro. Lauren Grinnell, in West Barre, Orleans Co., N. Y., about three-fourths of a mile east of the West Barre post-office, commencing Friday, July 1st, 1864, and continuing over the following Lord's day. Brethren waiting for the coming of Jesus, and all christians, are cordially invited to come and work for the salvation of men, and so be built up themselves. The Lord cometh.

Those coming by railroad will stop at Albion, on the Rochester and Niagara Falls Road, and provision will be made to convey them to the meeting, which is about eight miles from that place. Brethren who intend to come will do well to drop a line, stating how many will be with them, and what day they will come, directed to me at Brockport. I will publish the team arrangement more definitely hereafter. Come praying and expecting a blessing.

JOS. D. BROWN.

Grove Meeting in Iowa.

A grove meeting (of brethren and sisters who love the truth, and are looking for the Lord), will be held on the farm of Bro. Samuel Eagleberger, in Milford Township, nine miles north west of Nevada, Story Co., Iowa, on June 3d, 4th, and 5th. A number of preachers are expected to be present. We give an affectionate invitation to all the brethren and sisters of the precious faith in this section, and will take care of all who come. Any information that may be desired as to the route from Nevada or other points, will be cheerfully given.

In behalf of the Brn., T. W. SMITH.

Notice.

I am requested to say, for the brethren in Springfield, that they have hired a hall in Goodrich's block, a little south of the Depot, where they will hold meetings every Sabbath. This is for a free Second Advent meeting, where the whole church have a chance to work out what God works in, whether it is speaking, praying, crying or shouting. They intend to contend for the liberty of the gospel as well as the letter.

The first meeting, May 1st, was a blessed one. God set his seal of approbation to it by giving us all a blessing. Some ten good warm exhortations after preaching in the forenoon, and eight in the afternoon. Others praised the Lord aloud. It seemed like an Advent meeting in '43. The singing went off on a high key, without a fiddle to hinder it. After meeting, the brethren stopped and chose three of their number to act as servants of the rest, not officers over them:—Brn. Thos. R. Weaver, Levi Allen, and Ethan Allen. They request me to say to the preachers, who may pass through Springfield, to correspond with Bro. Thos. R. Weaver. I feel that this is a providential door opened for those who wish to go where there is freedom of spirit. HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Northern N. Y. Christian Association will be held at Wilcox' Corners, twelve miles northeast of Mannsville, Jefferson Co., to commence Friday evening, May 27th, and hold over the following Sunday. Come, Brn. and Srs., one and all, let us rally to this meeting. Let us make this the most interesting meeting ever enjoyed in this region of country. Those coming by R. R. will stop at Mannsville, and conveyance will be in readiness to carry them to the meeting. Inquire for Milton R. Miles, or Benoni Stevens. It is expected that Eld. C. F. Sweet will be present to help preach the word. C. B. TURNER.

Meeting in Reading, Mich.

To the friends of Jesus living in Cambria, Reading, Allen, Algansee, Camden, and Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., would say that there will be, Lord willing, a meeting held at Reading village, the first Sunday in June, at 10 1-2 A. M. This meeting will be held either in the school-house or the Free Will Baptist church. We hope to see all at this meeting full of faith, hope, and zeal, which is according to knowledge, ready to work for God and the salvation of perishing souls. Come one, come all! A. N. SEYMOUR.

Conference.

The Eastern Maine Conference will be convened at Exeter, at the Chamberlain meeting-house, so-called, to commence June 9th, at 5 P. M., and continue over the following Lord's day. Our preaching brethren are ardently desired to atttend, and all others who possibly can from other portions of the country, and preach to us the word of God in sincerity and humility. God has blest us in that place of late with redeeming grace. To him be all the glory.

In behalf of the conference, I. DAMMAN.

Notice.

The Lord willing, our next quarterly meeting will be held in the city of Winona, in the county of Winona, Minn., to begin June 8th, and continue over the next first day of the week. Elder J. V. Himes will be there to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in the several sister churches are invited to attend, as ample provision will be made to accommodate the brethren from a distance. The Lord grant us a good time. In behalf of the brethren, PHILIP RAMER.

Notice.

I. C. Wellcome & Co., now have a good assortment of English Bibles, books, tracts, and hymn books for sale, at the regular prices. As the new hymn book is not to be published at present, we have contracted with Bro. Himes for the "Christian Lyre," so that we can supply those who want them in Maine at wholesale and retail. Prices according to the quantities wanted. Sent by mail or express. Address I. C. WELCOME & Co., Yarmouth, Me.

Notice.

Arrangements have been made for a Discussion between Elder Smith, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, and Elder Deyo of the Christian Church.

QUESTIONS.

Resolved, That the conscious existence of the soul of man, immediately after the death of the body, is a Bible doctrine. Aff., Eld. Smith.

Resolved, That the punishment of the wicked will result in the extinction of their conscious existence. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

Resolved, That Jesus Christ will come to reign as a personal King on the earth, and all his saints with him, for ever and ever. Aff., Eld. Deyo.

The debate will commence at 9 o'clock, June 14th, 1864, at Floyd, Floyd Co., Iowa, and continue three days. A meeting will be held over Sunday. The brethren in Floyd will gladly entertain all who may desire to attend. Come one and all that can.

Notice.

If any one owes me any money, and wants to pay it about these days, it will help me about paying some big bills for a lot of paper, printing, bookbinding, &c., &c. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Maine Quar. Conference.

The Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be holden at South Livermore, commencing Thursday, June 9th, at half past three o'clock P. M., and hold over the following Sabbath. Brethren will please call on Brn. D. M. Hanscomb, Silas Timberlake, C. Dennen, A. Soper, Z. Campbell, or Chas. Boothby. Teams will meet those coming on the cars at North Leeds. Watchmen, and brethren of other conferences, are invited to attend.

Come, brethren and sisters, let us endeavor to meet with our brethren at South Livermore in the spirit of the Lord, that he may own and bless us, and we be enabled by his grace to encourage and strengthen each other on our pilgrimage.

D. W. GRIFFIN.

Iowa Christian Conference.

The third quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, to commence June 3d, and continue over Lord's day. Strangers may inquire for Bro. Cooley, near the depot.

Will the brethren and friends send on requests for grove and two days' meetings, as I wish to make timely arrangements, for I still contemplate making a tour through Illinois to Michigan.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Prepare for Camp.

The Fourth Annual Camp and Grove meeting at Tremont, Mass., will commence (D. V.) June 28th, and continue over July 4th. Full particulars will will be given soon. Will churches that can be represented at that meeting intimate the same to me, as it may assist in obtaining a reduction of fare? Come, all that are good and that seek good.

H. F. CARPENTER, Poultney, Vt.

Grove Meeting.

There will be a Grove meeting at Monticello, Green county, Wis., commencing June 10th, and hold over the following Lord's day. Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present to assist in preaching the word. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the surrounding country. Come all, with praying hearts, expecting to do good and get good.

N. A. HITCHCOCK.

Wisconsin Grove Meeting, and Quarterly Conference.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held in connection with a grove meeting, on Castle Prairie, Sauk Co., Wis., near the residence of Brn. Thomas and Pierce, to begin June 3rd, and hold over Lord's day. Several ministers will be present.

W. SHELDON.

Notice.

Those wishing the ministerial labors of Bro. Lewis Robinson, Jun., will please address him at Holyoke, Mass.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings..........Sunday, May 29th

Worcester, Mass..........May 29th
Southampton, Long Island, N. Y., at the yearly meeting of the Shinnecock Indians..........June 5th
Melbourne, C. E..........Wednesday evening, June 8th
Montreal, C. E., June 9th to 19th inclusive.
MILES GRANT.

☞ On account of sickness, Bro. A. Ross is obliged to withdraw all of his appointments.

Sandy Hill, N. Y..........Sunday, May 29th
Rutland, Vt..........Sundays, June 5th and 12th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Poultney, Vt..........Sundays, May 29th and June 5th
GEO. CHAMPLIN.

Manchester..........Sunday, May 29th
T. M. PREBLE.

Nottingham, N. H..........Sunday, May 29th
Exeter..........Sunday, June 5th
S. S. MOONEY.

Lynn, Mass..........Sunday, June 5th
S. W. BISHOP.

Pittsfield, N. H..........May 29th
Chichester, (New Dover school-house)..........June 5th
New Durham Ridge..........June 12th
Z. FORD.

Alton Corner, N. H..........Sunday, June 5th
Dover, N. H..........Sunday, June 12th
Portsmouth, N. H..........Sunday, June 19th
Rye, N. H., (at Bro. M. Philbrick's), Sunday, June 26th
Lynn, Mass..........Sunday, July 3d
A. SIMPSON.

Dover, Me..........Sunday, June 5th
Portland, Me..........Sunday, June 12th
Athol, Mass..........Sundays, June 19th and 26th
Vernon, Vt..........Sunday, July 3d
J. HEMENWAY.

Concord, N. H..........Sunday, June 12th
O. R. FASSETT.

Hoosick, N. Y..........Friday evening, May 27th and over Sunday, the 29th.
New Bedford, Mass..........June 19th and 26th
Will attend Tremont campmeeting.
M. BATCHELOR.

Cumberland, (Merrill School-house), Sunday, May 29th
I. C. WELLCOME.

Richmond Corner, (Meeting-house), with Bro. H. D. Reed, May 29th.
Yarmouth..........Sunday, June 5th
R. R. YORK.

Greenwood, Me., (Bennet school-house)..........May 29th
Woodstock, (Perking's school-house)..........May 31st
Franklin Plantation, Thursday and Friday evenings, June 2d and 3d.
Dixfield Centre, Saturday evening, June 4th, and over Sunday. JOHN C. WHEELER.

East Boston, Tuesday evening, May 24th, and every evening through the week, and over the following Lord's day. A. W. SIBLEY.

CLARK'S HALL, RICHMOND, R. I.

Eld. Augustus Durfee..........Sunday, May 29th
Wm. Shepherd..........Sunday, June 5th

Charlestown, R. I., Stone meeting-house, Sunday, June 5th, at 11 A. M., and in the evening.
R. W. PEIRCE.

Scitico..........Sunday, June 19th
H. LADD.

New Haven, Ct..........Sunday, May 29th
Scitico, Ct..........Sunday, June 5th
New Britain, Ct..........Sunday, June 12th
R. WILLIAMS.

Hartford, Ct..........Sunday, May 29th
New Britain, Ct..........Thursday, June 2d and Sunday, June 5th.
Cheshire Street, Ct..........Thursday, June 9th and Sunday, June 12th.
Bristol, Ct..........Thursday, June 16th and Sunday, the 19th.
Pleasant Valley, Ct..........Saturday, June 25th and Sunday, the 26th.
In other places in the neighborhood as the doors may be opened. B. SPAULDING.

Bristol, Ct..........Sunday, May 29th
Also Monday and Tuesday evenings, May 30th and 31st
Shall be at liberty to preach the remainder of the week, and over the following Sabbath, June 6th, as the way opens. Please inform me by letter at Bristol, Ct, by Monday, May 30th.
Dalton, Mass., (at Bro. Smith's), Monday eve, June 7th
Holliston, Mass..........Sunday, June 12th
when a number more are expected to go forward in baptism.
South Natick..........Sunday, June 19th and every evening through the week to Saturday, June 25th, as the brethren may arrange. H. K. FLAGG.

Springfield, Mass..........May 29th
At liberty in June. H. MUNGER.

APPOINTMENTS FOR SCITICO, CT.

R. Williams..........Sunday, June 5th
I. B. Potter..........Sunday, June 12th

New Salem, (Daniel Robie's school-house), June 5th, at 5 o'clock P. M. C. RICHARDSON.

Northwood Narrows, N. H..........Sunday, May 29th
N. GLIDDEN.

Exeter, N. H..........Sunday, May 29th
Lee, N. H..........Sunday, June 5th
C. S. EMERSON.

North Adams, Mass..........Sunday, May 29th
R. MCCULLOCH.

Agawam, Mass..........Sunday, May [illegible]
Warehouse Point, Ct., (Chapel)..........Sunday, June 5th
S. D. DANIELS.

Lafayette, R. I..........Sunday, May 29th
Warwick Plains..........Sunday, June 5th
Glocester, R. I..........Sunday, June 12th
J. K. BELLOWS.

West Ossipee, N. H..........Sunday, May 29th
J. G. SMITH.

Melvin Village, (for baptism)..........May 29th
Ossipee, (Leighton's Corner) for baptism, (if desired), June 5th. T. W. PIPER.

APPOINTMENT FOR BRISTOL, CT.

H. K. Flagg..........May 29th
George L. Teeple..........June 12th

East Canaan, N. H..........Sunday, May 29th
A. SIMPSON.

Wilcox' Corners..........Friday evening, May 27th
C. B. TURNER.

East Hartland, Ct., May 25th, and evenings through the week, and over Sunday, the 29th.
My appointment at Goshen, Mass., for June 5th, is withdrawn. C. GOODRICH.

Prospect, (at Bro. Mix')..........Sunday, May 29th
S. WOODRUFF.

Medford, Me., (Cold Brook School-house), Sunday, May 29th.
Lincolnville, Me..........Sunday, June 5th
THOMAS SMITH.

APPOINTMENT FOR SPRINGFIELD, NO. 5 OAK ST.

P. S. Butler..........Sunday, May 29th

APPOINTMENT FOR AGAWAM, MASS.

H. Pratt..........Sunday, June 5th

Goshen..........Sunday, May 29th
H. PRATT.

New Durham Corner, Saturday evening, May 28th, and Sunday, 29th. JOSEPH PINKHAM.

APPOINTMENT FOR VERNON, VT.

S. S. Brewer..........Sundays, June 15th and 19th

Brighton Hill, Hebron, Saturday evening, May 28th, and over the Sabbath.
Livermore..........June 5th
J. T. JORDAN.

Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa., May 29th, and onward as the Lord may direct. Brn., pray for us.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Lunenburg, Mass., (at Bro. Burredge's)..........May 29th
Vernon, Vt..........June 5th and 19th
Brattleboro, Vt., (Centerville school-house)..June 12th
S. S. BREWER.

Grafton Centre, N. H..........May 29th
J. COUCH.

Cold Spring, Mass..........Sunday, May 29th
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

Lynn, Mass..........Sunday, May 29th
Hartford, Ct..........June 5th and 12th
Springfield, Mass., (Goodrich's Block)..........June 19th
J. S. WHITE.

Little Cooley, Crawford Co., May 29th, at half-past ten A. M.
At the Kellogg School-house 3 o'clock P. M.
J. T. ONGLEY.

Business.

PLEDGES FOR A $500 S. S. FUND.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, towards raising FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS, as a SUNDAY SCHOOL FUND, to aid the Christian Publication Society in publishing a SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER, S. S. Books, Hymn and Question Books, etc., for the use of our children and Sunday Schools; our subscriptions to be paid as soon as the whole amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Dec. 21st,	$464.79
Geo. L. Teeple	.75
New Bedford	2.00
The old man in the mountains	.25
Oscar R. Pease	.20

☞ Information Wanted.

The following persons wish their paper changed, but do not give us the Post Office and State FROM which it is to be changed. We cannot make the desired changes without this information.

Weeden Holloway, Sarah P. Sprague, Polly King, H. C. Anderson, Wm. Hurd, J. W. Barnell, J. Sampson, Reuben Wethby, Rachel Oliver, John W. Bliss, Emma Green, Eliza A. Tuttle, E. McKeen, Jr.

The following persons send money for the Crisis, but do not give their POST OFFICE and STATE. We cannot give them credit till we know where the paper is sent.

C. Farrington, T. Lane, Mrs. D. Kilburn, Mrs. E. V. Barney, A. Payson, J. Snow, H. H. Hart, Wm. E. Soper, Henry Hiltard, Miss C. D. Butler.

MARY BOYD wants her paper stopped. Where does she live? Also, MARGARET C. RILEY, what P. O.?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Bro J M Matts—The Society have made no arrangements for publishing the work to which you refer.
Mrs E S Willard—Nothing else from V. B. since the 50c.
N M Wells—Due from No. 428.
W Sheldon—Free.
T W Piper—A. Worth was credited in No. 447.
Edward Dunscomb—Will send you the tracts ordered as soon as we obtain a full supply.
Job Card—Pays to No. 503.

CASH RECEIPTS.

The present No. of the Crisis is 451. The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

—$1.00 each.—T Frost 468, B P Buswell 468, N Knapp 538, M Hemenway 423, C F Clough 476, S W Bartlett 442, N McCulloch Jr. 468, A Smith 494, Mrs. S A Macomber 476, W Simes 471, N Merrow 468, Geo S Gordon 416, J T Hawkins 476, A Chase 476, J A Snell 476, Mrs M. Thorne 476, P. Rockwood 458, M. E. Piper 476, W. Pitts 476, H. G. Dearborn 476, J Emery 476, D. Grant 468, A Boothby 468, L T Webber 470, C W Gooch 468, Dr C M Swett 470, Mrs A Bradley 476, Mrs C Work 468, J Seager 475, J L Small 451, G W Bassett 441, S Shaw 445, I C Perkins 476, J L W Marshall 462, R W Neale 475, A W Rowell 496, Mrs. S Young 476, V Burr 470, Mrs D Robinson 473, A B Pinkham 476, I Quimby 407, L A Dow 473, I C Estes 434, N Brayton 472, C M Park 451, J. Smith 3d 454, L. Phelps 476, S Kennedy 476, M Hopkins 476, N. Phillips 474, Mrs R Glidden 476, S D Applebee 472, S Loud 479, P Farnsworth 468, M Steere 468.

$2.00 each.—J Sawyer 365, J. D. Bush 500, Mrs H A Groatt 453, Mrs S A Van Dusen 503, J W Eldridge 502, A S Robie 502, Mrs. J A Green 502, B B Hill 476, W. Hughes 468, Mrs. M Shroeder 475, A FREEMAN 429, R Brinkerhof 502, M. E. Webster 502, M C Simonds 502, S Sawyer 419, F. C. Chadwick 503, E. T. Hobbs 457, B Loud 481, M S Grinnell 494, J Crane 502, E Yager 483, G Taylor 488, C Haines 502.

50c each.—H Moses 464, J Jewson 463, W H Burtch 463, T L Day 463, S D Hanna 463, Mrs. W Towle 463, E Sears 463, J Bowers 463, W French 463, J Libby 463, A Daggett 463, I Smith 463, E MCKEENE JR—what P. O.? J Taylor 459.

Capt. R O Brien $3.00, 512; J Stockwell Jr 30c, 485; J. Watkins 35c, 472; P Johnston 75c, 449; Mrs. H. B. Nourse $1.25, 450; J. CARD $3.00, 503; A Lucas $3.00, 494; Capt. Gowers $1.50, 419.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

E A Prescott $3.00, S D Ackerman 38c. J Stockwell Jr 70c, C. R. Edmunds 50c, O. D. Woodruff $1.00, W. Simes 20c, J. Watkins 65c, J. Minton 25c, L. D. Lord $2.00, E. Dunscomb $3.00, J L Small $1.00, T. Smith $6.00, E Riscdolph 20c.

FOR THE POOR.—C. and H. Smith, $3.00.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.
BY MAIL.

J Hill, Mrs S D Ackerman, P White Jr., S L Manley J Minton, E V C Bennett, J G Bush, H Brown, P S W Deyo, W Elden, S Hale, J Stockwell Jr., F G Haskell, Mrs E Riscdolf.

BY EXPRESS.—N Orcutt.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M Batchelor, J Bickford, G W Stetson, J Dickinson, M Patton, W H Blaisdell, A G Holland, J Taylor, J C Hall, C H Leverton, J T Dixon, I K Lombard

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Thos. W. Smith—Nevada, Story Co., Iowa.
L. C. McKinstry—Montreal, C. E.
S. S. Brazee—Cold Spring, Mass.

☞ I have received from brethren and friends in Biddeford, $20.00; from brethren in Kennebunk, $2.50.
Worcester, Mass. R. CURTIS.

☞ Received from "A true friend," $2.00; friends at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., by H. L. H., $20.00. W. PRATT.

Expository Works on Prophecy.

REMOVAL.—I have moved to Ashburnham, Depot, Mass., where all letters and orders must be directed. I have now on hand the following works:

1. THE DAYS IN WHICH WE LIVE. 2. THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES. 3. THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND SIGNS OF THE TIMES. 4. EXPOSITION OF REVELATION SIXTH. 5. TREATISE ON REVELATION XIII. IN TWO PARTS,—A HISTORY OF THE LEOPARD AND TWO-HORNED BEAST. 6. THE HISTORY OF AN IMMORTAL SOUL. 7. A third and new edition of THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS, with additional pages and cover. THE LAST DAY TOKENS, Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

Please see notice in another column. All the above works sent by mail for one dollar and twenty-five cents. Several are illustrated with good engravings. ☞ Write NAME, POST OFFICE, COUNTY and STATE, in a plain manner.

S. S. BREWER, Ashburnham Depot, Mass.

Dear friend, get them, and circulate them. They will do you and all that read them good.

VALUABLE BOOKS

Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols., cloth. Noted by Jas. Murdoch. Good copy. (Wholesale $5.00), $4.50.
Kitto's Cyclopedia of Biblical Literature, half calf, 2 vols., new, $7.00.
Paley's Complete Works, 1 vol., sheep, new, $2.00.
Bower's History of the Popes, 2 vols., sheep, 1637 pp., nearly new, $4.50.
De Cormenin's History of the Popes, 2 vols. in one, sheep, 918 pp., (good copy), written by a Catholic, $1.75.
Englishman's Greek Concordance, sheep, new, $1.75.

The above prices do not include postage—will be sent by EXPRESS.

The following will be sent post-paid for the prices annexed:—
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Coles' Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00.
Synonymes of the Greek New Testament, cloth, (an excellent work), 75 cts.
Eclipse of Faith, (a good work for sceptics), $1.25.
Defence of "Eclipse," $1.00.
Illustrations of Popery, $1.00.
Apocryphal New Testament, 90 cts.
Sawyer's New Testament, 75 cts.
Paley's Evidences. Notes by Whately, 80 cts.
Notes by Nairne, 90 cts.
Gaussen on Inspiration, $1.00.
Gaussen on the Canon of the Scriptures, $1.25.
Dowling's History of Romanism, $1.00.

Address all orders for the above to E. P. WOODWARD, 167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. PEARL, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.12. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $3.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. TESTAMENTS. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

LARDNER'S WORKS, 10 volumes 8vo. Two copies of this, the ablest and most elaborate defense of Christianity ever published. It is an English book, and is scarce. It is worth at least $20 per set. These will be sold for less than they can be imported, viz., $16 per copy.

ROY'S HEBREW DICTIONARY, in which every Hebrew word in the Bible is found, and its pronunciation given in English letters, with numerous references to places where it occurs, etc, etc. Price $6,—for $4.50.

ENGLISH REFERENCE BIBLES, a good selection. $1.00 to $1.50.

The above are to be sent by express at the purchaser's expense.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Social Hymns,

Original and selected, by H. L. H. 10 cts. single; $1.00 per dozen, $6.00 per one hundred, postpaid.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. [illegible]

All orders for any of the following works must be addressed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. P. Woodward. 20c, postage 2c.

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal, conscious suffering of the Wicked?" 25c, postage 4c.

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." 15c, postage 2c.

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." 20c, postage 2c. Bound 30c, postage 5c.

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents single, 40 cents per dozen, $3.00 per hundred. Postage 2 cents for each package of four tracts or less.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruah and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matthew 10: 28, Genesis 35: 17, &c.

EXPOSITORY WORKS ON PROPHECY, BY S. S. BREWER.

1. The Days in which we Live. This is a concise history of the Four Great Monarchies—Babylon, Media Persia, Grecia, Rome Pagan, Rome Papal—in its present condition, as viewed by the light of Revelation. [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $1.20; single, by mail, 12 cts.

2. An Exposition of the Seven Seals. History and facts applied in a manner plain and easy to be understood, illustrated with engravings, [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, 80 cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.

3. The Slaying of the Witnesses. Showing that the "Second Woe" ended with the Reign of Terror in France, [illegible] "Behold the Third Woe cometh quickly." Per dozen, by mail, 80 cts. Single, by mail, 10 cts.

4. A Treatise on Revelation XIII, in Two Parts. [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $1.20. Single, by mail, 20 cts.

5. The Kingdom of God and Signs of the Times. [illegible] Per dozen, $2.25. Single, by mail, 20 cts.

6. The Last Day Tokens. No. 1. This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7—"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, 67 cts. Single, by mail, 9 cts.

7. Last Day Tokens. No. 2 is an answer to the question, "What shall be the Sign of thy coming, and the end of the World?" [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $1.50. Single, by mail, 15 cts.

8. Last Day Tokens. No. 3. This is a phenomenal compend, containing a history of the Signs in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars; [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, $2.25. Single, by mail, 25 cts.

9. The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 4 cts., postage 2 cts.

10. The History of an Immortal Soul. Mythology and Theology vs. Bible; [illegible] Per dozen, by mail, 67 cts. Single, 8 cts.; by mail, 10 cts.

11. Rich Man and Lazarus. New edition, covers, and enlarged. Price 6 cts. By mail, 8 cts.; per dozen, by mail, 65 cts.

One copy of each of the above works sent by mail for $1.25. ☞ Be sure to write your name, Post Office, County, and State in a plain manner.

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; the perils of a slumbering world, and the duty of a faithful church. A stirring tract of 24 pages. By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 36 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, showing that the last days, marked by divine patience and human iniquity, are even now upon us. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of leading Scriptural doctrines [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 30 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 20 pages.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 20 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, by H. Grattan Guinness; [illegible]

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," [illegible] 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the Immortality of the soul, [illegible]

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine [illegible] By C. F. Hudson. 32 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

"I AM BUT A LONELY PILGRIM."

TUNE—"Nellie Gray."

I am but a lonely pilgrim; this world is not my home,
Its honors and its wealth I would not share;
But there is a happy home in the world that is to come,
The place the Savior will prepare.

CHORUS.

We'll watch, and we'll pray, and we'll look for the day
When our trials and our sorrows will be o'er;
For Christ the Lord will come to take his dear ones home,
To reign with him in glory evermore.

Let the wicked persecute me, and the world display its hate,
And afflictions deep flow in on every side,
I'll look to Him who suffered, and who for me has bled,
And in his cheering promises abide.

His promise now assures us that if we will o'ercome,
An eternal crown of glory he'll bestow,
And with him in his kingdom and on his throne sit down,
Where peace and never ending glories flow.

We do not look for death as the gate to endless joy,
That ushers in to us redemption's day;
The grave is dark and drear, no device nor work is there,
And knowledge's power and wisdom's passed away.

In the resurrection morn, when Christ the Lord has come,
And the archangel's trumpet loud shall sound;
To meet him in the skies the dead in Christ arise,
Our crown and reward will then be found.

To meet him in the air and in his glory share,
Is our hope, our chief and fond desire;
While they who jeer and scoff, and the awful day put off,
Will perish wholly in its raging fire.

Come, Lord Jesus, come, and take thy rightful throne,
And forever in thy glory reign;
Come, bring us sweet release, bid angry strife to cease,
And grant to us the Eden home again.

T. W. SMITH.

For the World's Crisis.

THE VILLAGE IN THE MOUNTAINS.

NUMBER TWO.

Continuing the account of the hardy mountaineers, commenced in last week's paper, who, as the merchant learned from their enemies, the Catholics, after the labors of the day, so great was their zeal, would "flock from the different hamlets, and meet in the mountains, in cold and bad weather, at eight or nine o'clock at night, to avoid the interruption of their enemies, and to sing and pray." Would not such persons feel like pilgrims and strangers here, and be willing and anxious to learn the truths of God's word?

On reaching Lyons, the merchant forwarded the promised Testaments, and some tracts, together with one copy of the Bible entire, to his mountain friends, which were received by them in due time, and caused them great joy. In a letter written by the widow to the merchant acknowledging his gift, we find the following:

"As we believe and are assured that the Spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ could alone have inspired you with the desire to distribute the sacred Scriptures to those who are disposed to make a holy use of them, we hope and believe that the divine Savior will be himself your recompense, and that he will give to you, as well as to all of us, the grace to understand and to seek a part in his second coming; for this ought to be our only and constant desire in the times of darkness and tribulation in which we live." Again she says, "It is impossible to describe the satisfaction that my heart experienced on the arrival of the kind communications which you have been pleased to send me. I cannot find words to express the happiness I have derived from perusing the entire copy of the Old and New Testament. The Old and New Testaments, properly understood, are but one Testament; such is the connection of the sacred books—for the New Testament is the key to the Old, and the Old the same to the New. In innumerable passages of the Old Testament, the birth, death, and glory of our divine Redeemer are announced, in terms more or less distinct. In reading the prophecies of Jeremiah and Isaiah, we perceive that those prophets spoke of our Savior almost as though they had lived with him on the earth. His second coming is also foretold in many passages, especially in the prophecies of Ezekiel and Daniel." In concluding this letter the widow says: "As our brethren and sisters in Jesus Christ, who, by an effect of his grace altogether free and unmerited, look for his second coming to salvation," etc., she presents their christian salutation.

Thus these untraditioned disciples of Jesus, (for they had only learned of him), had not only learned to live aright, and rest their hope of future salvation upon his death, but to expect the accomplishment of that great salvation at his return—his second coming, which they longed for, and expected soon. The interesting letters of the widow produced an effect upon the Parisan merchant and his Protestant friends, causing them to send a large supply of Testaments and tracts, etc.

In another letter written by the widow, she says, "Believe me, my dear brother in Christ, that I never shall forget you in my prayers, however feeble they may be; for I can never forget the day when, urged by christian friendship, you entered my house, and imparted that truly spiritual nourishment which serves for time and eternity, and we discoursed together upon the second coming of our divine Redeemer."

Much more of interest is found in the tract, from which the above selections have been made, concerning these humble, persecuted christians, which we do not deem it best to copy for a short newspaper article. Their circumstances and faith, on reading an account of it called to mind a work I read some years since, entitled "The Exiles of Zillerthal," a community of Bible christians, believers in the near approach of Christ, taught this truth by the reading of the Scriptures alone, who were banished from their homes and country, there being some four hundred of them.

We called to mind, also, the Molokaners of Russia, (or milk-eaters, as they are called, from their temperate habits of diet). An account was given of them in 1848, by the Rev. Mr. Roth, a missionary, whose station, "Helenendorf, may well be described as situated on the utmost verge of Christendom." After having visited them he gave the following account:

"The Milk-eaters separated themselves from the Greek communion, avowedly, on account of the invocation of saints, the various masses, the worship of pictures and relics, the prescribed use of the sign of the cross, and similar superstitious observances, insisted on by the Greek church. In short, they took conscientious exceptions against every part of the public worship of that church, excepting the sermon, which, however, (more especially in the country parishes), is almost always omitted as superfluous. After enduring in their birth-place, which was situated in the interior of Russia, unspeakable hardships and oppressions, and seeing, year after year, many of their leaders exiled to Siberia, as obstinate heretics, it was matter of thankfulness to them when the Russian government came to the determination, some eight or nine years since (1839 or '40), to banish the whole of this pestilent sect to the Schamachian district in the province of Grusia.

"This punitive measure was no doubt meant for their hurt, but God turned it for good, as, like Israel of old, 'the more they were oppressed, the more they multiplied and grew.' The Russian government may well have felt surprise at the amount of immigration to which this sentence of banishment gave rise; for there now exists in that wild region, from sixty to eighty villages, containing many thousand families. The form of their faith is simply the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments; their hymns are the Psalms of David, and the Bible knowledge possessed by both men and women among them may be justly termed extraordinary. Their public worship commences with the singing of a Psalm; then follows an extempore prayer by one of the elders, who afterwards reads and expounds a chapter of the Bible, much in the manner, it would seem, of our Wurtemburg Scripture readers. The children of both sexes are, generally speaking, instructed by their own parents, although where a person fitted for the task can be found in a village, a regular school is maintained. But however accomplished, the result is a most happy one, since not one child above twelve years of age can be found among this people who does not possess a competent knowledge of reading and writing, as well as a rich store of Scripture passages committed to memory.

"In respect of morals, they are so exemplary, that few denominations of German christians may bear comparison with them. When, for example, a dispute arises between two Molokaners (which is said to be a very rare occurrence), they feel bound in conscience to so literal fulfillment of the apostolic admonition, "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath," that they make a rule of seeking out each other and shaking hands before sunset. A liar or a drunkard is unknown among them; indeed, the majority of them drink no fermented liquors, (although the use of such is not forbidden among them), and hence the appellation of Milk-eaters, by which they are now generally known. Whether this name was at first assumed by themselves, or given in derision by others, I am unable to determine. Such is the character given of this singular and estimable sect by persons on whose testimony I feel warranted to depend."

Mr. Roth continues: "You may imagine my surprise when he (one of the Molokaners, a fellow traveler), addressed me as follows:

"'I should feel greatly obliged if you will give me your opinion, whether we Molokaners are right in thinking that the coming of the Lord Jesus cannot now be far distant.'"

And Mr. Roth further learned that they had read the work of Albert Bengel on the Apocalypse.

These are significant facts, showing that the "gospel of the kingdom (is being) preached in all the world for a witness to all nations," that the end is near; and while scoffers grow bold and ask, "Where is the promise of his coming?" believers are to be found among all nations. Oh, let us be ready to hail the glad day!

CHAS. P. DOW.

North Stanbridge, C. E.

IS THE PAPAL DYNASTY PAUL'S MAN OF SIN?

This is a question of great importance in reference to a future Anti-Christ. That the succession of Popes has not in the past, and does not now answer to the description of Anti-Christ as given by Paul in 2 Thess. 2, is evident:

1st. Because the throne of the Papal government has never been situate "in the temple of God," which we understand to be used by the apostle to signify the place of David's throne—Jerusalem, or "the glorious Holy Mount," in which place he is to come to his end by the standing up of Michael, the great Prince. See Dan. 11: 41–45, and 12: 1. Jerusalem being the seat of the Anti-Christian government, he will concentrate all his forces there, and through his instrumentality all nations will be gathered to Jerusalem. See Zech. 14: 2. Rome has always been the seat of the Papal government, and known for its idolatrous worship, and cannot in any wise be called the "temple of God." God has not said concerning it, as of Jerusalem, it shall be the place of "my rest forever, for I have desired to dwell there." That Jerusalem will yet become the seat of the Anti-Christian government under its new organization, we doubt not. But it is argued that the Papal government is Anti-Christ inasmuch as it assumes to be the church of Christ, and through such pretensions he sits in the temple of God. We fail to see the force of the argument; for we understand the apostle not to say, he shall indeed sit there, and show "himself that he is God."

Again, it is argued that the Anti-Christ stood in the temple of God at the time of Jerusalem's overthrow, when Titus with the Roman army destroyed the city. But this occurred centuries before the Papal government had any existence; and we fail to see that Pagan Rome stood in the temple of God, any more than the Grecians, Medo-Persians, or Chaldeans; for the Jews were tributary to all these powers. But we need not stop to argue this point, for as the man of sin, as described by the apostle, was yet to come, any occurrence that took place previous to that date will not answer to that description.

2nd. He is to exalt "himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped." We fail to see that the Papal government has ever thus exalted itself. He only claims to be the successor of the apostles, of whom he says St. Peter was chief. He acknowledges Jesus Christ to be his superior, and claims to be his representative on earth, as our Governor General is the representative of Queen Victoria. He does not exalt himself above all that is called God; he professes to be a mediator through whom the repenting sinner approaches or holds communion with God.

But it is argued that the Pope is the Anti-Christ, or man of sin, inasmuch as he professes to have power to convert bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, etc. But if the working of miracles alone will constitute him the man of sin, then there is a plurality of them; for the priests profess the same power; and Paul does not speak of him in the plural, but in the singular number; "and he is to exalt himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped.' But the Roman church teaches that God can not be approached only through a mediator, and thus the sinner is taught to pray to the Virgin Mary, and to the apostles and saints, to intercede with God for them. Thus they profess to have a very high opinion of God, seeing he cannot be sought unto only through some infallible being.

That the man of sin, or Anti-Christ, will come out of Rome, we doubt not. But when he is to come to the full, he will exalt himself above every God, and even deny the existence of any other God besides him. And he will sit in the temple of God and show himself that he is God. That the mystery of iniquity is already at work, we are fully persuaded; and he that now letteth, will let, until he be taken out of the way. Then shall that wicked one be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming.' He will be destroyed in the Holy Mount of God—see Dan. 11: 45, and 12: 1; to which place the Lord will descend. See Zech. 14: 4. And he will go forth and fight against those nations of the earth that will gather round Jerusalem to the battle, at the call of the Anti-Christ, to make war against Christ and his army of the saints. And the beast, or Anti-Christ, together with the false prophet, will be taken and cast alive into the lake of fire, and the remnant of those nations will be slain with the sword of him that sits on the horse. See Zech. 14: 2; compare with Rev. 19: 19–21. His coming will be after the working of Satan with all power, and signs, and lying wonders. Satan will give him his power and his seat and great authority. See Rev. 13: 2. The dragon being cast down to the earth, he will work through the Anti-Christ, and will invest him with all his Satanic power; so that he will do great signs and wonders, insomuch that he will deceive all whose names are not written in the book of life, so that they will believe that he is the Christ, and he will be worshiped as God, sitting in the temple of God. And because they have not the love of truth which is and will be proclaimed by the faithful servants of God, but have pleasure in unrighteousness, God will send them a strong delusion that they may believe a lie, that they all may be damned; which lie consists in Anti-Christ saying that he is the true and only God.—Advent Herald.

For the World's Crisis.

"GOD IS LOVE."—1 John 4: 16.

The first question that arises in the mind of man, when an assertion like the above is made, is in regard to its truth; and, if true, in what way should it affect us?

That love is the distinguishing attribute of the great Jehovah, is proved by all his dealings with the race of man, from the time of Eden down to the present day. Although man had fallen from his blest estate by transgressing the commands of God; although he had sinned with a high hand and an uplifted arm, thereby bringing upon himself the sentence of eternal death; yet God in his love and mercy would not suffer him to die without hope, and from his blest abode on high the well beloved Son of God took upon him the likeness of man, and was despised and buffeted by those high in authority; scorned and trampled upon by the professed servants of the Most High; and finally died the painful death of the cross, that the way of salvation might be open, and the rays of hope pierce through the darkness that enshrouded the children of Adam.

Here is love, before which all earthly affection shrinks into nothingness—love immeasurable, such as divinity alone can feel.

Let us consider in what way the mercy of God should affect us. Should we turn a deaf ear to the calls of mercy, and seek to drown all high and holy aspirations amid the pleasures and dissipations of earth? Or should we with grateful hearts bow low before the throne of grace, and, asking pardon for our past transgressions, strive as far as in us lieth to pay "the debt of love we owe" by a life of obedience to God? That the latter is our imperative duty, reason and gratitude reply. Let us but do that duty, and we shall feel and know for ourselves that "God is love"; peace like a river will flow into the soul, removing all stains of guilt; happiness unutterable be our portion during our sojourn upon earth, and when standing upon the threshold of eternity, we can bid our friends farewell with cheerful hearts, feeling that we shall meet them all again, where—

"Sickness and sorrow, pain and death,
Are felt and feared no more."

And when the last loud trump shall wake the sleeping dead, when the heavens shall roll together, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, we shall rise from the slumbers of the grave clothed in the garb of immortality, to bask in the sunshine of God's love while endless ages roll. God grant that we may be there.

S. R. A. COBURN.

Lynn, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

TO MY UNCONVERTED FRIENDS.

While I see so many of all ages hastening unprepared to the grave, I cannot forbear calling upon you to stop for a moment, and consider what affecting motives urge you to make your peace with God. Your christian friends earnestly desire your salvation. They see your danger. They know that unless your heart is renewed by the Holy Spirit, your soul must be lost. They plead with you. They weep and pray for you night and day; they long to rejoice over you as a new-born heir of heaven. The angels of God desire your salvation. Yes, their golden harps are tuned to raise a louder song of joy over every one who will repent. Will you not be the first to cause the arches of heaven to re-echo, that another wanderer has returned? Shall angels long for your salvation, and you be unconcerned about it yourself?

Christ himself desires your salvation. For this he became "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." For this he endured the agony of the garden and the cross. He calls you, by his word, by his providence, and by his Spirit. He declares that he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. And shall he call in vain? is it nothing to you that he shed his precious blood, and bore the wrath of Jehovah for perishing sinners? Oh! heart of adamant, that will not melt in view of such condescension, suffering, and love! Oh! vile ingratitude, that can behold, unmoved, the Son of God in tears, offering himself for man's redemption! Consider also the glories of the New Jerusalem when Jesus comes to make all things new. There is the throne of God and of the Lamb. There the pure river of the water of life forever flows. There saints and angels will offer their unceasing praises. There all will unite in shouting "Alleluia, Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

Death is also rapidly approaching. Whoever you are, you may be assured that death is nigh to you, to him you must yield, willing or unwilling; and eternal destruction must be your doom, unless you hasten to Christ, the only refuge from the impending storm. The day of judgment is at hand. Soon the loud trump of the archangel will awake the sleeping dead, and you among them will come forth to the resurrection of life, or the resurrection of damnation. Then the Savior, whom you have loved or despised, will appear in the clouds of heaven, to give to every one according as his work shall be. Before him you must stand with assembled millions, while he bids you depart, or welcomes you to a seat at his right hand.

Other motives might be urged, but if these will not awaken you to a sense of your danger, others would be unavailing. Now you have a day of grace. Now the saints are praying for you; the angels of God wait to rejoice over you; the Lord Jesus Christ, by his word and by his Spirit is entreating you to come. Oh! my dear friends, as you value your eternal well-being, I beseech you awake from this slumber! Arise and go to Jesus! Go to him as a humble beggar; go penitent and believing. None such were ever sent empty away. Come, then, to Jesus. Come now. Come just as you are. I beseech you, in Christ's stead, prepare to meet your God.

Woburn, Mass. W. L. CARROLL.

For the World's Crisis.

THE PAST.

I am sitting to-night by the window,
All alone in my cheerless room,
The evening shadows are falling,
Fast gathers the deep'ning gloom;
But my thoughts on airy pinions
Are wandering back afar,
To the time when God me first called
To enlist in the holy war.

I picture the gladness I felt
When God my sins did forgive,
And fancy I still hear him say,
If faithful, soon with me thou'lt live.
As these thoughts I revolve in my mind,
Of my soul this question I ask—
Am I as earnest and willing as then
To perform my heavenly task?

As I carefully examine myself,
I see that most surely I'm not,
There is much I have left undone,
And much, I fear, have forgot;
But most humbly I now do pray
God to set me aright once more,
And help me from hence to love,
And his holy name to adore.

Providence, R. I. C. H. SWEET.

For the World's Crisis.

EMANCIPATED.

"Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity." Jesus.

Daughter of Abraham, wouldst thou be loosed from thy spiritual infirmity which has bowed thee together, lo, these many years, so that thou couldst in no wise lift up thyself? Come, then, at Jesus' call, and feel by faith his gracious hands laid upon thee, and hear by faith his gracious words—"Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity"; and immediately lift up thyself and glorify God. Be not dismayed that the ruler of the synagogue heeds not thy wonderful deliverance, but rather answers with indignation that Jesus should thus honor thee. Still praise him, and let him answer for thee: "Thou hypocrite, . . . ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, to be loosed from this bond?"

In the name of my Master I ask the rulers of the synagogues of these last days if the daughters of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, nearly six thousand years, ought not to be loosed from their infirmities so that they can stand out and glorify God? Where is the son of Abraham who will step forward and say, Let her be still bowed together; let her in no wise lift up herself? Will he not rather, in imitation of his Elder Brother, call her to him, and lay his hands upon her, and bid her in His name arise and glorify God?

What has man to fear in woman's normal state? Does he fear his own dignity as she is elevated to hers? As well begrudge her the air she breathes, lest he have not enough! Yea, can man have his true dignity as long as woman is deprived of hers at his hand? When woman, "being deceived," fell, did man, "not deceived," maintain his integrity? Did they fall together, and can man rise without her? As well the king of birds to rise with one wing broken. They must rise together.

"He that loveth his wife loveth himself." What is it to love her? Is it not to take pleasure in her development as he does in his own, and to assist her in it just so far as her capabilities will allow? Are not her capabilities the same in kind as his own? Can his aspirations be met in the common duties of this life? then can hers be met in that which fails for him? To confine her to this measure is first to bow her together so that she can in no wise lift up herself. For this injustice, at the hand of man, do we see the abnormal developments in her character all about us. She is like the unfortunate plant which, by a careless foot or dead weight, has been crushed and turned out of its way, but still grows on, though bereft of its native beauty.

Were it only our pains in our bowed-down condition, I would have held my tongue, although their ill effects can not be estimated upon the race; for "woman is the mother of man"; and as in nature the stream can not rise higher than the fountain, so here she taints all her seed. But there is another and a higher consideration, that prompts the petition that we be delivered from this Haman-spirit, viz: "The King's damage"; and as the King himself has held out to us the golden sceptre, we come in hope. Our tears, our prayers, our fastings, our feasts, have prevailed, "through the Beloved," to give us audience at the King's table, and we do feel that this spirit of oppression will be doomed, at his hand, to "the gallows fifty cubits high"; then will the King's wrath be pacified; then will this Mordecai stand before the King, and her true relation be discovered. Then what a shout will there be in the "household"! such a shout as never went up before since "the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy" at creation's birth,—nor ever will be again until Redemption's song shall burst upon a renovated world.

Until then, my sisters, weep on, pray on, fast on; be still "obedient." Look well to the ways of your household; eat not the bread of idleness; train up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and if, in addition to all this, God is pleased, according to his promise in these last days, to pour out his Spirit upon you, and you must prophesy (which is to speak unto men to edification, to exhortation, and to comfort), go forward, walking erect for God, "and the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly."

Be ready, in these times of departure from "the book of the law," with a "Thus saith the Lord," as "Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum," to answer all who may "ask for the old paths," and the good way, that they may walk therein and find rest to their souls. Be ready with a word of comfort to the young Josiahs of tender heart and humble mien, and to the obedient Esthers and Ruths. Be ready to speak with God's words to the wicked, and to say, "Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways, for why will ye die?" In short, "be ready for every good work." "Speak evil of no man." "Be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness unto all men." "Avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law, for they are unprofitable and vain." "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Your Sister, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, but to whom Jesus has said, "Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity," and who would now glorify God. Amen. Pray for me.

E. S. WILLARD.

Hammonton, N. J.

MAKING FUN OF PEOPLE.

Once when traveling on a stage coach, says a writer in a contemporary, I met with a young lady who seemed to be upon the constant lookout for something laughable. Every old barn was made the subject of a passing joke, while the cows and sheep looked demurely at us, little dreaming that folks could be merry at their expense.

All this was perhaps harmless enough. Animals were not sensitive in that respect. They are not likely to have their feelings injured because people make fun of them; but when we come to human beings, that is quite another thing.

So it seemed to me; for, after awhile, an aged woman came running across the fields, lifting up her hand to the coachman, and in a shrill voice begging him to stop. The good-natured coachman drew up his horses, and the old lady, coming to the fence by the roadside, squeezed herself through between two posts which were very near together.

The young lady in the stage coach made some ludicrous remark, and the passengers laughed. It seemed very excusable; for, in getting through the fence, the poor woman made sad work with her old black bonnet; and now, taking a seat beside a well-dressed lady, really looked as if she had been blown there by a whirlwind.

This was a new piece of fun, and the girl made the most of it. She caricatured the old lady upon a card; pretended to take a pattern of her bonnet; and in various ways sought to raise a laugh at her.

At length the poor woman turned a pale face towards her, and said,—

"My dear girl, you are now young, and healthy, and happy. I have been so too, but that time is past. I am now old and forlorn. The coach is taking me to the death-bed of my only child. And then, my dear, I shall be a poor old woman, all alone in the world, where merry girls will think me a very amusing object. They will laugh at my old fashioned clothes and sad appearence, forgetting that the old woman has loved and suffered, and will live forever."

The coach now stopped before a poor looking house, and the old lady feebly descended the steps.

"How is she?" was the first trembling inquiry of the mother.

"Just alive," said the man who was leading her into the house.

The driver mounted his box, and we were upon the road again. Our merry young friend had placed the card in her pocket. She was leaning her head upon her hand; and you may be sure that I was not sorry to see a tear upon her fair young cheek. It was a good lesson, and one which we greatly hoped would do her good.

EVERY HOUSE HAS ITS CROSS.

A widow lady was almost in despair from the variety of hindrances, vexations, and disappointments she had to endure. She was quite overwhelmed with her domestic crosses, and had scarcely the heart to go on with her daily conflicts. "No other roof," she complained, "is so constantly beset with misery as mine." She had no idea that any neighbor of hers was half so crossed as herself; judging, as she did, from outward appearances. But it pleased God to teach her a lesson, through the instrumentality of a dream, which was the wholesomest medicine of which she could have partaken.

One night she dreamed that a whole town stood before her, and every house in it bore a cross against its door; on one it was a very large one, on the next it was of less size, and on others, though they were very few, it was but a small one. Among all the crosses, however, none appeared to her so inconsiderable and light to carry as that at her own door. She awoke a new creature. What she had seen she had understood; and she remembered Christ's saying, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." She fell down upon her knees at once, and prayed God to pardon her for her complaining, murmuring, repining spirit, and besought him to release her from it, and fill her with a spirit of patience, submissiveness, and content with his orderings. And she implored him also to endow her with his strengthening grace to bear her cross, which from that hour forward she found to be light, as compared with the cross her own weakness had given her to bear. "Yes," she exclaimed, "'I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me,' for his 'yoke is easy, and his burden is light!'"

REMEDY FOR A SQUEAKING NUISANCE.—A correspondent of the Scientific American has discovered a remedy for squeaking boots, which will prove of essential value to all who are annoyed from this cause. The writer says: "I had frequently tried saturating the soles with common oils, but though this mitigated the evil, it did not cure it. It occurred to me that boiled linseed oil might do better. I accordingly applied it to the soles, keeping them quite hot during the process, to enable them to absorb the more. I did not know but that the hot oil might be ruinous to the boots; but though I could not afford to throw away such an article, I was determined to sacrifice the boots rather than to be so sadly troubled with their noise. I saturated them accordingly with as much oil as they would absorb, and am happy to say that my experiment appears to have succeeded. I have worn them now for a number of weeks, and they have been as quiet as the best behaved boots ever made. I can march up the broad aisle of a church without disturbing one serious listener, or enter any other meeting as noiselessly as a lady in velvet slippers, and, as far as I can see, the boots are none the worse for the application."

☞ If you form harsh judgments, form them of yourself, not of others; and, in general, begin by attending to your own deficiencies first. If every one would sweep up his own walk, we should have very clean streets.

☞ Better to go to bed supperless than to rise in debt.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

WHY CHILDREN DIE.

The reason why children die is, because they are not taken care of. From the day of their birth they are stuffed with food, choked with physic, suffocated in hot rooms, steamed in bed-clothes. So much for in-doors. When permitted to breathe pure air once a week in summer, and once or twice during the colder months, only the nose is permitted to peer into daylight. A little later they are sent out with no clothing at all on the parts of the body which most need protection; with bare legs, bare arms, bare necks, girted middles, and an inverted umbrella to catch the air and chill the other parts of the body. A strong stout man goes out in a cold day with gloves and overcoat, woolen stockings, and thick, double-soled boots, with cork between, and rubbers over. The same day a child three years old, an infant, flesh, and blood, and bone, and constitution, goes out with shoes thin as paper, cotton socks, legs uncovered to the knees, neck bare; an exposure which would disable the nurse, kill the mother outright, and make the father an invalid for weeks. And why? To harden them to a mode of dress which they are never expected to practice; to accustom them to exposure, which a dozen years later would be considered downright foolery. To rear children thus for the slaughter-pen, and then lay it to the Lord, is too bad. We don't think the Almighty has any hand in it. And to draw comfort from the presumption that he has any agency in the death of the child, is a presumption and profanation.—Hall's Journal of Health.

GREEN FRUIT.

A very unnecessary and foolish practice is observed by market-gardeners and farmers in bringing green fruit and berries to market in advance of the season. Gooseberries and currants as hard as bullets and without any more taste or flavor are retailed at prices far beyond their real value. Fruits in the unripe state are worthless for all culinary and sanitary purposes; they are full of a crude and viscid juice, which is acrid and unpleasant to the last degree, and in a majority of cases is absolutely injurious to persons of weak stomachs. It is only a waste of sugar, time, fuel and money, to use them, and it would be just as sensible to dig up green potatoes of the size of hickory nuts and boil them, or pick peaches when they are just formed, as to eat these currants, grapes and other fruits that are thrown into market to the great damage of the fruit crop and the absolute injury of health and purse. If every one would desist from buying such rubbish the gardeners would cease to send them in, and when the proper time arrived we should have twice as much fruit of a delicious flavor, which would benefit mankind instead of hurting them.—Scientific American.

FIFTEEN WAYS TO GET SICK.

1st. Eating too fast, and swallowing the food imperfectly masticated.

2d. Taking too much fluid during meals.

3d. Drinking poisonous whiskey and other intoxicating liquors.

4th. Keeping late hours at night and sleeping too long in the morning.

5th. Wearing the clothing so tight as to impede circulation.

6th. Wearing thin shoes.

7th. Neglecting to take sufficient exercise to keep the hands and feet warm.

8th. Neglecting to wash the body sufficiently to keep the pores of the skin open.

9th. Exchanging the warm clothing worn in warm rooms during the day, for the light costume and exposures incident to evening parties.

10th. Starving the stomach to gratify a vain and foolish passion for dress.

11th. Keeping up a constant excitement by fretting the mind with borrowed troubles.

12th. Employing cheap doctors and swallowing quack nostrums for every imaginary ill.

13th. Neglecting to evacuate the bowels every morning, and the bladder as often as the calls of nature demand.

14th. Taking the meals at irregular intervals.

15th. Reading the trashy and exciting literature of the day, attending theaters, going crazy on politics, etc., etc.—Exchange.

ITEMS.

Whitewash.—White fences and outbuildings indicate the thrifty farmer and a tidy household. Put half a bushel of unslacked lime in a clean, tight barrel, pour over it boiling water until it is covered five inches, stir briskly until the lime is thoroughly slacked, then add more water until it is as thin as desired, next add two pounds of sulphate of zinc and one of common salt; then apply with a common whitewash brush, giving a good coat in April and October, or at least once a year.

Butter kept fresh.—Take it as it comes from the churn, and wash the butter-milk thoroughly out of it, then dry the surface of the butter with a clean cloth, break into small pieces, and pack it solid into a crock. The air must be entirely expelled. Set the crock in a kettle half-filled with water, then place the kettle over the fire until the water boils. While boiling remove from the fire, and let the crock remain in the water until cold.

Boiling Potatoes.—It is said that in Ireland they always nick off a piece of the skin, put them in a pot of cold water, which is gradually heated, but never allowed to boil; cold water should be added as soon as the water begins to boil; when done, pour all the water off, cover the vessel with a cloth, and in a few minutes they are cool enough for use.

Over-eating.—As soon as you are sensible that you have eaten too much, take a walk, gradually increasing its rapidity until there is a free perspiration, and continue at this gait until every feeling of discomfort about the stomach or lungs has disappeared, then cool off very slowly in a closed room, and eat not an atom until the second meal thereafter, thus omitting one.

Flies Destroyed.—A pint of sweet milk, a quarter of a pound of sugar, two ounces of ground pepper, simmer together for ten minutes, and place it about in shallow dishes. If this is true, there is no necessity for using poisonous articles about a house.

Red Ants.—Wash your shelves down clean, and while damp rub fine salt on them quite thick, and let it remain on for a time, and they will disappear.

Sick headache is almost always attended with cold feet, and the failure of a daily action of the bowels; and there is no permanent cure without the rectification of these.

The small white sago, called the pearl sago, is the best. The large brown kind has an earthy taste. This article and tapioca, ground rice, etc., should be kept covered.

To select nutmegs, pick them with a pin. If they are good, the oil will instantly spread around the puncture.

To thaw frozen potatoes, put them in hot water. Frozen apples in cold water, but use them at once.

Exercise improves the health, because every step a man takes tends to impart motion to the bowels; if they have not motion enough, there is constipation, which brings on very many fatal diseases; hence exercise, especially that of walking, wards off innumerable diseases.

A single ounce more of food than we need for proper nutrition, taxes the vital powers and weakens the system.

Buy the best articles for family use; for, although they cost more, good articles spend best.

Sugar from Havana is always dirty, that from Brazil is clean, as also from Porto Rico and Santa Cruz. Refined sugars, whether loaf, crushed, or granulated, are the cheapest in the end.

Butter made in September and October is the best for winter use.

Flour and meal of all kinds should be kept in a cool dry place.

The best rice is large, and has a clear fresh look. Old rice sometimes has little black insects inside the kernels.

Erysipelas is said to be cured by applying to the part affected a paste made of raw cranberries beaten.

Kettles are cleansed of onion and other odors, by dissolving a teaspoonful of pearlash or saleratus in water, and washing them.

Hair removed by fevers and other sickness, is made to grow by washing the scalp with a strong decoction of sage leaves once or twice a day.

Stings and bites are often instantaneously cured by washing them in hartshorn and turpentine.

A bit of glue dissolved in skim-milk and water, will restore old crape. Half a cranberry bound on a corn will soon kill it.

When from any cause the bowels cease to act at the usual time, do not eat an atom more until they do act, at least for thirty-six hours; the first meal after a fast should be very light, of bread and butter.

Paste may be made with flour in the usual way, but rather thicker, with a proportion of brown sugar, and a small quantity of corrosive sublimate. A drop or two of the essential oil of lavender, peppermint, anise, or bergamot, is a complete security against molding. Paste made in this manner, if kept in a close covered pot, may be preserved in a state fit for use at any time.

Liquid glue is made by dissolving a pound of common glue with heat in a pound of strong vinegar, and one quarter of a pound of alcohol; this is whitened by adding sulphate of lead.

Moths are kept from carpets by sprinkling salt and pepper, mixed in equal quantities, about and under the edges.

Picture-frames and glasses are preserved from flies by painting them with a brush dipped in a mixture made by boiling three or four onions in a pint of water.

Bed-bugs are kept away by washing the crevices with strong salt water, put on with a brush.

An ink-stand was turned over on a white table-cloth, a servant threw over it a mixture of salt and pepper plentifully, and all traces of it disappeared.

Ants are kept out of drawers and other places by spirits of camphor.

Potatoes contain nearly all their nutriment (the starch) very near the surface; the heart has but little; hence, let the peeling be the thinnest possible.

Lac stick dissolved in alcohol is the best varnish for tree or vine wounds, and to prevent bleeding from trimming or pruning.

COLD FEET.

There is no more fruitful source of pulmonary disease than cold feet. Cold feet cannot possibly occur if the circulation is properly kept up. A sense of coldness in them is an indication that they are not sufficiently protected by clothing. Our bodies are often overburdened with over-coats and wrapping shawls, while our limbs are but imperfectly covered. Now, there is nothing more dangerous than allowing the feet to become damp and cold. Health requires that they always be warm and dry. Recall some of your past experience, and you will soon discover that two-thirds of the colds you have suffered from were produced by getting cold and wet feet.

The Indians understood this fully. In their wigwams they always lie down with their feet towards the fire. When they are traveling in cold weather, and are compelled to camp in the open air, they dig a hole in the earth, in the centre of which they build a fire, and then lie down in a circle, each one hanging his legs into the hole. In this custom they have the simple guidance of experience. Abernethy's rules for the preservation of health were all embraced in the following maxim: "Keep the feet warm, the head cool, and the bowels open. For years cold feet and a feeling of chilliness in the limbs have almost invariably been followed by bronchial irritation. Within a few hours, in fact, of such exposure, we find the nose stuffed, and begin to hawk and clear the throat.

FRESH AIR IN THE CHURCHES.

Commonly in the churches after the morning services are over, every door and window is shut, and the careful sexton keeps them shut till night. The consequence is the air is dead and putrid, and every body is drowsy. If the weather is cold, and fires are needed, some of the upper sash ought to be so fixed as to permit ventilation to go on, especially if the house is very close. But in all weather, the instant the congregation leaves the house the windows should be raised, and a complete ventilation accomplished. This is important to devotion and to health. If sextons will not heed this obvious suggestion of common sense, then the official or private members of the church ought to remind them of it.—Voice of the West.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor, who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CRISIS BOX, BOSTON, MASS.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 452. BOSTON, TUESDAY, MAY 31, 1864. VOL. XIX.—NO. 12.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. O. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

THE REPROVING VOICE.

Maddened by earth's wrong and evil,
"Lord!" I cried in sudden ire—
"From thy right hand, clothed with thunder,
Shake the bolted fire!

"Love is lost, and faith is dying;
With the brute the man is sold,
And the drooping blood of labor
Hardens into gold.

"Here the dying wail of famine,
There the battle's groan of pain;
And in silence smooth-faced mammon
Reaping men like grain.

"'Where is God, that we should fear him?'
Thus the earth-born Titans say;
'God, if thou art living, hear us!'
Thus the weak ones pray."

"Thou, the patient Heaven upbraiding," Spake a solemn voice within;
"Weary of our Lord's forbearance,
Art thou free from sin?

"Fearless brow to him uplifting,
Canst thou for his thunders call,
Knowing that to guilt's attraction
Evermore they fall?

"Couldst thou boast, O child of weakness,
O'er the sons of wrong and strife,
Were their strong temptations planted
In thy path of life?

"He alone whose hand is bounding
Human power and human will,
Looking through each soul's surrounding,
Knows its good or ill.

"For thyself, while wrong and sorrow
Make to thee their strong appeal,
Coward wert thou not to utter
What the heart must feel.

"Earnest words must needs be spoken,
When the warm heart bleeds or burns
With the scorch of wrong or pity
For the wronged, by turns.

"But by all thy nature's weakness,
Hidden faults and follies known,
Be thou, in rebuking evil,
Conscious of thine own."

—Selected by S. M. H.

For the World's Crisis.

"BEHOLD I COME AS A THIEF."—REV. 16: 15.

In reading the context, commencing at the twelfth verse, we are brought to consider the pouring out of the sixth vial, and the commencement of the pouring out of the seventh, by reading to the eighteenth verse. The Armageddon here spoken of means Valley of Jehoshaphat, which is located near Jerusalem in the Holy Land, where all nations will be gathered to war against the Lamb. The book of Revelations is considered by many to be difficult to understand, mysterious, and beyond the comprehension of mortals; but the symbols and figures contained in this book are found to be in common use among the Jews, and are illustrative of the subject under consideration.

Take for example the seven stars and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches, and the seven candlesticks, which John saw, represented the seven churches. The eleventh verse reads—"I am Alpha and Omega." Alpha means the first, and Omega the last. There is throughout the book of Revelation a marked resemblance between the figure used and the subject.

Some suppose the vials of the sixteenth chapter are to be fulfilled after the Lord comes. I think there is good reason for believing that six of them have already been poured out. Fifteenth ver.: "Behold I come as a thief." If he comes after the sixth vial has been poured out, how can it be said he comes before the first vial is poured out? The nations are gathered to the battle of the great day of God by the three agencies here brought to view. When the work of the three unclean spirits is accomplished, then—"Behold I come as a thief," etc. Now is the time to watch, and keep the garments of Christ's righteousness on, that our nakedness do not appear.

At the close of the pouring out of the sixth vial, the nations are gathered to a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon. Next in order comes the pouring out of the seventh vial, which brings us to the judgment of the great day.

One main feature of the sixth vial is the drying up of the river Euphrates, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared. The drying up of this river is supposed by some to be the downfall of the Ottoman Empire, this empire being situated upon the banks of that river. I have had my doubts for a number of years as regards this interpretation.

There must be a resemblance between Babylon of old and the mystical Babylon of Rev., also between the ancient Euphrates and the Euphrates of mystical Babylon. History informs us that Babylon was oppressive towards the people of God. Mystical Babylon oppressed, persecuted and put to death millions upon millions of the church of God. Babylon tyrannized over the people of God and the nations of the earth, and was remarkable for that. So we find the same characteristic in mystical Babylon. Another feature in Babylon was pride, aggrandizement, great riches. So has it been with mystical Babylon; rich in all manner of precious things, gold, silver, pearls, and great estates, commanding the whole world. There is a perfect resemblance between Babylon and mystical Babylon.

There must be a resemblance between the river Euphrates and the mystical Euphrates of Revelation. How was it with ancient Euphrates? Babylon owed her strength and power to that river, which ran directly through the city. Cyrus with his vast army could never (to human calculation) have taken Babylon had not the river above the city been turned from its natural course, thereby leaving its bed so that the army could be marched under the wall, where the waters were wont to flow. By this means Cyrus easily subjugated that proud and wicked city. As long as the river Euphrates ran with its swelling waters through their city, the Babylonians felt safe; but as soon as its waters were turned and the river dried up, then there was trouble. The drying up of Euphrates was equivalent to taking Babylon; or, in other words, by the drying up of the river, the way of the kings of the east was prepared. The kings of the east in this case were Medea and Persia.

The question now is, what resemblance is there between the river Euphrates and the mystical Euphrates of Rev.? The powers that supported the Papal dynasty, and upon which she leaned, were the kings, the nations of Europe. As long as these kings, or the nations, supported this power, it could not be hurt, or destroyed. This great anti-christian power, in the height of her pride and glory, says, "I sit a queen, and shall see no sorrow. All nations contribute to my support. I have supreme power." Its head, the Pope, could place his foot upon the neck of kings, and he had dominion over all the earth. All nations, kindred and people were at his mercy. This was characteristic of ancient Babylon. No end to its pride, power, and riches; yet as soon as the Euphrates was dried up, then its power was gone—like Sampson shorn of his locks.

So exactly with mystical Babylon. As soon as that which contributed to its support is withdrawn, which as we have said above we believe to be the kings of the earth, which constitute the mystical river of mystical Babylon; as soon as these kings one after another withdraw their support from the Papal power, how soon she wanes, struggles, and is dying.

These kings of the east (Rev. 16: 12) we believe to be the ten kings spoken of in Rev. 17: 16. "These shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire. For God hath put in their hearts to fulfill his will." In the book of Revelation peoples and nations are called waters. Rev. 17: 15. So these peoples and nations, which once contributed to the support of mystical Babylon, have withdrawn that support, whereby the mystical river is closed up. The next to be looked for is the work of the kings of the east.

These ten kingdoms (for we believe them to be ten in number) which had not in John the Revelator's day received any kingdom, but receive power as kings one hour with the beast,—"in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom." There are just ten kingdoms in Italy. In 1815, when the holy alliance was formed, those powers divided Italy into just ten kingdoms, or dukedoms. These are to give their power and strength unto the beast until the words of God shall be fulfilled. They have given and do give their strength unto the beast (Napoleon). Whatever Napoleon says, Victor Emanuel says and does. But there is a spirit in Italy to-day which, if those twelve thousand French soldiers were withdrawn, would very soon fulfill Rev. 17, and forever level Rome with the dust.

Soon we believe the hour will come when these kings of the east will do their work, and the final destruction of Babylon, as recorded in Rev. 18, will be fulfilled, and she shall rise no more at all. In her was found the blood of prophets and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.

The drying up of the river Euphrates has been a gradual work. One kingdom after another withdrew its support, thereby leaving the power weaker and weaker. In the days of Martin Luther the Pope made an effort to recover and to sustain the waning power of the papacy; but the warning voice of Luther broke the spell, and the hour for the downfall of this wicked power had come, when it should no more put to death the saints of God, nor tyrannize over the nations of the earth.

Under the pouring out of the sixth vial, there was to be a work accomplished the world never saw. The three unclean spirits were to gather the nations of the earth to the battle of the great day of God. The three agencies have gone forth, and we see the nations marshalling to the mighty conflict; and while they are fighting, one for this and another for that, lo and behold, Christ comes to Mount Zion, with ten thousands of his saints, to execute judgment. The seventh trumpet sounds. The nations are angry (not converted). The nations will doubtless turn their attention towards Zion, to fight against the Lamb; but the Lamb shall overcome them, for he is Lord of lords and King of kings. Christ will triumph, and his kingdom fill the whole earth.

The Revelator saw the beast and the kings of the earth gathered to war against the Lamb. Probably this great gathering will transpire in the valley of Jehoshaphat. At this stage the seventh trumpet sounds. The saints take part with Christ. The Lamb is victorious. All the wicked are overcome, and cast into perdition.

We are living now in a momentous and important period of this world's history. Christ is soon to come, and when he comes it will be as a thief, unexpected; therefore, "be ye also ready." I know of no reason for expecting any better times this side of the coming of Christ. The war spirit is to spread from nation to nation, which is the spirit of the age. Says the prophet, "Wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near." But let all the saints be found on the Lord's side.

J. E. CLARK.

For the World's Crisis.

ETERNAL LIFE.

Eternal life is the crowning theme of the gospel.—I John 5: 11.

1. Man by law is dead, and it would be vain to talk to a man sentenced to death about land being left to him by his father unless you could give him life. So it is vain to talk to a sinner about preparing for heaven, unless you can show him how he can live again. All would be dark. Death is the end of man, unless he can live again after he dies by law. 1 Cor. 15: 32.

2. The gospel of John begins with this glorious theme. John 1: 4,—"In him is life, and this life is the light of men." Yes, the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth. Read all John's gospel and the three epistles, and you will see life, eternal life is his blessed theme. Life for lost men. God so loved the world in its death and misery, as to give his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should have everlasting life.

4. This life is in his Son. He died for us. The Father raised him up from the dead,—thus accepted him as our sin-offering. Then as we derived our natural life from the first Adam we must derive our eternal life from the second. God sent his Son that we should live through him. 1 John 4: 9.

4. This life is secured to us by a living faith in Christ, that produceth abundance to the gospel. Mark 16: 16. It matters not how great, how many, how enormous the sin, the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin,—whosoever believeth. We may all come, for there is all fullness in the Son.

5. The last day will decide the great question whether our faith is genuine or not. All will hear the voice of the Son of man and come forth. They will hear the voice which shows there will be life. They will come forth conscious. See Rom. 2: 15, 16,—"Their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another; in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel." The true believer will come forth like his Lord; raised in incorruption. The wicked will come forth like their head, mortal, and as such must die as the first Adam did. He died for his sin, and we die in consequence; but now the sinner will die the second death for his rejection of Christ, the only medium of eternal life. Thus God says, "Why will ye die?" Ezk. 33: 11. Here is a death man can escape if he will.

May God enable us all to make sure of life eternal in Christ at last. The great day is upon us. The time for securing this life is closing up fast. All things are saying the great day is near. It hasteth greatly. Let us all take heed to the sure word of prophecy, and be sure that we do not take fulfilled prophecy and place it in the future yet to be fulfilled, and help to make a snare for the unwary. We are traveling on dangerous ground. Let us all take heed.

M. BATCHELOR.

Rutland, Vt.

For the World's Crisis.

THE ONE OFFENCE.—No. 1.

"By the one offence judgment came upon all men."—Rom. 5: 18.

The sentence of condemnation fell not upon man only; the ground, or earth, was also cursed "for man's sake;" or, as De Sola's, Lindenthal's, and Raphall's version give it, better, I think, "cursed be the ground because of thee."

Man was made "dust of the ground," and now this living dust had sinned, and by the penalty of the law was, according to its judgment given, to return "to his dust;" and, as if his MOTHER, earth, was in sympathy with him, groaning for deliverance from death, the source from whence man came is embraced in the curse, on account of his sin, as being a portion of himself; hence Paul in Romans 8: 22 tropically represents the "whole creation" as groaning and travailing "in pain," anxious to "be delivered from the bondage of corruption," for we that are in this tabernacle,—being constituent parts of the same building upon which the curse has fallen, and of the same "cursed" material—do groan, being burdened—with the curse pronounced upon the "whole creation," or ground, out of which we have our formation, and from which—cursed corruption—we would have deliverance, "that mortality might be swallowed up of life."

Death, on account of sin, is in the ground from whence we came and whither we return. It is in the food we eat, the water we drink, the air we breathe, the fire we warm by, the cold we suffer from, the healing medicine we take; in the sunlight that invigorates, and the darkness that appalls; in the tempestuous storm and in the calm, alike we find death, on sin's account, by the curse that has fallen upon the whole creation," groaning "in pain." Oh! who would not hope for the time when there shall be "no more curse?"

No sooner had man, by eating of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, become like the Elohim, than he was sent forth from the garden to till the ground from whence he was taken, and having been driven thence, the attribute of God's justice under the allegorical representation of a "cherubin and a flaming sword," was placed between man and the tree of life, "lest," said Jehovah of the Elohim, "he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever."

So long as man had remained in obedience he had free access to that tree, but it seems from the word "also," that he never had eaten of it, for the declaration of God is, that if he ate of it, as he had eaten of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the result would be that he would live forever; and we are certain that he had partaken of the forbidden fruit but once, because it is called by Paul in Rom. 5, the "one offence." This, God's goodness, compassion and justice would not permit; he could create man knowing that he might transgress, and be just, for he knew that if man became evil by his own act of disobedience, he could redeem him from that evil; but to give him continued access to the source of immortality after he had become evil, by which grant of right evil would be eternally perfected by man living forever in evil, he could not do, and be consistent with his own attributes; for this would make him not the author of evil, but of its eternal perpetuation, and thereby contradict his word, which says that he will make an end of evil, it shall not rise up the second time.

Had man been permitted to eat of that tree subsequent to his fall, what a scene would this earth have presented for all time. I have listened to and read some graphic descriptions of imaginary hells gotten up for effect, but nothing human has ever begun to paint the living horrors that would have been witnessed on this planet, and never will, had sinful man only been permitted to taste of immortal life in disobedience. We see the dearest loved ones sicken and languish; painful, acute, agonizing suffering is added to disease; day after day, night after night, wear away, till days and nights pass into weeks, and weeks roll into months, and months are making years, and still the stricken ones are moaning, wasting, suffering in anguish, until bond after bond is sundered, tie after tie is loosed, hope after hope is extinguished; the sympathizing heart is beginning to desire that the suffering one may be released from all the ills of life, and be at peace; willing at last to part company, that the loved one may be at rest, for—

"There is rest for the weary;"

the silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the pitcher also at the fountain and the wheel broken at the cistern, the throbbing heart lies still, and the weary are at rest,—and the living thank a merciful God that men do not seek death, and are "not able to find it." We all come to it at last, and it is well it is so, for if it were otherwise, worn out nature and exhausted humanity overburdened with grief, sinking in despair, would only find relief in lunacy, and the world would be converted into one vast "mad-house," filled with raging maniacs.

G. W. STETSON.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD, AND FROM THE DEAD.

It may have been noticed, in reading our Common Version, that the New Testament writers, in alluding to the doctrine of the resurrection, call it sometimes the resurrection of the dead, and sometimes the resurrection from the dead; but it seems to have escaped notice that this distinction of language is founded on a corresponding distinction in the original, and is of real significance. To point out this distinction, to estimate its value, and to show its connection with the commonly received doctrine of the resurrection, is the object of this article.

Whenever allusion is made in Scripture to the resurrection of all men, without any reference to character, it is called simply the resurrection, or, the resurrection of the dead. Thus when Paul preached at Athens, the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers said, "He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods; because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection," (Acts 17: 18. See also verse 32; and 23: 6, 8; and Heb. 6: 2.) The Greek word here translated resurrection is anastasis.

But whenever the resurrection of Christ and of his saints is expressly referred to, an additional word, a preposition, is employed. It is not simply anastasis, or anastasis nekron, but, anastasis ex ton nekron, and in one case, Phil. 3: 11, exanastasis ton nekron; and in all cases, excepting the last, is rendered, very properly, the resurrection from the dead. In this case the translators seem to have overlooked the force of the preposition in composition. The same particle is employed also in quite a number of passages in connection with the verb; as when it is said, 1 Cor. 15: 20, "But now is Christ risen from the dead," etc. The ex evidently denotes, not merely the future separation of the righteous and the wicked, which, as we suppose all evangelical christians believe, will begin at the second coming of Christ and the resurrection; but it denotes also that the resurrection of Christ, and of his followers, differs in kind from that of the wicked.

This expression, "resurrection from the dead," has a deep moral significance, exactly corresponding with a passage in Gal. 6: 7, 8, "For whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." The resurrection of the wicked is a resurrection of the dead in the moral sense of that word—the dead in trespasses and sins; a resurrection in corruption and of corruption; of which the only fit emblem on earth can be found in the putridity of the charnel-house. It is an eternal triumph of the loathsomeness of death, as well as of its agony.

But the resurrection of the righteous is a resurrection from among the dead; and the completion of that moral separation from the ungodly which was begun in regeneration; the seal of the divine approbation by which God marks them as his own and reserves them for himself—as the resurrection of the wicked is the seal of their reprobation. The former is a resurrection of life, the latter of damnation. In either case there is something in the composition and condition of the resurrection-body which marks the destination of its owner to the world of purity and glory, or to the world of shame and despair.

That the distinction pointed out is no mere fancy, may be learned from the answer of Christ to the Sadducees, Luke 20: 35, "But they that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry," etc. No one will allege that the resurrection, of itself, is something which must be "obtained." Multitudes who have never so much as heard of it will share in it. The resurrection from the dead is, then, something more than the resurrection of the dead. But the words of Paul, in a passage already quoted, exhibit most forcibly the necessity of this distinction: "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead;" exanastasin ton nekron, which should have been rendered—"from the dead." Paul's anxiety was, not in regard simply to the resurrection, which he knew would be universal, but in regard to his own condition in it, whether he should be raised in corruption or in incorruption, with a body like unto Christ's glorious body. He says, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, . . . that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection," etc. His fear was lest God should gather his soul with the wicked; his desire, that he might be found at the right hand of the Judge, in the congregation of the righteous.—Boston Review.

For the World's Crisis.

LINES.

Our Deliverer will come
Very soon;
Near two thousand years ago
He left his friends below,
With a promise to return
Bye and bye.

Long and drear the time hath been,
Blessed Lord!
Hast thou not the "place prepared,"
Which, according to thy word,
When thou comest thou wilt give
To thy friends?

Lord, we know thy word is sure—
Thou wilt come.
But we yearn thy face to see,
And with thee, dear Lord, to be,
Who from death hath made us free
By thy blood.

We'll expect thee every day,
Till the dawn;
And though we should sleep in death,
With the "telescope of faith"
We now look beyond and see
Jesus come.

J. C. HALL.

For the World's Crisis.

BIGOTRY.

BRO. GRANT:—If I apprehend the term at the head of this article, it represents its possessor to be blindly zealous of his own particular sentiments to the rejection of others as vitally important and as really true. Sincerity is not truth; neither does a false zeal elevate the affections of its possessor, but on the contrary, it circumscribes his fellowship, and induces in his mind the spirit of egotism, self-righteousness, and self-importance, causing him to denounce as vile those principles, and even men, that are equally good when compared with his own principles he values so dear.

Bigotry blinds the mind of its possessor to the fact that "the gospel" is a system of Jehovah's grace, adapted to the human family as they are in their natural condition, ignorant, weak, and alienated from the life of godliness through the blindness of their understanding, and the sentiment once adopted has a tendency to harden the heart of its possessor against very evident and simple truths contained in "the gospel." It induces in the heart of its possessor sectarianism and selfishness, with all that train of evils that follow as a natural consequence. It tends to exclude from our fellowship those who are equally worthy to be esteemed, as the children of God, and not unfrequently is it the case that those thus condemned and disfellowshiped are persons of high-toned piety, and deep reverence for God and his word, and give a better and clearer evidence of their acceptance with him, and of the attainment of christian grace, and also religious usefulness among their fellow-men in turning them from nature to grace, and from Satan unto God, than do those that disfellowship and denounce them; and all, forsooth, because they have not as yet been able to pronounce their Shibboleths.

May God save us from such egotism and bigotry, for its legitimate fruit is sectarianism of the most bitter and uncharitable species conceivable, and is well calculated to cultivate the fruit of the flesh to perfect maturity. Bigotry is apposed to apostolical teaching. For instance, when the apostle Peter was convinced of his former sectarianism and Jewish prejudices, and that in every nation they that fear God and work righteousness are accepted of him, he confessed the fact, and gave up his hitherto limited position, and ever afterwards continued to teach, "that in every nation, HE THAT FEARETH GOD AND WORKETH RIGHTEOUSNESS IS ACCEPTED OF HIM."

Now suppose that I am a poor Gentile sinner, in the darkness of my nature, and ailienated from the life of God through the blindness of my understanding, as it regards the glorious scheme of human redemption by the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; but my attention is attracted and directed by some man (or by reading in the New Testament), to the ever glorious truth, that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" to die to redeem me from death, and that this his Son hath said, that if I a sinner against God would accept him as my Savior and Redeemer, as a sacrifice provided by an infinite Father's love, for my redemption from sin and evil, and also that I should be baptized in the likeness of his death, being buried with him in the figure of death, that thereby I might manifest my love for and faith in him as my Savior and Redeemer. Suppose the above to be the very extent of my knowledge of "the gospel," would it be doing right to go forward in the obedience of the gospel in the holy ordinance of baptism? Consider! I knew Jesus had commanded me to do it, and also I knew the God of heaven was very good and gracious in the provisions he had made in Jesus for my redemption. And now, if I did know that Jesus as the Son of God had commanded me to do it, and I refused its performance, would it not be full and positive proof that I had not in my heart the fear of God, neither the spirit of obedience to his authority? But if I did, upon such knowledge, comply with the requirement, and from my heart obey my Lord's command, would it not be the clearest proof that the fear of God had prompted me thus dutifully to follow the leading of the Spirit (of obedience) induced in my heart by the hearing of faith? If, then, the act was prompted by the fear of God, and performed in the spirit of obedience to his authority, and thus characterized by a correct motive, was it not acceptable to God? and if not, what act could be acceptable to him? and if the act would be acceptable to him under the circumstances above named, being a dutiful and righteous act, then the actor is one individual of Peter's "all nations," that feareth God and worketh righteousness—and being "ACCEPTED OF GOD in the act, the baptism is valid, in the sight of the JEHOVAH of hosts; and all the talk of misguided men will never induce him to invalidate it.

Let us, therefore, my brethren, be steadfast, always abounding in the work of the Lord; for in due time we shall reap if we faint not. Let us not be terrified, neither deceived by artful men. Crafty and impious interpretations of the Word have always perplexed the people of God, hindered the progress of truth, and caused schism and final division; for the tendency is to lead to exclusiveness, self-righteousness and bigotry. None of these are the fruits of the Spirit, which are love, joy, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance, patience, faith, which give their possessor a perfect victory over himself and all those evils with which, as a christian warrior, he has to contend; and like his Master he goes forward in His service, declaring the truth as he is able to apprehend it. If men do not receive as truth all that he sees to be so, he does not unchristianize and doom them all, but quietly postpones the judgment unto the day appointed, according to the example of Jesus, (John 12: 47)), and the admonition of his servant Paul. 1 Cor. 4: 5.

But not so with the bigot. He is very wise in his own eyes, and very self-confident, ready to frown upon and condemn all and every person and thing that in the least degree seems to oppose his sway, making no allowance for surrounding circumstances.

Let us listen to the text, Matt. 28: 19, 20,—"Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them . . . teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." There it is clearly taught that men would need to be instructed after baptism, and if so, would they understand all "the gospel" before baptism, or would they, being taught, comprehend the gospel plan perfectly before baptism, and then afterwards have to be taught something not comprehended in "the gospel," in order to perfect their christian character by observing all things commanded by our Savior? If a correct and perfect knowledge of "the gospel" is a necessary prerequisite to a valid baptism, then a certain writer in favor of such hypothesis is yet to be made partaker of the blessings of a valid baptism; for his writings clearly show the imperfection of his knowledge of the manifest workings of the scheme of human redemption.

If it be admitted that the Spirit of God is induced in the heart by the hearing of faith as Paul says (Gal. 3: 2),—then it follows that when the sinner has heard enough of God's word to induce conviction, he should obey, and in the FEAR OF GOD. This baptism is as acceptable to God as it possibly could be; for it was the fruit of the "one Spirit" (of God) that induced the obedience required in "the gospel;" and will God deny the fruit of his own Spirit? I hope no one will be so blinded as to presume to say that God will reject any man's obedience that has been induced by the "one Spirit," simply because the person had not perfect knowledge of all it is the privilege of the advanced christian to know, who, having embraced the faith, adds to his "faith, virtue, knowledge," and every christian grace.

I am heartily sick of men's prating about who is, and is not a christian, simply because they have not been taught this or that man's peculiar views of the gospel before baptism, and will close by saying, let us not judge one another any more. "But he that thinketh he standeth, let him take heed lest he fall." And what I say unto one, I say UNTO ALL, WATCH, YEA, WATCH AND PRAY.

C. F. SWEET.

For the World's Crisis.

THE NEW COVENANT.

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners, spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son."—Heb. 1: 1.

We are to understand that Paul here wishes to impress the idea upon our minds that we now are to take heed to the sayings of Christ. In times past God spake unto the fathers by the prophets, but now God the Father says, "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him."

"Wherefore, when he cometh into the world, he saith, sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not, but a body hast thou prepared me; in burnt-offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God. Above when he said, sacrifices, and offering, and burnt offerings and offering for sin thou wouldst not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law; then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first; that he may establish the second. For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified. This is the covenant that I will make with them after these days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws in their hearts, and in their minds will I write them." Heb. 10. "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.—Rom. 4: 13.

Is Abraham to receive the promise by keeping the ten commandments? I answer nay. I know it was necessary for Abraham to obey God, for unless he had God never would have made him a promise; but the ten commandments were not given at that time; and had they been the promise could not have been attained unto in this way, for we read that, the promise was not through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. "The Lord said unto Abraham, Look northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." But why did God make Abraham this promise? because he BELIEVED, and not because he had kept the commandments. And he believed in the Lord; and he counted it to him for righteousness. Gen. 15: 6. Then he will receive the promise by believing, and not by the law; for by the righteousness of faith was the promise given.

We that are living under the new covenant could never have been made partakers of this promise with faithful Abraham, had it been given to him through the law, or old covenant. But God foresaw a better covenant, and therefore he made the promise to Abraham through the same principle that was to govern the new covenant, that we with Abraham might be partakers of the same promise. We come to the new covenant and the leading principle is faith; and we read that without faith it is impossible to please God; "for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." He commanded ancient Israel to keep his laws, his statutes, and his commandments, but now he says, "This is my beloved Son; hear ye him." "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

"For he hath obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. For if the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second. For finding fault with them, he saith, behold the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah; not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt, because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people. In that he saith, a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." Heb. 8: 6–13.

Christ is the end of the law of righteousness to every one that believeth. For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, that the man which doeth those things shall live by them. But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, Say not in thine heart, who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above;) or, who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead). But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart; that is, the word of faith, which we preach; that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Rom. 10: 8–10. "And after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them." "For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise. Wherefore then serveth the law? (which was given four hundred and thirty years after and was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made.)" "But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a school-master. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. . . . . And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. 3: 19–29. "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

These are the words of Paul, one who has said, "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." One that was ready always to declare the whole truth, although by so doing he called down upon himself the anathemas of a wicked and perverse nation. He loved the new covenant. He saw the efficacy of the blood that sealed it. He saw in the great atonement made by Christ, a way opened to the promised inheritance. He saw that by faith in Jesus we should be made partakers with faithful Abraham of that blessed inheritance. May we love the new covenant, apply its blood to our hearts, which will cleanse us from all sin, and make us rightful heirs to the promised inheritance.

Peacedale, R. I. A. M. HOLLIS.

☞ Obedience to conscience is what makes the growing christian; and it must be instant, full, and hearty. Regard or disregard of this heavenly monitor decides all our daily peace. God intends what we think, what we do, and what we see, shall be chastened by the power of conscience, and a conviction as to whether a thing is right or wrong, must receive the most delicate and fair consideration, else it is utterly in vain to expect that strength of moral character which gives peace, blesses the world, and honors God. Only is that person reliable, or happy, or useful, who regards the first convictions of duty. This is the helm that guides to all true character. This is the inner that makes the true and outer life.

SELF-PRAISE.—I will not much commend others to themselves, I will not at all commend myself to others. So to praise any to their faces is a kind of flattery; but to praise myself to any is the height of folly. He that boasts his own praises, speaks ill of himself, and much derogates from his true deserts.—Warwick.

For the World's Crisis.

KINDNESS.

One fundamental principle of Christ's religion is kindness. In all his intercourse with mankind, whether his professed friends or bitterest enemies, he ever manifested a kind spirit. He taught his followers to be kind. The spirit of Christ is gentle, wooing. It persuades by love, but never drives with fear. Man, in his depravity, is unkind, quarrelsome, tyrannical. But when the peaceful gospel of Jesus Christ rules men's rebellious hearts, every tumult ceases, and the rough and uncouth becomes smooth and beautiful. Love and true kindness are inseparable. The gospel is a message of love. "All who have the spirit of Christ will love as brethren, and be kind to each other. And when we begin to push and to speak harshly we are out of gospel order.

Brethren, BE KIND. What if that brother does n't believe exactly as you do? don't scowl and scold and treat him like a barbarian. Has n't he a right to think for himself? He allows it in you. "But he's in an error." Well, be kind. Let him see that those who have the truth can be gentle—Christ-like. LOVE HIM. Follow him with a brother's prayers. You say he is honest,—seek to restore him. Ah! I see; you forgot to go and tell Jesus about your brother. Go now and ask the Lord to send forth his LIGHT and TRUTH. "But it's an outrageous error!" Ah? So much more need of earnest prayer. Go quickly for help and save a soul from darkness and death. Don't undertake to do the work yourself, for "self" is the wrong one to do God's work.

Yes, it is best to be kind. Supposing you have heard curious things about your brother or sister. Don't believe all you hear. Remember there are "two sides to a story," and one side always spoils the other. Now be cautious. It did n't lose anything by coming so far, you may depend. It's been through mouths enough. And, friend, if any body has spoken evil of you, bear it patiently. O, be kind. "Let the hurricane roar." It sometime will be o'er. Then there will be a great calm. "But they told falsehoods about me; they judged me wrongfully, they slandered me, among strangers too." Let such an one TRUST IN GOD, for he will certainly "bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day." Blessed, blessed promise! Let it settle in your heart. The Lord knows you are but dust; knows how nature calls for vengeance on your foes; but let your cry be—

"Calm me, O God, and keep me calm."

It is far better to suffer wrong than to do wrong. A reckoning day will come, and they that persecute you for righteousness' sake shall be terrified and put to shame. Bless the Lord, he hears when men speak evil of you, and also hears the complaint you make to him.

Brother, sister, watch your words. Speak evil of no man. The Bible forbids it. Endure cold treatment and abuse even from false brethren, but 'mid it all BE KIND. There is a Friend that will never fail. And in his habitation is the christian's home. To those mansions I invite you. There he that maketh or believeth a lie shall not dwell. There no cruel slanderer shall separate chief friends.

"There is a land where time shall flow no longer,
Fair land of rest, where partings never come;
Where friends remain, and love grows ever stronger;
O heavenly land! happy, eternal home!"

M. MATHEWS WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass., May, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

PLAIN BIBLE PROOFS.

No Bible millennium preceding "the great tribulation," "the day of the Lord," and the second coming of Christ, who comes at the "times of restitution of all things," (Acts 3: 19–23), not a thousand years after.—Matt. 13: 24–52, and twenty-fourth chapter; Mark 13; Luke 12: 31–56; 17: 24–37; 19: 12–27; 21: 7–36, describe all the great and leading events in their order, down to the time of the great tribulation and signs immediately preceding the coming and kingdom of Christ; but no mention is made of any millennial day first.

Read Isa. 30; 8–11, 14, 15, with 1 Thess. 5: 2–6; which speaks of their prophesying smooth things, and saying "peace and safety; when sudden destruction cometh upon them." Read Jer. 25: 15–33, and 51st chap., with Rev. 18: 1–24, where mention is made of the wine-cup of God's wrath, which all nations for their wickedness have had to drink; of terrible judgments upon all nations for all their abominations, and like a millstone cast into the sea, to be thrown down, and found no more at all;—but no intimation is given of an intervening millennial period. Read Dan. 2: 28–45, and seventh chapter, with Rev. 11: 14–18; which, instead of teaching that these kingdoms growing better, and finally merging into the millennial day, describe them "as broken to pieces together," and blown away like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors, to make room for "the everlasting kingdom."

Read Ps. 2: 1–9, with Rev. 17: 12–14; also Ezk. 39: 11–22, with Rev. 19: 17–21; which describe similar events, with the infatuated and unparalleled opposition of earthly powers to Christ's reign and rule, and of their terrible overthrow at his coming to establish the everlasting kingdom. Immediately after this terrible overthrow of the Armageddon hosts, in connection we have described, then in the next chapter of Revelation the binding of Satan a thousand years,—"then the thrones of judgment," "the first resurrection, and the living and reigning with Christ a thousand years, which from chronology and the description given truly seems to be the only millennial period given; when the saints shall be priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. And at the end of the thousand years, Satan is loosed a little season, who goes out to deceive the nations, who encompasses the camp of the saints, and fire comes down from God out of heaven and devours them; when he is cast into the lake of fire and brimstone. Then is seen the great white throne; and the last resurrection and final judgment take place, when all whose names are not found in the book of life are cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death. Then the new heaven and new earth appear in view, and the new Jerusalem is seen coming down from God out of heaven, "prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Is not this glorious description of the new Jerusalem something more than a figure? When it is further declared, "And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." "And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it."

Brethren and sisters, in view of these things let us be holy in all manner of conversation, make sure work that our names are written in the Lamb's book of life, that our faith fail not, but press towards the mark for the prize; "looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God," "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing;" and heed the admonition, "These things speak and exhort and rebuke with all authority."

S. L. MANLEY.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, May 31, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

Nothing of special interest has transpired in the army for the last few days. It is admitted that the late battles on the Potomac have been the most severe since the commencement of the war. The rebels are very much in earnest, and as unyielding as when the war first began. They seem determined to conquer or die. With them every thing available is employed to aid the army. It is very evident that there must yet be more very terrible fighting before the war closes. The nation is fast rushing toward inevitable ruin. A general bankruptcy and repudiation of debts stares us in the face.

Soon we may expect to see the North rent into various political factions, each trying, by all possible means, to secure the success of his party in the next Presidential election. We may look for the adoption of all measures, excepting christian, to accomplish the object proposed. Truly, "evil men and seducers" are waxing "worse and worse" with a rapid speed. Men are not only "deceiving," but "being deceived."

STATE OF THINGS IN EUROPE.

There is no improvement in the political matters in Europe. They are preparing for war as fast as possible. The Congress called to settle the difficulties between Prussia, Austria and Denmark, only tended to widen the breach, and make a settlement more doubtful than ever. Buonaparte looks on with much calmness, while the other nations are weakening themselves in various ways. Napoleon is yet "master of the ceremonies." He is sure to win in every game. His schemes are deep laid, and most wonderfully executed. He always moves about right, to accomplish his object. He keeps on "the rising tide," and the highest wave, while other powers are sinking all around. He steps firmly, and with great power. The nations of earth tremble before him, and dare not cross his pathway. He knows his strength, and is preparing to put it into active operations.

We may expect to hear more tales of bloody scenes before twelve months pass. The war spirit is pervading all nations and societies. How unlike the cry of "peace and safety" that has sounded out from popular pulpits for some fifteen years past, are the signs and facts in these days; yet the lullaby song is still oft repeated, and many flatter themselves that the "conversion of the world" is really about to transpire. We think it would not have been a greater delusion, had Noah preached the same doctrine just before the flood. It is a sad sight to see the blind leading the blind. May their eyes be opened before it is too late to escape the impending destruction.

When speaking of "European affairs," the Boston Journal of May 23d says:—

"The gravity of the situation in Europe can hardly escape attention, even in the midst of our own absorbing crisis. The failure of the conference, now generally conceded, adds another to the bungling measures of England, by which she has succeeded in complicating the Danish question and adding to the burdens laid upon unhappy Denmark.

In the meantime Prussia, flushed with insolence at its success in the war, meditates new aggressions, and will at least be satisfied with nothing short of the complete appropriation of Schleswig and Holstein. So aggravated have the English people become at her conduct, that the extension of the French boundaries to the Rhine would probably be hailed, rather than otherwise, as a fit punishment. If this feeling becomes general, we may be sure that Louis Napoleon is not the man to miss such an opportunity, even if he has not, as many suppose, deliberately maneuvered to bring it about. On the whole, therefore, the position of Europe is troubled, and threatens to become still more so."

INQUIRIES ABOUT THE KINGDOM.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please to give your ideas upon the kingdom of God as referred to in Luke 11: 20, Rom. 14: 17, and 1 Cor. 4: 20? Are these and other similar passages of the same meaning as Luke 18: 17, Mark 14: 25, and many others which evidently refer to the blessed kingdom for which we are striving? Yours in hope of a home, with you and all of the dear ones, in the kingdom.

M. G. DAY.

Cornish Flat, N. H.

There are some passages in the Bible where the fruits, or nature of the coming kingdom, are called the kingdom; but these cannot appear till after the kingdom is established. The tree must be planted before its fruits are seen; so of the kingdom. We cannot have a kingdom without a king; yet the same word is sometimes rendered king, and sometimes kingdom; in other words, they are used interchangeably. For instance, Daniel is informed, when beholding the beasts seen in vision,—"These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth."—Dan. 7: 17. In the 23d verse of the same chapter, the interpreter says, "The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth." Then it follows, as the four beasts represent four kings, the fourth is one of them. But the fourth beast represents "the fourth kingdom"; hence the other three beasts represent the first three kingdoms. Here we learn that the king and the kingdom are used interchangeably, as the one presupposes the other. This fact, we think, will help us to understand the passages mentioned in the inquiries of Bro. Day.

They read as follows:—"But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you."—Luke 11: 20. "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein."—Luke 18: 17. "For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power."—1 Cor. 4: 20. "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Rom. 14: 17. "Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God."—Mark 14: 25.

When it is said, as in Rom. 14: 17, that "the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," we do not understand that these christian virtues constitute the kingdom, but are the characteristics of those who possess the kingdom. These traits of character will be exhibited by all who gain that happy land.

The word basileia, rendered "kingdom" in Luke 11: 20, may be rendered so as to represent the King instead of the kingdom. For instance, in the Emphatic Diaglott, it is rendered,—"But if by a finger of God I cast out the demons, then God's ROYAL MAJESTY has unexpectedly come to you."

SPIRITS IN PRISON.

MR. GRANT:—Dear Sir,—Having read your little tract on the "Soul," I have become much interested in it. It has given me much light. Will you please answer the following questions through the Crisis, and oblige a seeker after the truth?

In 1 Peter 3: 19, we read thus:—"By which, also, he went and preached unto the spirits in prison." Please explain also 1 Pet. 4: 6.

If the spirit in man is not an intelligent principle, that actuates him, how will you dispose of these passages?

Respectfully yours, J. F. H.

The context of the first passage reads as follows:—

"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometimes were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."—1 Pet. 3: 18–20.

It will be observed that the pronoun which stands for the word Spirit by which Christ was "quickened," or raised from the dead. We believe all admit that this is the Holy Spirit. It should also be noticed that the preaching by the aid of the Spirit was done "in the days of Noah," while "the ark was a preparing." Peter says, "God saved . . . . Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness." Noah needed the Spirit of God to assist him in preaching in those days, as we do now. We understand that the same Spirit that was employed in raising Christ from the dead, helped Noah to preach while building the ark.

According to Griesbach, one of the ablest translators, the word rendered "spirits," in the 19th verse, is properly put in the singular number,—pneumati,—when the passage would read,—"By which Spirit he went and preached to those in prison."

This makes the whole passage, with its context, all plain, and harmonious with the Bible.

It would be a strange theory to advocate, that Christ preached to the Antediluvians during the three days that he was in Joseph's new tomb; and equally strange, if he could at that time preach to any one, that he should preach to those whom his Father had destroyed by the flood for their wickedness. They certainly would be the last class of persons to whom the Lord would offer salvation, even admitting, contrary to the Bible, that they were alive when the Savior was crucified.

We now notice 1 Pet. 4: 6.—"For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." Wakefield renders this passage as follows:—"For this indeed was the effect of the preaching of the gospel to the dead, that some will be punished as carnal men, but others lead a spiritual life unto God."

This rendering gives, we think, the simple idea in the text: Some were lead, by the preaching of the gospel, to live holy lives; others continued in wickedness, and will receive "the wages of sin," which is the "second death."

MORALS AT WASHINGTON.

It is a lamentable fact that the morals of those sent to Washington to make our laws and guide the affairs of the nation are, many of them, a set of drinking, gambling, licentious men; having no other qualification for their office but corrupted talent. It it no wonder, we think, that a nation governed by such men should be dashing in pieces before a war tempest. We can hope for nothing better till there is a national reform; but we see no signs of that; but on the contrary, higher waves of wickedness are continually heaving in sight. "The God of our fathers" has been almost set aside in the governmental affairs of our nation for many years. He has borne long with us, but the "wine cup" of his fury is now being poured out, and his enemies are beginning to taste its bitterness. The dregs are yet reserved to end the awful scene. The demons are busy in leading on the workers of iniquity, and preparing for the final scene in the terrible drama.

We copy the following from the Christian Era:

"Is it not exceedingly lamentable, and should it not cause the blush of shame to mantle the cheek of every true hearted, loyal American, to think what scenes of Sabbath breaking, gambling, drunkenness and licentiousness are enacted by men who are sent to the Nation's Capitol as the conservators of her interests and honor. If there is one spot in our land that needs reformation, it is where the great men do congregate every winter, the greatness of many of them, however, seeming to consist in the unholy rivalry of seeing which shall outstrip his competitors in running into every kind of debauchery and filth. We know there are exceptions, and that there are men both in the Senate and House of Representatives, who really love their country, and are men of principle and honor, and who go to Washington with the hope and prayer that they may do something for their country's weal. We honor such men, and they should be honored by all; and God will honor them, and we rejoice that they are the sprinkling of salt in these bodies which will preserve them from moral putrifaction, for were it not so, we see nothing to keep them from sinking into one great mass of offensive, rotten corruption.

Do not recent developments prove to the satisfaction of every thinking man, that the time has come when moral character should be more considered in our choice of men who are to fill posts of honor and trust?

Is it not high time to elect men who will look after the interests of the nation, rather than those who will make their official position a stepping-stone to the gratification of avaricious desires, or libidinous indulgence, or profligacy in high life in some of the Satanic shapes it so often assumes in Washington? It is even said that the dissipation and rioting this winter exceeds anything that has ever gone before. If so, when such trials and emergencies are upon us as a people, should not the Lord's children appoint a day of special fasting and prayer for the men at Washington?"

For the World's Crisis.

LYNN, MASS.

BRO. GRANT:—In a former article published in the Crisis, we promised to say something more about the progress of truth in this place; but circumstances over which we had no control have prevented until the present, and now we will endeavor to fulfill our engagement.

Lynn has been a place where the truth has been preached, the standard of the cross reared, the banner of the good news of our coming King unfurled, for many years; and many of those who have been zealous advocates of the cause, like good old war-veterans, are still believing that victory ere long will perch upon their banners, and that eternal deliverance will be theirs in the land for which they have fought. Although hard have been the scenes of conflict through which they have passed, and in which some have fallen or been taken captive by the enemy, still new recruits are being added to their numbers, which fact encourages them to endure as seeing Him who is invisible, knowing the conflict will soon be over.

The cause of truth has recently received a new impetus in this place. We were permitted to spend Lord's day, April 24th, with this people for the first time, and during our ministrations this day we felt that God's special blessing was with us, and that it rested on the audience assembled. At the close of the evening service, we gave an invitation to those who wished for the prayers of christians to make it manifest by rising up, when one young man arose. This convinced us that God was at work, and we appointed a meeting the next evening, in which five more rose for prayers. We continued our meetings every evening during the week, the interest increasing all the time, which resulted in the conversion of sinners and the reclamation of backsliders. Some who the week previous were in the ranks of Satan came over on the Lord's side, and are now rejoicing in the blessed hope of eternal life through Christ; and others, who had lost their hope and were low in their minds, resolved to make another effort to go to the kingdom, and accordingly were blessed in so doing.

May 1st. We had an engagement with the church in East Boston, and thought we should be under the necessity of leaving Lynn to fill that appointment; but after laying the matter before the Lord in prayer, we thought we would try and get some one to supply the desk at Boston for us. So we started for Boston with this idea, and on arriving, to our surprise we met Bro. J. V. Himes, an old veteran in the cause, from the "far West." This was a happy meeting indeed, for after laying the matter before Bro. H., he concluded to supply the desk all day for us. Back we went to Lynn, feeling that the Lord had truly answered prayer.

Lord's day, May 1st, was a good day to the church in Lynn. After the morning service, in which we endeavored to show that immersion was the only scriptural mode of baptism, we repaired to the water, and buried four happy souls in the typical grave, two of whom were my own townsmen. Converts shouted, saints rejoiced, and sinners were made to feel their need of Christ, in witnessing this solemn christian ordinance.

During the ten days we spent in Lynn about a dozen were converted and reclaimed, and we learn that the good work is still progressing. God's great name have all the glory.

Your Bro. in Christ, A. W. SIBLEY.

For the World's Crisis.

THE "ALL-HEALING SPRING."

This is the name of a fountain that gushes from a rock in the hillside and supplies water for the celebrated "Water Cure," named "Our Home on the Hillside," located at Dansville, N. Y. On Sunday, Feb. 14th, a few believers repaired to the "Cure" for the purpose of immersing into Christ Bro. Rogers, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who was an invalid at the cure. The "plunge bath" was filled with water from the "all-healing spring," and there we planted him in the likeness of Christ and raised him again to walk in newness of life. There in the figure of baptism he washed away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord.

For once I think that spring was rightly named. Gushing from the rock, it was a fit emblem of that great fountain of life cleft in the rock Christ Jesus. Bro. Rogers was not baptized in the running stream, or lake, or ocean, but he went near to the fountain cleft in the rock, and was immersed in its liquid waves. 'Twas more like Calvary than Jordan. But whether at Calvary's base or Jordan's waves, may the Lord give him at last the realization of his faith.

F. BURR.

Dansville, N. Y.

☞ The human race is divided into two classes—those who go-a-head and do something, and those who sit still and inquire, "Why wasn't it done the other way?"

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to May 24th, $1146.62
Mrs. C. Taber pd	.50
Mrs. Lucy Sayles pd	3.00
A friend pd	15.00
E. H. Gordon pd	.50
Sr. Reed pd	.25
Geo. L. Teeple pd	1.00
E. C. Gage pd	.25
R. Boardman pd	.50
S. Bassford pd	1.00
Sr. P. W. Bassford pd	.50
Sr. L. Welch pd	.50
Sr. M. A. Lester pd	.25
A. Lester pd	.25
E. Lester pd	.25
R. Clark pd	.20
P. Welch pd	.15
M. Parr pd	.13
A friend pd	.25
C. Nash pd	.25
E. L. pd	.25
J. O. Parker and wife pd	.50
J. Blain pd in tracts	5.00
F. A. Gard pd	.25
Mrs. L. Payson pd	.25
Susan A. Isbell pd	.25
S. F. pd	1.00
L. Nichols pd	1.00
E. A. Marsh pd	.50
Mrs. J. Nason pd	.25

THE TRACT FUND.

BRO. GRANT:—Enclosed you will find — for me and my wife. We have received great benefit from tracts and pamphlets. Almost our entire conversion to the truth, as it is revealed in the word of God, was by getting tracts, and Pauline Theology. As we received so freely, we ought to give just as freely; for God loveth a "cheerful giver." We are glad to see the Tract Fund filling up so fast, and may our heavenly Father bless each and every one engaged in this work, is the prayer of your unworthy brother and sister,

JAMES & CHARLOTTE PAGE.

Teller's Corners, Crawford Co., N. Y.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been much interested in the writings of Bro. Taylor, and others, in regard to the Tract cause. It is one of the best of causes; one that demands our sympathy and hearty co-operation. The Lord has been very good to me, therefore I wish to do something for him; and believing that I can spend money in no way to so good advantage as in the distribution of tracts, I enclose fifteen dollars for the Tract Fund.

Vernon, Vt. A FRIEND.

For the World's Crisis.

A NEW BOOK, And a Valuable One.

For many years I have been preparing a work with the following title, viz: "A Catalogue of American Works on Prophecy." The ground covered in my collection of titles embraces all books, pamphlets, bound or unbound, and all valuable tracts and tractates on the question of The Signs of the Times, The End of the World, The Lord's Second Coming, The Restoration of Israel, The Millennium, The Kingdom of God, The First Resurrection, together with all kindred and collateral subjects relating to or bearing on the same. American reprints of English works are also included, and each edition of the various works is noted, date and page being given. Accompanying each title, brief expository and critical notes are intended to be given and all important works on either side of the question involved in discussion specially noted, while the time indicated by the several writers for the consummation is in each and all instances stated.

The design of this volume will be to exhibit the extent and variety of prophetical reading, writing and publishing in this country; to call attention to the best works extant on the subject of prophecy, and also to serve as an advertising medium for all authors of every description who may have issued, or shall issue, works of this class. No other work of the kind has ever been published, save Brooks' Prophetical Dictionary, put forth in London about thirty years ago; a general work, now out of print, and not at all complete in its style, and list of American authors. My volume will give full titles, style of binding, date, number of pages, various editions, criticisms, etc., etc. The following may serve as a specimen and also present a guide for others.

IRVING. REV. EDWARD, of England. For the Oracles of God, four orations. For judgment to come, an argument in nine parts, 427 pp., 8vo., New York, 1825.

In the celebrated minister's usual gorgeous style of eloquence; contains millenarian sentiments, and is dedicated to Chalmers.

Having for six or eight years ransacked almost every editor's room, public or private library of any great extent, and bookseller's list, in New England, for titles, corresponding in all directions with scores of persons, and run up my list to about seven hundred; I now call on all writers, and persons of this class, to aid me in completing this volume for publication. No Bibleotheca, or catalogue extant, has been of any service to me in this work, hence my labors have been abundant. But I cannot travel any more to search and prosecute inquiry. Nor is there any need to do so. Let every prophetical journal in the land give this notice one or two insertions, and all persons, who have written and published on prophecy, send either the works themselves to me by mail, or send me full titles, etc., with brief notice of contents, for use and advertisement. Thus every person's work will be advertised in thousands of copies of the catalogue, and scattered in all directions. For this the author, or his friends, can well afford the trouble, or even the gift of the book, as it will pay. I shall complete the list for publication by July 4th; all sent after that will be too late for insertion in the first edition. I do this work for the glory of God, and the honor of his cause, not expecting to realize any thing from its publication.

The volume will be afforded at the lowest possible cost to all. Will ministers, authors, editors, and all others aid me in the task? More especially do I want titles of all works published within the past five years, particularly those of a local character, not widely circulated, or known hitherto. Be careful to give full title, style, whether 8vo, 4to, 16mo, etc., pages, date of each edition, the number of editions, where printed, and state the main features of the book, whether millenarian or no, and the author's dates for the end. Send the book if you can afford it, as this is better still for you and me.

All papers giving this one insertion, and calling attention to the same editorially, and mailing me a copy prepaid, will confer a favor on the cause at large, and receive a copy of the book when issued, gratis. Will the Advent Herald, the Herald of Life, Advent Harbinger, Voice of the West, Israelite Indeed, Prophetic Times, Millennial Banner, and every other paper interested, please copy, or give notice?

DANIEL T. TAYLOR.

Rouses Point, Clinton Co., N. Y., May, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW TO SWEETEN LIFE.

O! how glorious to make every thing pleasant, to throw sunshine upon every cloud, sweeten life by smiles. Kind words and sunshine make joy to spring in your path and love to glow on every face. Instead of showing angry feelings to the boy who sweeps dirt upon you, say to him with a smile, "My little fellow, be careful," and pass on. Depend upon it, the boy will not trouble you again. To the man who puts his double fist in your face, say, "My dear sir, have more respect for yourself," and it will change his mind in a moment. Do you ever meet with a person down to the heel? Squeeze his hand, and point him to an acre of sunshine, resting on the far hills. Has poverty brought your friend the blues? Open your heart and your purse. A large heart and dollars from your purse will sweep the cloud from his face.

Sweeten life, I repeat. There are sorrows and pains and disappointments enough, in all conscience, without your adding to the amount. There is a loud call for smiles, love, kindness, sweet words and cheerful looks. If you have nothing else, these you can bestow, and add a large amount to the stock of human comfort and human happiness.

Kennebunk, Me. C. M. SWETT.

For the World's Crisis.

EXCITEMENT ABOUT THE END.

We have read the statement, and heard it made repeatedly, that the excitement about the Lord's immediate coming, among those who are looking for him in the past and present, has been and is uncalled for; and certain bad effects are declared to have followed, such as leaving crops unharvested for a time, giving away money and other property, spending too much time in attending religious meetings, etc., etc.

Now, really, these are grave charges, and perhaps they can be sustained against some, yet we incline to the opinion that they do not lie equally against all. Over or undue excitement is certainly to be deplored, and, as far as possible, avoided; but what shall be said concerning the masses who have not been duly excited upon the subject of the Lord's coming, or other wholesome religious subjects? Any ground for complaint here? We fear that those looking for their Lord are not sufficiently excited upon or by this great truth —"The Lord at hand," the resurrection near. Great excitement has prevailed upon this subject; the influence of "this gospel of the kingdom" has been world wide, and the study of prophecy and its manifest fulfillment has afforded ample occasion for excitement on this very important subject.

That such an excitement was foretold in prophecy is abundantly plain. Hence, it turns to us as an evidence of the end near. "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24: 14. Other Scriptures might be quoted.

The evidence of the deep and wide-spread interest that has been and is being felt upon this subject, and of such a character as to compel the admission of the fact, even on the part of those averse to having it so, has been met by the following statement: "Just such excitements have often prevailed, and passed away as this will after a short time," and thus they seek to assure themselves of "peace and safety" when sudden destruction is near. This, however, is as a statement entirely false. No such excitement as has prevailed during the lifetime of the present generation, based on such considerations and arguments, has been known during the past eighteen hundred years. An extensive excitement there was in the tenth century which was great and disastrous in its effects, but it was not a parallel to this, as its origin was entirely different. It was the result of what might be called a "temporal millennium theory," a sentiment we oppose as Adventists. In proof of my statement I here subjoin Mosheim's account of it, that will fully justify my statement with reference to its origin and character. Let the candid read carefully, and see if it is or can be considered a parallel to our own times.

See Mosheim's Chruch His., Vol. 1, chap. 3, Sec. 3, p. 248.

"That the whole christian world was covered at this time with a thick and gloomy veil of superstition, is evident from a prodigious number of testimonies and examples, which it is needless to mention. This horrible cloud, which hid almost every ray of truth from the eyes of the multitude, furnished the priests and monks with many opportunities of propagating absurd and ridiculous opinions, which contributed not a little to confirm their credit. Among these opinions, which so frequently dishonored the Latin church, and produced from time to time such violent agitations, none occasioned such a general panic, or such dreadful impressions of terror or dismay, as a notion that now prevailed of the immediate approach of the day of judgment. This notion, which took its rise from a remarkable passage of St. John (Rev. 20: 1–4), and had been entertained by some Doctors in the preceding century, was advocated by many at this time; and spreading itself with an amazing rapidity through the European provinces, it threw them into the deepest consternation and anguish; for they imagined that St. John had clearly foretold that, after a thousand years from the birth of Christ, Satan was to be let loose from his prison; that Antichrist was to come, and the conflagration and destruction of the world were to follow these great and terrible events.

Hence prodigious numbers of people abandoned all their civil connections, and their parental relations, and giving over to the churches or monasteries all their lands, treasures and worldly effects, repaired with the utmost precipitation to Palestine, where they imagined that Christ would descend from heaven to judge the world. Others devoted themselves, by a solemn and voluntary oath, to the service of the churches, convents and priesthood, whose slaves they became in the most rigorous sense of that word, performing daily their heavy tasks; and all this from a notion that the supreme Judge would diminish the severity of their sentence, and look upon them with a more favorable, and propitious eye, on account of their having made themselves the slaves of his ministers.

When an eclipse of the sun or moon occurred and happened to be visible, the cities were deserted, and their miserable inhabitants fled for refuge to deep caverns, and hid themselves among the craggy rocks and under the bending summits of steep mountains. The opulent attempted to bribe the Deity, and the saintly tribe by rich donations conferred upon the sacerdotal and monastic orders, who were regarded as the immediate vicegerents of heaven. In many places temples, palaces and noble edifices, both public and private, were suffered to decay, and were even deliberately pulled down, from a notion that they were no longer of any use, since the final dissolution of all things approached. In a word, no language is sufficient to express the confusion and despair that tormented the minds of miserable mortals upon this occasion.

This general delusion was, indeed, opposed and combatted by the discerning few, who endeavored to dispel these groundless terrors, and to efface the notion from which they arose in the minds of the people. But their attempts were ineffectual; nor could the dreadful apprehension of the superstitious multitudes be entirely removed before the conclusion of this the tenth century. Then, when they saw that the dreaded period had passed without the arrival of any great calamity, they began to understand that St. John had not really foretold what they so much feared."

Is it fair to quote this as a parallel to the Scriptural and wholesome excitement that now is felt by the few on the Lord's coming?

Stanbridge, C. E. CHAS. P. DOW.

For the World's Crisis.

PIONEERING.—No. 4.

April 7th. Started for Floyd, designing to stop and preach where Bro. Hough and myself stayed all night on the other trip on the account of high water. Left the cars at Jessup, and stayed with Bro. Billings, but finding no passage across the prairies through mud and rain, took the next train for Cedar Falls. It was still raining, and few teams in town, and the stage was crowded. I turned my course towards New Hartford, and stayed at the pilgrim home of Bro. E. Dunham. I was strongly urged to remain over Sunday, but felt like pushing on. This Bro. took me on a piece to Bro. Brayton's, and he carried me some five miles further, when I started on foot, having yet some forty-five miles to travel. Stopped at a school-house and wrote on a black-board—"Five dollars' reward for a text in the Bible that reads, Immortal soul," etc., etc., thinking as I could not stop to preach, that this on the next day might call some one's attention to searching.

Traveled on some six miles, and found a preacher of the old Christian order. Thought him quite cool, but learned afterwards he had heard that I was a Copperhead and would refuse to take greenbacks. Strange that because a person cannot take life, and believes that Jesus was right when he said, "Blessed are the peacemakers," such prejudice will run into superstition and bigotry not easily thrown off.

As to my position, I am a pilgrim and a stranger, having no sympathy with the rebellion, and no desire to participate in war or politics, or gambling festivals, etc., etc. Is not this coming out from the world as we ought to? But there is a change from what it was four years ago. Men are sick of that kind of preaching. Now we can pray in peace as God directed, that we may lead a peaceable and quiet life, and not a fighting one.

I arrived that night at Bro. Culver's, on the Shell Rock, and in the morning he took me to Spring Lake, among the old christians, in time for meeting. Here I met with Elder Skilling, their preacher, and he would have me preach in his place. I was well pleased with my new acquaintance and the liberty I enjoyed; having my training under this school of theology, it seemed much like home. I like the true ones for the principles of the organization, i. e., christian character, being their only test of fellowship and membership. One brother kindly took me on my journey till I obtained a chance to ride through to Floyd, some thirty miles, in time to give notice for meeting and preach that evening.

April 11th. I had the pleasure of burying with Christ in baptism Bro. J. R. Preston and wife from the United Brethren. When men get the key note, i. e., that man is mortal, and when dead he is dead all over, they see that a little water sprinkled on the forehead will not figure forth the resurrection in any sense whatever; they realize, too, that obedience is better than sacrifice; thus they walk down, die, and are buried, and the end will be everlasting life.

I preached three times, received five into the church, made arrangements for the discussion the fourteenth of June. Started home some ninety miles on horse-back, which is a new and hard way for me to travel, but arrived at home in time to preach on Sunday, since which I have preached every two weeks, and the balance of the time have labored near here or at home, attending to my work, as I have put in wheat and oats that I may not want in winter time.

I heard a lady from England lecture the other night, in which she told a dream she had some fifteen years ago, while employed as a home missionary. She said she saw kingdoms in a great commotion, and the people rushing together, brother against brother; the pulpits reeled like drunken men for want of truth; the people fled from them, and the strife went on till nearly all the world was engaged in it. Then she saw a man in the clouds of heaven who took out his sword and said he could make war, and he could make peace. Then the people tried to get away from him, and hide, but they could not. She said the strife commenced in America first. Then a voice said to her, "Arise, and go to the land shadowing with wings." She awoke, determined to come on to this country, and did so soon, and thought no more of her dream till the firing on Sumter.

I heard another lecturer say that when the people would observe the laws of health and physical development, and improve the human family, then Christ would come in the flesh. And in conversation with this Dr. Andrews, he told me that Eld. M. Hull, after a debate with one of their men on Spiritualism, went to Battle Creek and told his brethren that he was so influenced in that discussion, that if they would pray for him that the spell might go off, and if God would forgive him for it, he would never debate with another Spiritualist. "But," says the Dr., "he could not get rid of it, and is now doing a great work for us."

Thus we see that it was not the force of argument or of truth, but that he was mesmerized. If men of ability and knowledge can be so bewildered, who know the truth that the dead know not anything, I wonder not that men of the popular faith are drawn into the vortex of ruin. Will not others depart from the faith being duped by the Devil? How can men expect to escape when they grant and teach the foundation of Spiritualism, that men are alive when dead, and know more when dead than when alive?

The antidote must be preached, that "the dead know not anything." Ministers must be sustained, papers and tracts also must be spread. Bro., will you help? If not, God

For the World's Crisis.

KINDNESS.

One fundamental principle of Christ's religion is kindness. In all his intercourse with mankind, whether his professed friends or bitterest enemies, he ever manifested a kind spirit. He taught his followers to be kind. The spirit of Christ is gentle, wooing. It persuades by love, but never drives with fear. Man, in his depravity, is unkind, quarrelsome, tyrannical. But when the peaceful gospel of Jesus Christ rules men's rebellious hearts, every tumult ceases, and the rough and uncouth becomes smooth and beautiful. Love and true kindness are inseparable. The gospel is a message of love. All who have the spirit of Christ will love as brethren, and be kind to each other. And when we begin to push and to speak harshly we are out of gospel order.

Brethren, BE KIND. What if that brother does n't believe exactly as you do? don't scowl and scold and treat him like a barbarian. Has n't he a right to think for himself? He allows it in you. "But he's in an error." Well, be kind. Let him see that those who have the truth can be gentle—Christ-like. LOVE HIM. Follow him with a brother's prayers. You say he is honest,—seek to restore him. Ah! I see; you forgot to go and tell Jesus about your brother. Go now and ask the Lord to send forth his LIGHT and TRUTH. "But it's an outrageous error!" Ah? So much more need of earnest prayer. Go quickly for help and save a soul from darkness and death. Don't undertake to do the work yourself, for "self" is the wrong one to do God's work.

Yes, it is best to be kind. Supposing you have heard curious things about your brother or sister. Don't believe all you hear. Remember there are "two sides to a story," and one side always spoils the other. Now be cautious. It did n't lose anything by coming so far, you may depend. It's been through mouths enough. And, friend, if any body has spoken evil of you, bear it patiently. O, be kind. "Let the hurricane roar." It sometime will be o'er. Then there will be a great calm. "But they told falsehoods about me; they judged me wrongfully, they slandered me, among strangers too." Let such an one TRUST IN GOD, for he will certainly "bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day." Blessed, blessed promise! Let it settle in your heart. The Lord knows you are but dust; knows how nature calls for vengeance on your foes; but let your cry be—

"Calm me, O God, and keep me calm."

It is far better to suffer wrong than to do wrong. A reckoning day will come, and they that persecute you for righteousness' sake shall be terrified and put to shame. Bless the Lord, he hears when men speak evil of you, and also hears the complaint you make to him.

Brother, sister, watch your words. Speak evil of no man. The Bible forbids it. Endure cold treatment and abuse even from false brethren, but 'mid it all BE KIND. There is a Friend that will never fail. And in his habitation is the christian's home. To those mansions I invite you. There he that maketh or believeth a lie shall not dwell. There no cruel slanderer shall separate chief friends.

"There is a land where time shall flow no longer,
Fair land of rest, where partings never come;
Where friends remain, and love grows ever stronger;
O heavenly land! happy, eternal home!"

M. MATHEWS WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass., May, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

PLAIN BIBLE PROOFS.

No Bible millennium preceding "the great tribulation," "the day of the Lord," and the second coming of Christ, who comes at the "times of restitution of all things," (Acts 3: 19–23), not a thousand years after.—Matt. 13: 24–52, and twenty-fourth chapter; Mark 13; Luke 12: 31–56; 17: 24–37; 19: 12–27; 21: 7–36, describe all the great and leading events in their order, down to the time of the great tribulation and signs immediately preceding the coming and kingdom of Christ; but no mention is made of any millennial day first.

Read Isa. 30: 8–11, 14, 15, with 1 Thess. 5: 2–6; which speaks of their prophesying smooth things, and saying "peace and safety; when sudden destruction cometh upon them." Read Jer. 25: 15–33, and 51st chap., with Rev. 18: 1–24, where mention is made of the wine-cup of God's wrath, which all nations for their wickedness have had to drink; of terrible judgments upon all nations for all their abominations, and like a millstone cast into the sea, to be thrown down, and found no more at all;—but no intimation is given of an intervening millennial period. Read Dan. 2: 28–45, and seventh chapter, with Rev. 11: 14–18; which, instead of teaching that these kingdoms growing better, and finally merging into the millennial day, describe them "as broken to pieces together," and blown away like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors, to make room for "the everlasting kingdom."

Read Ps. 2: 1–9, with Rev. 17: 12–14; also Ezk. 39: 11–22, with Rev. 19: 17–21; which describe similar events, with the infatuated and unparalleled opposition of earthly powers to Christ's reign and rule, and of their terrible overthrow at his coming to establish the everlasting kingdom. Immediately after this terrible overthrow of the Armageddon hosts, in connection we have described, then in the next chapter of Revelation the binding of Satan a thousand years,—"then the thrones of judgment," "the first resurrection, and the living and reigning with Christ a thousand years, which from chronology and the description given truly seems to be the only millennial period given; when the saints shall be priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years. And at the end of the thousand years, Satan is loosed a little season, who goes out to deceive the nations; who encompasses the camp of the saints, and fire comes down from God out of heaven and devours them; when he is cast into the lake of fire and brimstone. Then is seen the great white throne; and the last resurrection and final judgment take place, when all whose names are not found in the book of life are cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death. Then the new heaven and new earth appear in view, and the new Jerusalem is seen coming down from God out of heaven, "prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Is not this glorious description of the new Jerusalem something more than a figure? When it is further declared, "And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." "And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it."

Brethren and sisters, in view of these things let us be holy in all manner of conversation, make sure work that our names are written in the Lamb's book of life, that our faith fail not, but press towards the mark for the prize; "looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God," "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing;" and heed the admonition, "These things speak and exhort and rebuke with all authority."

S. L. MANLEY.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, May 31, 1864.

☞ NOTICE.

All orders and monies for the World's Crisis, or for Books and Tracts for sale at this Office, and all matters pertaining to the business of the Office, must be addressed to the Business Agent,

MILES GRANT, Crisis Box, Boston.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

Nothing of special interest has transpired in the army for the last few days. It is admitted that the late battles on the Potomac have been the most severe since the commencement of the war. The rebels are very much in earnest, and as unyielding as when the war first began. They seem determined to conquer or die. With them every thing available is employed to aid the army. It is very evident that there must yet be more very terrible fighting before the war closes. The nation is fast rushing toward inevitable ruin. A general bankruptcy and repudiation of debts stares us in the face.

Soon we may expect to see the North rent into various political factions, each trying, by all possible means, to secure the success of his party in the next Presidential election. We may look for the adoption of all measures, excepting christian, to accomplish the object proposed. Truly, "evil men and seducers" are waxing "worse and worse" with a rapid speed. Men are not only "deceiving," but "being deceived."

STATE OF THINGS IN EUROPE.

There is no improvement in the political matters in Europe. They are preparing for war as fast as possible. The Congress called to settle the difficulties between Prussia, Austria and Denmark, only tended to widen the breach, and make a settlement more doubtful than ever. Buonaparte looks on with much calmness, while the other nations are weakening themselves in various ways. Napoleon is yet "master of the ceremonies." He is sure to win in every game. His schemes are deep laid, and most wonderfully executed. He always moves about right, to accomplish his object. He keeps on "the rising tide," and the highest wave, while other powers are sinking all around. He steps firmly, and with great power. The nations of earth tremble before him, and dare not cross his pathway. He knows his strength, and is preparing to put it into active operations.

We may expect to hear more tales of bloody scenes before twelve months pass. The war spirit is pervading all nations and societies. How unlike the cry of "peace and safety" that has sounded out from popular pulpits for some fifteen years past, are the signs and facts in these days; yet the lullaby song is still oft repeated, and many flatter themselves that the "conversion of the world" is really about to transpire. We think it would not have been a greater delusion, had Noah preached the same doctrine just before the flood. It is a sad sight to see the blind leading the blind. May their eyes be opened before it is too late to escape the impending destruction.

When speaking of "European affairs," the Boston Journal of May 23d says:—

"The gravity of the situation in Europe can hardly escape attention, even in the midst of our own absorbing crisis. The failure of the conference, now generally conceded, adds another to the bungling measures of England, by which she has succeeded in complicating the Danish question and adding to the burdens laid upon unhappy Denmark.

In the meantime Prussia, flushed with insolence at its success in the war, meditates new aggressions, and will at least be satisfied with nothing short of the complete appropriation of Schleswig and Holstein. So aggravated have the English people become at her conduct, that the extension of the French boundaries to the Rhine would probably be hailed, rather than otherwise, as a fit punishment. If this feeling becomes general, we may be sure that Louis Napoleon is not the man to miss such an opportunity, even if he has not, as many suppose, deliberately maneuvered to bring it about. On the whole, therefore, the position of Europe is troubled, and threatens to become still more so."

INQUIRIES ABOUT THE KINGDOM.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please to give your ideas upon the kingdom of God as referred to in Luke 11: 20, Rom. 14: 17, and 1 Cor. 4: 20? Are these and other similar passages of the same meaning as Luke 18: 17, Mark 14: 25, and many others which evidently refer to the blessed kingdom for which we are striving? Yours in hope of a home, with you and all of the dear ones, in the kingdom.

M. G. DAY.

Cornish Flat, N. H.

There are some passages in the Bible where the fruits, or nature of the coming kingdom, are called the kingdom; but these cannot appear till after the kingdom is established. The tree must be planted before its fruits are seen; so of the kingdom. We cannot have a kingdom without a king; yet the same word is sometimes rendered king, and sometimes kingdom; in other words, they are used interchangeably. For instance, Daniel is informed, when beholding the beasts seen in vision,—"These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth."—Dan. 7: 17. In the 23d verse of the same chapter, the interpreter says, "The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth." Then it follows, as the four beasts represent four kings, the fourth is one of them. But the fourth beast represents "the fourth kingdom"; hence the other three beasts represent the first three kingdoms. Here we learn that the king and the kingdom are used interchangeably, as the one presupposes the other. This fact, we think, will help us to understand the passages mentioned in the inquiries of Bro. Day.

They read as follows:—"But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you."—Luke 11: 20. "Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein."—Luke 18: 17. "For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power."—1 Cor. 4: 20. "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Rom. 14: 17. "Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God."—Mark 14: 25.

When it is said, as in Rom. 14: 17, that "the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," we do not understand that these christian virtues constitute the kingdom, but are the characteristics of those who possess the kingdom. These traits of character will be exhibited by all who gain that happy land.

The word basileia, rendered "kingdom" in Luke 11: 20, may be rendered so as to represent the King instead of the kingdom. For instance, in the Emphatic Diaglott, it is rendered,—"But if by a finger of God I cast out the demons, then God's ROYAL MAJESTY has unexpectedly come to you."

SPIRITS IN PRISON.

MR. GRANT:—Dear Sir,—Having read your little tract on the "Soul," I have become much interested in it. It has given me much light. Will you please answer the following questions through the Crisis, and oblige a seeker after the truth?

In 1 Peter 3: 19, we read thus:—"By which, also, he went and preached unto the spirits in prison." Please explain also 1 Pet. 4: 6.

If the spirit in man is not an intelligent principle, that actuates him, how will you dispose of these passages?

Respectfully yours, J. F. H.

The context of the first passage reads as follows:—

"For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometimes were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water."—1 Pet. 3: 18–20.

It will be observed that the pronoun which stands for the word Spirit by which Christ was "quickened," or raised from the dead. We believe all admit that this is the Holy Spirit. It should also be noticed that the preaching by the aid of the Spirit was done "in the days of Noah," while "the ark was a preparing." Peter says, "God saved .... Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness." Noah needed the Spirit of God to assist him in preaching in those days, as we do now. We understand that the same Spirit that was employed in raising Christ from the dead, helped Noah to preach while building the ark.

According to Griesbach, one of the ablest translators, the word rendered "spirits," in the 19th verse, is properly put in the singular number,—pneumati,—when the passage would read,—"By which Spirit he went and preached to those in prison."

This makes the whole passage, with its context, all plain, and harmonious with the Bible.

It would be a strange theory to advocate, that Christ preached to the Antediluvians during the three days that he was in Joseph's new tomb; and equally strange, if he could at that time preach to any one, that he should preach to those whom his Father had destroyed by the flood for their wickedness. They certainly would be the last class of persons to whom the Lord would offer salvation, even admitting, contrary to the Bible, that they were alive when the Savior was crucified.

We now notice 1 Pet. 4: 6.—"For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." Wakefield renders this passage as follows:—"For this indeed was the effect of the preaching of the gospel to the dead, that some will be punished as carnal men, but others lead a spiritual life unto God."

This rendering gives, we think, the simple idea in the text: Some were lead, by the preaching of the gospel, to live holy lives; others continued in wickedness, and will receive "the wages of sin," which is the "second death."

MORALS AT WASHINGTON.

It is a lamentable fact that the morals of those sent to Washington to make our laws and guide the affairs of the nation are, many of them, a set of drinking, gambling, licentious men; having no other qualification for their office but corrupted talent. It it no wonder, we think, that a nation governed by such men should be dashing in pieces before a war tempest. We can hope for nothing better till there is a national reform; but we see no signs of that; but on the contrary, higher waves of wickedness are continually heaving in sight. "The God of our fathers" has been almost set aside in the governmental affairs of our nation for many years. He has borne long with us, but the "wine cup" of his fury is now being poured out, and his enemies are beginning to taste its bitterness. The dregs are yet reserved to end the awful scene. The demons are busy in leading on the workers of iniquity, and preparing for the final scene in the terrible drama.

We copy the following from the Christian Era:—

"Is it not exceedingly lamentable, and should it not cause the blush of shame to mantle the cheek of every true hearted, loyal American, to think what scenes of Sabbath breaking, gambling, drunkenness and licentiousness are enacted by men who are sent to the Nation's Capitol as the conservators of her interests and honor. If there is one spot in our land that needs reformation, it is where the great men do congregate every winter, the greatness of many of them, however, seeming to consist in the unholy rivalry of seeing which shall outstrip his competitors in running into every kind of debauchery and filth. We know there are exceptions, and that there are men both in the Senate and House of Representatives, who really love their country, and are men of principle and honor, and who go to Washington with the hope and prayer that they may do something for their country's weal. We honor such men, and they should be honored by all; and God will honor them, and we rejoice that they are the sprinkling of salt in these bodies which will preserve them from moral putrifaction, for were it not so, we see nothing to keep them from sinking into one great mass of offensive, rotten corruption.

Do not recent developments prove to the satisfaction of every thinking man, that the time has come when moral character should be more considered in our choice of men who are to fill posts of honor and trust?

Is it not high time to elect men who will look after the interests of the nation, rather than those who will make their official position a stepping-stone to the gratification of avaricious desires, or libidinous indulgence, or profligacy in high life in some of the Satanic shapes it so often assumes in Washington? It is even said that the dissipation and rioting this winter exceeds anything that has ever gone before. If so, when such trials and emergencies are upon us as a people, should not the Lord's children appoint a day of special fasting and prayer for the men at Washington?"

For the World's Crisis.

LYNN, MASS.

BRO. GRANT:—In a former article published in the Crisis, we promised to say something more about the progress of truth in this place; but circumstances over which we had no control have prevented until the present, and now we will endeavor to fulfill our engagement.

Lynn has been a place where the truth has been preached, the standard of the cross reared, the banner of the good news of our coming King unfurled, for many years; and many of those who have been zealous advocates of the cause, like good old war-veterans, are still believing that victory ere long will perch upon their banners, and that eternal deliverance will be theirs in the land for which they have fought. Although hard have been the scenes of conflict through which they have passed, and in which some have fallen or been taken captive by the enemy, still new recruits are being added to their numbers, which fact encourages them to endure as seeing Him who is invisible, knowing the conflict will soon be over.

The cause of truth has recently received a new impetus in this place. We were permitted to spend Lord's day, April 24th, with this people for the first time, and during our ministrations this day we felt that God's special blessing was with us, and that it rested on the audience assembled. At the close of the evening service, we gave an invitation to those who wished for the prayers of christians to make it manifest by rising up, when one young man arose. This convinced us that God was at work, and we appointed a meeting the next evening, in which five more rose for prayers. We continued our meetings every evening during the week, the interest increasing all the time, which resulted in the conversion of sinners and the reclamation of backsliders. Some who the week previous were in the ranks of Satan came over on the Lord's side, and are now rejoicing in the blessed hope of eternal life through Christ; and others, who had lost their hope and were low in their minds, resolved to make another effort to go to the kingdom, and accordingly were blessed in so doing.

May 1st. We had an engagement with the church in East Boston, and thought we should be under the necessity of leaving Lynn to fill that appointment; but after laying the matter before the Lord in prayer, we thought we would try and get some one to supply the desk at Boston for us. So we started for Boston with this idea, and on arriving, to our surprise we met Bro. J. V. Himes, an old veteran in the cause, from the "far West." This was a happy meeting indeed, for after laying the matter before Bro. H., he concluded to supply the desk all day for us. Back we went to Lynn, feeling that the Lord had truly answered prayer.

Lord's day, May 1st, was a good day to the church in Lynn. After the morning service, in which we endeavored to show that immersion was the only scriptural mode of baptism, we repaired to the water, and buried four happy souls in the typical grave, two of whom were my own townsmen. Converts shouted, saints rejoiced, and sinners were made to feel their need of Christ, in witnessing this solemn christian ordinance.

During the ten days we spent in Lynn about a dozen were converted and reclaimed, and we learn that the good work is still progressing. God's great name have all the glory.

Your Bro. in Christ, A. W. SIBLEY.

For the World's Crisis.

THE "ALL-HEALING SPRING."

This is the name of a fountain that gushes from a rock in the hillside and supplies water for the celebrated "Water Cure," named "Our Home on the Hillside," located at Dansville, N. Y. On Sunday, Feb. 14th, a few believers repaired to the "Cure" for the purpose of immersing into Christ Bro. Rogers, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who was an invalid at the cure. The "plunge bath" was filled with water from the "all-healing spring," and there we planted him in the likeness of Christ and raised him again to walk in newness of life. There in the figure of baptism he washed away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord.

For once I think that spring was rightly named. Gushing from the rock, it was a fit emblem of that great fountain of life cleft in the rock Christ Jesus. Bro. Rogers was not baptized in the running stream, or lake, or ocean, but he went near to the fountain cleft in the rock, and was immersed in its liquid waves. 'Twas more like Calvary than Jordan. But whether at Calvary's base or Jordan's waves, may the Lord give him at last the realization of his faith. F. BURR.

Dansville, N. Y.

☞ The human race is divided into two classes—those who go-a-head and do something, and those who sit still and inquire, "Why was n't it done the other way?"

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to May 24th, $1146.62
Mrs. C. Taber pd	.50
Mrs. Lucy Sayles pd	8.00
A friend pd	15.00
E. H. Gordon pd	.50
Sr. Reed pd	.25
Geo. L. Teeple pd	1.00
E. C. Gage pd	.25
R. Boardman pd	.50
S. Bassford pd	1.00
Sr. P. W. Bassford pd	.50
Sr. L. Welch pd	.50
Sr. M. A. Lester pd	.25
A. Lester pd	.25
E. Lester pd	.25
R. Clark pd	.25
P. Welch pd	.20
M. Parr pd	.15
A friend pd	.12
C. Nash pd	.25
E. L. pd	.25
J. O. Parker and wife pd	.50
J. Blain pd in tracts	5.00
F. A. Gard pd	.25
Mrs. L. Payson pd	.25
Susan A. Isbell pd	.25
S. F. pd	1.00
L. Nichols pd	1.00
E. A. Marsh pd	.50
Mrs. J. Nason pd	.25

THE TRACT FUND.

BRO. GRANT:—Enclosed you will find — for me and my wife. We have received great benefit from tracts and pamphlets. Almost our entire conversion to the truth, as it is revealed in the word of God, was by getting tracts, and Pauline Theology. As we received so freely, we ought to give just as freely; for God loveth a "cheerful giver." We are glad to see the Tract Fund filling up so fast, and may our heavenly Father bless each and every one engaged in this work, is the prayer of your unworthy brother and sister,

JAMES & CHARLOTTE PAGE.

Teller's Corners, Crawford Co., N. Y.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been much interested in the writings of Bro. Taylor, and others, in regard to the Tract cause. It is one of the best of causes; one that demands our sympathy and hearty co-operation. The Lord has been very good to me, therefore I wish to do something for him; and believing that I can spend money in no way to so good advantage as in the distribution of tracts, I enclose fifteen dollars for the Tract Fund.

Vernon, Vt. A FRIEND.

For the World's Crisis.

A NEW BOOK, And a Valuable One.

For many years I have been preparing a work with the following title, viz: "A Catalogue of American Works on Prophecy." The ground covered in my collection of titles embraces all books, pamphlets, bound or unbound, and all valuable tracts and tractates on the question of The Signs of the Times, The End of the World, The Lord's Second Coming, The Restoration of Israel, The Millennium, The Kingdom of God, The First Resurrection, together with all kindred and collateral subjects relating to or bearing on the same. American reprints of English works are also included, and each edition of the various works is noted, date and page being given. Accompanying each title, brief expository and critical notes are intended to be given and all important works on either side of the question involved in discussion specially noted, while the time indicated by the several writers for the consummation is in each and all instances stated.

The design of this volume will be to exhibit the extent and variety of prophetical reading, writing and publishing in this country; to call attention to the best works extant on the subject of prophecy, and also to serve as an advertising medium for all authors of every description who may have issued, or shall issue, works of this class. No other work of the kind has ever been published, save Brooks' Prophetical Dictionary, put forth in London about thirty years ago; a general work, now out of print, and not at all complete in its style, and list of American authors. My volume will give full titles, style of binding, date, number of pages, various editions, criticisms, etc., etc. The following may serve as a specimen and also present a guide for others.

IRVING. REV. EDWARD, of England. For the Oracles of God, four orations. For judgment to come, an argument in nine parts, 427 pp., 8vo., New York, 1825.

In the celebrated minister's usual gorgeous style of eloquence; contains millenarian sentiments, and is dedicated to Chalmers.

Having for six or eight years ransacked almost every editor's room, public or private library of any great extent, and bookseller's list, in New England, for titles, corresponding in all directions with scores of persons, and run up my list to about seven hundred; I now call on all writers, and persons of this class, to aid me in completing this volume for publication. No Bibleotheca, or catalogue extant, has been of any service to me in this work, hence my labors have been abundant. But I cannot travel any more to search and prosecute inquiry. Nor is there any need to do so. Let every prophetical journal in the land give this notice one or two insertions, and all persons, who have written and published on prophecy, send either the works themselves to me by mail, or send me full titles, etc., with brief notice of contents, for use and advertisement. Thus every person's work will be advertised in thousands of copies of the catalogue, and scattered in all directions. For this the author, or his friends, can well afford the trouble, or even the gift of the book, as it will pay. I shall complete the list for publication by July 4th; all sent after that will be too late for insertion in the first edition. I do this work for the glory of God, and the honor of his cause, not expecting to realize any thing from its publication.

The volume will be afforded at the lowest possible cost to all. Will ministers, authors, editors, and all others aid me in the task? More especially do I want titles of all works published within the past five years, particularly those of a local character, not widely circulated, or known hitherto. Be careful to give full title, style, whether 8vo, 4to, 16mo, etc., pages, date of each edition, the number of editions, where printed, and state the main features of the book, whether millenarian or no, and the author's dates for the end. Send the book if you can afford it, as this is better still for you and me.

All papers giving this one insertion, and calling attention to the same editorially, and mailing me a copy prepaid, will confer a favor on the cause at large, and receive a copy of the book when issued, gratis. Will the Advent Herald, the Herald of Life, Advent Harbinger, Voice of the West, Israelite Indeed, Prophetic Times, Millennial Banner, and every other paper interested, please copy, and give notice?

DANIEL T. TAYLOR.

Rouses Point, Clinton Co., N. Y., May, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW TO SWEETEN LIFE.

O! how glorious to make every thing pleasant, to throw sunshine upon every cloud, sweeten life by smiles. Kind words and sunshine make joy to spring in your path and love to glow on every face. Instead of showing angry feelings to the boy who sweeps dirt upon you, say to him with a smile, "My little fellow, be careful," and pass on. Depend upon it, the boy will not trouble you again. To the man who puts his double fist in your face, say, "My dear sir, have more respect for yourself," and it will change his mind in a moment. Do you ever meet with a person down to the heel? Squeeze his hand, and point him to an acre of sunshine, resting on the far hills. Has poverty brought your friend the blues? Open your heart and your purse. A large heart and dollars from your purse will sweep the cloud from his face.

Sweeten life, I repeat. There are sorrows and pains and disappintments enough, in all conscience, without your adding to the amount. There is a loud call for smiles, love, kindness, sweet words and cheerful looks. If you have nothing else, these you can bestow, and add a large amount to the stock of human comfort and human happiness.

Kennebunk, Me. C. M. SWETT.

For the World's Crisis.

EXCITEMENT ABOUT THE END.

We have read the statement, and heard it made repeatedly, that the excitement about the Lord's immediate coming, among those who are looking for him in the past and present, has been and is uncalled for; and certain bad effects are declared to have followed, such as leaving crops unharvested for a time, giving away money and other property, spending too much time in attending religious meetings, etc., etc.

Now, really, these are grave charges, and perhaps they can be sustained against some, yet we incline to the opinion that they do not lie equally against all. Over or undue excitement is certainly to be deplored, and, as far as possible, avoided; but what shall be said concerning the masses who have not been duly excited upon the subject of the Lord's coming, or other wholesome religious subjects? Any ground for complaint here? We fear that those looking for their Lord are not sufficiently excited upon or by this great truth—"The Lord at hand," the resurrection near. Great excitement has prevailed upon this subject; the influence of "this gospel of the kingdom" has been world wide, and the study of prophecy and its manifest fulfillment has afforded ample occasion for excitement on this very important subject.

That such an excitement was foretold in prophecy is abundantly plain. Hence, it turns to us as an evidence of the end near. "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24: 14. Other Scriptures might be quoted.

The evidence of the deep and wide-spread interest that has been and is being felt upon this subject, and of such a character as to compel the admission of the fact, even on the part of those averse to having it so, has been met by the following statement: "Just such excitements have often prevailed, and passed away as this will after a short time," and thus they seek to assure themselves of "peace and safety" when sudden destruction is near. This, however, is as a statement entirely false. No such excitement as has prevailed during the lifetime of the present generation, based on such considerations and arguments, has been known during the past eighteen hundred years. An extensive excitement there was in the tenth century which was great and disastrous in its effects, but it was not a parallel to this, as its origin was entirely different. It was the result of what might be called a "temporal millennium theory," a sentiment we oppose as Adventists. In proof of my statement I here subjoin Mosheim's account of it, that will fully justify my statement with reference to its origin and character. Let the candid read carefully, and see if it is or can be considered a parallel to our own times.

See Mosheim's Chruch His., Vol. 1, chap. 3, Sec. 3, p. 248.

"That the whole christian world was covered at this time with a thick and gloomy veil of superstition, is evident from a prodigious number of testimonies and examples, which it is needless to mention. This horrible cloud, which hid almost every ray of truth from the eyes of the multitude, furnished the priests and monks with many opportunities of propagating absurd and ridiculous opinions, which contributed not a little to confirm their credit. Among these opinions, which so frequently dishonored the Latin church, and produced from time to time such violent agitations, none occasioned such a general panic, or such dreadful impressions of terror or dismay, as a notion that now prevailed of the immediate approach of the day of judgment. This notion, which took its rise from a remarkable passage of St. John (Rev. 20: 1–4), and had been entertained by some Doctors in the preceding century, was advocated by many at this time; and spreading itself with an amazing rapidity through the European provinces, it threw them into the deepest consternation and anguish; for they imagined that St. John had clearly foretold that, after a thousand years from the birth of Christ, Satan was to be let loose from his prison; that Antichrist was to come, and the conflagration and destruction of the world were to follow these great and terrible events.

Hence prodigious numbers of people abandoned all their civil connections, and their parental relations, and giving over to the churches or monasteries all their lands, treasures and worldly effects, repaired with the utmost precipitation to Palestine, where they imagined that Christ would descend from heaven to judge the world. Others devoted themselves, by a solemn and voluntary oath, to the service of the churches, convents and priesthood, whose slaves they became in the most rigorous sense of that word, performing daily their heavy tasks; and all this from a notion that the supreme Judge would diminish the severity of their sentence, and look upon them with a more favorable and propitious eye, on account of their having made themselves the slaves of his ministers.

When an eclipse of the sun or moon occurred and happened to be visible, the cities were deserted, and their miserable inhabitants fled for refuge to deep caverns, and hid themselves among the craggy rocks and under the bending summits of steep mountains. The opulent attempted to bribe the Deity, and the saintly tribe by rich donations conferred upon the sacerdotal and monastic orders, who were regarded as the immediate vicegerents of heaven. In many places temples, palaces and noble edifices, both public and private, were suffered to decay, and were even deliberately pulled down, from a notion that they were no longer of any use, since the final dissolution of all things approached. In a word, no language is sufficient to express the confusion and despair that tormented the minds of miserable mortals upon this occasion.

This general delusion was, indeed, opposed and combatted by the discerning few, who endeavored to dispel these groundless terrors, and to efface the notion from which they arose in the minds of the people. But their attempts were ineffectual; nor could the dreadful apprehension of the superstitious multitudes be entirely removed before the conclusion of this the tenth century. Then, when they saw that the dreaded period had passed without the arrival of any great calamity, they began to understand that St. John had not really foretold what they so much feared."

Is it fair to quote this as a parallel to the Scriptural and wholesome excitement that now is felt by the few on the Lord's coming?

Stanbridge, C. E. CHAS. P. DOW.

For the World's Crisis.

PIONEERING.—No. 4.

April 7th. Started for Floyd, designing to stop and preach where Bro. Hough and myself stayed all night on the other trip on the account of high water. Left the cars at Jessup, and stayed with Bro. Billings, but finding no passage across the prairies through mud and rain, took the next train for Cedar Falls. It was still raining, and few teams in town, and the stage was crowded. I turned my course towards New Hartford, and stayed at the pilgrim home of Bro. E. Dunham. I was strongly urged to remain over Sunday, but felt like pushing on. This Bro. took me on a piece to Bro. Brayton's, and he carried me some five miles further, when I started on foot, having yet some forty-five miles to travel. Stopped at a school-house and wrote on a black-board—"Five dollars' reward for a text in the Bible that reads, Immortal soul," etc., etc., thinking as I could not stop to preach, that this on the next day might call some one's attention to searching.

Traveled on some six miles, and found a preacher of the old Christian order. Thought him quite cool, but learned afterwards he had heard that I was a Copperhead and would refuse to take greenbacks. Strange that because a person cannot take life, and believes that Jesus was right when he said, "Blessed are the peacemakers," such prejudice will run into superstition and bigotry not easily thrown off.

As to my position, I am a pilgrim and a stranger, having no sympathy with the rebellion, and no desire to participate in war or politics, or gambling festivals, etc., etc. Is not this coming out from the world as we ought to? But there is a change from what it was four years ago. Men are sick of that kind of preaching. Now we can pray in peace as God directed, that we may lead a peaceable and quiet life, and not a fighting one.

I arrived that night at Bro. Culver's, on the Shell Rock, and in the morning he took me to Spring Lake, among the old christians, in time for meeting. Here I met with Elder Skilling, their preacher, and he would have me preach in his place. I was well pleased with my new acquaintance and the liberty I enjoyed; having my training under this school of theology, it seemed much like home. I like the true ones for the principles of the organization, i. e., christian character, being their only test of fellowship and membership. One brother kindly took me on my journey till I obtained a chance to ride through to Floyd, some thirty miles, in time to give notice for meeting and preach that evening.

April 11th. I had the pleasure of burying with Christ in baptism Bro. J. R. Preston and wife from the United Brethren. When men get the key note, i. e., that man is mortal, and when dead he is dead all over, they see that a little water sprinkled on the forehead will not figure forth the resurrection in any sense whatever; they realize, too, that obedience is better than sacrifice; thus they walk down, die, and are buried, and the end will be everlasting life.

I preached three times, received five into the church, made arrangements for the discussion the fourteenth of June. Started home some ninety miles on horse-back, which is a new and hard way for me to travel, but arrived at home in time to preach on Sunday, since which I have preached every two weeks, and the balance of the time have labored near here or at home, attending to my work, as I have put in wheat and oats that I may not want in winter time.

I heard a lady from England lecture the other night, in which she told a dream she had some fifteen years ago, while employed as a home missionary. She said she saw kingdoms in a great commotion, and the people rushing together, brother against brother; the pulpits reeled like drunken men for want of truth; the people fled from them, and the strife went on till nearly all the world was engaged in it. Then she saw a man in the clouds of heaven who took out his sword and said he could make war, and he could make peace. Then the people tried to get away from him, and hide, but they could not. She said the strife commenced in America first. Then a voice said to her, "Arise, and go to the land shadowing with wings." She awoke, determined to come on to this country, and did so soon, and thought no more of her dream till the firing on Sumter.

I heard another lecturer say that when the people would observe the laws of health and physical development, and improve the human family, then Christ would come in the flesh. And in conversation with this Dr. Andrews, he told me that Eld. M. Hull, after a debate with one of their men on Spiritualism, went to Battle Creek and told his brethren that he was so influenced in that discussion, that if they would pray for him that the spell might go off, and if God would forgive him for it, he would never debate with another Spiritualist. "But," says the Dr., "he could not get rid of it, and is now doing a great work for us."

Thus we see that it was not the force of argument or of truth, but that he was mesmerized. If men of ability and knowledge can be so bewildered, who know the truth that the dead know not anything, I wonder not that men of the popular faith are drawn into the vortex of ruin. Will not others depart from the faith being duped by the Devil? How can men expect to escape when they grant and teach the foundation of Spiritualism, that men are alive when dead, and know more when dead than when alive?

The antidote must be preached, that "the dead know not anything." Ministers must be sustained, papers and tracts also must be spread. Bro., will you help? If not, God will call on you in the judgment about it. Shall efficient laborers quit the field for want of means, and you spend God's money for fashion and fun? May God help us to storm Satan's camp. PETER S. W. DEYO.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

BRO. GRANT:—May grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you and the readers of the Crisis, and to all who love God and the blessed Jesus Christ, their Lord and ours. I thank my God for the privilege of seeing and reading the World's Crisis, so full of instruction on that subject, which of all others is so interesting to my heart. It does me good to see and read the names of old tried friends, and to learn they are still in the faith, and in the good work of the Lord. I am glad we have a paper free from contention, strife and bitterness, and yet open to all. Go on, Bro. Grant, in the course you have pursued; be bold, independent, tender, yet faithfully proclaiming the truths of God's word. God has blessed you in your efforts, he will still bless you, and the pleasure and truth of God will prosper in your hand.

I have been in and around Springfield, Chicopee, Wilbraham and Palmer, for four weeks. Have had much to encourage and much that was trying in divisions, contention, and strife about words and ideas. These produce hardness and coldness towards each other, so that brethren do not love each other, do not love to meet together. O! when will our Advent brethren renounce this spirit of contention, and love as brethren? Think and let others think; speak and let others speak; act and let others act, and yet love fellowship and hold on to and meet with, pray and worship with them.

The Lord hasten the day, is my prayer, and I will do what I can in my feeble way to bring it about. I am determined to lay aside and discourage others from riding all hobbies; and to speak the truth in love with a kind spirit to all, let their views be what they may. I do not expect everybody will see just alike until we are changed into the image of Jesus at his coming. While we remain in this imperfect state, it becomes us to bear and forbear, to overlook and forgive, and be bearers of each other's burdens, and help each other's joys, thus fulfilling the law of Christ.

Yours, B. SPAULDING.

Springfield, Mass.

From Bro. H. Franklin.

BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Do you love the Lord? Many will say, Yes, I love the Lord. Do you keep his commandments? For Christ says if we love him we shall keep his commands; and what are they? He says the first and great commandment is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." And the second is, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Are we doing all this? Some say, I love the Advent brethren, but I do not think much of the Methodists, for they do so and so. Is it right that we should condemn them and all other denominations, because they do not see as we do? We may offend some of Christ's lambs. All do not see alike, yet they may be good and love God, and in due time he will bring them into his truth and save them in his kingdom.

O! brethren, let us have charity, remembering it is those who love God and keep his commandments, that will have a right to the tree of life. Let us examine ourselves and see if the Lord approves of all we do and say, and square our lives by his word, preparing for his coming and kingdom, which, I believe, is not far distant; when the same Jesus that ascended from the Mount of Olives, will come again in like manner, and take his weary children home to rest in that blessed land of promise. Yours in hope of redemption,

H. FRANKLIN.

From Bro. R. H. Nye.

BRO. GRANT:—I have received four numbers of the World's Crisis, and I can say truthfully that I never read four numbers of any other paper with so much real pleasure; and I think I might add profit. Every line of the Crisis is healthy in tone, and sound in the doctrines of the Bible. Every week I read with renewed interest the articles written by its able correspondents. The Crisis was first recommended to me by Bro. Randall Curtis, in January last. Bro. Curtis ought to have my name credited to him. I am at a loss to know why he ever sent me an Advent paper; as he visited me last fall, and must have known that I was very much opposed to the peculiar doctrine, called Adventism. The good Lord, whom he worships, must have told him there was hope in my case.

I see that there is one other source from whence I received great light on the writings of the good book, viz., a large bundle of tracts which Bro. Curtis disposed of at my wife's father's. I would say that he appears to be a very good and upright man; and I hope as his case is known to the readers of the Crisis, that all who can will aid him in procuring an artificial leg. R. H. NYE.

From Sr. F. A. Gard.

BRO. GRANT:—Enclosed please find twenty-five cents for the tract fund, and allow me to say through the Crisis to my beloved brethren and sisters scattered abroad, that I too am striving to gain that kingdom that is to be under the whole heaven.

I believe much is being done by the Crisis and those noble tracts to bring men to a knowledge of the truth, and should therefore be sustained by all who feel an interest in the salvation of their fellow-men. I hope that when the Master comes, he will find us all with our lamps trimmed and burning, prepared to meet him with joy and gladness. I long for that time to come, when earth shall again bloom in Eden beauty, and when sickness, sorrow, pain and death shall have flown away. May the Lord bless every effort that is made to scatter the good seed of the kingdom. F. A. GARD.

Earlville, Ia.

From Bro. G. F. Godfrey.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to the friends of truth, living in the west; those of them in particular, who really desire to have the cause strengthened, the Scripture explained, practical and vital christianity increased. Brethren, are we doing our whole duty? If we really believe that time is so short, is it not important that we try in all things to walk honestly as in the day, freely giving time, talent, money, any, and all things we possess, that the greatest amount of good may be done in the least possible time? We cannot estimate the power of influence. Life is made up of little things, every moment having its duties and responsibilities; but we all may add something to the storehouse of the Lord. Then let us cheerfully support our ministry, also sustain our publishing institutions, by scattering their publications with such energy and unity of purpose, that the mystified traditions of heathen mythology shall wilt away before the plain teaching of the word. To this purpose may we concentrate our united efforts, and the Lord will abundantly reward both in this life and the world to come.

Yours in hope, G. F. GODFREY.

Exeter, Wis.

From Sr. M. M. Weaver.

BRN. AND SRS.:—Peace be with you all. Amen. God is good. His care is over all them that put their trust in him. He, like a father, pitieth his children. O! how glad I am that my Savior can be touched with the feelings of our infirmities, and that he is still the pitying Christ he was when he dwelt among men. Here at Bro. Streeter's pilgrim home I find a poor weary child,—one who has not walked a step for nine years; and how glad would her friends be if JESUS should come this way and say, "Rise, stand upon thy feet!"

Sr. S. B. Weaver wishes me to say to the friends of Jesus who have written her, that she is to be addressed at North Dana, Mass. Pray for her. Sr. W. wishes to inform her friends that their letters have been received, but she is too sick to answer them. Sisters in Christ, keep writing. Your letters cheer the suffering ones. Better spend your time thus than at "fancy work."

M. M. WEAVER.

North Dana, Mass., April.

From Bro. S. D. Daniels.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been pretty sick with the measles, and I am not well yet; am very weak yet, which accounts for my not being in the field in the past, but am trying to start again. I want the prayers of all praying men and women, that I may be able for the work assigned me, and do it with patience and godly fear, leaving the result with the Lord. O God, help me.

Your brother in Christ, praying for help, and expecting it at the hands of God,

S. D. DANIELS.

From Bro. M. B. Czechowski.

BRO. GRANT:—I take this last opportunity to write you a line. In a few hours, we expect to be on the sea, but God is the God of the sea, as well as the land, and he will bless us on our way, we believe, as he blessed Paul when he sent him to Rome. Oh! dear brother, pray for us.

Your brother, M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

Williamsburgh, May 14th, 1864.

Obituaries.

CHARLES COVELL.

Died at Wilton Junction, May 9th, of scarlet fever, Charles, only son of Bro. and Sr. H. L. Covell, aged six years.

Little Charley, thou art sleeping
In thy cold and silent bed,
Holy angels now are keeping
Sacred records of the dead.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Taken from the earth's rude strife;
We thy name henceforth may number
In that blessed book of life.

We have parted—not forever;
Soon thy sacred dust shall rise;
Then we'll meet where none can sever,
Join the ransomed in the skies.

S. K. GIBSON.

ROBERT I. CURTIS.

Died in the hospital, at New Orleans, Feb. 6th, 1864, Robert I. Curtis, of Richmond, Me., aged thirty-two years.

